REPORT.

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE VICEROY AND GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA IN COUNCIL.

Whereas by Act No. XVII. of 1868, passed by the Governor General of India in Council on the 20th day of May 1868, reciting that the Bank of Bombay was then unable to pay its debts, and was being wound up voluntarily, pursuant to a special resolution to that effect passed by the shareholders in general meeting, and that the Secretary of State for India had directed that an inquiry should be made into the causes and circumstances of such inability and winding-up, it was enacted, that the Governor General of India in Council might issue a Commission to such persons as he thought fit, for the purpose of inquiring into and reporting on the causes and circumstances aforesaid;

We, the Commissioners appointed by the Governor General in Council, in pursuance of the said Act, humbly present to your Excellency the following Report.

The old Bank of Bombay, established under Act III. of 1840, was a prosperous institution. With a small capital of 52 lacs, and a power to issue notes to the amount of two crores of rupees, its business was so conducted that it paid good dividends to the shareholders, and never, it is said, incurred greater losses in the aggregate than 25,000 rupees.

The old bank was mainly indebted for this prosperity to the provisions of Act III. of 1840, which restricted its business within safe limits, and permitted no advances except on good security. The nature of these restrictions and securities will be detailed hereafter, when we compare the provisions of this Act with those of Act X. of 1863.

Another element of prosperity was undoubtedly the power to issue so large an amount of notes; but in 1860 the Government of India determined to deprive the bank of this power, and to establish a paper currency of its own. As a compensation for the loss the bank would incur from this change, the Government at first proposed to entrust the management of the general Treasuries, Pay Office, and Currency Department, with their respective cash balances, to the bank; but this proposal was subsequently modified, the Government having resolved to keep the Currency Department in their own hands, and to transfer only the Treasuries and Pay Office, with their balances, to the bank.

A new Act being considered desirable in consequence of the new arrangements, on the 20th June 1861, the Board of Directors instructed the solicitors of the bank to prepare an Act, "assimilating it as closely as possible to that of the Bank of Bengal," and providing for an increase of the capital to 2,10,00,000 rupees. A new Act was accordingly prepared by the solicitors, who adopted the expedient of drafting some of the proposed alterations in an interleaved copy of Act III. of 1840. This copy was then sent to the Government, by whom it was laid before the acting Advocate-General, Mr. Westropp, who pointed out several omissions, and objected to the form of the draft, as one that could not properly be laid before the Government of India. In consequence of this opinion, on the 25th September 1861, the interleaved copy was returned to the bank, and Mr. Green, a barrister, received instructions to prepare the Act.

Act X. of 1863.

As much controversy has arisen as to the person responsible for the introduction of the words "other public companies in India" into clause 32 of the Act, we have traced these words through the various drafts, and have examined witnesses on the subject, and we find that Mr. Green's first draft contained those words, in connection with others, as follows:—

"1st. The advancing and lending money on Government securities, or on the security of shares in such of the incorporated Indian railway or other public companies in India, as hold a guarantee from the Government with regard to the payment of dividends or interest; provided that in the case of shares in such railway or other public companies, no such loan shall in any case exceed in amount three-fourths of the paid-up value of the shares, on the security of which such loan is made; and such Government securities and shares shall be endorsed or transferred to the said bank absolutely or by way of mortgage."

On the 24th October 1861 the Board appointed two of their members, Messrs. M. H. Scott and G. Foggo, a committee for the preparation of the Act, and Mr. Green's draft was accordingly perused and considered by them, in consultation with their solicitor, Mr. Kelly. The several provisions were discussed seriatim, and several alterations were made, one of them being the erasure of the words set out in italics in the foregoing extract from Mr. Green's draft.

The draft Act, thus amended, was then returned to Mr. Green for final settlement, when he also made several alterations, and struck out the words which are underlined in the foregoing extract from his original draft.

The erasure of the words in italics was unwise, and productive of unfortunate results, but it was made in the year 1861, before the bubble companies of a subsequent period were thought of, and without any view to the speculations which followed. For a long time after the passing of the Act, the Board refused to avail themselves of this power to advance on shares.

On the 28th November 1861, the directors called a special general meeting of the shareholders, for the purpose of obtaining their sanction to the re-incorporation of the bank, and the usual advertisements having been issued, and notice given, the meeting was held on the 20th December 1861, when it was resolved—

"That the directors be authorized to take such steps for varying, altering, or annulling, all, or any, of the provisions of the Acts under which the bank is at present constituted, and for obtaining the re-incorporation of the bank, as to them may seem expedient for securing the efficient working of the bank"

The draft Act was afterwards forwarded to Government, and was laid before Mr. Westropp, who expressed no opinion on the policy of the measure, which he understood the Government to have sanctioned, and therefore restricted his observations on the draft Act to practical suggestions and technical questions, now unnecessary to dwell upon.

On the 19th March 1862, the draft Act was forwarded to the Government of India, who returned it to the Bombay Government with some suggestions (now immaterial to consider), and an intimation that the Act should be passed by the Bombay Council.

This was an unfortunate resolution, inasmuch as the Legislature of India was better constituted than that of Bombay for the discussion of such an important measure, having a finance and law member to assist in its deliberations. The Council of India had just passed an Act for the regulation of the Bank of Bengal, and would therefore have required good reasons, before they granted to the Bank of Bombay powers which the other bank had not, and would probably have declined to add anything to the provisions of the Bengal

Act. The proceedings of the Governor General's Council are, moreover, attended with greater publicity than those of a local council, inasmuch as Acts during their passage through the former council are published in the gazettes of all the Presidencies, and it is scarcely possible to suppose that this Act could have been so published in Madras and Calcutta, without attracting much criticism on its exceptional provision as to advances on shares. Act X. of 1863.

On the 12th May 1862, the Government of Bombay sent a copy of the proposed Act to the Secretary of State, with an intimation that they intended to legislate on the subject at the next sessions of the Legislative Council in July.

This letter was never directly answered by the Secretary of State; but he forwarded to the Bombay Government a copy of a despatch which he had written to the Governor General on the 16th September 1862, in which he observed that it was unnecessary for him to give precise directions as regarded Madras and Bombay, as the same reasoning and the same principles applied to their proceedings as to Bengal. This despatch of the Secretary of State chiefly referred to currency matters, but it objected to the Government banks dealing in foreign exchanges; and in the 53rd paragraph the Secretary of State observed, that "any "bank to which the balances and treasury business of the Government are to "be entrusted, must be restricted to legitimate banking operations, such as those "transacted by the Bank of England, or by the Bank of Bengal, as heretofore "constituted;" and in the 67th paragraph he wrote, "I do not quite under-"stand in what state the arrangements are at Madras and Bombay, but Her "Majesty's Government is desirous that the same course should be adopted for "those Presidencies, as has been pointed out for Bengal."

There is some ambiguity in the expression, "as heretofore constituted," but we assume that the Secretary of State did not refer to the old Bengal Bank as constituted under Act VI. of 1839, but must have intended to indicate the Act IV. of 1862, which received the Governor General's assent on the 28th February of that year, and had been sanctioned by himself. This construction is supported by the 67th paragraph of the letter, which must refer to the recent arrangements with the Bank of Bengal.

A copy of this despatch was sent to Mr. Bickersteth, the Government solicitor, with directions to revise the draft Act in accordance with Sir Charles Wood's instructions. Mr. Bickersteth accordingly made several alterations in the draft Act, which he forwarded to Government, with an opinion, part of which is as follows:—

"(6.) In other respects I have not altered the provisions of the Bill, and do not express any opinion as to its propriety or otherwise. * * * * * * * * * * * *

"(8.) Upon a comparison of the powers intended to be conferred upon the bank with its existing powers and those of the Bank of Bengal as heretofore constituted, it will be observed that they are considerably extended, and in some respects exceed those now conferred upon the Bank of Bengal by Act IV. of 1862.

"(9.) The Secretary of State, in the 53rd paragraph of the despatch, desires that the business of the bank 'be restricted to legitimate banking operations, such as those transacted by the Bank of England, or by the Bank of Bengal as heretofore constituted.'

"(10.) So far as I am aware, the powers intended to be conferred by the Bill, though more extended in some respects than those of the Bank of Bengal as heretofore, or at present constituted, do not exceed those of the Bank of England; but my knowledge on this subject is very limited."

On the receipt of this cautious opinion, Mr. A. D. Robertson, the Secretary to Government, instead of instituting a comparison between the business allowed to be transacted by the Bank of Bengal Act and that allowed by the draft Act, —a comparison which would assuredly have called his attention to the words "other public companies in India,"—wrote a letter to the directors, calling their attention to the "verbosity" of the Act as compared with the Bank of Bengal Act, and suggesting that the wording, as well as the order of the provisions of the latter, should be adhered to as far as possible.

Act X. of 1863.

The directors referred the matter to their solicitors, who gave an opinion, from which the following is an extract:—

"The advantage of following the existing forms is, that if any question should hereafter arise upon the construction of any clause of the charter, you would possibly have the advantage of some decision in the English courts. We therefore determined that the draft should follow to a great extent the phraseology of the English Joint Stock Companies Act, but the order of the clauses is almost the same as in the existing charter."

We can find no justification for this statement, that the phraseology of the English Joint Stock Companies Act was followed. A comparison of all the English Acts with the draft shows that the statement is without a shadow of foundation, the Acts being entirely dissimilar. Mr. Kelly, the partner of the firm who attended to the bank's business at that time, is now dead, and we should have been glad, if possible, to pass over this statement without comment; but this is only one of many instances of the reckless manner in which the legal business of the bank was done, and no narrative of the bank's failure would be complete or fair to others, unless it stated the advice given by Mr. Kelly, and showed how little reliance could be placed on it. Audacious as the statement was, it was believed in by every one, from the directors of the bank up to the Governor General in Council, and was adopted as an explanation of the manner in which the words, "other public companies in India," came to be inserted in the Act.

Blue Book, p. 105.

On the 10th December 1862, the directors wrote to the Government of Bombay, enclosing the opinion of their solicitors, and declining to remodel the draft, and then, after another reference to the Advocate-General, Mr. Lewis, who saw no reason why the wording of the Bengal Act should be preferred to that of the Bombay Bill, the draft was by order of the Governor in Council transferred to the Legislative Department.

The Legislative Council of Bombay consisted at that time of twelve members. Six of them were members or officials of the Government; three others, Messrs. Scott, Tristram, and Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, were partners in mercantile houses in Bombay; and the remaining members were native gentlemen.

The carriage of the Act through the Legislative Council was entrusted to the Chief Secretary to Government, Mr. A. D. Robertson, who was also a Government director of the bank. The Board requested Mr. M. H. Scott to watch over the interests of the bank, during the passage of the Bill through the Council.

On the 4th February 1863, Mr. A. D. Robertson moved the first reading of the Bill, in a speech which is remarkable for its omissions. He did not call attention to the difference between the draft Act and the Act for the Bank of Bengal, and it is clear that he was not aware of it. He mentioned the power given to increase the capital and to grant cash credits, and referred to several unimportant alterations, but he omitted to call attention to more important changes, which we shall presently consider, and which effected a complete revolution in the practice of the bank.

Only one member of Council, Mr. Tristram, who was also a commercial director of the bank, spoke on the Bill, which was then read a first time.

The Bill was then referred to a committee of the Council, consisting of the Advocate-General (Mr. Lewis), Mr. A. D. Robertson, and Mr. Tristram. The committee made several amendments, the most important being the omission of Schedule B., which contained the proposed byelaws for the bank, and the insertion of a clause enabling the directors to pass byelaws with the sanction of the Governor in Council.

These amendments were made on the reasonable ground, that the byelaws might often require alteration, and that frequent applications to the Legislature would be inconvenient; and, although the removal of this schedule from the Act was attended with unfortunate results, the Council are not to blame, as they could not have foreseen that the directors would dispense with byelaws altogether. Act X. of 1863.

On the 24th March 1863, the Legislative Council again proceeded with the Act, when, an amendment by Mr. Tristram, relating to the remuneration of the directors, having been put and carried, the Bill was read a second time, and passed without further discussion.

The Act was then forwarded to the Governor General for his approval, and received his assent on the 4th July 1863, and was on the 1st August following, published by the Governor of Bombay, as the Bombay Act X. of 1863.

The Act was also forwarded to the Secretary of State, Sir Charles Wood, who had, in the summer of 1862, received a copy of the draft Act in its then state. That draft was evidently considered in the India Office. It was first given to Mr. Hobart, the Assistant Secretary in the Financial Department, to compare with the Bengal Bank Act, and that gentleman appears to have detected the difference between the two Acts, for he wrote in the margin against clause 1, section 32, "Bengal guaranteed," meaning thereby, that the Bengal Bank Act only allowed advances on shares, the interest of which was guaranteed by Government; but this note was not so full as it might have been, and apparently did not attract attention. Sir Charles Wood must also have read this section, for there is a pencil note in his handwriting in the margin opposite clause 7; but, nevertheless, on the 24th December 1863, he wrote to the Governor General, that the Act had been considered by him in Council, and would be left to its operation.

Having narrated the facts relating to the preparation of Act X. of 1863, and its passage through the Legislative Council, we will now contrast the provisions of that Act with the old one, No. III. of 1840, and show the important alterations effected by the new Act.

First. The old Act prohibited the discount of negociable securities, unless two persons or firms unconnected in partnership were bound by such security.

The new Act allowed the discount of any negociable security; consequently, the discount of a promissory note signed by one person was permitted.

Second. The old Act prohibited any advance on bank shares, or any certificate of shares.

The new Act allowed advances to be made on the security of shares in public companies in India; it did not require that all the calls on such shares should be paid up, or prohibit advances on the premia of shares.

Third. The old Act prohibited all advances (except loans on the security of Government paper, bullion, or imperishable goods,) to any one firm or partnership for a larger amount than three lacs, or for a longer period than three months.

The new Act contained no such restrictions.

Fourth. The old Act allowed advances to be made on goods of an imperishable nature only.

The new Act allowed advances on all goods, wares, and merchandise.

Fifth. The old Act prohibited the overdrawing of accounts.

Schedule B. of the new Act contained a similar provision, but this was struck out, and the subject was left to be provided for by a byelaw.

Sixth. The old Act prohibited any discount or loan unless the cash in the possession of the bank, and immediately available, was equal to one-fourth of all the claims outstanding against the bank at the time, and payable on demand.

The new Act contained no such clause. The power of issuing notes being withdrawn, this provision was probably thought unnecessary.

Seventh. The old Act provided that the Governor General might, by order duly published, &c., authorize an increase of the capital, which then amounted to 52 lacs.

The new Act empowered the proprietors at a special general meeting to increase the capital, such increase not to exceed 2 crores and 10 lacs.

It may be that the old Act was unnecessarily restrictive, but that did not justify the removal of all restrictions, and the relaxations introduced by the first, second, and third alterations were most unwise. Their importance did not attract the attention of the Government or the Legislature, and they were therefore made without consideration or discussion. They opened the door, as we shall presently show, to great laxity of practice, and a ruinous system of banking, and were in fact the chief cause of the bank's failure. The second alteration was made, moreover, in total forgetfulness or disregard of Sir Charles Wood's direction, that the bank should be restricted to legitimate banking operations, such as were transacted by the Bank of Bengal.

The Legislative Council of Bombay was chiefly to blame for this enactment, which was their Act; but it is fair to add, that for all the material alterations, except that which permitted advances on shares, they could adduce the precedent of the Bengal Act, passed by the Legislative Council of India.

But the directors of the Bank of Bombay, who are responsible for the framing of the measure, and the Government of Bombay, who disregarded the directions of the Secretary of State, cannot be acquitted of blame, and the latter Government and the Government of India, as well as the Secretary of State himself, are all open to the remark, that they either failed to detect, or failed to expose, the dangers with which the Act was pregnant.

First Period. 1st August 1863, to 1st June 1864.

Although Act X. of 1863 opened out a new field for business, the Board of directors, during the first period of the bank's history, (from the 1st August 1863 to the 1st June 1864), neglected to provide for its safe development. Several directors have told us that they thought the business of the bank during this period was carried on just as it had been before the Act passed, all advances being made on Government securities, guaranteed railway shares, or bullion; and all the directors appear to have thought that they sufficiently provided for the safe working of the new Act, by passing the resolution regarding shares, to which we shall presently refer.

Notwithstanding the presence at the Board of several members of the Legislative Council, who must have known the reason why Schedule B. was cancelled, and section 45 inserted in the Act, the directors neglected to prepare any bylaws, and thus the bank was allowed to commence its disastrous career, without any code to regulate its practice, or to define the duties or powers of either the directors or the secretary.

On the 6th August 1863, the directors passed the following resolution:

"Resolved that for the present and until further orders, any applications for advances on any bank shares, or any public company other than Government banks, be submitted to the board, and not made by the secretary."

This prudent resolution embodies the only permanent restriction the directors ever put upon the powers of the secretary, from the time the Act was promulgated (the 1st August 1863) till the 4th May 1865.

Whatever the views of the directors may have been, the secretary, Mr. Blair, and the deputy secretary, Mr. Ryland, determined from the first to avail themselves of all the powers which the new Act conferred. First Period, 1st August 1863 to 1st June 1864.

On the 9th September 1863, Mr. Ryland sent the new Act to all the agents at the branches, with a circular directing them to peruse the Act carefully, "in order" (to use his own words) "that you may take advantage of the "removal of sundry restrictions contained more especially in section 27 of the "old charter."

Mr. Ryland, during a short absence of Mr. Blair, in September 1863, at Poona, endeavoured to induce the directors to reverse their resolution of the 6th August, and permit the secretary "at his discretion" to advance "to persons of "undoubted respectability" on the security of promissory notes, and the deposit of railway and other shares; but the directors, after much discussion and considerable difference of opinion, remained firm, and, by their resolution of the 17th September permitted the secretary to advance on guaranteed railway shares alone.

Though restricted as to advances on shares, Mr. Blair found scope enough in the other wide provisions of the Act for much unsafe banking, and he appears to have immediately effected a radical change in the practice of the bank as to cash credits. Instead of insisting on the old practice, which required Government paper, guaranteed railway shares, or bullion to be deposited as security for cash credits, Mr. Blair commenced in August 1863 to grant such advances on personal security only, that is, on a promissory note signed by one borrower or by joint borrowers, and without requiring sureties, or taking any additional security. The first of these cash credits was for a lac of rupees, granted on the 11th of August to Roychund Deepchund, the broker of the bank, and the father of Premchund Roychund, and it was granted on the suggestion of Premchund, who says that Mr. Blair postponed giving it until he had consulted the directors.

The President, Mr. Birch, and all the surviving directors (except Cowasjee Jehangeer*) deny any knowledge of such cash credits. Mr. Blair, whose evidence was far from satisfactory, did not recollect Premchund's suggestion, and at first denied that any such cash credits were ever granted, and when at last compelled to admit that they had been, he said that he must have acted on the authority of some of the directors. We think it probable that he did consult Cowasjee Jehangeer, who was certainly aware, as early as September 1863, of the practice of advancing money on one name; but even if this were so, it does not excuse Mr. Blair's concealment of such an important change from the other directors.

There can be no doubt as to such concealment. All cash credits should have been entered in the application book, which was laid before the directors at the board meetings, and these cash credits on personal security were alone omitted from that book. When they were omitted, another small informal account, or rather memorandum book, was opened by Mr. De Ga, the ledger keeper, headed "Cash Credits granted on Personal Security," but this book was merely for the use of the ledger keeper and the deputy secretary, and was never laid before the directors. Mr. De Ga says that Mr. Blair told him not to enter these cash credits in the application book; and although Mr. Blair denies this, he admits they ought to have been entered in it, and he is unable to account for their omission. It is difficult to suppose that Mr. De Ga would depart from the usual practice, and omit these cash credits, without orders; he had nothing to do with granting them, and had therefore nothing to conceal. His statement is, moreover, confirmed by the evidence of Vittul Narayen, the clerk in charge of the loan department, who says that he received a similar order from Mr. Blair. Mr. Blair, on the other hand, could scarcely have been ignorant of omissions constantly recurring in the application book, or of the opening of the new book. He failed to show us that the directors were aware of his acts, or that he had nothing to conceal; and the order is consistent with the evidence given by the directors of their ignorance as to these cash credits, and was in fact the best means that could have been taken to secure such ignorance. It is true, as suggested by Mr. Donald Robertson, that the directors might have looked at the cash credit ledgers; but it is obvious that, in the absence of any suspicion that their secretary was tampering with the books, they would be unlikely to refer to ledgers which were in constant use in the bank.

* The Commission, acting under medical advice, did not examine Cowasjee Jehangeer.

Mr. Blair also began, immediately after the passing of the Act, to discount promissory notes signed by a single borrower, without taking additional security. Some care must have been taken with this new class of business at first, for, notwithstanding the number of these discounts during this first period of the bank's history, they resulted in only one loss, and this loss may not unfairly be attributed to subsequent imprudent advances made to the same person. But, whether prudently conducted or not, this new practice introduced a great change in the character of the business done, and greatly contributed to the ruin of the bank.

All the directors whose attention has been called to this point (except Mr. Mangles) assert their ignorance of this practice. Mr. Mangles says that he found it out for the first time in May 1864, when a Mr. Bevis told him he had borrowed money from the bank in this manner. Mr. Mangles immediately examined the register of bills discounted, and there found an entry of the transaction, which led him to make some inquiries which are best described in his own words. He says, "I wrote a letter to the secretary and asked him whether he was in the "habit of discounting promissory notes only, as it seemed to me to be a "violation of the charter. He wrote back, saying that it was a hard term to "use, but that the board of directors considered that they could do it under "the charter. I then wrote a private note to Mr. A. D. Robertson, who was "then one of the directors, and he said that he thought that it could be done "under the charter. I then went to Mr. Birch, and asked him whether he was "aware of it, and he said that he was; and I asked under what clause of the "charter it could be done. He said, as a cash credit. I said that I did not "agree with him. I then wrote to Mr. Lidderdale, and asked him whether, as a "mercantile man, he could conscientiously sanction that kind of cash credit. "He wrote back, and said, No, certainly not, but that it was the custom of the "bank to discount bills of that sort."

Mr. Birch does not recollect this transaction. Mr. Robertson, from his evidence, appears to have misunderstood it. Mr. Lidderdale was in India when Mr. Mangles gave his evidence, and we could not recal him; but there is nothing in Mr. Lidderdale's evidence which negatives that of Mr. Mangles. We have no doubt that Mr. Birch and Mr. Lidderdale were aware of this practice, though Mr. Birch may have forgotten it now; and we think that Mr. A. D. Robertson would not have misunderstood the matter if he had done his duty, and inquired, and that he and the other directors might have known of this practice, if they had been vigilant, and had examined the register of bills discounted.

But Mr. Blair's changes did not stop here. Under the old practice a discount list was kept, showing the amount of credit which might safely be given to the different merchants and traders of Bombay, and this list was revised from time to time by the directors. It is now admitted that no such list was continued after the year 1863.

Mr. Blair also, during this period of the bank's history, gradually discontinued the practice, which formerly prevailed, of referring to the Weekly Committee of three directors all questions as to the credit to be allowed to applicants for loans. He excuses his conduct in this respect, on the ground that the circulars, which he sent round to the Committee, were constantly returned to him without any information, and with a request that he would refer to some native director, and it was for this reason, Mr. Blair says, that he began about this time to consult only one native director, who was, at first, Cowasjee Jehangeer. First Period, 1st August 1863 to 1st June 1864.

The directors during the period of which we have been speaking (1st August 1863 to 1st June 1864) were Mr. Birch, a Government director, President, Messrs. Gavin Steel, R. Mac Ilwraith, J. A. Baumbach, G. Foggo, F. F. Lidderdale, M. H. Scott (since deceased), Limjee Manockjee, Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, and Cowasjee Jehangeer, Commercial directors, and Messrs. A. D. Robertson, G. Inverarity, and H. A. Mangles, Government directors.

Of these directors, Mr. Baumbach retired on the 3rd September 1863, five weeks after the promulgation of the Act. Mr. Inverarity sat at the Board for the last time on the 12th November 1863, and Mr. Foggo retired on the 10th December in the same year. Mr. A. D. Robertson resigned in May 1864.

It is fair to all the directors to say that only three accounts opened during this period resulted in loss, and these would probably have been closed without loss, if other advances had not been subsequently added to those of this period.

The conduct of two of the Government directors, Mr. A. D. Robertson and Mr. Inverarity, has been much commented on, and our attention has been pointedly called to their speculations in shares. It is true that they did receive some allotments of shares when they were directors of the bank. In doing so at a time of inordinate speculation, they exposed themselves to great observation, and set a bad example to other Government directors who succeeded them; but there is nothing in the number and value of the allotments they received, when directors, to excite suspicion, and it is clear that the receipt by them of those allotments did not contribute to the failure of the bank, inasmuch as little or no loss is attributable to this period. No receipt of allotments, after they left the bank, could possibly have contributed to its ruin.

But the directors of this period are nevertheless open to great blame.

First and chiefly, because they omitted to pass any byelaws. Mr. A. D. Robertson and Mr. M. H. Scott, as members of the Legislative Council, knew that Schedule B. had been struck out of the Act, because it was thought better to provide for the subjects therein referred to by byelaws; and it should have been their particular duty to bring the question of byelaws before the board. But it is difficult to understand how any directors could have thought that the business of the bank was being properly or legally carried on without byelaws. Section 14 of the Act provided that the business of the bank was to be carried on by the directors, of whom three were to form a quorum. Section 27 authorized the secretary to endorse and execute transfers, and to draw, accept, and endorse bills, promissory notes, and letters of credit, and to sign other documents on behalf of the bank, and so dispensed with the seal of the bank, or the signature of the directors to such documents, and made the signature of the secretary valid for the purpose of binding the bank; but neither that section, nor any other section of the Act, authorized the secretary to lend any money whatever, on his own authority. Now the directors must have known that neither the Board nor the Weekly Committee were managing the bank under section 14; and as the Act conferred no powers of management on the secretary, they ought to have exercised the power given them by section 45 of the Act, to make byelaws for "the good government, and in reference to the mode of conducting "the business of the bank,"—a power which would have enabled them to define the duties of the President, Committee, and Secretary, and to put the practice of the bank on a satisfactory footing.

But the secretary was even more to blame in this respect than the directors. In the absence of byelaws he was acting without express authority from them, and it should have been his particular business to see that his own powers and duties were clearly defined. The directors had also a right to expect that the secretary would remind them of all business which ought to be transacted, and, if Mr. Blair had only done this, the subject of the byelaws would not have escaped the attention of the Board.

Secondly, Messrs. Birch, A. D. Robertson, Lidderdale, and Mangles ought to have instituted a searching inquiry into the practice which Mr. Bevis's case disclosed. Such an inquiry would have resulted in the discovery of many similar transactions, would have shown the great powers exercised by the secretary without consulting any, or if any, only a native director, and would probably have ended in some restraint being placed on the exercise of such powers.

Increase of capital.

During this first period of the bank's history, the shareholders of the bank greatly increased the capital.

On the 27th August 1863, the directors resolved to call a special general meeting of the shareholders, for the purpose of doubling the capital, by the issue of 5,225 new shares of 1,000 rupees each, and, at the meeting so called on the 21st September 1863, this proposition was carried unanimously.

On the 18th February 1864, the directors, acting on the suggestion of Cowasjee Jehangeer, called another special general meeting of the shareholders, for the purpose of procuring their consent to a further increase of the capital; and at the meeting so called, on the 7th March 1864, it was resolved unanimously to increase the capital by the further sum of 52,25,000 rupees, one new share being offered to each proprietor for every two shares he held.

On the 5th May 1864, sixteen shareholders of the bank sent a requisition to the Board, requesting them to call another meeting of the shareholders, for the purpose of rescinding the last resolution of the 7th March, and substituting for it another, which would have the effect of doubling the enlarged capital, instead of increasing it by one-half.

The directors complied with this request, and called another special meeting of the shareholders for the 9th June 1864, at which it was resolved that the former resolution should be rescinded, and that one new share for each old share (instead of one for every two, as formerly resolved,) should be issued, making the paid-up capital of the bank 2,09,00,000 rupees (2,090,000*l.*)

Due notice was given of these special meetings by advertisement, according to section 40 of the Act, which contains no provision requiring any special notice to be given to shareholders not resident in India.

The whole of the shares issued under the foregoing resolutions were taken up by the shareholders, except 47 of the last issue.

Much fault has been found with the directors for these increases of capital; but the first increase was necessary, and can scarcely be called an increase, inasmuch as the 52 lacs and a quarter, then added to the capital, did no more than supply the deficiency occasioned by the bank's loss of their note circulation.

The second increase of the 7th March 1864 was not unwise; the greatly increased trade of the port of Bombay, the opening of several branch banks, and the inadequacy of the bank's capital to meet the wants of the public during a late financial pressure, justified such a measure.

We doubt the propriety of rescinding the resolution of the 7th March 1864, and of increasing the bank's capital by so large an amount as 1,04,50,000 rupees. It would have been better to wait and see the effect of the increase determined on by the resolution of the 7th March 1864, and, if this course had been taken, we doubt whether the last 52 lacs and a quarter would ever have been raised, for the evidence shows that the bank had more money than it could safely invest. First Period, 1st August 1863 to 1st June 1864.

The Government, although aware of these proceedings and consentient, did not vote at the meetings or otherwise interfere in the matter.

We now enter on the most eventful period of the bank's history, from the 1st June 1864 to the 30th April 1865. During these eleven months the bank incurred losses from which it never recovered. Second Period, 1st June 1864 to 30th April 1865.

The great and sudden wealth produced by the rise in the price of cotton shortly after the commencement of the American War, coupled with the want of legitimate means of investment, was at this time producing its natural result in the development of excessive speculation.

Symptoms of this tendency were not wanting in Bombay during the latter part of 1863 and the beginning of 1864, but it was not till June of the latter year that the great impetus was given to speculation; the Bombay Reclamation (commonly called the Back Bay) Company, and the Financial Association of India and China being brought out at that time. These do not appear to have been bubble companies, and they might have run a successful course in quieter times. They were at once appreciated by the public, and applications for shares poured in upon the promoters from all quarters. The Bombay Government originally intended to take 400 shares in the Back Bay Company, but, in obedience to the orders of the Government of India, they abandoned that intention, and the 400 shares were on the 6th July 1864 put up to public auction, when they realised the enormous sum of 1,06,00,000 rupees (1,060,000*l.*), only 5,000 rupees (500*l.*) having been paid up on each share, and the average profit being 26,340 rupees (2,634*l.*) per share.

From this period almost every one in Bombay appears to have become wild with the spirit of speculation. During the remainder of 1864 and the beginning of 1865, companies were started for every imaginable purpose, banks and financial associations, land reclamation, trading, cotton cleaning, pressing, and spinning companies, coffee companies, shipping and steamer companies, hotel companies, livery stables and veterinary companies, and companies for making bricks and tiles. The shares of most of these companies were sold at high premia as soon as they were brought into the market, and, to secure these premia, every effort used to be made to obtain from the promoters allotments of the original shares.

This was just the time when a bank should have been extremely cautious as to its advances, and careful not to relax any of the safeguards which the system of the bank provided: but Mr. Blair, encouraged probably by what passed respecting Mr. Bevis's discount, determined to obtain the sanction of the directors to the practice he had carried on clandestinely for months past, of granting cash credits on the security of promissory notes in one name only. Some months before, the question of introducing the Scotch system of cash credits had arisen, and Mr. Hannay (though not then a director) had been consulted by Mr. Blair about it, and a resolution was then drawn up by them, correctly stating the Scotch system of cash credits as requiring a bond signed by the party seeking the accommodation, together with two good names as security.*

* For the original resolution, altered in Mr. Blair's handwriting, vide Exhibit A 48, in Appendix to Minutes of Evidence.

Second Period, 1st June 1864 to 30th April 1865.

Mr. Blair brought forward this resolution at the board meeting of the 2nd June 1864, altered in his own handwriting, so that it read as follows:

"It is respectfully suggested that the number of credit accounts might be greatly increased if the system practised in Scotland was introduced, viz., on a bond for a certain amount being signed by the party requiring the accommodation, with or without good names as security, according to the credit of the party.

At present no person, in however good credit, can have a credit account with the bank unless he can lodge Government paper as security, besides signing a bond which has to be renewed every three months. Whereas, if the above system was adopted, the account might run on from year to year," &c., &c.

This resolution was passed. It contains two statements, both of which Mr. Blair must have known to be untrue. He had consulted Mr. Hannay as to the Scotch system of cash credits, and had learnt from him what it was, and, in altering the resolution which he and Mr. Hannay had prepared, he not only stated the Scotch system incorrectly, but must have known that he was doing so. Mr. Blair also knew that it was untrue to say that no person, in however good credit, could get a cash credit from the bank unless he could lodge Government paper, inasmuch as he had for months past dispensed with any such security.

This resolution is also important, inasmuch as it admits the principle of lending money on the security of one name without taking additional security, and puts no restriction on the power of the secretary to grant such cash credits. The directors must have known that such business required great caution, and knowledge of the means of the several applicants. They could scarcely be ignorant of the poor qualifications of Mr. Blair for the successful transaction of such business, and, consequently, if they allowed such cash credits at all, they should have taken care that they were all brought before the board, and considered by themselves.

From this date the most reckless system of advances commenced. The secretary was virtually unrestricted in the powers he assumed to have; and the President and directors, although they must have known that enormous sums were flowing out of the bank, appear to have made no inquiries, and to have exercised no supervision. The discount list was discontinued. No loans were brought before the Board or the Weekly Committee for their sanction. Lacs of rupees were advanced by Mr. Blair, without consulting the directors, to single individuals, or to the ephemeral companies of the day, on no other security than the promissory note of the party borrowing; and he appears to have done this in many instances, although the borrower was already largely indebted to the bank. The only restriction placed on the secretary by the resolution of the 6th August 1863, was practically evaded, advances being actually made by him on the security of shares, though "nominally" the shares were lodged for safe custody only. In violation of all proper banking practice, large advances were made for much longer periods than three months, and no difficulty was ever made as to the renewal of a note if the interest was regularly paid.

But Mr. Blair was not content with bad banking. In direct contravention of section 34 of Act X. of 1863, which prohibits advances on the security of land, or the title-deeds relating thereto, he lent Messrs. Taylor, Diver, Atmaram Madhowjee, and Treacher and Co. 60,000 rupees, on their joint promissory note and the deposit of the title deeds of land at Poona.

The documents signed by borrowers were of a most informal kind. The old and inappropriate forms, which were used for advances made on Government paper, were still made to do service, and they were so carelessly prepared, that the rate of interest provided in case of default was less than that charged during the currency of the loan.*

* Vide Exhibits A 51 and A 131 in Appendix to Minutes of Evidence.

These transactions could not have occurred if the directors had done their duty; but those were busy times in Bombay, and the commercial directors had their own business to attend to, and one of them told us that he would not have undertaken the duties of a director, if he had thought they involved more than a weekly attendance at the bank on board days. Some of these directors (Messrs. Steel, Scott, Hannay, Tracey, and Premchund Roychund,) were themselves involved in great speculations, and others excuse themselves on the ground that they thought the President was attending to the business of the bank.

The President was Mr. Birch, a Government director, who had been long employed in that capacity both at Madras and Bombay. He attended the bank on board days, and presided at the meetings of the directors, and occasionally, once or twice a week, looked in at the bank to inquire how matters were going on. He was a great advocate for lending money on personal security, and appears to have readily acquiesced in the new discount practice of the secretary, which Mr. Mangles brought to light, and to have approved of the resolution of the 2nd June 1864. He admits that he discovered, shortly before he left India, that Mr. Blair was disobeying orders, and advancing money on shares, and yet he neither brought his conduct before the Board, nor took any steps to put a stop to the practice, but contented himself with telling Mr. Blair that he had no right to make such advances.

Mr. Birch was absent during July, August, and September, and says that he was ill during this period of the bank's history; but he was not too ill to attend at his office, or at the bank when he chose to do so, and he ought to have resigned if he thought his duties as President were too onerous. Notwithstanding failing health, he was busy at this time procuring allotments in the best companies that were brought out, and in selling such allotments at the proper time to secure a good profit. The following table shows the allotments he received, and the profit he made by them.

No of shares.	Names of companies.	Profit on sale.
8	Bombay Reclamation Company	30,100
150	Financial Association of India and China	4,775
2	Mazagon Land and Reclamation Company	1,200
2	United Victoria and Colaba Company	800
2	Victoria Land and Press Company	700
	Total	£37,575

Besides these, he received an allotment of five shares in the Port Canning Company, which was a Bengal scheme; these he might have sold at a premium of 5,000*l.* and upwards, but he preferred to hold them; and he also purchased at a premium, shortly before he left India, some of the second issue of shares in the Asiatic Bank, a speculation which turned out unfortunately. Mr. Birch, moreover, allowed two, at least, of the officials of the bank, Messrs. Blair and D. Robertson, to know that he was receiving these allotments.

The evidence of the Government directors, Messrs. Mangles, Ravenscroft, and Jacomb, shows they were ignorant of the business done, and the mode of doing it. Mr. Ravenscroft thought that the secretary had enormous independent powers secured to him by byelaws, and that he transacted such business as was beyond his power in conjunction with and subordinate to the President and some commercial directors. Messrs. Mangles and Jacomb thought the bank was managed by the President and secretary.

Mr. Blair, having discontinued all reference to the Weekly Committee, or to Cowasjee Jehangeer (who retired from the direction in July 1864), put himself unreservedly into the hands of another native director, Premchund Roychund. He gave Premchund a book of forms of promissory notes, to be filled up by him with the names of such parties as he should recommend for loans. He consulted Premchund on all applications made to the bank for advances, and always acted on his advice. He received letters from Premchund recommending other applicants for loans, and no instance has come under our observation of any such recommendation being disregarded. He often advanced money knowing that it was to be employed in speculations for a rise in shares, and sometimes the money was handed over to Premchund instead of to the parties borrowing. Mr. Blair also accepted allotments of shares from the promoters of almost all the companies started, even shares in another bank, the Asiatic, and he embarked in large share speculations, having Premchund Roychund as his partner in some of them.

Premchund Roychund was a prominent person at this time. He was originally a broker in no great business, but he speculated largely in cotton during the progress of the American war, and rapidly amassed a large fortune, and when the "share mania," as it is not inaptly called, set in, he was in such a position that his name and influence were considered essential to the safe launching of the ephemeral schemes of the day. If he was not the promoter of a company, he generally received a large allotment of shares in it, and was consulted by the promoters, and allowed by them to participate in the distribution of the allotments. This distribution was undoubtedly a delicate operation, the object being, on the one hand, to establish the companies on as broad a basis as possible, and yet, on the other, to distribute the allotments with a keen eye to individual interests, for at this time the shares of all companies were at a premium, which could immediately be realized. Few persons could do such work better than Premchund Roychund, who was much trusted and knew everybody, and so he became the great dispenser of allotments, which he judiciously distributed, first, among the managers of the banks (not forgetting Mr. Blair and Mr. Robertson, the new deputy secretary of the Bank of Bombay), and, secondly, to the friends of the promoters and himself, and to other persons who might be useful to them or the undertakings. Premchund's position was not that of an ordinary speculator, and he has been called by some of the witnesses the keystone of the commercial prosperity of Bombay; his charities were munificent, and Sir Bartle Frere says that his position was like nothing that he had ever seen or heard of in any other community.

Intelligent and subtle, Premchund Roychund was not slow to fathom the imbecility and weak moral character of Mr. Blair, and soon acquired great influence over him and his subordinates, with complete command of the funds of the bank. He procured allotments for Mr. Blair, and lent him money, and, what was much the same thing, his father Roychund Deepchund constantly supplied Mr. Blair with large sums. Premchund Roychund also bought and sold shares for Mr. Blair, and entered into joint speculations with him, and never charged him a rupee for brokerage.

The result was that the bank became Premchund's. If Premchund had a friend to oblige who wanted money, he recommended him for a loan. If Premchund had shares to sell, he would suggest to an acquaintance that he should buy, offering at the same time to "finance" the purchase money, by procuring him a loan from the Bank of Bombay. If Premchund wanted money for a speculation, he would suggest to some friend to join him in it, and then procure a loan in his friend's name for the money required. His influence was felt not only at the head office but at the branches also, the agents at Kalbadevi, Broach, and Surat all receiving instructions to consult Premchund or his agents respecting advances.

Premchund Roychund, besides obtaining large sums from time to time for himself, the amount culminating in a debt of 42 lacs and upwards from him to the bank, obtained loans for other persons, who applied the money in the purchase of shares from himself, to the amount of 66,90,000 rupees (669,000*l.*), of which 43,45,478 rupees (434,547*l.*) has been irrecoverably lost. He also procured from the bank for his partners in speculation and for his own purposes, 29,58,938 rupees (295,893*l.*), of which 13,02,408 rupees (130,240*l.*) has never been repaid. He also recommended many other loans to a large amount, whether disinterestedly or not it is impossible to say.

We will now state a few out of many similar cases to show the way in which the bank's money was lent during this disastrous period.

On the 14th July 1864, Sorabjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy obtained a cash credit for five lacs (50,000*l.*), giving no other security for its repayment than his promissory note. Acting under the advice of Premchund, he had made unsuccessful applications for allotments in the Back Bay Company to two of its promoters, Cowasjee Jehangeer and Mr. Scott, and then, to use Sorabjee's own words,—

"Premchund again called on me to know whether I had received any shares from Mr. Scott. I replied in the negative. He said, 'Never mind, I will manage all that for you,' and told me to give him a commission to purchase for me as many shares as I wished. I told him that I was short of money, and I could do no more than purchase a few shares. Premchund thereupon said, 'Take my word, Sorabjee, and do not trouble yourself about money. I will get you as much money as you require. But do not go in for less than one hundred shares.' I expressed surprise at his proposal, seeing that I was unable to pay for all these shares. He told me that he could procure 10 lakhs of rupees in a twinkling. I agreed to it, and asked how he could manage it. He said he would get the money from the Asiatic and the Bombay banks. The next day or the day after that, he sent me two notes, one addressed to Mr. Morrison, the manager of the Asiatic Bank, and one to Mr. Blair. In the latter he wrote, 'My dear Mr. Blair, could you accommodate Sorabjee with five lakhs?' The letter to Mr. Morrison was of the same purport. On the other side of the two chits (notes) he had got replies from Mr. Blair and Mr. Morrison, saying they would give the money with pleasure.

"Next day he called on me at my office, and asked me if I was able now to go in for shares. I said, 'No, not the hundred,' and gave him a commission for 43 shares only. Ten lakhs were not sufficient for the purchase money of 43 shares, so Premchund asked me to send in some money to the banks to my credit. I accordingly did so. It was about 60,000 rupees, (referring to his books,) 26,500 rupees to the Bank of Bombay and 40,000 rupees to the Asiatic. On the 14th July he came to me personally for the cheques, and asked me to hand them over to him. I accordingly did so."

On the 11th October 1864, Mr. Diver, a medical man in Bombay, Mr. George Taylor, the Master of the High Court, and Atmaram Madhowjee, a well-known speculator, obtained a loan of five and a half lacs (55,000*l.*) from the bank. Some time before Premchund had called on Mr. Diver, and told him that Back Bay shares were likely to become very valuable, and that the Bank of Bombay was prepared to advance money on them at the market price without any margin, and to allow the promissory note taken at the same time to be made payable on the 1st July 1865, more than eight months after the granting of the loan. Mr. Diver thereupon consulted with Mr. Taylor and Atmaram Madhowjee, and having obtained their consent, 20 Back Bay shares were bought from Premchund. The promissory note was sent to them for their signature, but they never saw the money or the shares. The whole transaction was managed by Premchund Roychund, who received the five and a half lacs from the Bank of Bombay in payment for the 20 Back Bay shares, which he subsequently deposited with the bank as security for the loan.

On the 28th December 1864, Cursetjee Furdoonjee obtained a fixed loan of 6,25,000 rupees (62,500*l.*) on the security of his promissory note and the deposit of 10 Back Bay shares, part of a larger number he had purchased from Premchund. Premchund negociated this loan with Mr. Blair, being a director of the bank at the time, and it is clearly proved that these 10 shares were bought from him by Cursetjee for 5,25,000 rupees (52,500*l.*), and that consequently the bank lent one lac more on them than they had actually cost.

Again, in January 1865, Mr. Fleming, a partner in the firm of Nicol and Co., obtained a cash credit for 10 lacs (100,000*l.*) on the security of their promissory note; the money was soon afterwards repaid, but the following is Mr. Fleming's account of his negociation with Mr. Blair :—

"The Elphinstone Company, of which my firm were the secretaries and treasurers at that time, owed my firm 12 lacs of rupees, and they were not likely to be in a position to repay the advance for rather more than a month. I required a part of the money, and I went over to the Bank of Bombay to see Mr. Blair, and to ascertain whether I could obtain an advance from the Bank of Bombay. I was prepared to make explanations as to why I needed the money, and, if need be, to offer security. Mr. Blair granted me the loan at once, immediately on my asking for it. He refused to hear any explanations at all, but turned to Mr. Robertson, who, if my memory serves me right, was in the same room, and said, 'Let Mr. Fleming have 10 or 20 lacs, or whatever he requires.' I urged very much making some explanation, for it was an anomalous thing my borrowing such a sum of money at the time, but he would not listen to anything which I had to say."

During Mr. Blair's temporary absence at Poona for five weeks in August and September 1864, and again during his absence at Ajmere, from the 16th January to the 14th March 1865, Mr. Robertson, the deputy secretary, acted for him, and his administration during this period appears to have been as reckless as that of Mr. Blair. His advances were numerous, and a great proportion of them ended in loss. We will only mention two glaring instances.

In August 1864 Premchund told Kursondass Madhowdass that the Bank of Bombay did not know what to do with their money, and that he, Premchund, was asked to get it invested, and he proposed to Kursondass to buy 100 Back Bay shares as a speculation on the joint account of Kursondass, Premabhoy Hemabhoy, and himself, and to borrow the purchase money for the shares from the Bank of Bombay on a fixed loan, to be repaid on the 1st July 1865, and to give the bank as security some of the shares bought, and the promissory notes of three partners in Kursondass's firm, viz., Kursondass, Muggon Huttising, and Mayabhoy Premabhoy. The reason for suppressing the name of Premabhoy Hemabhoy has not transpired, but Premchund was a director of the bank at this time, and probably wished to conceal his share in the transaction. Kursondass Madhowdass and the others having acceded to this proposal, 25 lacs (250,000*l.*) was borrowed through the instrumentality of Premchund from Mr. Robertson, eight lacs in the name of Mayabhoy Premabhoy, eight lacs in the name of Muggon Huttising, and four lacs in the name of Kursondass, each of them giving a promissory note for those amounts, and on the 26th September following, Kursondass obtained another sum of five lacs on his promissory note. The money having been thus obtained, 53 of the shares were bought from Premchund himself, and the rest from other brokers, and then 80 of the shares were deposited with the bank, nominally for safe custody, but on the understanding that they were to be security for the repayment of the loan.

On the 25th January 1865, Messrs. Brown and Best, brokers, obtained a loan of two and a half lacs (25,000*l.*) from Mr. Robertson, on a bond payable in fourteen days, without giving any other security. According to Mr. Best's evidence, Mr. Tracey, a director of the bank, and Messrs. Brown and Best, entered at this time into a joint speculation for the purchase of Port Canning shares, and five lacs being required for their purchase, Mr. Tracey contributed one and a half lacs, Mr. Best one lac, and the firm of Brown and Best, by means of this loan from the Bank of Bombay, two and a half lacs, and this statement was confirmed by a pencil entry in the books of the firm. Mr. Brown, on the other hand, says that he was induced to go into the speculation at the instigation of Premchund and Mr. Tracey, and that Mr. Tracey was not himself a party to the speculation, but being largely interested in Port Canning shares, the price of which he wished to keep up, he lent Mr. Brown the one lac and a half, to enable him to carry out his speculation. Neither story is very creditable to Mr. Tracey, who did not hesitate to recommend Mr. Robertson to lend this money to two brokers, with no other position than that which their speculations gave them, knowing at the time that the money was to be employed in a share speculation, in the success of which he was in some way personally interested. As soon as this loan had been arranged by Mr. Tracey and Premchund with Mr. Robertson (who also knew that the money was to be used in a share speculation), Mr. Tracey told Brown that he might have the money if he applied for it. Second Period, 1st June 1864 to 30th April 1865.

After the fourteen days had elapsed, this loan was renewed by Mr. Blair, but even then no further security was taken, the 46 Port Canning shares eventually deposited as security not being given to the bank till June 1865.

The numerous branches of the bank were under the superintendence of the secretary alone. The weekly returns, showing the business done at the branches, and the monthly returns, showing the securities on which advances were made, were never laid before the Board, and all the directors express ignorance as to the business transacted at the branches. Some of the directors thought that Mr. Birch, the President, was looking after them, but it is clear that they were left to the management of their respective agents, subject to the supervision of Mr. Blair and the inspector of branches. Branches.

The value of Mr. Blair's supervision may be estimated by his admissions that he never looked at the weekly returns, but trusted the accountant would let him know if anything was wrong, and that he only glanced at the monthly returns to see what profit was made. It is further illustrated by the fact that the powers of attorney for the different agents, which were prepared in pursuance of section 41 of Act X., were never executed, or issued from the bank.

The inspectors of branches received no instructions when appointed, and seldom visited the branches during this period. The Hydrabad branch was never visited. During the time that Mr. Fraser was agent at Kurrachee, more than a year and a half, that branch was never visited. They were, in fact, never visited unless something was wrong. As Mr. Blair rather incoherently observes, "it was so expensive to send inspectors through India, that I fancy it was "not necessary unless something was really wrong,—because everything was going "on well."

The duties of the agents at the branches were not better defined than those of their superiors. They received no instructions, except some printed rules, one of which was intended to define the power of the agent as to advances, but did not state the amount, being left blank where it ought to have set out the extent to which he might advance. There was in fact no limit on the power of the agents to make advances, and nothing to guide them as to the credit of applicants.

The discount lists of the branches were discontinued, and the agents were either told that they ought to be the best judges of the credit of parties applying for advances, or they were referred for advice to the agents of Premchund Roychund.

The result of all this want of system, and neglect on the part of the directors and secretary, is seen in the heavy losses incurred at almost all the branches. The following table shows the amount of those losses (excluding the Kalbadevi branch) :—

The Kalbadevi branch was opened in June 1864. It was situate in the town of Bombay, and not more than a mile distant from the head office, but it was thought that a branch there would be a convenience to many native customers, and the directors proceeded under section 41 of the Act to obtain the sanction of Government for its establishment.

It seems to have occurred to no one to read the 41st section attentively. That section authorized the establishment of branch banks "at such other places than Bombay" as the directors might deem expedient, and did not authorize the opening of any branch in Bombay itself. It may be that the establishment of such a branch was not prohibited, or illegal, but it was certainly unauthorized by the Act, and the consent of Government was unnecessary, as the 41st section did not apply to such a case. This question, however, attracted the attention of no one, and the consent of the Governor in Council was obtained, apparently, as a matter of course.

Mr. Bullock, an assistant in the bank, was appointed manager of this branch, and was told to consult Premchund as to the credit of applicants. He was supposed also to be in daily communication with the secretary, and to be conducting the business of the branch under his advice; but, notwithstanding frequent visits to the head office, he appears to have received very little, if any, assistance from Mr. Blair, and to have acted very much according to his own views of banking.

Nothing could be worse than his management, and the way in which the branch was worked by some of its native customers, shows how injudicious it was to open such a branch in Bombay. When applications were made for advances, Mr. Bullock never inquired at the head office respecting the party applying, and the consequence was that he sometimes advanced money to persons whose applications had just been refused by the head office, or to parties who had already received large advances there, and to whom it was imprudent to make any further advance. Mr. Bullock defends these transactions on the ground that he relied on the security of the shares deposited, and it is certainly true that he did advance on shares (although Mr. Blair was forbidden to do it, and only did it covertly at this time), but their deposit did not excuse his want of caution in not ascertaining the exact position of these parties with regard to the Bank of Bombay.

Mr. Bullock's evidence did not give us a favourable impression of himself or his administration. Notwithstanding his repeated denials, we are satisfied that he frequently borrowed money from Roychund Deepchund, Premchund's father, to pay for the shares in which he was constantly trafficking, when manager of this branch. His administration was marked by all the folly and bad banking which characterized the proceedings of the head office, and resulted in a loss of more than 19 lacs of rupees, which have never been recovered.

It was not till the 21st April 1865, that any restrictions were put upon the powers of the agents to make advances, but at that date they received a circular directing them not to advance, without the sanction of the head office, "on one party's name more than 20,000 rupees at a time," and even for this amount they were to obtain collateral security, if possible.

On the 27th February 1865 Mr. Birch resigned. His colleagues recorded their sense of his services in the following resolutions, which were carried unanimously:—

"That the most cordial thanks of the directors be conveyed to Mr. Birch, for his long continued and most valuable services to the Bank of Bombay.

"That Mr. Birch be requested on his return to England to have a full length portrait of himself painted by a good artist, at the expense of the bank, and that the same be placed in the board room of the new building, as a record of Mr. Birch's valuable services to the bank, during the five years of his chairmanship."

We offer no opinion on Mr. Birch's administration of the bank previous to August 1863, and it may be that these praises were justly due to him for his conduct as President anterior to the passing of the new Act. The Commission have only inquired into his conduct after that Act passed, and cannot concur in these praises, so far as they apply to the period embraced in their investigation.

We have been unable to discover that Mr. Birch did anything, except preside at the Board meetings once a week. Whether owing to failing health, or indifference to the affairs of the bank, we are unable to say, but his whole administration after the passing of Act X. was remarkable for nothing but idleness and incompetency. We regret that we cannot stop here. Mr. Birch was not too ill to occupy his time in speculations which necessarily diverted his attention from his duties as President. It is proved that he received allotments in many companies, the shares of which were at a high premium at the time he received them, and he thereby laid himself under obligations to the promoters of companies, and became a party to the wild speculations of the day. It is proved, moreover, that he allowed the Secretary and his deputy to know that he was receiving such allotments. He thus placed himself in a position in which it would be difficult to protect the bank, either from the speculators who swarmed to it for money, or from the servants who were throwing that money away. His conduct was in violation of the spirit, if not the letter, of the Government orders respecting speculations by officers of Government, and was inconsistent with his position as the head of a great Government bank; and although there is no evidence that he was in league with the schemers who were then using the bank's money for their own purposes, there is no doubt that his conduct brought additional discredit on the administration of the bank.

On the 2nd March 1865 Mr. Hannay, a member of the firm of Grey and Co., who had been a commercial director since the previous December, and who was a member of the consulting Committee of the Asiatic Bank, was elected President.

At the end of March 1865, Premchund Roychund told Messrs. Hannay and Morrison (the manager of the Asiatic Bank) that he had seen Mr. Blair and Mr. Tracey, and that there were "influences at work," connected with time bargains, which would bring down the price of all shares, including those of the Back Bay Company, and it was eventually agreed that Messrs. Hannay, Morrison, Blair, Tracey, and Premchund should each buy five Back Bay shares, with the view of keeping up the price, and that the loan for the purchase money of the shares should be obtained from the Asiatic Bank, in the name of Dossabhoy Dhunjeebhoy, Premchund's manager. The 25 Back Bay shares were accordingly bought through Premchund, between the 4th and 13th April 1865, at premia of 33,500 rupees and 34,000 rupees per share, and he of course took this opportunity to sell some of his own shares.

According to Premchund Roychund's version of this transaction, it was a speculation for a larger amount, involving the purchase of 50 Back Bay shares; but this is denied by Messrs. Hannay and Morrison, who say they refused to enter into the enlarged speculation proposed to them by Premchund. But the amount or the number of the shares bought is not the question, and is almost immaterial. Mr. Hannay says that the shares were at such a high price at the time, that none of the parties could have contemplated making a profit, and that their sole object was to keep up the price, and so benefit the Asiatic and Bombay banks, who were large holders of such shares. This may have been one reason for this transaction, but it is improbable that they would have incurred so great a risk for the sole purpose of benefiting the banks, or that, if this had been their only object, they would have concealed their names by using that of Dossabhoy Dhunjeebhoy; and, on the other hand, there can be no doubt that they would have taken any profit arising out of the transaction. It was therefore a speculation to all intents and purposes, and one in which the president and secretary of the Bank of Bombay were both jointly interested. The statement of the fact seems enough to ensure its condemnation, and Mr. Hannay told us he had never ceased to regret it.

Mr. Hannay on becoming President made no immediate alteration in the practice of the Bank, but began to inquire into the management and as to the outstandings, and his inquiries soon brought to light the practice of lending money on promissory notes with shares deposited for safe custody, and it seems he disapproved of the practice, and thought that it would be better to take advantage of the Act, and sanction advances on shares. At this period too the prospect of the speedy termination of the American war had caused a great depression in the cotton market, and money was exceedingly scarce in Bombay; and it was represented to the directors that many good customers of the bank had their property locked up in shares, and that it would be a great relief to the money market to advance on such securities.

Impressed by these considerations, and actuated, no doubt, by their own desire "to give confidence in the bazaar," and keep up the value of Back Bay shares, Messrs. Hannay, Tracey, and Premchund determined to bring the question before the Board. Mr. Hannay says he did not finally determine on this, till the morning of the 12th April, when Mr. Robertson was directed to prepare the draft resolution, which he accordingly did; but if this be so, the result of some discussions between himself and other directors had transpired, as it was known in Bombay, before the board met, that they were about to sanction advances on shares.

On the 12th April 1865, Messrs. Hannay, Tracey, A. Brown, F. S. Chapman, Lushington, and Premchund Roychund were the only directors present at the Board meeting. Mr. Hannay proposed the resolution prepared by Mr. Robertson, which was read by Mr. Blair. The resolution, as it appears on the scroll minute, did not set out the resolutions of the 6th August and 17th September 1863, but merely referred to them by date, leaving a blank for their subsequent insertion; and there is a conflict of evidence whether those resolutions were ever brought to the attention of the directors generally at the time. Mr. Hannay says they were read out from the minute book, and Premchund says that he first heard at this meeting of the resolution of the 6th August 1863, and they are corroborated by the scroll minute which refers to the former resolutions. On the other hand, Messrs. A. Brown, F. S. Chapman, and J. L. Lushington, all new directors, are positive that they never heard of the former resolutions, and were unaware that they were rescinding them. The question is of some importance, with reference to statements subsequently made by the Government directors who were present, but the conflicting statements are capable of explanation. Mr. Hannay admits that the whole business was hurriedly done. Mr. Blair would not be likely to linger, a moment longer than could be helped, on the question of advancing on shares. Messrs. Hannay, Tracey, and Premchund would all be disinclined to speak of anything likely to provoke discussion on the principle of the measure; and so it came to pass, probably, that the former resolutions were not emphatically recited or commented on, and escaped the attention of new directors, who admit that at this time they were relying with confidence on the superior knowledge of their colleagues. Whether this be the true explanation or not, there was no discussion on the principle of the measure, but only on the questions whether Port Canning shares should be added to the list, and as to the rate at which Back Bay shares should be taken. The first question was decided in the negative; but when

Mr. Lushington said that he thought the Back Bay shares were rated too high, Mr. Hannay observed, "I believe there is no gentleman in this room who would "not be glad to buy any number of those shares at 25,000 rupees, instead of "20,000 rupees," an observation which Messrs. Tracey and Premchund, with their recent experience of buying such shares at premia of 33,500 rupees and 34,000 rupees, would no doubt confirm. Mr. Lushington, thinking that his colleagues knew more of the matter than he did, withdrew his objection, and the resolution passed unaltered, as follows:

"Resolved that the secretary be authorized, at his discretion, to advance on the shares of the undernoted companies, to the extent of the amount marked opposite each. Shares so deposited are not to be transferred to the bank, but the certificates to be accompanied by blank transfers signed by the transferors.

"Bank of Bengal, paid up 8,000 rupees; present market rate, 16,000 rupees premium, old and new shares. Advance 6,500 rupees on each share.

"Bank of Madras,	paid up 1,000 rupees;	ditto 123 per cent.	Advance 75 per cent. premium.
"Agra Bank -	paid up 500 rupees;	160 per cent.	Advance 100 per cent. premium.
"Asiatic Bank -	paid up 200 rupees;	105 per cent.	Advance 75 per cent. premium.
"Oriental Bank Corporation -	paid up 250 rupees;	170 per cent.	Advance 125 per cent. premium.
"Commercial Bank Corporation -	paid up 250 rupees;	75 per cent.	Advance 50 per cent. premium.
"Bombay Reclamation Company -	5,000 rupees;	30,000 rupees prem.	Advance 20,000 rupees premium.
"Elphinstone Land & Press Company -	1,000 rupees;	1,450 rupees prem.	Advance 1,000 rupees premium.

"In granting such advances the secretary will, in all cases, intimate and insert in the bond that, should the shares deposited be depreciated in value during the currency of the loans, the security must be increased, or a partial payment made to reduce the debt. One per cent. above regular rate to be charged on such advances; and it is to be distinctly understood that such advances are only to be granted to first-class applicants."

Notwithstanding the general terms of Act X. of 1863, it was still open to the directors to confine the operation of the Act within safe limits. If they had only permitted advances at a reasonable rate on the shares of well-established companies, such shares being paid up in full, and had prohibited advances on the premia of shares, both the amount and the risk of the business done would have been restricted within narrow limits; but it was not the intention of Messrs. Hannay, Tracey, and Premchund so to restrict the operation of this resolution, but rather to give "confidence in the bazaar," and keep up the high price of Back Bay and other shares, and with this object they took the imprudent course of permitting advances on the premia of shares in such companies as the Back Bay, the Elphinstone Land and Press, and the Asiatic Bank, shares which owed their high price in the market, more to the mad speculations of the day, than to any sound basis of works done, or business connection established.

The resolution was also calculated to impress the new directors with the belief, and did in fact lead them to suppose, that no advances on shares had previously been made. Neither Mr. Hannay, nor the secretary undeceived them on this point.

This resolution also confirmed to a great extent the powers usurped by the secretary, and allowed him, at his discretion, to lend any amount on shares, observing the prescribed rate, and although the resolution stated that such advances were to be made to first-class applicants only, it left Mr. Blair to be the judge who were applicants of that class. The directors must have known that the exercise of this discretion required great care, and knowledge of the varying position of the companies from time to time, and they ought not to have delegated such powers to their secretary, but should have retained it in their own hands.

The resolution was immediately acted upon, and, out of twenty-two advances made on shares between this date and the 10th June following, fourteen resulted in losses amounting to 13,47,152 rupees (134,715*l.*).

Mr. Hannay's attention being called to some of these advances, he appears to have told Mr. Blair, that he had been acting without discretion, and that no advances should in future be made without reference to the directors or the Weekly Committee.

These were Mr. Blair's last acts as secretary. He left for England on the 29th April 1865, having, the day before, mortgaged his Bombay Bank shares to pay the balance of his account with Roychund Deepchund, amounting to upwards of 15,000*l.* (1,51,875rs. 4a. 9p.), and was succeeded in the office of secretary and treasurer of the bank by Mr. Donald Robertson.

The end of April, and the termination of Mr. Blair's career as secretary, bring us to the end of the second period of the bank's history.

The result of Mr. Blair's management of the bank may be summed up shortly thus :—Of the advances made at the head office during the time he was secretary, and outstanding when he retired, 1,27,82,437 rupees still remain unrecovered. Of the advances made at the Kalbadevi and other branches during the same period, and outstanding when he retired 25,30,965 rupees still remain unrecovered, making a total loss by advances in Mr. Blair's time of 1,53,13,402 rupees, or 1,531,340*l.*

Mr. Blair was unequal to the management of such an institution as the Bank of Bombay, and his general weakness of character rendered him an easy tool in the hands of a designing man, such as Premchund. But his concealment from the directors of his mode of transacting business, and his orders for the omissions from the application book, show that he was dishonest, and deceived those by whom he was trusted. He resorted to concealment, because he knew that he was doing what the directors would not sanction ; and when we consider how much he was indebted to Premchund for allotments, for advice and assistance in speculation, and for money actually received from him and his father, we have no hesitation in concluding that much of his conduct is attributable to a desire to propitiate Premchund, and an inability to refuse any advance which he chose to recommend or sanction.

The commercial directors during the foregoing period were Messrs. Hannay, Steel, McIlwraith, Scott, Lidderdale, A. Brown, Tracey, Cassels, Cowasjee Jehangeer, Premchund Roychund, and Cowasjee Manockjee. The Government directors were Messrs. Birch, Mangles, Ravenscroft, Jacomb, F. S. Chapman, and Lushington.

Cowasjee Jehangeer resigned on the 11th July 1864, and Mr. Cassels was only a director for about four weeks in February and March 1865, and neither of them can be deemed responsible for the proceedings of this period. Messrs. F. S. Chapman and Lushington sat for the first time on the 16th March 1865, and Mr. A. Brown joined the board on the 9th April following. The last three directors are responsible for the resolution of the 12th April 1865, but they are not answerable for the vicious system that prevailed during this period of the bank's history, which they could scarcely have understood before May, and which it is clear they subsequently endeavoured, somewhat ineffectually, to correct.

Of Premchund we shall speak hereafter. The conduct of the other directors during this period was characterized by culpable negligence. With the exception of Mr. Hannay, they all considered that their duty was sufficiently discharged if they attended at the board meetings once a week. Although they were appointed in rotation members of the Weekly Committee, they never met at the bank, or inquired how the business was done, or why the secretary discontinued to refer to them by circular. They were ignorant of the large sums granted on the security of promissory notes only, and of the other large advances made on the security of promissory notes and shares lodged for safe custody ; and, although their ignorance of these loans is partly accounted for by the omission of all reference to them in the application book, and the neglect of the secretary during this period to lay any books before the directors at their meetings, yet it is obvious that they should not have allowed themselves to be so blindfolded, but should have carefully examined the daily book, and the registers of bills discounted, and securities deposited, as well as other books of the bank; and if they had done this, which was no more than their duty, they would have soon discovered everything relating to these large loans, and the scandalous manner in which the funds of the bank were thrown away.

With respect to the charges made against the directors of having used the bank's money for their own purposes, we find no evidence of any such conduct on the part of any director, except Premchund Roychund and Mr. Tracey.

It is true that the other commercial directors, with the exception of Messrs. McIlwraith, Lidderdale, and A. Brown, were more or less engaged in speculations, and, although their own conduct may have led them to look on the mad speculations of the day with a lenient eye, and to take no steps to repress them, yet we have no reason to believe that they were influenced by any corrupt motive.

Mr. Lidderdale was no party to the resolution of the 12th April 1865, having been absent from Bombay for about three months subsequent to the middle of March.

With the exception of the President and Mr. Mangles, all the Government directors of this period were in office for a short time. Mr. Ravenscroft was only in office for four months and a half, and Mr. Jacomb for three months and a half. Messrs. F. S. Chapman and Lushington attended the board for the first time on the 16th March 1865, and cannot be held responsible for the practice of this period. All the Government directors held other offices under Government which occupied their time, and one of them, Mr. Ravenscroft, was Acting Secretary to Government, President of the Bombay Municipal Commission, and one of the Commissioners for considering applications from promoters for reclaiming portions of the foreshore of the island, and was constantly obliged, during the time he acted as director, to visit the Governor at Matheran and Poona.

Messrs. Mangles and Jacomb received some allotments of shares during the time they were directors of the bank. Their receipt of such allotments at this period was reprehensible, but the allotments were not so numerous, or so valuable, as to raise a suspicion that they were speculators in any large sense, or compromising their position as directors, by laying themselves under obligations to the promoters of that period, or fettering their own independence of action.

Mr. Ravenscroft received no allotments during the time he was a Government director, except one of the Port Canning Company, which was a Bengal scheme, and this allotment was not received by him till the month of February 1865, on the 23d of which month he sat at the Board for the last time.

The attention of Sir Bartle Frere, the Governor of Bombay, having been called during the preceding period to the fact that officers of Government were speculating in shares, he determined to take measures to repress the practice. The previous orders of the Government of India, dated the 28th May 1852 and the 11th March 1862, only prohibited Government servants from taking any part in the management of banks, or other trading companies, or from being in any way concerned in them, except as simple shareholders, and on the 21st May 1864 the Secretary of State had decided that although, as a general rule, he saw no objection to the servants of Government holding shares in joint stock companies, having for their object the development of the resources of the country, yet public servants should take no part in the management of such institutions, and should not be employed in the districts where the operations of the company might be carried on. These orders rendered it difficult for the Bombay Government to forbid investments in such companies altogether, and a difference of opinion among the members of the Bombay Government at that time, as to the course which ought to be pursued, rendered it still more difficult to deal with this question. A circular, dated the 16th November 1864, was issued to Government servants, which, after reciting the orders of the Secretary of State, proceeded thus :

3. His Excellency the Governor in Council now desires to point out to all public servants of Government at this particular period, when there is so strong a tendency to speculation in Bombay, the extreme importance of obedience to the spirit of all the previous orders above alluded to, rather than to the mere letter of the law, and to repeat that Government will be guided in its action in accordance with the principles laid down by Sir George Clerk, concurred in by the Government of India and the Right Honourable the Secretary of State.

4. The Governor in Council has no wish to go further than is absolutely necessary in defining, by specific restrictions, limitations easily recognized by that high-toned sense of public duty which has always stood out as one of the strong characteristics of the Indian services. He believes it to be sufficient to remind all public servants of the great importance of avoiding any connection, however remote, with any undertaking which might tend to fetter their action, or divert them from the numerous and important responsibilities imposed by the public service upon them.

5. Without therefore attempting to lay down stringent rules on the subject, the Governor in Council would caution every one connected with the Government, or belonging to any department or Office at or near the Presidency, in which the affairs of any company are likely to form a matter of official reference or discussion, that he will run extreme risk of having his motives misconstrued, more especially during the present period of excitement, should he become a shareholder in any such company.

This order was well intentioned, and although it would have been better if it had distinctly prohibited the trafficking or jobbing in shares as distinguished from investments therein, and the receipt of original allotments at a time when the high premia on all shares rendered the allotment a pecuniary favor, it ought to have been sufficient to repress the spirit of speculation among Government servants.

The Government of Bombay has been charged with supineness in not more vigilantly superintending the bank during this period. It is but fair however to remark that, until a late period in the bank's history, the Returns sent by the bank to Government were of a delusive character, and not calculated to afford any accurate information as to the nature of the business transacted, or the securities on which advances were made.

ThirdPeriod, 1st May 1865 to 24th April 1866.

We now enter on another period of the bank's history, from the 1st May 1865 to the 24th April 1866.

About the end of the preceding March, Sir Bartle Frere had received a note from Sir Charles Wood, dated the 3rd March 1865, in which he observed :

"I cannot help being in some alarm at the possibility of a crash in your Bombay speculations. We hear disagreeable rumours, and after the way in which they have been going on, I am afraid that it is probable. Pray look after your bank and currency matters. We must stand clear, but I would send for your Government directors in the bank, and desire them to look very carefully into what the bank is doing, and to keep you informed."

On the receipt of this warning, Sir Bartle Frere communicated its contents to the Chief Secretary, Mr. F. S. Chapman, a Government director, and he and his colleague, Mr. Lushington, began immediately to look more closely into the management of the bank than their predecessors had done.

Mr. A. Brown was also alarmed, a few days after he became a director, by rumours that the bank was involved in loans to men who had speculated largely, and who had time bargains in shares, and he asked Mr. Tracey, at one of the Board meetings, whether in his opinion there was any ground for the rumours afloat, to which Mr. Tracey replied that they had better not discuss the subject then, as the Government directors were only too apt to take alarm. As the business of the Board was about to commence, Mr. Brown did not pursue the subject further, but he felt very uneasy, and contemplated retiring from the direction. Having consulted his partner, Mr. Fleming, that gentleman told him of his extraordinary negociation with Mr. Blair for the cash credit of 10 lacs, and advised him to remain in the direction and try to bring about a better state of things, which Mr. Brown resolved to do.

The new directors, being thus warned, applied themselves to their duties, and soon discovered the radical error in the system of the bank. Previous to the board meeting of the 4th May 1865, Mr. F. S. Chapman inquired of Mr. Brown whether he was satisfied with the way in which the business was done, and "particularly referred to the utter ignorance in which the directors were kept "as to the business and everything that was going on, and they both agreed "in the opinion that the directors were ciphers, and the secretary apparently "uncontrolled." The two Government directors having come to the meeting prepared to move in the matter, Mr. Brown agreed to support them, and Mr. Lushington then commenced the discussion, by proposing that restrictions should be put upon the secretary's powers to make advances. This was strongly opposed by Mr. Hannay, the President, who said that unless the secretary was left unfettered, it would be impossible to make him feel his responsibility, and that men of standing had too much self respect to have their applications scrutinized by the whole board. Mr. Tracey supported Mr. Hannay, and the result of the discussion was a compromise, and the passing of the following resolution :—

"That no new constituent of the bank be allowed credit beyond rupees three lacs, without the special sanction of three directors."

This resolution shows that the directors knew that the secretary was granting loans for more than three lacs on his own authority, and it places no restraint on his exercise of this power in the case of old constituents, or in the case of new constituents applying for less than three lacs, and only forbids loans by him to new constituents for more than three lacs.

The operation of this resolution was therefore confined within narrow limits; but Messrs. Brown, Chapman, and Lushington all insist that this resolution does not express the result arrived at by the discussion, inasmuch as there was an express understanding that all future applications for advances were to be laid before the board. We are satisfied that these gentlemen are speaking the truth, although Mr. Hannay does not recollect this understanding, and it does not appear upon the board minutes.

Mr. Hannay's evidence was given with great fairness, but he was very ill when he gave it, and he may well have forgotten that which the other directors distinctly affirm. We think it probable that the resolution recorded was the only resolution come to, but that, in order to reconcile the majority of three directors to the small result of their efforts, some assurances were given them that future applications should be laid before the Board; and inasmuch as from this date (whether the result of the panic herein-after mentioned or this understanding it is difficult to say) many applications for advances were brought before the Board, the new directors had reason to suppose that they had effected a material reform in the system of the bank.

Although a better state of things was thus inaugurated, there was little improvement in the practice as to advances. Nor was it likely that there would be, for many of the directors knew nothing of banking, and some of them were too much immersed in speculations, and too desirous of making the marke easy and keeping up the price of shares, to throw difficulties in the way of those who wanted money.

Neither was it likely that Mr. Robertson, the secretary, would effect any improvement in the system of the bank. He was a party to some of the worst business done in Mr. Blair's time, and was not much more scrupulous than his predecessor. He accepted allotments from Premchund, Mr. Hannay, and the other promoters of the day, and consulted Premchund respecting his speculations.

Mr. Robertson made the following statement as to one of these transactions:

"In 1864 I had several shares allotted to me; Back Bay shares, in one particular instance; and I thought I should like to have some shares in the Bank of Bombay. I spoke to Premchund on the matter, and told him this. I said that I should like to sell the Back Bay shares, and to buy ten Bank of Bombay shares, so that I might get the increase of capital, and so get the shares to hold as an investment. He said, 'Do not sell your Back Bay shares. I have plenty of shares, and I will give them to you at the present price, if you like, and you can take them up on any day you like.' I forgot all about it until June 1865. The shares were then very much lower, and I gave him a list of all the shares, and said, 'I want you to sell all my shares. I want to get rid of all shares;' which would even then have given me a very good return. I said, with reference to the Bank of Bombay shares, 'They are very much down now, and I want to get out of them.' They were then at par, I believe. He said, 'The best thing for you to do is to take so many more to make an average.' I consented, telling him that immediately the shares got up to a certain price I would tell him to hand them over. There was no writing, and no acknowledgment in any way. I never got a share in my possession; and in September or October 1865, when the shares were at about 70 rupees a share, I made a calculation, and found that with some money which he, or rather his nephew, who was conducting business for him, and for whom he was responsible, owed me for shares, I should be clear; and I said to him, "These shares must be handed over at such a price, which clears me the amount.' He said, 'Do not you want to make any money out of them?' I said, 'No, I want to get rid of them.' He said, 'Very well, they shall be handed over;' and the account was made up in that way."

The real transaction, however, was that Premchund Roychund was to supply the shares, and Mr. Robertson was not to pay for them till he chose. Premchund accordingly bought the 10 Bank of Bombay shares, and paid 34,795 rupees for them, and as he did not choose to be out of pocket by the whole of that sum, he borrowed 32,000 rupees from the Asiatic Bank, on the deposit of the shares. But the remarkable part of the transaction, which apparently surprised Mr. Robertson, but did not surprise the Commission, was, that the accounts of this transaction are not found in the books of Premchund, but in those of his father, Roychund Deepchund, and therefore afford another confirmation of the fact, that loans by Roychund Deepchund were often the loans of his son.

But the entries in respect of this transaction are not the only entries in Roychund Deepchund's books of sums paid to Mr. Robertson, or on account of shares purchased for him; and at the end of the Hindoo year 1921 (October 1865), Mr. Robertson was indebted to Roychund, or his son Premchund, to the amount of 75,240 rupees (7,524*l.*) The influence thus obtained over Mr. Robertson was, as we shall hereafter see, exercised by Premchund and his father without much scruple, or attention to the interests of the bank.

There was no improvement as to advances on shares, except that the directors, or some of them, were now consulted as to such advances. All the directors had authorized these advances by the resolution of the 12th April, and they required the experience of a few more months, to show them the danger of such banking.

Another loan was granted by the full Board, on the 17th May 1865, on the security of land. Dossabhoy Merwanjee and Co. had previously obtained a discount of a lac on the security of their promissory note, and they now applied for a loan of three lacs more, for twelve months, on the security of their landed property at Parell. The Board appear to have entertained some doubts as to the legality of this transaction, for they resolved that, if the bank's solicitor were satisfied with the security offered, and the loan then current were paid off, the loan of three lacs might be granted for three months, renewable at the end of that time, if urgently required. The matter was therefore referred to Mr. Kelly, who gave an opinion, which we could not obtain; but we collect from the witnesses that he thought that, if the money were lent on a promissory note and land as a collateral security, the money was not lent upon land within the meaning of the Act. A mortgage deed was accordingly prepared by Mr. Kelly, and the order of the directors was carried out, by discounting the promissory note of the applicants for two lacs only, and allowing the current advance to remain unpaid, it being distinctly understood between Mr. Robertson and Dossabhoy Merwanjee and Co. that the note was to be renewed for twelve months. It is difficult to imagine how a solicitor of ability could have given such an opinion or sanctioned such a transaction. In other respects this transaction was characteristic of the banking operations of Mr. Robertson and the directors; for the time granted for repayment was not consistent with good banking, and the security turned out to be insufficient. Third Period, 1st May 1865 to 24th April 1866.

Loans still continued to be granted on promissory notes on a single name, without any additional security. On the 11th May 1865, when the first advance of this kind came under the notice of Mr. Lushington, he objected, but he was overruled by the Board, including Messrs. F. S. Chapman and A. Brown. Mr. Hannay observed, "I agree with our late President, Mr. Birch, that good "personal security is far better than any other." Mr. Brown admitted that all credit was for the time severely shaken, but thought that a refusal of all loans on personal security would precipitate a panic, and recoil tenfold on the bank. Mr. Lushington nevertheless adhered to his opinion, and on the 13th May wrote another minute, in which he observed, "Loans on personal security "are strongly advocated by our president and the late president, but I would "ask whether it is not upon such loans that our greatest losses are likely to "occur?" Mr. Lushington's observation was correct, as will appear hereafter.

The Governor of Bombay was evidently at this time paying attention to the affairs of the bank, for on the 8th of May he wrote to Mr. F. S. Chapman, inquiring whether it was true that the bank had advanced on 131 Back Bay shares at the rate of 25,000 rupees per share. To this Mr. Chapman replied on the 10th of May:—

"Your informant must, I think, be in error. To the best of my belief, up to last Thursday, the bank had hardly advanced at all on Back Bay shares, and in a few instances where they had done so the shares had been taken as collateral security. . . . . The other day Lushington and I spent some time in looking over the books, and have directed a statement to be prepared showing the number of individuals and firms to whom advances above one lac have been made, and the security by which they are covered. This statement will be ready by to-morrow." * * * *

On the next day, Mr. Chapman wrote another note to the Governor, which merely stated the purport of a letter he enclosed from Mr. D. Robertson, the secretary, which was as follows:—

"Since the resolution was passed to advance on shares, the following shows how much has been given out in that way:

Back Bays	35 shares	Rs.	6,94,750
Elphinstone Land Company	324 „	Rs.	6,40,000
Asiatic Bank	890 „	Rs.	3,04,250
Commercial Bank	3,580 „	Rs.	12,99,800

"Besides the above, we hold a considerable number of Back Bay shares, which we took into safe custody from those names who have large loans from the bank on personal security, men such as B. H. Cama, Cursetjee Furdoonjee, and Kursondass Madhowdass. These loans were not nominally granted on shares, but it was thought well to have some security collaterally, independent of their personal standing. Several of these large loans Premchund tells me will be paid up very soon."

In less than a week after the date of Mr. Robertson's letter, Byramjee Hormusjee Cama, one of the persons named in it, failed for a large amount, owing the Bank of Bombay 17,71,682 rupees (177,168*l.*) At a meeting of his creditors on the 17th of May, it was resolved that his estate should be wound up under a trust deed, and Mr. D. Robertson was appointed one of the trustees, an appointment which was sanctioned by a resolution of the board on the same day. The winding-up of such an estate involved responsibility and care, and must have occupied much of Mr. Robertson's time and attention, inasmuch as he received, with the consent of the directors, 15,000 rupees (1,500*l.*) for his services. Although the 29th section of Act X. of 1863 does not prohibit the secretary from holding such an appointment, it was the evident intention of that enactment to confine the secretary as much as possible to the duties of his office, which were both numerous and important, and quite sufficient to occupy his whole time and attention.

This failure was the commencement of a panic which prevailed in Bombay with increasing intensity throughout the remainder of May and the first part of June. There was a run on the Bank of Bombay, the cash in the bank was less than safety required, and the directors were afraid that the bank would suspend payment. In this emergency they applied to the Governor of Bombay, who immediately, on the 15th of June 1865, sent a telegram to the Viceroy (Sir John Lawrence), narrating the facts, inquiring whether the Bombay Government might, if necessary, advance 150 lacs from the currency reserve, and stating that, unless the Viceroy sent immediate authority to the Bombay Government, it might "be too late to avert disaster, financial and political, " more extensive than the failure of the bank." To this telegram the Viceroy replied, that the Bombay Government were to use their discretion, and would be supported.

What financial and political disasters the Governor referred to is not very clear, but the failure of the bank might have affected the credit of Government, and that might have been a disaster more extensive, politically and financially, than the failure of the bank itself; but no such failure occurred, for the run on the bank ceased as soon as it was known in Bombay that the bank would be supported by Government, and consequently the necessity for any pecuniary assistance never arose.

On the 21st of June 1865, the Viceroy telegraphed to the Bombay Government, and inquired whether they had taken steps to ascertain the quality of the outstanding bills and securities which the bank held, and Sir Bartle Frere answered, in his letter of the 22d of June, that this had been already done, and the result was better than he expected. "The advances," he adds, "on shares without " collateral security were not large, nor the prices at which they were then valued " high."

It is difficult to understand the last observation. In every advance on shares a promissory note or bond signed by the borrower was given, as well as the shares, and consequently there were no advances on shares without collateral security; but the term "collateral security" is constantly used throughout the correspondence in a way calculated to mislead, inasmuch as the security to which the shares were collateral is not mentioned. Sir Bartle Frere no doubt thought there was some valuable security besides the shares; but, if inquiry had been made at the bank, it would have been discovered that the shares were collateral to mere promissory notes, in a single name or in the name of joint borrowers, without sureties, which were, in most cases, much less valuable than the shares themselves.

On the 22nd of June 1865 the Governor General in Council caused a letter to be addressed to the Bombay Government, requesting that a full report might be furnished him as soon as possible on the affairs of the bank, and specifying seven points on which he desired information:

1. The precise position of the bank as regards its assets and liabilities.
2. What the losses of the bank had been since the commencement of the commercial crisis.
3. What was the amount of overdue bills.
4. What proportion of their amount might fairly be expected to be realized.
5. What were the prospects of the bank with reference to current bills.
6. Whether the provisions of the bank charter had been duly observed.
7. At what rates advances had been generally made on shares, and whether on shares at the market price, or at par value, or at any fixed rate below that amount.

About this time Sir Bartle Frere received another private note from Sir Charles Wood, dated the 18th of May 1865, in which he said:—

"Pray desire your Government directors to look after the bank's proceedings. Their advancing on shares, such as you have at Bombay, is contrary to all banking principles. It would be contrary to the charters of the banks of Calcutta and Madras. Unfortunately not so as to Bombay; but it is not the less wrong."

This note was followed by a despatch from the Secretary of State, dated the 2nd of June 1865, in which, after referring to advances made by the Bank of Bombay on shares of joint stock companies, the Bombay Government were directed to take the earliest opportunity of restricting the Bombay Bank to the same business which was authorized to be transacted by the banks of Bengal and Madras, and to adopt measures to check as far as possible, by means of the Government directors, advances of the nature referred to.

This despatch was immediately referred by the Bombay Government to the Government directors for their report; and, on the 29th of June 1865, the Bombay Government addressed another letter to the Government directors, requesting them to draw up, for submission to the Government of India and the Secretary of State, a confidential report on the state of the bank at that time.

It is doubtful whether this letter of the 29th June was written after the receipt of Sir John Lawrence's despatch of the 22nd of that month. However that may be, the letter of the 29th of June was never answered by the Government directors, who contented themselves with replying to the despatch of the Secretary of State of the 2nd of June.

The report of the Government directors, dated the 30th of June 1865, referred only to the advances which had been made by the bank on shares. It recited the resolution of the 12th April 1865, omitting the resolutions of the 6th August and 17th September 1863, and stated that the bank's unemployed balance on the 12th April was 2,91,69,603 rupees, and that, there being much demand for temporary accommodation, the directors had agreed to make advances on shares, and that in so doing they had not exceeded the powers of the charter. The report then proceeds thus:—

"4. The directors considered that the above measure would entail little or no risk, and would afford much relief at a time of considerable pressure. A total sum of 41,70,800 rupees was advanced on the security of the following shares:—

	Rupees.
39 Back Bay shares, value at par - - -	1,95,000
936 Elphinstone Land shares, value at par - -	9,36,000
905 Asiatic Bank shares, value at par - - -	2,26,550
3,580 Commercial Bank shares, value at par - -	8,95,000

"The above shares were taken as collateral security. Even in the present depressed state of the market, those of both the land companies are considerably above par, the Back Bays being quoted at about 100, and the Elphinstones at 50 per cent. premium on the paid-up capital. All advances of this description have for some time past been discontinued."

This report was in some respects incorrect, and was likely to mislead those who read it.

The omission of the recitals in the resolution of the 12th April 1865 concealed the fact that the directors had rescinded the decisions, which their predecessors had arrived at on two occasions.

The Government directors, moreover, could scarcely have forgotten Mr. D. Robertson's letter to one of them, of the 11th May preceding, in which he stated that, besides the advances on shares under the resolution of the 12th April, they had made such advances in other cases, taking the shares "nominally" for safe custody, but really as a security for the repayment of the loan. The number of shares deposited on account of three of these loans—those of Kursondass Madhowdass, Cursetjee Furdoonjee, and Byramjee Hormusjee Cama—amounted to 115, and the money lent on the security of these shares and the promissory notes of the borrowers amounted to 34,25,000 rupees (342,500*l.*), so that, instead of stating that 39 Back Bay shares had been deposited, the report should have stated that advances had been made on at least 154 Back Bay shares, and that the total sum advanced was at least 75,95,800 rupees (759,580*l.*), instead of 41,70,800 rupees (417,080*l.*) And even this amendment of the report excludes from consideration all the advances on shares made at the branches, of which the Government directors were probably ignorant.

If the report, instead of stating that the shares were taken as collateral security, had said that the shares were collateral securities to the mere promissory notes of the borrowers, it would not have left such a comfortable impression on those who read it.

And, lastly, the words "all advances of this description have for some time "past been discontinued," though calculated to leave a pleasing impression on the mind of the Governor in Council, could scarcely have conveyed an idea that such advances had only been discontinued for twenty days.

The Bombay Government accepted this report, and forwarded it to the Secretary of State, with a despatch dated the 8th July 1865, in which they remarked that there could be little doubt that the value of the securities referred to in the report would speedily improve; that the Secretary of State would observe that the current rumours as to the extent of advances on Back Bay Shares were much exaggerated; and that the Bombay Government would reserve their opinion on the conduct of the elected directors of the Bank, until they were in possession of the promised report of the Government directors.

The Governor of Bombay must have forgotten Mr. D. Robertson's letter of the 11th May, when he stated that the rumours as to advances on Back Bay shares were much exaggerated; and if he had called upon the Government directors for a report in reply to the Governor General's letter of the 22nd June, he would probably have been reminded of the true state of the case; but no report was asked for by Government, or made until the following year, when another demand for information was made by the Government of India.

The despatch of the 8th July to the Secretary of State, and its enclosure the report of the 30th June, were forwarded to the Government of India, and these documents constitute the only reply the Bombay Government ever gave to the Governor General's letter of the 22nd June 1865. They thus replied to only one of seven inquiries made in that letter, which is much to be regretted; for, if the whole of them had been carefully answered, the crippled condition of the bank would at once have been ascertained.

In July 1865 a tabular statement, showing all the outstandings of the bank, was prepared, and laid before Mr. A. Brown, and it showed such a state of affairs that he took it over to Mr. Hannay's office, and the result of their consultation was a resolution of the Board to declare no dividend for the past half-year ending the 30th June 1865. This was a wise resolve, for, notwithstanding the profitable business done by the bank during the previous half-year, the greater part of its capital was now lost. The directors however did not know this, for, in common with many others in Bombay, they had not yet realized the worthless character of the securities they held; but the fact appears to be that, of the advances made prior to the 30th June 1865, no less a sum than 1,68,45,653 rupees (1,684,565*l.*) has never been recovered.

About this time another transaction occurred which throws light on Mr. D. Robertson's relations with Premchund Roychund and his father Roychund Deepchund. The latter had obtained a cash credit of a lac from the bank, on the security of Government paper, and, on the 12th July 1865, 5,100*l.* and upwards was due from him on that account. On that day Premchund, or Roychund Deepchund, applied to Mr. Robertson to give up the Government paper, which he agreed to do, and immediately sent an order to that effect to Cassinath Babajee, the clerk in charge of the securities ledger, who referred to Mr. De Ga, the ledger-keeper of cash credits, to inquire whether Roychund's debt was paid off. Mr. De Ga then sent the following memorandum to Mr. Robertson:—

"Roychund has not paid off his cash credit account, Dr. balance 51,253 5 9 rupees, and Cassinath wants me to give up his Government notes as stands for security.—J. M. De Ga."

On this memorandum Mr. Robertson wrote, "Roychund is to pay off his loan. "Give up the notes." The Government paper, amounting to Rs. 30,000 (3,000*l.*) five per cents., was accordingly given up, but the cash credit has never been paid off.

Mr. Robertson attempts to excuse this transaction on the ground that Roychund Deepchund represented that he had sold the Government paper, and was to get the money in a day or two, and would then pay off the loan. If this were true, it would not justify such an unbusiness-like proceeding; and it is clear that it was Mr. Robertson's duty to receive the money in exchange for the notes. We fear that the true explanation of this transaction is to be found in the relations then subsisting between Premchund Roychund and his father on the one hand, and Mr. Robertson on the other, which made it difficult for Mr. Robertson to refuse any request, however irregular, preferred by Roychund Deepchund.

The annual general meeting of the shareholders of the bank was held on the 7th August 1865, on which occasion the report of the directors was adopted by the meeting.

The 1st, 2nd, 4th, and 8th paragraphs of the report were as follows:

"1. The directors have now to submit to the proprietors a statement of the affairs of the bank up to 30th June last, showing a net profit for the half-year of 19,82,085–3–6 rupees, after providing for current expenses of establishment, interest on deposits, and deducting 22,836–9–2 rupees for losses incurred at the branches.

2. From the statement it will readily be seen, that under usual circumstances the directors would not only have been enabled to have declared a liberal dividend, but also to have carried a handsome sum to credit of reserve. Looking, however, to the terrible crisis through which we have just past (the most trying time, perhaps, for banks and commercial men ever seen in India), and considering the amount of liabilities current on 30th June, the directors have, after much anxious deliberation, resolved not to declare a dividend for the past half year. This they have already intimated by circular to proprietors resident in Europe." * * * * * * *

"4. Taking a rather unfavourable view of liabilities current on 30th June last, the directors estimate that the losses will not exceed 30 lacs, but it is quite possible that the ultimate loss will be much less, so that there is every hope of shareholders receiving a fair dividend at the end of the current half-year." * * * * * * * * *

"8. A very erroneous impression having gone abroad relative to the extent of the bank's advances on shares, the directors have to state that after the rescinding of an old rule in April last, only about 35 lacs were loaned to constituents of the bank on the collateral security of shares. The bulk of the loans granted during the past year were, as was the custom of the bank, granted upon personal security only; and during the crisis when these loans became due, if constituents were unable to pay in full, the bank never hesitated to take what collateral security it could obtain. This, it is presumed, must have been the origin of the rumours as to enormous advances having been made upon shares."

This estimate of the bank's losses was afterwards admitted by the directors themselves to be erroneous, and the statements in paragraph 8 are equally inaccurate.

The object of that paragraph is to correct an alleged erroneous impression as to the extent of the bank's advances on shares generally, and the paragraph suggests, what it does not however assert, that no advances were made except under the resolution of the 12th April, and that such advances amounted to 35 lacs only. This ingenious statement may have been verbally correct, but it was substantially untrue. If it was verbally correct, the Government directors erred greatly when they stated in their report of the 30th June, that 41,70,800 rupees had been advanced under the resolution of the 12th April. It was substantially untrue, inasmuch as advances were made on shares before the passing of that resolution, and all advances on shares, those made before and after the date of that resolution, amounted, at the head office alone, to at least 75 lacs.

The next sentence conveys the impression that only such loans on personal security had been granted as it had been the custom of the bank theretofore to grant, and that shares were only taken as additional collateral security when constituents were unable to pay; but both suggestions are inaccurate, for the old custom did not recognize advances on promissory notes in a single name, or in the names of borrowers only without sureties, and many of the shares were taken, not as additional collateral security, but under one contract and at the same time that the personal security was given.

About the latter end of August, and throughout the months of September and October 1865, the discovery that the termination of the war had not produced the expected supply of cotton from America occasioned a reaction in the cotton market, and the price of shares gradually rose. On the 28th August, Cowasjee Manockjee pressed his colleagues in the direction and the secretary to realise all shares deposited as security for overdue bills, when the sale would either pay off the debt or produce a sum approximating to the amount, but he failed to convince them of the wisdom of such a course. The directors, deluded by the appearance of returning prosperity, hoped for better prices, and feared another fall, if so many shares as the bank held were then thrown on the market. All the directors at this time were actuated by what has been called a "policy of forbearance," which seems to have resulted in their doing nothing, and failing to realise a single share. Some of the commercial directors were much engaged in share speculations themselves, and would naturally be averse to any step that would check the rise in prices. The secretary, Mr. Robertson, was also a large holder of shares, and he took this opportunity of selling some of them, and attempting to close his account with Premchund. If he had acted for the bank as he did for himself, much loss might have been averted.

See his evidence extracted ante.

Whilst this rise in prices continued, several debtors of the bank, (amongst others Jaiverilall Umiashunker and Burjorjee Rustomjee), who had deposited shares as security for their loans, urged Mr. Robertson to take advantage of the rise, and sell the shares, but Mr. Robertson declined to comply with their requests.

There was no doubt good reason for concluding that, if the bank threw all these shares on the market, a fall in their price would certainly ensue. It is also easy to be wise after the event, which has shown that this rise in the price of shares was only temporary. But, making every allowance for the directors, it was unwise to make no attempt to improve the position of the bank at this period, and not to do that which Mr. Robertson did for himself, quietly get rid of some of the shares held. The opportunity thus lost never occurred again. In November shares again fell in price, and gradually became more and more valueless, and, in the spring of 1866, the great panic, which destroyed so many banking institutions in England, completed the ruin of the commercial prosperity of Bombay.

On the 8th of September, Sir Charles Wood wrote to the Bombay Government, acknowledging their despatch of the 8th July. He observed that the mere statement of the proceedings of the bank was sufficient to show how unjustifiable they were, and he directed the Bombay Government to take measures for making such an alteration of Act X. of 1863, as would preclude the bank from making advances on the security of the shares of public companies not guaranteed by Government.

This despatch was forwarded by the Bombay Government to the Bank of Bombay, and was characterized by the President, Mr. Hannay, as a "most tyrannical communication." On the 9th November, the directors replied that the Secretary of State had either been much misinformed relative to the transactions of the bank, or else had quite misunderstood the information supplied; that the bank "had never advanced money directly on shares, but during the "trying crisis that occurred in the early part of the year the times were so "exceptional that the directors considered it prudent, seeing so much money was "lent on personal security only, to obtain as much collateral security as possible "when granting loans." And with respect to the proposed alteration of Act X. they observed, "that, seeing the clause referred to has never been taken "advantage of," they did not see that any change was necessary or desirable.

If the directors had said that they had never lent money on the security of shares only, the statement would have been correct, but the statement that they never advanced money directly on shares is untrue. They had passed a resolution on the 12th April to enable their secretary to make such advances, and both secretary and directors had repeatedly admitted the fact that such advances had been made on shares as collateral security. But money lent at one time and under one contract on two securities collateral to each other, as, for instance, on promissory notes and shares, is not lent less directly upon one security than the other. It is lent directly on both securities, and this could not have been done unless section 32 of the Act had been taken advantage of.

In November 1865, there was again great pressure in the money market, and a fall in the price of shares, followed by another monetary crisis.

On the 13th January 1866, the Government of India addressed a letter to the Bombay Government, stating that, six months having elapsed since the critical state of the bank had called for the assistance of Government, and no substantial improvement having taken place, and the bank having omitted to gather up its resources, the Governor General in Council was of opinion that an examination into the affairs of the bank should no longer be delayed, with a view to such a revision of the terms upon which its business had been and was conducted as might seem expedient. The Governor General in Council considered that the examination should comprise an investigation, not only into the assets and floating liabilities of the bank, but into its transactions, especially during the last six months, and they expressed a hope that a full report would be forwarded without delay. On the 14th March, nearly two months after the receipt of this despatch by the Bombay Government, it was referred by them to the Government directors for their report.

On the 23rd January 1866, the directors of the bank resolved to pay a dividend to the shareholders for the past half-year ending 31st December 1865, at the rate of eight per cent. per annum. It has been suggested that this dividend was paid out of capital, but the facts are as follows:—

	Rupees.	Rupees.
The profits of the year 1865 were - -	30,67,967
The reserve fund was - - -	10,56,983	41,24,950
The directors had computed the losses at - (Of this 4,83,000 rupees had been written off as irrecoverable.)	30,00,000
Add the dividend for the half-year - -	8,36,000	38,36,000
Balance of reserve fund -		2,88,000

Third Period, 1st May 1865 to 24th April 1866.

It is true that this calculation afterwards proved to be erroneous, but the directors at that time believed it to be correct. The prudence of declaring such a dividend and drawing upon the reserve fund, is however, another question, and there can be little doubt that it would have been wiser to keep the amount of this dividend in hand, until the true position of the bank could be ascertained.

On the 31st March 1866, Messrs. Chapman and Norman, the Government directors, presented their report in reply to the Governor General's letter of the 13th January 1866. The following are extracts from this report :—

"11. The 1st of July found the bank with very many of its formerly best constituents either insolvent or embarrassed. It was plainly seen that unless a general policy of forbearance was exercised, loans which would, in all probability, prove ultimately good, would, if the parties were pressed, result in immediate and heavy loss. The 'gathering up of resources' was thus a thing to be done gradually and not at once. The bank, however, had so far done so, that, when the heavy drain came upon it (115 lakhs were withdrawn between the 19th September and 13th November), it had cash enough to meet that drain without requiring or asking for assistance. Loans and discounts were much circumscribed, and as far as could be known they were granted only for purely commercial purposes. * * * * * * * * *"

"12. On the 30th June the amount lent from the head office was 321 lakhs, and on the 30th December 313 lakhs. Of the former amount 79 lakhs had been realized up to the 30th December, and 126 were overdue. The process of recovery has, it must be admitted, been slow, but then the very great delay attendant on all legal proceedings in Bombay, and the fact that the largest of the bank's debtors have not yet realized the proceeds of the current year's investments in cotton and other produce, must not be overlooked. *" "We beg further to report that the total amount of loans and discounts outstanding on the 30th December at both the head office and branches was 381 lakhs of rupees ; that out of this 163 lakhs of rupees are overdue, and that 30 lakhs have, after a careful and impartial scrutiny, been set down as the amount of the probable eventual losses. From the balance sheet, a copy of which is annexed, it will be observed the bank will, after allowing for all losses, and after having paid a half-year's dividend at the rate of eight per cent. per annum, be possessed of about three lakhs in excess of its capital."

"18. If any investigation, in addition to that recently made by the auditors appointed by the shareholders, is deemed necessary, we would suggest that it be conducted by competent accountants wholly unconnected with the past and present management, especially if such investigation is to have for its object how far each individual director, whether official or elected, is responsible for the losses that have been sustained. We have reason to believe that the present directors would have no objection to this course being adopted, solely for the information of Government, and that they court the fullest inquiry into the report of the auditors appointed by the shareholders.

"19. The operations of the bank, not only during the past six but during the past ten months, will, we believe, bear the strictest scrutiny ; and there is no prospect of the loss of a rupee on a single new transaction entered into during that period.

"20. With regard to the future, the only practical difference between the charter granted to this bank and that granted to the Bank of Bengal is that contained in section XXXII. of Bombay Act X. of 1863, authorizing advances being made on shares; and we have reason to believe that the directors would have no objection to its being expunged, as for the last ten months this power has never been made use of."

Colonel Marriott, another Government director, wrote a separate minute in which he commented with considerable force on the report of his colleagues, and showed, as a result of the policy of forbearance, that no progress whatever had been made in the recovery of the large advances of an objectionable character outstanding in June.

The twelfth paragraph of the report states that 321 lacs was the amount lent from the head office on the 30th June, and that of that amount 79 lacs had been realized, and 126 lacs were still overdue, but it omits to state what had become of the other 116 lacs. If the writers of the report had been less ready to adopt a pleasant view of matters, they would have explained that these 116 lacs were in much the same state as the 126 lacs overdue, inasmuch as they represented advances which had been renewed because they could not be recovered.

The statement that 163 lacs were actually overdue at the head office and branches, and yet that the loss would only be 30 lacs, was, on the face of it, a very sanguine estimate, as the statement itself implies that the personal security of the debtors had become valueless, and that all the bank had to look to was the realization of the shares deposited, and the estates of insolvents.

The statement that there was no prospect of the loss of a rupee on the transactions of the last ten months, unfortunately proved incorrect, and would never have been made, if the Government directors had understood the danger of advancing upon such personal security as the bank was still in the habit of taking. The advances made in these ten months at the head office alone which ended in loss amounted to Rs. 50,09,115 (500,911*l.*), and the actual loss incurred thereon is Rs. 19,51,077 (195,107*l.*)

But the last statement, that the power given by section 32. of Act X. of 1863 had never been made use of during the last ten months, was singularly inaccurate. During those ten months, from the 1st June 1865 to the 31st March 1866, there had been no less than 25 advances directly on shares, irrespective of numerous other transactions in which shares had been taken as security, subsequently to the advances being made. That this was the practice of the bank is also apparent from a letter of Mr. Hannay, dated the 13th August 1865, in which he says :—

"Now, were men like Candass Narrondass or Sir Jamsetjee in former times wanting a loan of five lakhs, we would have given it them on personal security and been right. Should these men want a loan this month, and deposit with you say Back Bay shares for the equivalent about par, I would grant the loan for three months at once."

And yet Mr. Chapman says that he obtained the information for this report from Mr. Hannay.

In March 1866, Mr. Hannay, who was about to leave for England, was requested by his colleagues to define what he considered should be the powers of the secretary. To enable him to do this, Mr. Hannay wrote to Mr. D. Robertson, and asked him what he considered he had power to do. Mr. Hannay's letter to the directors, and Mr. D. Robertson's letter to him,* are too lengthy to be set out, and too important to be abridged. The latter shows that Mr. Robertson still claimed great powers, and, among others, the power to grant cash credits and loans on personal security, without any limit as to amount; but Mr. Robertson added, that of late the times had been so exceptional, that he had granted very few advances without consulting, at least, one director. That he had these and other large powers was not disputed by Mr. Hannay, who proposed in his letter to the directors to add but few additional restrictions. Mr. Hannay's letter was adopted by the Board as a correct view of what the secretary's powers ought to be, and his suggestions were, on the 19th March 1866, embodied in the only byelaws ever passed by the directors; but these byelaws were never sent to the Governor in Council for sanction, and consequently never became valid byelaws, according to the 45th section of Act X. of 1863.

Mr. Hannay retired from the direction, and returned to England, in the beginning of April 1866. He was succeeded as President by Mr. F. F. Lidderdale, and Mr. A. Brown, who had left the Board in December 1865, was re-elected a director on the 17th April in Mr. Hannay's room. Colonel Marriott, who was only a director about a month, retired early in April, and Mr. F. S. Chapman sat at the Board for the last time on the 24th of that month.

This brings us to the end of the third period of the bank's history. The directors during this period were Mr. Hannay, President, Messrs. Lidderdale, A. Stewart, Tracey, Brown, Ryrie, Premchund Roychund (for two months only),

* Vide Exhibits A 34 and A 35 in Appendix to Minutes of Evidence.

Third Period, 1st May 1865 to 24th April 1866.

Cowasjee Manockjee, and Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, commercial directors, and Messrs. F. S. Chapman, Lushington, Norman, and Colonels Ballard and Marriott, Government directors.

Mr. Ryrie and Colonel Marriott were directors for so short a time that they cannot be held responsible for the policy of the bank during this period. The same observation applies to the Government director, Mr. Norman. Although his name is attached to the report of the 31st March 1866, his colleague Mr. F. S. Chapman very fairly admitted, that Mr. Norman could not be held responsible for its statements, he having joined the board only a month before.

Mr. Hannay was an attentive and industrious President, but this is all that can be said in favour of his administration. His minutes are written in an off-hand style, not calculated to impress others with a sense of his prudence, and many of his recommendations of applicants for loans were most unfortunate. Being himself much mixed up in share transactions, he viewed such matters with a lenient eye, and his speculation with Mr. Blair shows that he had no proper views of his duty as President of a great Government bank. There is no evidence that he used the bank's money for his own purposes, or that he was actuated by any dishonest intention; but there is little doubt that, in his advocacy of the resolution of the 12th April 1865, he was influenced by a desire to keep up prices at that time.

Mr. F. S. Chapman and Mr. Lushington, the Government directors, attended to the business of the bank, and endeavoured to reform its practice, but they found its affairs in an embarrassed condition, and had many difficulties to contend with. That they failed to do more, must be attributed to their ignorance of banking, or even commercial business, and the reliance which they were therefore obliged to place on the statements of their colleagues. Their reports are unfortunately characterized by a tendency to "make things pleasant," but neither of them intended to misrepresent facts, and their inaccuracies must be referred to the sources from which their information was supplied.

None of the Government directors of this period were engaged in speculations. They received no allotments during their tenure of office, and there is no evidence that any of them were actuated by any improper motive.

Of Premchund we shall speak hereafter. Two of the directors, Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy and Cowasjee Manockjee, obtained loans from the bank when they were in office. Considerable loss has been incurred on these accounts, but their position at this time was such, that the borrowing of this money did not necessarily involve any impropriety on their part, and Rustomjee would probably have paid off his debts if he had not voluntarily rendered himself responsible to the bank for those of his brother Sorabjee. With the exception of those hereinbefore named, none of the directors used the bank's money for their own purposes.

Fourth Period, 24th April to 10th December 1866.

We now come to another period of the bank's history, from the 24th April to the 10th December 1866, during which the ruin of the bank was completed.

On the 26th April 1866, Mr. Robertson was informed that Premchund Roychund was in immediate want of 25 lacs (250,000*l.*), to prevent his stopping payment. Mr. Robertson immediately informed Mr. Lidderdale, the new President, who summoned a special meeting of the directors for the same afternoon.

The directors present at this meeting were Messrs. Lidderdale, Brown, A. Stewart, Tracey, Norman, and C. E. Chapman, the new Government director, who had only succeeded Mr. F. S. Chapman on the previous day. The following managers of banks in Bombay also attended by invitation:—Mr. Moir of the Oriental, Mr. Campbell of the Chartered Mercantile, Mr. Morrison of the Asiatic, and Mr. Thomson of the Bank of Hindustan. Mr. Lidderdale opened the discussion by stating that Premchund was in difficulties, and would suspend payment next day, unless assisted; that he required 25 lacs to carry him on, which was a larger sum than the Bank of Bombay felt justified in advancing, and that as the question of supporting Premchund was a matter of interest to all the banks in Bombay, he had convened the managers present to consider the matter. A discussion thereupon arose, during which it transpired that Messrs. Morrison and Thomson were interested on behalf of their banks in supporting Premchund; and, although Messrs. Moir and Campbell disclaimed any such interest, it was agreed by all present, that Premchund's failure would be followed by a general depreciation of all shares and mercantile securities, and produce a crisis such as they had not before seen, and that it was therefore desirable to grant him the loan on good security. A desire being expressed for further information as to Premchund's affairs and the security to be given, the meeting was adjourned to Mr. Lidderdale's bungalow at 7 a.m. the next morning.

Fourth Period, 24th April to 10th Dec. 1866.

The narrative must now be interrupted, to show Premchund's position at this time with regard to the Bank of Bombay, and the influence which he brought to bear on the directors.

On the 26th April, Premchund was indebted to the bank as follows:—

	Rupees.
Overdrawn account	5,00,000
Fixed loan	9,00,000
Joint promissory note with Mayabhoy Premabhoy	3,50,000
Bills in the hands of branch agents	6,00,000

He had also borrowed from the bank a further sum of two lacs in the name of Khuttow Khemjee, but this was not known to the secretary or directors at this time.

Premchund Roychund was in a position to exercise great influence over the deliberations of the directors; an influence the more dangerous because it was not seen.

The relations subsisting between him and the secretary have been already shown, but his relations with Mr. Tracey, one of the directors, were of a still more intimate character. Mr. Tracey had been jointly engaged with Premchund in many speculations, the latter supplying the money to such an extent that at one time the amount due to him from Mr. Tracey amounted to upwards of 29 lacs; and although this debt was afterwards greatly reduced, their continued speculations ended in another large balance of 3,86,836 rupees due from Mr. Tracey to Premchund, which the latter, Mr. Tracey being hopelessly involved, wrote off to profit and loss in November 1865. About ten days before this meeting, Mr. Tracey had borrowed four and a half lacs from the Asiatic Bank in the name of his firm for Premchund's purposes; and, although unable to discharge his liability to Premchund, he on the 19th April had given the Bank of Bombay a guarantee for Premchund's overdrawn account to the extent of three lacs, and when this overdrawn account came to the knowledge of the Board at a subsequent period, Mr. Robertson assured them, in Mr. Tracey's presence, that this was a guarantee by the firm of Ritchie, Steuart, and Co., of which firm Mr. Tracey was then a member. This statement was wholly untrue, and both Mr. Tracey and Mr. Robertson must have known it to be so; and it shows that they had been acting in concert to keep up Premchund's credit with the bank. Premchund has admitted that Mr. Tracey was "working for" him to procure the loan of 25 lacs from the bank.

The next morning (April 27th) the same persons who were present at the previous meeting, together with Mr. Müller of the Comptoir d'Escompte, Mr. Beattie of the Commercial Bank, and Premchund Roychund himself, met at

Fourth Period, 24th April to 10th December 1866.

Mr. Lidderdale's bungalow. Mr. Kelly, the solicitor of the bank, who had been sent for by Mr. Lidderdale, was also present. Premchund sat in the verandah, and during the proceedings was communicated with through Messrs. Tracey and Robertson, Mr. Tracey being the chief exponent of Premchund's statements.

The meeting confined their attention to two points; first, the amount of Premchund's pressing liabilities, and, secondly, the sufficiency of the securities offered.

As to the first point, they were shown a paper, which was almost unintelligible, but which professed to be a statement of Premchund's pressing liabilities. This statement was not verified in any way; but Mr. Tracey assured the meeting that the difficulty was a temporary one, and that Premchund had a large sum locked up in the Dhollerah districts, which he, Mr. Tracey, knew would be received on the next settling day. The meeting did not require the production of a full statement of Premchund's affairs, or inquire whether, if the 25 lacs were advanced, his insolvency would be averted. Mr. A. Brown suggests that the time did not allow of such a full inquiry, and that the directors trusted entirely to the security.

As to the securities, Premchund proposed to deposit his jewels, and the title deeds of his landed property, and to give the joint promissory note of himself, his father Roychund, Candass Narrondas, and Kursondass Madhowdass.

The jewels were estimated in the memorandum* produced at the meeting, at 20 lacs. They were not produced, and none of the directors had ever seen them. Many of those eventually deposited turned out to be nominally the property of his father.

The landed property was mentioned in the memorandum also, and was estimated at 26 lacs at least. Some of the houses were known to the directors, but they relied chiefly on the estimate of one of their colleagues, Mr. Norman, who, as Collector of land revenue in Bombay, had considerable experience in such matters. He estimated the whole landed property at 14 lacs, which is now admitted by him to have been an over-estimate by more than a lac. There was considerable discussion on this point, and constant references were made to Premchund through Mr. Tracey, and, on one occasion, Mr. Tracey returned with a message from Premchund, that, if the directors gave him so much trouble, he would prefer stopping at once.

Some of this landed property turned out to have been bought in the name of his father, but, whether it belonged to him or not, it was given up by him, together with other property, for the benefit of Premchund.

The signature of Roychund to the joint promissory note was of little additional value, and he has evaded the payment of this and other debts, by absconding into the Guicowar's country. Candass Narrondass was a mere tool of Premchund, and has since passed, somewhat ignominiously, through the Insolvent Court of Bombay. Kursondass Madhowdass failed on the 16th May 1866, and his trustees repudiated their liability on the promissory note.

It was at last agreed upon by all present, that a loan of 25 lacs should be granted to Premchund for six months, on the security offered, and that the Bank of Bombay should subscribe ten and a half lacs towards the loan, that the Oriental, Chartered Mercantile, Asiatic, and Commercial Banks, and the Comptoir d'Escompte, should each subscribe two and a half lacs, and the Bank of Hindustan two lacs, to make up the total sum of 25 lacs. It was understood also, that the money was to be advanced in the first place by the Bank of Bombay, which was to be recouped by the other banks to the amount of their respective contributions.

Mr. Lidderdale directed Mr. Kelly to prepare a deed to carry out this agreement; but no memorandum or minute of the arrangement entered into was made by the secretary, the solicitor, or any one present at the time. Mr. Robertson says he was too busy going backwards and forwards to Premchund; but Mr. Chapman says that Mr. Tracey was the chief exponent of Premchund's statements, and Mr. Robertson had plenty of time towards the close of the meeting, when inquiries ceased, to record some minute of the agreement come to. Mr. Kelly was supposed to be taking notes, but it is not clear that he did take any, and they have never been produced. It was his duty to see that some memorandum of the agreement was signed by all parties, or that a regular vote was taken upon some resolution embodying the agreement, before a rupee of the bank's money was advanced.

* Vide Exhibit A 59 in Appendix to Minutes of Evidence.

Mr. Robertson also failed to discharge his duty in not informing the directors at this meeting of the true state of Premchund's account with the bank. Mr. C. E. Chapman was only appointed the day before, and knew nothing of the bank's affairs; and, although Mr. Robertson appears to have told Mr. Brown the amount of Premchund's bills held by the branch agents of the bank, that statement did not disclose the whole case. If he had told them, as the fact was, that Premchund was already liable to the bank to the amount of 23½ lacs (235,000*l.*), we doubt whether any director, except Mr. Tracey, would have done more at this crisis than endeavour to obtain further security for so large a debt.

But every one neglected his duty to the bank on this occasion. The directors ought to have ascertained the state of the account between the bank and Premchund. If they had done this, the loan would not have been granted, or, if granted, it would not have been treated as an independent transaction, but as one that required security for the former advances as well as the new. The directors, moreover, instead of restricting their inquiries to the narrow question, whether the 25 lacs would carry Premchund through the difficulties then pressing upon him, should have ascertained whether the loan would prevent his ultimate failure; and if it was impossible to do this at that time, the directors were bound to be particularly careful as to the security given, and the perfecting of such security, before any money was parted with. But nothing could be more unbusinesslike than their proceedings with regard to the security. They relied on Premchund's statements as to the value of the jewels, and on the hasty calculations of Mr. Norman as to the value of the land. They neglected to see that the terms of the agreement were reduced into writing, or that any memorandum of it was signed by the managers of the other banks before they left the room. They neglected to order that no advance should be made until the instrument directed by Mr. Lidderdale to be prepared was executed, and the securities lodged. Their conduct in all these respects was most reprehensible, but the conduct of their officers was simply disgraceful. The directors, of course, thought that the solicitor and secretary would see the transaction carried out regularly, and could not have foreseen that all the money would be paid away before the full amount of security stipulated for had been given.

On the same day, Mr. Lidderdale called on the Governor, Sir Bartle Frere, and informed him of what had taken place, and the latter, believing, as he says, the transaction to be still in fieri, approved of the advance being made.

On the 27th April, some of the title deeds relating to the landed property were deposited with the bank, on which day eleven lacs were paid on account of this loan, and on the following day a further sum of four and a half lacs was paid on Premchund's cheque to the Asiatic Bank, and a sum of one and a half lacs to the Bank of Hindustan. This payment to the Asiatic Bank discharged the beforementioned debt incurred by Mr. Tracey for Premchund, and explains in some measure Mr. Tracey's endeavours to procure the loan for Premchund.

Some of the jewels were deposited in the bank on the 29th of April, with a list setting out their respective values. They were given into the care of Mr. Fraser, an officer of the bank, and on the 1st of May a jeweller, named Courvoisier, was called in to value them. He had only gone over a few of the jewels, when Mr. Fraser, finding them to be valued at so much less than he expected and was stated in the list, closed the jewel case, and went down stairs, with the view of telling the directors what Courvoisier's opinion was. He had to pass through the secretary's room to get to the board room, and meeting there the secretary and Mr. Tracey, he told them what the valuation was as compared with what they had been led to believe. Mr. Tracey expressed his belief that the man did not know what he was about, and said that they had cost a very large sum of money. Mr. Fraser, believing that he had discharged his duty, returned to his room, and proceeded with the examination of the jewels. Notwithstanding the importance of this communication, Mr. Robertson did not repeat it to the directors, and continued to advance money to Premchund.

Premchund Roychund failed in the month of August 1866, and the securities taken proved wholly insufficient. The land, which Mr. Norman insists he ought to have valued at 12,71,000 rupees, was sold for 5,22,000 rupees. The jewels realized two and a half lacs, the promissory note was of less value than the paper it was written on; and the balance due from Premchund on his whole account is no less a sum than 24,73,693 rupees (247,369*l.*), which appears to be irrecoverable.

The foregoing narrative has attempted to pourtray the conduct, character, and proceedings of Premchund Roychund. He was a director when many of the transactions to which we have referred took place, and he was at all times the trusted adviser of the bank. He acted without any sense of responsibility or duty. Without honour or principle himself, he corrupted the secretaries, never disclosed to his brother directors the business the bank was doing, and used its money for his own purposes, and to the ruin of the interests of the bank.

In May 1866, the directors, not content with their last gigantic loan in support of Premchund, determined to aid the Asiatic Bank in its difficulties. To narrate all the complicated transactions between the banks fully, would occupy more space than could possibly be devoted to it in this report, but the material facts, stated briefly, are as follows:

On the 14th May 1866, the Asiatic Bank obtained a cash credit from the Bank of Bombay for 15 lacs, certain securities being deposited, and the deposit of others being promised, and this cash credit was subsequently, on the 25th of May, increased to 20 lacs. Instead of opening a separate cash credit account for this amount, Mr. Robertson, for some inscrutable reason, allowed this cash credit to be mixed up with the current deposit account of the Asiatic Bank in the books of the Bank of Bombay. In consequence partly of the failure of the Asiatic Bank to deliver some Government paper, and to pay more than 26,000*l.* out of 55,000*l.* promised on the arrival of the China Mail at Calcutta, when the first cash credit expired on the 13th July, there was a balance due to the Bank of Bombay of 11,78,838 rupees (117,883*l.*), and only one lac of good negociable security to cover it. It became necessary, therefore, to extend the cash credit, or to press for payment, and the bank resolved on the former course, and extended the credit till the 1st September, fresh securities being deposited, and a new arrangement made.

On the 23rd August, the directors discovered that five lacs, which the Asiatic Bank had promised to procure from Calcutta, had not been received, and they called on Mr. Morrison for an explanation, and expressing themselves satisfied therewith, they obtained, in substitution for these five lacs, further security of an inferior description generally, but including an assignment of proceeds of Government paper and Bank of Bengal shares, which the Asiatic Bank had transmitted to Calcutta for sale, and which were estimated at 1,50,000 rupees (15,000*l.*) These proceeds were never received by the Bank of Bombay, and when the second credit expired on the 1st September, the balance due from the Asiatic Bank to the Bank of Bombay amounted to 16,82,828 rupees (168,282*l.*), to secure which the Bank of Bombay held securities which were not negociable, and such as no bank should hold; for instance, the assignment of the stock in trade of a druggist, and of claims on insolvent estates. Fourth Period, 24th April to 10th December 1866.

Notwithstanding the expiration of the cash credit on the 1st September, Mr. Robertson allowed his friend Mr. Morrison to continue drawing on the Bank of Bombay up to the 20th September, when the balance due from the Asiatic Bank amounted to 20,05,559 rupees (200,555*l.*), and when that bank failed, a few days afterwards, it was only reduced to 19,66,567 rupees (196,656*l.*). Mr. Robertson was almost daily informed of the state of this account, for Mr. De Ga never passed a cheque of the Asiatic Bank without sending him a memorandum stating the amount overdrawn, and obtaining his sanction for its payment.

These transactions are specimens of the bad book-keeping and bad banking of the Bank of Bombay.

The cash credit ought to have been kept separate from the current deposit account, and as securities were from time to time realized, the cash credit should have been reduced by the amount of realizations, and there would have been no difficulty in doing this, if the one account had not been mixed up with the other. Instead of this, the good securities at first given were from time to time realized, and yet the full amount of the credit was allowed to the Asiatic Bank, although the securities had been greatly diminished.

The cash credit should not have been extended on the 13th July, or if extended, it should only have been for the balance then due. The Asiatic Bank had already failed to fulfil its promises as to security, and this was sufficient warning that it was no longer to be trusted, and it should have been called on to furnish good negociable security in lieu of the Government paper and money from Calcutta which had never come to hand. Instead of doing this, the Board extended the credit for the full amount, taking inferior securities which have taken years to realise, and were again repeatedly deceived as to sums promised to be paid on this cash credit account.

The conduct of Mr. Robertson throughout this transaction, and particularly his allowance of the overdrafts after the expiration of the cash credit on the 1st September, is inexplicable. The fact that he was a friend of Mr. Morrison, and a shareholder in the Asiatic Bank, is hardly sufficient to account for such a serious dereliction of duty.

On the 16th June 1866, the last report of the Government directors, dated the 31st March, was forwarded to the Governor General, who replied to the communication in a despatch dated the 13th July, in which, after remarking that the embarassments of the bank were wholly attributable to abuse of powers which ought not to have been conferred upon it, and which were not possessed by the banks of Bengal and Madras, he proceeded as follows:—

"The Governor General in Council, though fully sharing in the desire of the Bombay Government to uphold the credit of the bank, cannot suffer the revenues of India to be indefinitely pledged to the support of an establishment of the affairs of which he is kept in ignorance. The information furnished by the report of the directors contains little more than is to be found in the general statements of assets and liabilities published in the newspapers. That there may be no further misapprehension on this subject, the statement which his Excellency the Governor General in Council requires, is comprised in the following particulars:—

"I. The banks, firms, and individuals to which the bank is under advances.

"II. The dates and amounts of such advances.

"III. The securities upon which they have been made, and the sums advanced upon each security.

"16. The bank should have no hesitation in furnishing these particulars, which, having regard to the peculiar circumstances at present affecting the relations of the Government of India and the bank, his Excellency the Governor General in Council is bound to demand."

Fourth Period, 24th April to 10th December 1866.

The Government of Bombay considered that these inquiries of the Governor General were of such a character, that a bank carrying on business at the time should not be called on to answer them, and that no such information could be safely sent to the Government of India, and they therefore postponed answering the Governor General's communication.

On the 6th August 1866, the annual general meeting of the shareholders of the bank was held in Bombay, at which another report of the directors was confirmed. This report was very indistinct in its statements, inasmuch as it set forth that the capital had been encroached upon to the extent of 50 lacs, without stating that sum to be the total loss incurred, or a loss in addition to the 30 lacs previously announced, and the accounts appended to the report afforded no explanation on this point.

The Bombay Government appear to have understood the real state of the case, and were anxious to get some independent and accurate opinion as to the position of the bank. It so happened that Mr. E. Harrison, a gentleman of some standing in the Financial Department of the Government of India, was then in Bombay, and it was suggested to the Governor that he might be employed for this purpose. The Governor immediately obtained the consent of the Governor General, and then, anxious to throw no discredit on the bank, requested the directors to apply to the Government for a committee to review their estimate of the bank's losses. The directors complied with this request, and a committee, consisting of Messrs. Harrison, A. J. Hunter, and Dinshaw Manockjee, was accordingly appointed.

It appears from the report of the committee, dated the 8th September 1866, that they examined the valuation laid before them of the assets of the bank on the previous 30th June, and were of opinion that that statement afforded proof of the fairness and care with which the directors had estimated the position of the bank at that time; but they were also of opinion, for the reasons stated in their report, that a large addition, no less a sum than 34,49,500 rupees (344,950*l.*), ought to be made to the directors' estimate of the losses of the bank.

On the 19th September 1866, this report, with other correspondence, was sent to the Government of India, who, on the 3rd October, telegraphed to the Bombay Government for the statement referred to by the committee in their report. The Government of Bombay immediately applied for it to the bank, and on the 6th October, Mr. D. Robertson replied that the statement "contained information with "reference to the committee's estimates which the directors alone could under- "stand, and that the directors therefore considered it unnecessary to forward a "copy to Government." It does not appear that the Government of Bombay took any further steps to obtain this document, or that they returned any answer to the telegram of the Government of India.

In the meanwhile, the Government of India had written twice to the Bombay Government,* reminding them that the despatch of the 13th July still remained unanswered, and pressing for a reply, but the Bombay Government was disinclined, for the reasons before stated, to furnish the particulars required, and now thought that the report of the Committee would be a sufficient answer. That report however had no quieting effect on the Government of India. Contrasting its statements with those of the directors' report, the wide discrepancy between them rendered it necessary in the opinion of that Government to insist on the production of the detailed information called for on the 13th July. The Government of India wrote on the 3rd October, that they thought it their duty as the largest shareholder in the bank, and as trustee of the treasury balances in their custody, to require that the full and unreserved exposition of their affairs, so repeatedly demanded, should no longer be withheld.

Fourth Period, 24th April to 10th December 1866.

On the receipt of this despatch, the Bombay Government replied to the Government of India in a letter dated the 22nd October 1866, from which the following is an extract:—

"His Excellency the Governor in Council would with deference submit that the bank could not furnish officially full particulars of its dealings with individuals, without violating the confidence reposed in it by its constituents, and that a tabular abstract, containing classified information on the points specified, would afford to those at a distance, and imperfectly acquainted with the recent commercial history of Bombay, little or no real knowledge either of the amount of judgment displayed in making advances, or of the present prospect of recovery. A careful appreciation of the value of the assets and liabilities of the bank appears to this Government to have been recently supplied by the independent committee of which Mr. E. F. Harrison was, with the permission of the Government of India, appointed a member. His Excellency the Governor in Council will however direct a statement in the annexed form,* to be prepared and submitted with the least practicable delay.

"10. If the Government of India are not satisfied that the report referred to affords a faithful and accurate statement of the present position of the bank, his Excellency the Governor in Council would beg to suggest that other officers be selected by the Government of India to inquire into the accounts on the spot, and to report on any further points on which information may be desired, but that the bank should not be asked to furnish details which it could not, with any regard to its obligations to its customers, send out of its own office to any but its own officers.

"11. In explanation of the delay that has occurred in replying to these references, I am desired to point out that, as his Excellency the Governor in Council supposed that the principal wish of the Government of India was to ascertain the actual position of the bank, and not to enter into a discussion on the past, he adopted the only effectual course that was open by taking steps at once to have the estimates of the directors revised by the most competent and independent committee that could be appointed by the directors. The result of this inquiry was promptly reported to the Government of India."

The statement referred to in the foregoing extract was soon afterwards prepared and sent to the Government of India.† It bears date the 23rd November 1866, and gave no information from which that Government could form any estimate of the true position of the bank. Instead of giving a list of all advances, it gave one of advances exceeding three lacs which were overdue on the 30th June 1866. It avoided all mention of sums below that amount, or of any advances that had been renewed, many of which were for larger amounts than three lacs, and were in much the same position as advances overdue. It avoided all mention of Premchund's great loan of 25 lacs, because the promissory note had not fallen due on the 30th June, although Premchund and Kursondass Madhowdass were insolvent on the 23rd November 1866, and the other co-obligants in much the same position. It omitted to set forth the large debt of more than 19 lacs due from the Asiatic Bank, although the cash credit had expired on the 1st September, and the Asiatic Bank had failed on the 26th of that month. A more unsatisfactory statement could scarcely have been framed.

The Government of India appear to have acted rightly from the commencement to the end of the difficulties of the bank. It was their duty as the guardian of the public balances in the bank, and as the largest shareholder therein, to ascertain its true position, and they did their best to do so. The constitution of the bank, and the employment of Government directors, more than implied that the Government had the right to ascertain whatever it desired to know respecting the bank. The Government directors were themselves bound to know the exact position of the bank, and it was no part of their duty to conceal anything from Government, but on the contrary to let the Government see with their eyes all that they saw. If the Government directors had a right to see a list of advances, so had the Government for whom they acted.

The inquiries of the Governor General were necessary to enable him to form an independent judgment on the affairs of the bank, and if the directors of the Bank of Bombay had been asked to furnish the information required, they might have complied with the request. It seems to have been assumed however that the board would refuse; but they did not refuse to allow the Government directors in May 1865 to prepare a list of all advances above one lac, and of the securities by which they were covered, and if the Board had refused, the Government directors could not have followed their example, and must have complied with the orders given them.

If the right to obtain this information and the power to obtain it be clear, the propriety of asking for it at this time is equally apparent. After the repeated estimates of the bank's position, all widely differing from each other, after the acknowledgment that the committee had accepted a statement which the directors alone could understand, it was surely necessary to institute a searching inquiry into the affairs of the bank. It is said that the directors would have resigned if such an inquiry had been instituted, but this is not proved, and is not very probable. The directors though incompetent as bankers, were not dishonest, and had nothing to conceal, and had in fact no separate interest from the shareholders, who probably considered this right of the Government to supervise the affairs of the bank as one of the safeguards of their property. The directors could not properly object to a private inquiry founded on a full statement prepared by themselves, and would certainly have preferred the adoption of that course to the more public inquiry conducted by officials of the Government of India sent expressly for that purpose, which was suggested by the Government of Bombay.

It is said that privacy could not have been secured, and that there would have been great danger of the contents of such a document transpiring, if sent to the other side of India. But, whenever the Government of Bombay wished to correspond privately with the Government of India, they did not hesitate to do so, and we doubt not that, if the Bombay Government had desired to send the statement required by the Governor General, they could have sent it with as much privacy as any other communication.

It is true that at this time the Bank of Bombay was actually ruined, and no amount of information could have enabled the Government of India to improve the position of the bank. But if this information, which had been called for on the 13th July, had been promptly communicated, the Bombay Government would never have been permitted to pass an Act reducing the capital of the bank by one-half merely, thereby giving a legislative sanction to the erroneous belief that only one-half of the capital was lost.

In October 1866, the Legislative Council of Bombay, in accordance with the directions of Sir Charles Wood, passed an Act (No. XV. of 1866) depriving the bank of the power to advance on shares. The Act might have been passed sooner, had not the Bombay Government rested on the assurance of their directors, that all advances on shares had been discontinued since June 1865.

We shall only relate one more banking transaction of the Bank of Bombay, and then bring the narrative of this period to a close. In December 1866, Roychund Deepchund proposed to the Board to allow him to sell his Bank of Bombay shares (which were stopped by the bank on account of his debt), and to buy Back Bay shares with the proceeds, representing that the Back Bay shares would rise in value, and that the bank would thereby recover a larger amount of their debt. The Board consented to this arrangement, as they had done in a former case, when Dossabhoy Dhunjeebhoy, Premchund's manager, proposed a similar speculation. Although the Bank of Bombay gained a little by both these transactions, that circumstance does not diminish the impropriety of a bank entering into joint speculations with its own debtors.

Fourth Period, 24th April to 10th December 1866.

The directors during this last period (24th April to 10th December 1866) were Messrs. Lidderdale and Lushington, successively Presidents, Messrs. A. Brown, A. Stewart, Tracey, G. M. Stewart, Macdonald, Commercial directors, and Messrs. Norman and C. E. Chapman, Government directors.

Messrs. G. M. Stewart and Macdonald were elected directors on the 14th August, after the date of the great loan to Premchund, and the granting of the second cash credit to the Asiatic Bank, and are consequently not responsible for the disasters of this period.

The conduct of the other directors was characterized by incapacity. In the matter of Premchund's loan (to which Mr. Lushington was not a party) and the Asiatic Bank credit, they evinced a want of knowledge, not only of banking, but of the ordinary mode of transacting business. They are entitled however to the remark, that they were scandalously served by their solicitor and their secretary, and that they had no reason to suppose that their colleague, Mr. Tracey, had any other interests at heart than those of the bank.

The Commission have not examined Mr. Tracey. He left England shortly before they returned from India, although he had information that they were about to return, and that the evidence taken in India reflected on his character.

The conduct of the secretary Mr. Robertson has been already commented on. He placed himself for his private gain in a position in which his own interests were at variance with his duty to the bank, he failed to do his duty on several occasions under circumstances calculated to excite grave suspicion, and by the recklessness of his advances proved himself unfit for such an office as Secretary of the Bank of Bombay.

The result of Mr. D. Robertson's management, excluding his advances when deputy secretary, may be summed up shortly thus. Of the advances made at the head office, and outstanding when he retired, the sum of 37,56,073 rupees (375,607*l.*) still remains unrecovered. Of the advances made at the branches (which were virtually closed during the greater part of his administration), the sum of 13,99,516 rupees (139,951*l.*) still remains unrecovered, making a total loss in Mr. D. Robertson's time of 51,55,589 rupees (515,558*l.*).

The total loss by advances on shares during the administration of Messrs. Blair and D. Robertson at the head office and branches, was 41,62,007 rupees (416,200*l.*), but this does not include the payments made in respect of the bank's liability on shares of the Commercial and Asiatic Banks, under a recent compromise effected by the liquidator.

The total loss at the head office and branches by advances during the same time on promissory notes in the name of a single person or firm, was 80,10,732 rupees (801,073*l.*).

Fifth Period, 10th December 1866 to 13th January 1868.

The narrative of the last period of the bank's history (from the 10th December 1866 to the 13th January 1868) need not be long, for the bank was now ruined, and virtually in liquidation.

On the 15th January 1867 at a special general meeting of the shareholders, the capital of the bank was reduced 50 per cent., the nominal value of each share being reduced from 1000 to 500 rupees; but, whatever may have been the views of sanguine directors and shareholders, the confidence of the public was not restored, and these shares were soon sold in the market at 250 rupees each.

An Act was subsequently passed to give legal effect to this resolution.

About this time Mr. Stuart, a former secretary of the bank, under whose management it had prospered, was appointed secretary, and arrived from England. Previous to his arrival, a statement had been prepared of all the outstanding debts due at the head office and branches; and the directors at two meetings, held on the 30th and 31st January 1867, carefully considered the account of each debtor, and the value of the securities held by the bank, and they arrived at the conclusion, which they afterwards communicated to Government, that one-half of the capital still remained intact. This estimate was no doubt honestly made, but no reliance could be placed on it. Mr. Stuart knew nothing of the correctness of the estimates prepared before his arrival, and, until a few days before, had never even heard of many of the companies whose shares were held by the bank. The directors could form no accurate estimate of such property as claims on insolvent estates, or estates being wound-up under Act XXVIII. of 1865, which now constituted a large part of the assets of the bank, and experience should have taught them the difficulty of valuing the shares which formed another large part of the remaining assets. It seems however that another year, spent in unsuccessful endeavours to realize these assets, was still necessary to convince all parties that the bank was ruined.

In fact the bank was now in liquidation. Seven branch offices were closed, and two others were only kept open for the collection of debts. The Minute Book shows that the chief business of the directors at this time was the consideration of offers of compromise, and of the means to be taken to recover the lost capital. It is difficult to describe the ruin which had overwhelmed the mercantile community of Bombay, in consequence of the collapse of almost all the speculations started in 1864 and 1865; and everything that had taken place during the last few years,—even the action of the Courts of Justice and of the Legislature,—rendered the recovery of any part of the capital a task of great difficulty.

A decision of Mr. Justice Anstey alarmed the Board and the Solicitor of the bank, and caused them to transfer into the names of officers of the bank many of the shares deposited as security. This decision was afterwards reversed, but the reversal came too late, inasmuch as the shares had already been transferred, and the bank became liable to pay, and subsequently paid, calls to a large amount on some of these shares.

The difficulty of realising the claims on the estates of insolvents was greatly increased by Act XXVIII. of 1865, which was intended to provide for their more speedy realization. The Act not only failed to accomplish that object,—only two estates having been finally wound up under it in September 1868,—but its practical working was such, that it afforded every facility to fraudulent debtors, and rendered it impossible in many cases to realise the outstandings of the bank.

In February 1867, there was another severe run upon the bank, and deposits to the extent of 1,69,00,000 rupees (1,690,000*l.*) were withdrawn in a few days. The Government again assured the directors that the bank would be supported, and this assurance had once more the effect of staying the further withdrawal of deposits.

At the next general meeting of the shareholders held on the 5th August 1867, another report of the directors was presented, which stated that in consequence of the run upon the bank already alluded to, and the amount of capital locked up in insolvent estates, the operations of the past six months had been very unfavourable, and that the loss of capital was now estimated by them at one crore and a half (1,500,000*l.*) On this report having been read, the meeting was adjourned to the 12th August 1867, in order that the report and accounts might be printed and circulated. At this adjourned meeting the directors' report was adopted.

It is useless to prolong the narrative of the last days of the bank. At a special general meeting held on the 13th January 1868, it was resolved to wind up the bank voluntarily, and Mr. Stuart was appointed liquidator for that purpose. On the 12th November 1868, the liquidator issued his report of the progress made in the liquidation, from which it appears, according to his estimate, that of the paid-up capital of the bank, the sum of 1,88,99,334 rupees (1,889,933*l.*) has been lost.

In conclusion we are of opinion that the causes of the failure of the bank were ;—

First,—the Act X. of 1863, which removed many restrictions contained in the former Act, and permitted the bank to transact business of an unsafe character.

Second,—the abuse of the powers given by Act X. of 1863, by weak and unprincipled secretaries, acting under the influence of a designing native director, Premchund Roychund.

Third,—that the Presidents and directors of the first and second periods of the bank's history, with such exceptions as are herein-before mentioned, were negligent and failed to do their duty, in omitting to pass byelaws, in not exercising a proper supervision and control over the bank and its secretaries, and particularly in not ascertaining how the business of the bank was carried on.

Fourth,—the very exceptional nature of the times which required more than ordinary vigilance and care on the part of every one connected with the bank.

Fifth,—that the Presidents and directors of the first, second, third, and fourth periods, were not conversant with banking business, and incapable of managing such an institution as the Bank of Bombay in difficult times.

Sixth,—the absence of sound legal advice and assistance.

The Commission cannot close this Report without recording their obligation to their secretary, Mr. F. D. Chauntrell, for the valuable assistance which he has afforded them throughout the inquiry. His unwearied attention and labours call for this acknowledgment, and they recommend him to the favourable consideration of Government.

The Commission are also much indebted to Mr. Stuart, the liquidator of the bank, for valuable information received from him during their stay in India.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE TAKEN IN INDIA

BY

THE COMMISSIONERS

Acting in execution of Act XVII. of 1868 of the Legislative Council of India.

29th June 1868.

29 June 1868.

Mr. Stuart.

I was Accountant of the Bank of Bombay in 1840, and became Secretary and Treasurer of the bank in 1842, and continued to be such Secretary and Treasurer till March 1860. I am now Liquidator of the bank. Mr. James Blair was appointed Secretary and Treasurer of the bank, in succession to me, in 1860. He was, before, Deputy Secretary from about 1853.

The books of the bank have come into my custody as Liquidator. I produce two books containing the minutes of the Board of Directors from 10th October 1861 to 2nd August 1867 (marked A 1, A 2). This is the Application Book; it extends from the 2nd of January 1862 to the 10th of January 1868 (marked A 3). All applications for advances, either in the shape of loans or cash credits, with particulars of the securities, &c. should be entered here. Bills discounted were not entered in it. This book was always laid in my time before the Directors at their weekly meetings. The Directors would expect to find in it every application for loans or cash credits. I produce two lists of securities taken by the bank other than Government securities (marked A 4, A 5). The securities have been sold. I produce the Register of Bills Discounted from the 1st of September 1862 to the 21st of December 1867 (marked A 6). This was not laid before the Directors at their meetings in my time. I found it the practice to lay it before them when I returned in January 1867. I produce the Past Due Bills Ledger (marked A 7); bills past-due are entered here. I do not know whether this was laid before the Directors. There were no past-due bills in my time, and no such book. No statement of outstandings, except the Application Book, was laid before the Directors in my time. I do not remember seeing the Past Due Bills Book laid before them after my return. I produce the Directors' Daily Books (eight in number, marked A 8). The object of this book was to bring the whole transactions of the bank of the previous day to the Directors' notice; it shows no details, only totals. It was latterly, I believe, circulated daily amongst all the Directors, but in my time it went only to the Daily Committee. The Directors would see what the Secretary was doing every day; the accounts he was operating on. There is an Overdraft Balance Book (marked A 9). There was no such book in my time; I found it in existence on my return. No overdrafts were allowed in my time. I produce the following ledgers:—Three Current Deposit Account Ledgers for 1864, three similar ledgers for 1865, and two similar ledgers for 1866; three Cash Credit Ledgers for 1863, 1864, and 1865; two Discount Ledgers from 1862 to 1866; and one Fixed Loan Ledger for 1864 to 1868 (marked A 10 to A 24).

Before I left, in 1860, there was a private discount list entered in Confidential Returns. The Secretary prepared a list of the principal European and Native merchants in Bombay. Six copies were sent to the Commercial Directors, each of whom gave his opinion as to the standing, &c. of the persons in the list, to guide the Secretary in making advances. Each Director put a limit as to the amount of credit he would recommend to be given. The highest limit was two lakhs. If any one applied for a larger discount than two lakhs, I circulated the application amongst the Directors, or if anyone applied who was not in the list. If three Directors differed it went to the full Board. After obtaining the opinions of the Commercial Directors the amount of credit was finally settled by the three Government Directors. There was no practice of taking one Director's opinion on a letter; I always had the sanction of three Directors. The Directors relied a good deal as to Native customers of the bank on the information of the Native Directors. I considered I could not discount a negotiable security such as a promissory note or a bill of exchange, unless two names were given; this was under Act III. of 1840. The bills discounted by the bank were ordinarily bills by European firms on their brokers. If two persons applied for a loan on a promissory note, I always took care that they were persons unconnected with each other in business. Cash credits were granted on security of Government securities, goods, and bullion, and railway stock,—never on personal security.

I am a Scotchman. I never heard of cash credits on one name alone in any Scotch bank. I have great experience as a banker. I never was an officer in a Scotch bank. Two or more securities are always required on a cash credit when granted by Scotch bankers. A loan would only have been granted during my management on the same conditions as to securities as a cash credit. I have never known any system of banking which advanced money under the bond or note only of the borrower. Overdrawing accounts was prohibited under Act III. of 1840; it is not prohibited in the second Act. It is a very objectionable form of advance. If a man is very rich it may be done for a few days. I do not think any banker would allow it, except for a very short time, and for a very limited amount, to persons of very good credit. I never heard of an overdraft being allowed for 19 lakhs.

I have spoken of the Daily Committee. It is what is called in the Minute Book the Weekly Committee. It was the duty of the Secretary to consult them whenever he had no power. The Daily Committee might be called together for important business. They did not generally in my time attend at the bank daily, but if the Secretary wished to consult them he circulated a minute amongst them. If there was any matter of importance it was referred to the full Board. Questions of discount were seldom brought before the full Board, because the discount list was revised annually.

Mr. Stuart.

I produce the Bills Presented Book (marked A 25); it was laid before the Board every week. This book and the Application Book put the Directors in possession of information of every advance, of whatever nature.

I am referred to a paper (marked A 25, 1); this shows that all the first new issue of capital was taken up by the shareholders, and all of the second issue except 47 shares. On my return, in 1867, I found the same form of monthly return to Government which was in use in my time. The form shown to me is the form I refer to (marked A 25 A). The only difference was that the bank were no longer in circulation. I objected, after my return, to the way in which this was made out. I found loans on promissory notes granted without security entered under the head of Loans "on the deposit of other descriptions of securities." I did not think that this gave sufficient information. I made a note on the form that loans on personal securities—meaning promissory notes without security—were included under the above heading. Previous to my doing this Government could hardly have known from the returns that there had been any loans on personal security only. The Government Directors signed those forms, and they knew that there were loans on personal security only. I am not a shareholder in the Bank of Bombay. I produce the Weekly Jotting Book (marked A 26).

To Major M. Innes.—The monthly return to Government is incorrect. Overdrafts should be added to both sides of the account, to the balance of the deposits, and to the advances.

To Mr. Melvill.—When I returned I found that the Private Discount List had been discontinued.

To Major Innes.—The difference between an open loan and a cash credit is, that under an open loan the money is drawn out in one sum; and it differs from a fixed loan in that the borrower can return the money at any time, and is only charged interest for the time he has had it.

This Opinion Book (marked A 27) contains the confidential returns to which I have referred.

Mr. De Ga.

JOSEPH MARIA DE GA, sworn, examined by the President.

I was Ledger-keeper in the Bank of Bombay. I had under my charge the Application Book (marked A 3), and the Cash Credit, Discount, and Current Deposit Ledgers. My duty was to enter the names of all applicants for cash credits in this book. Fixed loans were also entered in this book, but they were in another department, and were entered by another officer. All applications were marked in the book by the Secretary with his initials to the application. The book was laid also before the Directors every week, and was intended to show them all the applications for cash credits and fixed loans that had been made in the week. It begins on the 2nd day of January 1862, and ends on the 10th of January 1868. All applications are not entered in this book, only those are entered for which Government securities, bullion, mint certificates, and railway shares were given. Applications for fixed loans or cash credits on personal security are not entered here. All applications for cash credits on personal security were omitted from this book by order of Mr. Blair. He gave me this order on the first application for a cash credit on personal security being made; the application was from Roychund Deepchund, for one lakh, on the 11th of August 1863. Mr. Blair said that applications for advances on personal security were not to be entered in this book. I asked for no reason; I obeyed the order. I entered all cash credits of the kind in a book called the Interest Book, which I produce (book in three parts marked A 28, A 29, and A 30): it shows interest due. The Secretary only had access to this book to mark the rate of interest. The Directors did not see it; it remained in my custody. By a cash credit on personal security I mean an advance for which a promissory note only, payable on demand, was taken from the borrower. Current deposit accounts in the Bank have been frequently overdrawn: I allowed them to be overdrawn on the authority of the Secretary in each instance. When I received a cheque on an overdrawn account I sent a memorandum to the Secretary as to the state of the account, and asking if I should pay the cheque: he endorsed the memorandum with the word "pay." I kept all these memoranda for my own protection. I now produce them. (Puts in papers and a book, marked A 31 and A 32.)

This book (marked A 32) relates to both overdrafts and cash credits. I am referred to the list at page 96 of the Blue Book of sums overdue over three lakhs of rupees. I do not know anything about the preparation of this return. The Accountant, Mr. Maclean, can speak to it; he is in England.

I know nothing of speculations in shares by the officers of the bank. I had an allotment of ten shares in the City Bank; I had also shares in the Bombay Finance Company. I am not a shareholder in the Bank of Bombay.

To Major Innes.—In opening cash credits in the ledger I entered the amount at the heading of the account.

To Mr. Melvill.—I took orders regarding opening a cash credit from the Secretary. If he was absent I went to the Deputy Secretary, and if he was out then to the Accountant.

Examination resumed.—I produce a small book (marked A 33); it shows all cash credits granted by the Bank of Bombay on personal security. I kept it for my own protection. The Secretary or Deputy Secretary put his initials to each entry in it, to show that he had received the promissory note, and had authorized me to open the credit.

Recalled.—On the 12th of July 1865, Cashinath, a clerk in the employ of the Bank of Bombay, asked me to give up to Roychund Deepchund his Government promissory notes, which were deposited with the bank to secure a loan. I sent a memorandum to Mr. Robertson; this is it (marked A 32, page 7):—

"Roychund has not paid off his cash credit a/c Dr. Balance Rupees 51,953-5-9, and Cashinath wants me to give up his Government notes as stands for security.—J. M. DE GA, Accountant."

"Roychund is to pay off his loan; give up the notes.—D. R."

Mr. Robertson wrote the reply which appears there. Cashinath will speak to the notes, being given up. No other securities were given to the bank in exchange, so far as I know. Roychund's debt was not paid to the bank.

RISLEY VERNEY HEARN.

I am Solicitor to the Government of Bombay. I produce a draft copy of Act X. of 1863 from the records of my office (marked 1). It is the original written draft of the Bill received from the office of the Solicitors for the bank; the print was made from this. I have not any other document in my possession relating to the Act.

29th June 1868.

29 June 1868.

Mr. Hore.

FRASER SALTER HORE, sworn.

I am a solicitor practising in Bombay. My firm formerly consisted of Mr. Kelly and myself. Mr. Kelly was solicitor to the Bank of Bombay in 1861. I produce a letter, dated 20th June 1861 (marked B 1), instructing Mr. Kelly to prepare the bill of the Act. These are the instructions which were sent to counsel (marked B 2); they were put before Mr. Green. This is the draft of the Act prepared by Mr. Green (marked B 3). I produce another draft, which was resettled by Mr. Green (marked B 4). The words "Struck out" on page 16 are in Mr. Kelly's handwriting. Mr. Kelly died about August last year. I went from Brighton to see him in London the year before last, to talk to him about Section 32 of the Act. He told me that the words "or other public companies in India," were put in at a special meeting of the Committee of Directors. I had often spoken to him about it before. He once told me which Director wished to have inserted in the Act the words "or other public companies in India," but I cannot recollect which Director he named. The words "as hold a guarantee from the Government with regard to the payment of dividends or interest" were, I understood, struck out of the first draft by the Committee. I produce another draft, in which the words are struck out (marked B 5); these alterations in red ink are in Mr. Kelly's handwriting. Mr. Green, who drew the draft, is in England. This letter of the 27th of November 1862 was written by our firm (marked B 6). I suppose the Act referred to in the letter is the English Joint Stock Companies' Act. Mr. Green refers in a note to Act XXI. of 1854. The words must have been put in on special instructions. The words "as hold a guarantee from the Government with regard to the payment of dividends or interest" struck out in the draft, were struck out by Mr. Kelly. I understood him to say that they were struck out on the instructions of the Bank Committee. Mr. Kelly told me this in the course of business. He was in England, and I was coming out to India; and, looking at the circumstances of the time (1866) in Bombay, he thought that some question might arise upon Section 32 of the Act, and therefore wished to give me information on the subject. I am not a shareholder in the Bank of Bombay.

WILLIAM RODGIE, sworn.

Mr. Rodgie.

I was officiating Deputy Secretary of the Bank of Bombay in 1866. I had charge more particularly of the correspondence, and of the suits in court. This statement, at page 96 of the Blue Book, was prepared by Mr. Maclean, the Accountant. I did not assist in its preparation, but, from my long acquaintance with the bank's affairs, I can give some information about it. I cannot say why overdrafts were not included in this list. I do not see in it the overdrafts of the Asiatic Bank. I cannot answer why they are not included in it. I expect Mr. Maclean consulted Mr. Robertson about the preparation of it; I cannot say whether he consulted him or any Director. Mr. Hannay was, I believe, a member of the Consulting Committee of the Asiatic Bank in Bombay. I am not aware that Mr. Michael Scott was on it. I do not know whether Mr. Birch or Mr. Tracey were on it. I do not know whether any of those gentlemen were shareholders of the Asiatic Bank. I believe Mr. Cowasjee Jehangeer was a shareholder of that bank and on the Consulting Committee. I think Mr. Blair and Mr. Robertson were shareholders of the Asiatic Bank.

I am referred to page 96 of the Blue Book, items Nos. 4 and 16, the advances to the Eastern Financial Association. Both those items refer to that association, though in one the word "corporation" is used, and in the other the word "association," so as to give the idea that they are the names of different debtors.

Mr. Slight is in the head office; he wrote this list. Premchund Roychund's loan for twenty-five lakhs is not entered here; it was not overdue; the promissory note fell due afterwards, I believe. I think this list answered the purpose for which Government required it. The loan for 12 lakhs (No. 7) to Byramjee Hormusjee Cama was reduced by the sale of his securities. He was insolvent in 1865; there could not have been a loan granted to him in May 1866. I observe the entry of loan No. 10 for nine lakhs, and an overdraft of Rs. 3,12,000, due by Premchund Roychund; he was liable with Premabhoy Hemabhoy for another loan of Rs. 4,50,000, which is not entered.

Mr. Brown's loans were not entered in the list. I am referred to the list at page 114 of the Blue Book; I believe Mr. Slight made up this list. I do not know of the officers of the Bank of Bombay being engaged in share speculations. I had an allotment of ten shares in the Alliance Financial Association, and of two shares in the Bombay Reclamation Company; they represented 30,000 rupees then. I had seven shares in the Bombay Joint Stock Corporation, and seven in the Eastern Financial Association, which I bought. Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff and Kessowjee Naik were Directors of the Eastern Financial Association; Cassum Dhurrumsey also. Premchund Roychund was not a Director of it; Alladeen Hubibbhoy was. Mr. Ryan was the Acting Secretary; Mr. William Watson succeeded him. The company paid a dividend; no doubt the company published an account. I was a contributory for seven shares. I remember the promissory note being given to the Bank of Bombay for the ten lakhs by the Eastern Financial Association in October 1864. I do not know anything about the negotiations for the loan. In the cash credit of the 23rd of March 1865 25,000 rupees are entered as paid for calls: I cannot say what this item is without reference to the books. Mr. Ryland left the Bank of Bombay in March 1864; he is now in England. I remember that the Eastern Financial Association obtained money at the Kurrachee and Surat branches of the Bank of Bombay. I do not know how those advances were obtained. The Surat Agent had, I believe, a telegram sent to him to authorize him to make the advance at his branch; the Kurrachee agent was reprimanded for making the advance. I had ten shares in the Alliance Financial Corporation. Dr. Diver, Ghellabhoy Puddumsey, Sewjee Welljee, and Hurbum Nursey were Directors of that company. I do not know whether Mr. Blair had shares in it.

Balkissondass Vizbhoocundas was an officer in the Kalbadevi branch of the Bank of Bombay. A great many bank officials were shareholders in that association. It was a very respectable company. It did not pay a dividend. It shut up in 1865. Premchund Roychund was not a Director of that company. I believe he held many shares in it and in the Eastern Financial Association. Mr. Wilson is the Liquidator of that company. I think Mr. D. Robertson was a shareholder in it. I am not a shareholder in the Bank of Bombay.

I wish to state that all shares taken by me were paid for out of my own money. I did not borrow money from anybody.

30th June 1868.

Mr. Slight.

JAMES H. SLIGHT, sworn.

I was employed in the Bank of Bombay as Assistant Inspector of Branches until the bank went into liquidation.

[Looks at Blue Book, page 96.] I compiled this statement under the revision of the Secretary, Mr. D. Robertson, and under the direction of the Accountant. I am not aware that there were overdrafts of above three lakhs of rupees which are not entered in this statement. The Asiatic Bank account was overdrawn, but was not overdue. An overdraft is a running account, and unless the account is called up, I should not call the account overdue. The Asiatic Bank would not be liable to pay at any moment, unless there was such an arrangement. The statement is of sums overdue. I am not aware that there was a fixed day for payment in the Asiatic Bank case. I do not know whether the amount overdrawn was payable on demand. It was not considered overdue. The bank had not declared its insolvency. I suppose Government only wanted a statement of the sums overdue. The heading was sent in by the Government; I saw the letter which accompanied it. I cannot state the date of the letter.

I observed item 4 A, "Financial Corporation, ten lakhs." I know nothing of the cash credit of two lakhs and upwards but what is stated here. I could not trace from the books the origin of the cash credit. Mr. D. Robertson knew it, and gave the particulars. I observe that the name is altered under the branch heading item No. 16. I was instructed to put the branch advances separately. I was not instructed to alter the name to "Association," instead of "Corporation." The probability is that in the books of the branch the word "Association" was used, whilst the word "Corporation" was used in the books of the head office. The sum of 4,20,000 rupees is a further advance to the Eastern Financial Association, making the whole debt sixteen lakhs and upwards. Premchund's last loan of twenty-five lakhs was not overdue on the 30th of June 1866, and is not, therefore, entered. The object of this list was not to show what was advanced, but what was overdue and bad. The list, though made out in November 1866, is only down to the 30th of June 1866. I do not know that Premchund's debt was bad at that time. I had Mr. Robertson's instructions for preparing the list. The other banks had perhaps repudiated their share of Premchund's debt by November 1866, but the return only professed to be to the 30th of June. Mr. Brown's debt was wiped off before I entered the bank's service; it was not due on the books: I cannot, therefore, speak about that debt, or of any of Mr. Brown's debts. The debts were wiped off; that is why they do not appear in the list. Mr. Brown had obtained a release from the Bank of Bombay, although his co-obligors had not.

I turn to page 114 of the Blue Book. I never saw this statement until it appeared here: I can give no information as to how it was prepared. I am Inspector of Branches of "The New Bank of Bombay, Limited." On the 27th of September 1865 I entered as Assistant Inspector of Branches of the old Bank. The duties for which I was engaged were not given to me, as the position of the Bank was so altered. I was employed in compiling statements at the head office. I arrived in Bombay too late to be engaged in speculation. I am not a shareholder in the Bank of Bombay. I do not know of any of its officials having been engaged in share speculations.

Mr. Fogge.

GEORGE FOGGO, sworn.

I am a partner in the house of Forbes & Co., bankers and merchants. I was a Director of the Bank of Bombay from early in December 1860 to December 1863. I believe the necessity for the new Act is best stated in the preamble. The power of issuing notes was taken away, and new business was to be given as a compensation. It was intended to give the bank charge of the Treasury balances and of the Currency Department. I have no distinct recollection as to the instructions given to the Solicitor of the Bank; but the charter of the Bank of Bengal was to be followed as closely as possible. I do not remember any instructions given in the bank parlour; I believe they were given by the Secretary of the bank. I heard the Secretary's letter (marked B 1) read yesterday; I do not know what other instructions were given. I do not remember this draft Act [refers to interleaved draft filed in Secretariat papers, C 2] being put before the Directors. I observed that the words "other public companies in India" are not in this draft. I know nothing of the instructions given to counsel. I remember seeing an interleaved copy of the Act. I do not remember that there were any discussions as to the first draft of the Act. I was a member of the Committee of Directors on the subject of the draft ultimately settled. The draft Act was referred to a Committee of Directors. I think I succeeded Mr. Scott: I may have been on the Committee from the commencement. Mr. Kelly, I think, always attended our meetings. We had several meetings. We went through all its clauses. Mr. Kelly read the draft. I doubt whether I can speak to the draft. Mr. Kelly had it, and made the alterations in it. [Looks at draft marked B 5.] There was, I believe, the draft. I see my notes on it, and my initials. It was probably sent round to the Directors first. I have no doubt this was the draft read to the Committee. I am referred to the business clauses in draft B 5. I am also shown the draft prepared by counsel, in which, in the corresponding section, after the words "other public companies in India" are the words "as hold a guarantee from Government in regard to the payment of dividends and interest." The words "as hold a guarantee from Government in regard to the payment of dividends and interest" were struck out in our draft. It must have been done when the draft was being considered by the Committee. I do not remember why. I have no distinct recollection of the order of the proceedings. Mr. H. Scott, and Mr. Michael Scott, and Mr. Baumbach, were all on the Committee at different times, and I think Mr. A. D. Robertson. I remember that in the discussions in committee I had a copy of the old Act—an interleaved one, I think,—in my hand. I drew Mr. Baumbach's attention to the words "other public companies in India," and said to him, "Is this intended?" "Is this right?" so that the Directors might understand the full import of the power. I may be mistaken about this. Mr. Scott, Mr. Baumbach, and Mr. Kelly were present. I think Mr. Scott was there. After passing the Committee the draft came before the Court of Directors.

[The President quotes from the printed report of the speech of Mr. Hannay at a meeting of the shareholders of the Bank of Bombay, held on the 7th of August 1865, as follows:—"Mr. A. D. Robertson had been much blamed with reference to the new charter; but, if the truth were told, I think it would be found that his brother Directors considered him exceedingly obstructive, not only in objecting to some clauses now in the Bill (Act), but also to some others which possibly but for him might have been there."]

Witness resumes:—It was the attention of Mr. Baumbach I drew to the words "other public companies in India." I never objected to them. I thought they were not precise enough; he did not consider the matter of importance. I do not remember any discussion by the Board about the draft;

they were all agreed. I do not know what Mr. A. D. Robertson's obstructiveness was. I do not remember his taking part in any discussion about these words. I suppose Mr. Hannay had facts for what he said. The consent of the Government of India was not required in the new Act to the increase of capital; but the consent of the Government of Bombay is required by the Act. [Refers to Act.] I see it was not required. I was always under the impression that the consent of the Government of Bombay was necessary. I do not recollect why it was omitted. I do not consider it a prudent alteration. As to the alteration "shares in other public companies," I think no harm would have come of it if proper vigilance had been used. I do not think it justified advances largely in excess of the paid-up value of shares, except on shares of the Government banks. Had I foreseen that it would lead to such an abuse as is shown in the Resolution of the Directors of the Bank of the 12th of April 1865, quoted at page 5 of the Blue Book, I should have objected to the power being given by the Act. Many other restrictions in Act III. of 1840 are omitted in the new Act. Some of them were provided for in a schedule attached to the draft Act which is shown to me. I consider that byelaws should provide for such things. I was not aware that this schedule had been struck out in the Legislative Council. "Cash Credits" is a term used in Scotch banking more than in English. It certainly does not mean credits without security, or to an irresponsible person. I consider it an open account. I think an advance on a promissory note of one person, if he is good, sufficient. I would grant an advance in any form to an individual name if I considered the person perfectly responsible—not to a private individual unless I knew he held a large amount of Government paper, or something of that sort. As to the alteration removing the restrictions against overdrawing accounts, I should have concurred in striking it out; I think it was tying the Directors' hands too much. I would have had it in a byelaw. [Refers to the schedule of byelaws, where it stands provided for.] Before passing the Act I remember the proprietors being called together. They agreed to the new Act being prepared. The clause as to lending on shares attracted attention as soon as the Act was passed. The Secretary was in doubt what to do in case applications should be made for advances on shares. The Solicitors of the bank were consulted. The Directors took precautions. I am referred to the Directors' minutes of the 6th of August 1863, in which the following minute appears:—"Resolved that for the present, and until further orders, any application for advances on any bank shares, or other public company, other than Government banks, be submitted to the Board, and not made by the Secretary." The Directors resolved that all applications for advances on shares should be made to the Board, and not to the Secretary. I cannot remember why this minute appears not to have been entered in its right place. If omitted from the minutes I should have called attention to it. I see I was present at the next meeting. We took another precaution: we wrote to the Bank of Bengal for advice. We received a letter, dated the 22nd of August 1863, from that bank, recorded in the minute of the 3rd of September 1863. We were aware, no doubt, that the schedule containing byelaws had been struck out of the Act, and power given to the Directors to make byelaws. I remember the subject of preparing byelaws was mentioned. Our attention was probably taken up with other matters. I remained a Director till the end of the year. No doubt byelaws ought to have been passed. I am not aware that there were any old byelaws in force. I do not remember any application to the Board for an advance on shares or for a cash credit on personal security. I do not recollect a single application to the Board for a cash credit on personal security only. I understood they were only granted on deposit of Government notes or other similar security. I have looked through the Application Book (A 3) for applications to the Board from August to December 1863. I do not find any application for an advance on personal security or on shares entered in the book. I should have expected to find any such application entered here. This book was laid before us at our weekly meeting for our information. I am referred to Book A 28, and to the following entries of cash credits granted on personal security whilst I was a Director of the Bank:—

	Rupees.
11th August 1863, Roychund Deepchund.	1,00,000
7th September 1863, Calliandass Mohundass and Nusserwanjee Ruttonjee.	2,00,000
8th September 1863, Premabhoy Hemchund and Kursandass Madhowdass.	4,00,000
11th September 1863, Roychund Deepchund.	1,00,000
11th September 1863, Premchund Roychund.	1,00,000
12th September 1863, Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy.	2,00,000
1st October 1863, Premchund Roychund.	1,50,000
2nd October 1863, Veerchund Deepchund and Premabhoy Hemabhoy.	2,00,000
9th October 1863, Bomanjee Cursetjee Cama.	2,00,000
14th October 1863, Premchund Roychund.	1,00,000
17th October 1863, D. Byramjee and Co.	1,00,000
14th November 1863, Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy.	2,00,000

I was unaware of these transactions. Two of them, the loans to Bomanjee Cursetjee Cama, and Dadabhoy Byramjee and Co., have resulted in losses to the bank. The books A 28 and A 33 were not laid before the Board; I never saw them before today. These loans ought to have appeared in the Application Book (A 3).

There were a few branches of the bank in my time. I do not know that private discount lists were kept at the branches. The Agents must have had instructions. I do not recollect what the instructions were. I do not remember their communicating with the Board; they would refer to the Secretary. I cannot tell what the practice was.

Witness resumes:—It is not correct to say there was no restraint put on the Secretary in 1863. All large loans at the head office were referred to the Board, and many small ones. I believe power was given in 1861 to the Secretary to advance to the extent of one lakh.

The Commissioners will observe that at page 46 of the Blue Book, in a despatch from the Secretary of State to the Governor-General in Council, in paragraph 2, the following words occur:—"In these papers the mismanagement of the bank during the two years previous to April 1865 is clearly established in the Report of Messrs. F. S. Chapman and Norman (Government Directors), dated the 31st of March 1866." That paragraph is penned under an evident misapprehension with reference to 1863; for the Report of Messrs. Chapman and Norman does not even mention 1863, but in several paragraphs refers particularly to the year 1864 and the early part of 1865. His Excellency the Governor of Bombay, after writing (paragraph 2), condemning the management for two years prior to April 1865, adds in paragraph 3 that his impression is derived from comparing the working system of the bank as described to him by Mr. Ellis, when he was a Government Director six years before, with the system which Mr. Chapman informed him he found in force when he became a Director last year. I would also call attention to paragraph 5 of his minute. He does not there refer to the Directors of 1863 when discussing the responsibility of the Directors. Mr. Ellis's minute says—"I understand that there was no longer any restriction on the amount of loan or credit which the Secretary might give." The Secretary's powers were limited to one lakh up to the end of 1863, so far as I have been able to discover from the minutes; —at least there was a resolution to that effect in 1861. Practically the Secretary referred all large loans and many smaller ones to the Board or to the Weekly Committee.

To Mr. Melvill.—I do not know what Mr. Ellis meant by the standing rule restricting the amount of advance allowable to any one bank or individual. The largest discount in 1863 was three lakhs. There are very few above one or two lakhs: so I find from the books.

To the President.—I produce the Bank's statements of loans, cash credits, &c., published in the Government Gazette for 1863. Total in January 1863, 65 lakhs; in July 1863, 64 lakhs, and in January 1864, 68 lakhs; discounts were 52 lakhs, 77 lakhs, and 55 lakhs respectively for the same periods. Interest was not allowed on deposits. It was proposed and I opposed it. I objected at different periods to the practice of referring applications from natives for discounting bills to a Native Director at the Board. I considered that the Secretary ought to inform himself about the circumstances of each applicant. I do not remember any alteration as to the practice of discounting bills. The Secretary had to refer all large ones to the Board. I cannot say why it is, that no applications for discount or loans are entered in the Minute Book between September 1863 and May 1865.

I met the President at Poona, and discussed the increase of capital. I agreed with the President that the first increase was desirable, as the trade of the place was increasing largely, and the power of issuing notes had been withdrawn from the bank. I thought the capital insufficient. There were great demands on the bank for accommodation. The shares were at a fair premium. I was not a Director. The capital was afterwards increased on two occasions. It would have been better not to have made those two increases. I should have preferred waiting. I have sold all my shares in the bank. I was proposed as a director early in 1864, and again in 1865, when Mr. Tracey was elected. I think my rejection was owing to the go-ahead party in the bank, who thought my views slow and obstructive.

Mr. Foggo.

Witness appears and says—I wish to add a few words to my former evidence as to the amount of advances made by the Bank of Bombay in 1863 under the head of Loans and Credit Accounts on deposit of Government Securities, and under the head of Bills Discounted. The figures I then gave as the amounts advanced on the respective dates are correct, but I have since found, from a statement comprising the entire year, that occasionally during 1863 the amounts were considerably larger, and that in October of that year the total amount of bills discounted was 119 lakhs, and of loans and credit accounts granted on deposit of Government securities 116 lakhs. On the 31st of December in the same year the amount had again declined to 68 lakhs under the head of Bills, and under the other head to 55 lakhs. I wish further to point out that during 1863, and until the 23rd of January 1864 inclusive, the headings in the bank's weekly statements published in the Government Gazette were as follows:—

"Loans on deposit of Government Securities.
"Credit Accounts on ditto.
"Bills Discounted."

Subsequently the headings were altered to—
"Loans at Head Office and Branches.
"Credit Accounts at Head Office and Branches.
"Bills discounted at Head Office and Branches."

FRANCIS ROBERT SHAW WYLLIE.

I am an Under-Secretary to Government in the Financial Department. I produce these papers from the Government records relating to the preparation of Act X. of 1863 of the Legislative Council of Bombay (marked C 1 and C 2).

30th June 1868.

The Hon. Mr. Westropp.

The Honourable MICHAEL ROBERTS WESTROPP, sworn.

I am a Judge of Her Majesty's High Court, Bombay. I was twice Acting Advocate General, once from the 3rd of July 1856 to the 23rd of April 1857, and secondly, from the 27th of March 1861 to the 14th of July 1862. I was consulted by Mr. Bickersteth, the Solicitor to the Government of Bombay, as to the preparation of the new Act for the Bank of Bombay. I received no instructions in writing. I had several conversations with Mr. Bickersteth, and several letters and other papers were laid before me. I believe an interleaved copy of the old Act, No. III. of 1840, containing manuscript alterations and additions was laid before me. [Looks at C 2.] I believe this is the copy, but I cannot say so positively, as I have neither placed my initials upon it, nor made any additions to or alterations in it. I observe that the words "other public companies in India" are not contained in it. The 11th of September 1861 is the date of my first Opinion. I returned the interleaved copy of the Act. It was in my opinion in too crude and incomplete a state to be forwarded to the Government of India. I was of opinion that a full and complete draft should be prepared by the Solicitor of the Bank. I stated that in the Opinion of the 11th of September 1861. I recommended that a regular draft Act, containing a suitable preamble, should be prepared, repealing Act III. of 1840, and incorporating the powers which were contained in Act XXI. of 1854 and Act XXVII. of 1855, and which powers had not been introduced into the interleaved copy of Act III. of 1840.

A draft in writing, prepared, I believe, by the Solicitors of the Bank, was sent to me in February 1862, from the Financial Department of the Bombay Government, through Mr. Bickersteth. This is it (produced by Mr. Hearn). My second Opinion was given on the 18th of February 1862, and refers to this draft Act. [Refers to C 2.] This is a copy of that Opinion. I gave a further Opinion on the 10th of March 1862; this is a copy of it (in C 2). I am not sure that the interleaved copy of Act III. of 1840 was sent back to me with the new draft. I therefore cannot say whether the difference between the business section 25 in the former and the business section 33 in the new draft attracted my attention; but I of course noticed that the new draft differed very considerably from Act III. of 1840. I should imagine that the words "other public companies in India" in the new draft must have been observed by me, as I have no doubt that I compared all the sections in it carefully with Act III. of 1840. I have not referred to any portion of the business clauses in my Opinions of the 18th of February and 10th of March 1862, because the nature of the business which the bank was to be permitted to carry on was purely a question of finance, and not a question of law, and I had reason to know that the new draft laid before me in February 1862 by the Government Solicitor had been furnished to him by the Financial Department of the Bombay Government, in which I believe it had been from the 8th of November 1861, that is to say, for a period of about three months, before it came to me. I thought my duties limited to putting the Act in a legal frame, and that I had nothing to do with its policy. I conceived it to be my duty to see that the proper legal machinery was provided for the purpose of carrying out the intentions of Government, so far as they were known to me. Knowing that the draft had been in the Financial Department of Government for a long time after it had been forwarded to Government by the bank or its solicitors, and that it was sent to me by the Financial officer of Government (who was then, I believe, Mr. A. D. Robertson) without any objection whatsoever to any portion of the business section (then numbered 33, and since changed to 32), I concluded that that section contained a correct statement of the nature of the business which the Bombay Government had determined to permit the bank to carry on. I was aware that it was intended to relax some of the restrictions which had been previously imposed upon the bank by Act III. of 1840, and that that relaxation was intended as a compensation for the bank's loss of the right to issue paper on its own account. The preamble of the draft Act recited that Act III. of 1840 had been found inconvenient, imperfect, and unnecessarily restrictive; and not one word of objection to that recital ever reached me from the Financial Department of Government. Although I do not recollect with particularity my conversations with Mr. Bickersteth, the Government Solicitor, I am quite sure that if any objections had been made to him by Government, or any of the representatives of Government, with regard to the nature of the business which the bank by its new draft Act claimed permission to carry on, he would have told me of it. If we had been told that the Government objected, we should have struck out the part objected to; and had we entertained any doubt, we would have inquired of the Financial Secretary what the intentions of Government were. Any approval which I have given to the draft must be taken to be one within the province of the Law Officer of the Government, viz., that it was sufficient to carry out what I believed to be the intentions of Government. If my opinion had been asked on the policy of the Act, or as to any part of the business which the bank should be permitted to engage in, I should have declined to give it, as the subject was one with which I did not feel myself competent to deal. In that I include the power to lend money on shares of public companies other than railway companies, the interest on the shares of which are guaranteed by the Government of India. Some banks and associations have that power, and others have not. Whether they should have it or not, is purely a financial, and not in any respect a legal question. I should not have felt myself at liberty to object to that power, any more than the removal of the limit of three lakhs on loans which Act III. of 1840 imposed.

I wish to remark that what I have said in my Opinions of the 18th of February and 10th of March 1862 with regard to limited liability is not in any way inconsistent with what I have stated to be, according to my view, the proper province of the Law Officer of Government, and I should mention my reason, in order to prevent misapprehension on the point. The new draft Act contained two sections which were not to be found in Act III. of 1840, or in Act VI. of 1839 (the Bank of Bengal Act). One is the 5th. [Reads the 5th section of the draft Act.] That section contains an express declaration of limited liability, which declaration was subsequently omitted from Bombay Act X. of 1863. The other is Section 42 of the draft, which became Section 44 in Bombay Act X. of 1863, and relates to winding up.

I objected to both of those sections, 5 and 42, but did not object to Section 2 of the draft. I thought it sufficient that the limited liability of the Bank of Bombay should rest upon the same kind of legislation in the new Act as in the old, and in Act VI. of 1839, relating to the Bank of Bengal.

There are no express declarations of limited liability in the new charter (Act IV. of 1862) of the Bank of Bengal, or in its old charter (Act VI. of 1839), and yet under them there is and was perfect limited liability. That limitation of liability was secured to the Bank of Bombay by the 1st section of Act III. of 1840, and to the Bank of Bengal by the same section in Act VI. of 1839, which sections respectively created each of the banks a corporation. The 2nd section of the new draft, and the same sections in Bombay Act X. of 1863 and Act IV. of 1862 (Bank of Bengal), did the same, and thus without any express declaration of limited liability would have secured that liability. The special clauses 5 and 42 of the new draft seemed to me to be in a great measure borrowed from Act XIX. of 1857 and Act VII. of 1860, or from the English Joint Stock Companies' Act of 1856 and the English Banking Companies' Acts of 1857. Express limited liability being given in those Acts, there were very special provisions introduced, as to the addition of the word "limited" to the name of the company, the filing of balance sheets, &c., from which special provisions I was not certain whether Government intended to exempt the Bank of Bombay, and accordingly in my Opinions I noticed that those special provisions had not been introduced into the new draft Act laid before me in February and March 1862. I was contented, however, that the limited liability of the Bank of Bombay should rest upon its old basis, namely, the fact of the Bank being made a corporation, which is the only basis on which the limited liability of the Bank of Bengal now rests and formerly rested. That seemed most suitable to a bank connected with Government.

Question by the President.—Is there any ground for saying that the words "other public companies in India," which occur in Section 32, Clause 1, of Bombay Act X. of 1863, have been derived from any English Joint Stock Companies' Act?

Answer.—None whatever, of which I am aware. None of the general English Joint Stock Companies' Acts nor of the General Joint Stock Bank Acts contain clauses laying down the nature of the business which the companies or banks are to carry on. On the contrary, they direct that the purpose and object of the companies shall be stated in their Deed of Settlement or Memorandum of Association. It would be impracticable in general Acts, such as those intended to apply to companies and banks carrying on various and diverse classes of business, to prescribe specially the nature of the business to be carried on. Nor do the Indian Joint Stock Companies' Acts (XIX. of 1857, or the recent one, X. of 1866), or the Indian Joint Stock Banks' Act, VII. of 1860, contain any such words. For specimens of the English Acts which had become law before 1861 I would refer to the Joint Stock Companies' Acts of 1844 (Statute 7 and 8 Vict. c. 110, s. 7) and of 1856 (Statute 19 and 20 Vict. c. 47, s. 5), the Statutes 20 and 21 Vict. c. 49, and 21 and 22 Vict. c. 91.

I was not a shareholder in the old Bank of Bombay when I advised on this draft Act. I subsequently became a shareholder, and very much to my own sorrow, in February 1865, for the first time. I sold the bulk of my shares in February 1867, and the trifling balance a few days before the Commissioners arrived in Bombay; so that now I have no interest in or claim upon the old Bank of Bombay. I should add that if I had been a shareholder when the draft Act was submitted to the Law Officers of Government, I would have requested Government to send it to some other counsel, in the same way that Judges, when companies in which they are interested are litigants in their courts, request another Judge to try the cause.

Amongst the papers which were placed before me there was, I believe (in February or March 1862), a draft of the intended new Bank of Bengal Act. I wish to notice that the new Act (IV. of 1862) as to the Bengal Bank does not adhere to the provisions of the former Act (VI. of 1839). In Section 27 of Act VI. of 1839 there was a provision that the Directors should make no loan or advance upon any bank shares; but in Section 30 of Act IV. of 1863 that is altered, by its being provided that the Directors of the bank shall not make any advance on any share or stock in the bank itself. Now, unless controlled by Section 27 of the new Act, specifying the business of the bank, that would almost indicate that they had power to advance money on the shares of other banks.

There is one other point which I wish to mention. As my friend the late Mr. Lewis, recently Advocate General, is no longer amongst us, I wish to call attention to something which occurred after he relieved me of my duties as Acting Advocate General. In its later stages the draft Act was submitted to him. When, in March 1862, I had sent the draft back to the Bombay Government, a fair copy of it was by that Government forwarded to the Government of India, and a like copy of it to the Secretary of State for India. The words "other public companies in India," which have since attracted so much attention, were not commented upon by either, but other portions of the business section were. The draft appears to have been subsequently sent to Mr. Lewis with a copy of Mr. Secretary A. D. Robertson's letter (dated 21st November 1862) addressed to the Secretary of the Bank of Bombay, in which he draws the attention of the Directors to what he calls the "verbosity" of the Bombay Bill as compared with the Bengal Act, and says: "I am instructed to suggest that, for many reasons, the wording as well as the order of the provisions of the latter should be adhered to as far as possible." It would have been impossible for Mr. Lewis to suppose that Mr. Robertson meant by that suggestion that any alteration in substance should be made in the draft Act. The alterations indicated by that portion of the letter were merely verbal, and of order, and had no reference to the nature of the business to be transacted by the bank. I say this with reference to Mr. Robertson's letter of the 31st of January 1867, addressed to the Chief Secretary of the Government of Bombay.

In speaking of the duty of the Advocate General I spoke of him merely in his capacity of Law Officer of Government; but in the Legislative Council of Bombay the Advocate General, as a Member of that Council, would of course be entitled to criticise or object to any Bill when brought before the Council, either as to its financial policy or in any other respect. The draft Act when it was submitted to me was intended to be passed by the Legislative Council of India, but the Government of India subsequently thought it desirable that it should be passed by the Legislative Council of Bombay, of which I was not a Member in that part of the year 1863 when the draft Act was brought before it.

Mr. Lidderdale.

FRANCIS FREDERICK LIDDERDALE, sworn.

I am a partner in the firm of Remington and Company, Bombay, Merchants and Bankers. I was elected a Director of the Bank of Bombay in December 1863, and continued a Director until July 1866. In 1864 there was an increase of the Capital of the Bank. It did not meet with my assent. I opposed it at the Board, and at the meeting of shareholders, on behalf of myself and of a Native Director. I considered it was not requisite, and that it opened a door for further speculation. Mr. Cassels made a false impression by stating that the trade of the port had increased. The value of the exports had increased, but not the general trade. There were demands for more accommodation from the Bank, but not for legitimate purposes. Speculation had commenced in 1862, and reached its climax in February and March 1865. My opinion has not changed, having regard to the purposes for which money obtained from the Bank was used. I was the only objector at the public meeting, on behalf of myself and the Honourable Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy. My objection never took the form of an amendment, the feeling of the meeting was so evidently against me. Looking at it now, the object seems to have been to obtain new shares at par, and to realize a large premium on them. I do not know that there was any ulterior object.

I am referred to the Board's Resolution of 6th August 1863. I cannot say that I was aware of that Resolution until some time after my appointment. There was a tacit understanding that no advances should be made on shares except shares of Companies guaranteed by Government. My impression is that that was understood at the Board. I am not aware of any advances on shares having been made down to April 1865. I am surprised to hear that there was an advance on 27th October 1864, on Bombay Reclamation Company's shares to Dossabhoy Hormusjee. I find no entry of any application for such loan in the Application Book. I could only have found out such applications from the minutes. The Daily Book would not have shown it to me. I am not aware of advances having been made to Byramjee Hormusjee Cama in January and February 1865 on Bombay Reclamation Company's shares and Elphinstone Land and Press Company's shares. In the Application Book there is an advance entered to Byramjee Hormusjee Cama on Government paper. I left Bombay on the 15th March 1865, and did not return till 10th June 1865. I do not find the name of Kursundass Madhowdass entered in the Application Book on the 5th November 1864. I am surprised to hear that he had an advance on shares. There is not any entry of an advance on shares to George Taylor on the 28th December 1864. The name of Atmaram Madhowjee does not appear in the Application Book under the date of 8th April 1865. Those applications should have been reported to the Weekly Committee and to the Board. The only means the Directors had of knowing would be the accounts laid before them at the weekly meeting, or a circular to them. We might have come to know it from the Daily Return, if we saw a large sum had been drawn out under any particular head; but it might easily have escaped attention. One might ascertain it from carefully examining the Daily Book. No doubt details of the names of borrowers, and of the advances to them, should have been laid before the Directors, but it was not done. There was an objection raised on several occasions by a Native Director to bringing the names of applicants before the Board, lest they should be scared away, and obtain accommodation elsewhere more easily.

I am referred to the Minute containing the Board Resolution of 3rd March 1864, which is as follows:—

"Under short Minutes of the 1st instant, the following proposition was adopted, in regard to loans and discounts for the present:—

"With reference to the enclosed letter from Cowasjee Jehangeer, Esq., I would respectfully suggest, that his proposal to grant Loans only for one month be adopted for the present, but in regard to Bills I would recommend, that instead of refusing all Bills having a longer time to run than one month, the amount advanced to each individual or firm should be limited to Rs. 50,000. The Bank would by this means retain the favour and goodwill of its regular constituents."

That I imagine is an embodiment of Cowasjee Jehangeer's note to the Secretary. The suggestion was made by the Secretary. It was only a temporary measure necessitated probably by a tightness in the market, on account of cotton to be paid for up-country.

I am referred to the Board Resolution of 11th April 1864, removing the restriction as to one month. That probably referred both to the restriction as to time and to that as to the amount of loan; reference to the latter being omitted inadvertently. I remember Mr. Cowasjee Jehangeer wishing to increase the powers of the Secretary. He wished to give him a veto upon the proceedings of the Board upon certain questions. Mr. Birch minuted against it, and I concurred with him. Cowasjee wished to give the Secretary absolute power to grant loans. I defeated that object. My idea of the power of the Secretary was that he could grant advances to persons of undoubted standing for a moderate sum, say, a lakh or a lakh and a half of Rupees. I cannot say exactly what Mr. Birch meant by the words in his minute "the power which he (Mr. Cowasjee) wishes to confer on the Secretary and Treasurer of the Bank, is practically conceded to that Officer."

I am referred to the Board's Minute of 2nd June 1864, in which the following passages appear:—

"It is respectfully suggested that the number of credit accounts might be greatly increased, if the system practised in Scotland was introduced, viz., on a Bond for a certain amount being signed by the party requiring the accommodation, with or without good names as security, according to the credit of the party."

"At present, no person, in however good credit, can have a credit account with the Bank, unless he can lodge Government paper as security, besides signing a Bond, which has to be renewed every three months."

I do not know anything about the Scotch system. I remember the discussion on that proposal. There had been several discussions before. After a long discussion it was agreed to give the power, and I think a limit was attached. I was under the impression that a limit as to the amount of the advance was laid down, but looking at the Minutes it does not appear that it was so. It was agreed to after discussion by a majority of the Board. Advances might be made upon one good name, or to one good firm. Unless two borrowers were undoubtedly good, I should not consider having two names equal to one good one. From what I have heard this morning, I think that in his second statement Mr. Blair seems to have misled the Board and himself too; I mean in stating that up to that date no person could obtain a Cash Credit without depositing Government paper.

Question.—What do you mean by saying that Mr. Blair misled the Board and himself too?

Answer.—It is clear that Mr. Blair misled the Board. I was not present when the Resolution of 12th April 1865 was passed. It was not the previous policy of the Bank to advance on shares. My notice was called to it after my return from China by several shareholders. I expressed my disapproval of it. I did not think it necessary to make any formal objection. There was no action on it after my return. Up to the passing of the Resolution of the 2nd June 1864 it was the practice to bring all applications before the Board, and to enter them in the Application Book. After what I have heard to-day I should not be surprised to find that all applications were not brought before the Board. The Secretary was accustomed to refer applications to Cowasjee Jehangeer or Premchund Roychund for their opinion, but only in order to obtain information. This did not exempt the Secretary from the necessity of reporting to the Directors. If he reported, it should appear in the Minutes. Until 1865, just before I went to China, I was not aware that loans were granted on the recommendation of a Native Director alone. A small loan might have been granted by the Secretary up to half a lakh of Rupees. But all above that should have been reported. On finding out the practice, I proposed a resolution that no renewals should be made without a payment of twenty-five per cent., and that such loans should not be continued. I cannot find my resolution on the Minutes. I believe it was at the meeting before my departure. I cannot say who was present. I objected to loans of a large amount being granted without the knowledge of the Board. I was not then aware of the extent of the loans, or of the large amounts of them. I was not fully aware of the large loans which had been granted until I succeeded Mr. Hannay as President of the Board in 1866. I satisfied myself that the system of book-keeping allowed of the Directors being misled. There were several accounts, each kept by a different person, and it was impossible to ascertain at a glance how much anyone owed to the Bank. When we sent down into the Bank for information, it appeared difficult to ascertain how much was owing by a particular individual. The information was perhaps imperfect from the hurry in which it was given. The Daily Book would not help a Director much. There ought not to have been any difficulty in discovering that a payment of ten lakhs had been made to one person; but there were so many changes in the staff that it was difficult to obtain information as to what had been done. In granting cash credits, I should say that the Secretary only had power up to a certain amount. All cash credits should have been entered in the Application Book, as also should all loans. The Directors could not possibly ascertain the existence of such loans, if not entered in the Application Book, without examining the books. Until the passing of the Resolution of April 1865 the Secretary could only take Railway shares, Government paper, Mint certificates, and bullion and deposit receipts by way of security. I state broadly that, up to June 1865, I was not aware of loans on shares. As to loans on personal security, I was aware money had been lent in several instances with the authority of the Board, or rather the Weekly Committee, to whom the applications were circulated. I find such loans referred to in the Minutes of the Board. I cannot remember any special case. I must have been aware of some loans, and I supposed they were granted by the Weekly Committee. There ought to have been their minutes on each application. I know that such minutes existed in 1864. They were sent to me as a member of the Weekly Committee. They may have been lost in removing the Bank. I do not think that advances were generally given solely on the authority of the Secretary after consulting a Native Director.

Mr. Lidderdale.

2nd July 1868.

Examination continued.—I wish to correct a statement which I made in my former evidence. I find, on referring to a report of Mr. Cassel's speech, that I was mistaken in attributing to him the statement as to the increase of the trade of the port.

I did not understand Mr. Birch's allusion to the powers of the Secretary. I thought the Secretary had power to lend to the extent of half a lakh or a lakh, as I stated in my evidence the day before yesterday.

I look at a letter of 15th March 1866, from Mr. Hannay to the Directors (marked A 34), and Mr. Robertson's letter of 7th March 1866 to Mr. Hannay (marked A 35), which are shown to me.

Question.—Is it not clear from a perusal of Mr. Hannay's letter that the Directors did not know what the powers of the Secretary were in March 1866?

2 July 1868.
Mr. Lidderdale.

Answer.—It is clear.

Question.—Is it not clear that the chairman thought that the best course to pursue was to write to the Secretary and inquire what his powers were?

Answer.—Yes, it is clear.

Question.—Is it not clear from Mr. Robertson's letter that he claimed almost unlimited power as Secretary?

Answer.—Not altogether.

Question.—Does he not say as to his power to discount Bank Bills and Bills on good houses of a currency not exceeding sixty days, "there is no limit, but I have hitherto seldom taken over three lakhs of the paper of one house?"

Answer.—He does claim that power. He does claim to have more extensive powers than I admitted him in my evidence on the former occasion to have had, and to have exercised,—but I do not admit that his letter states the proper understanding as to his powers.

Question.—Does it not appear from Mr. Hannay's letter that, although he proposed a restriction of the Secretary's powers, he does not dispute the fact that the Secretary had up to that time exercised those powers?

Answer.—He does not dispute it, but I do not consider he touches upon that in his letter.

Question repeated.

Answer.—He does not dispute it.

Question.—Does not the Chairman propose certain restrictions, one of which is, to restrict the power of the Secretary as to discounting bills of private houses to the amount of three lakhs of Rupees, any increase over that sum to have the sanction of two members of the Board?

Answer.—Yes, but the Secretary has to report to the Board.

Question.—But not before granting the application—Is he not to be at liberty to discount Bills at his discretion to the amount of three lakhs?

Answer.—Yes.

Question.—Does not Mr. Hannay say no new loan is to be granted in these exceptional times over one lakh without the sanction of the President or two members of the Board?

Answer.—Yes.

I do not concur in Mr. Hannay's opinion expressed in his letter. It is pointed out to me that I was present at a Board Meeting on the 19th March 1866, when rules were made by which all the extended powers proposed by Mr. Hannay were granted to the Secretary, and his power to grant advances to Banks was extended to five lakhs. I was under the impression that I had not concurred in that Resolution. I should like to refer to the scroll Minutes to satisfy myself whether I was present. I cannot remember it. I have found my name entered as attending at meetings when I was not there.

Question.—Did not the Resolution of 12th April 1865, printed at page 5 of the Blue Book, leave to the Secretary's discretion great latitude as to advances on shares?

Answer.—It would read so.

Question.—Is it not clear from Mr. Birch's minute read the other day, and from these letters of 7th March and 15th March 1866, and the Resolution of 12th April 1865, that the Secretary had much greater powers than you admitted.

Answer.—I cannot admit that the Board were of Mr. Hannay's opinion. That was Mr. Hannay's view.

Question.—If you dissented from Mr. Robertson's assertion of his powers, was it not your duty to record your dissent?

Answer.—It was, undoubtedly. I cannot say that I did so, I cannot find any documents whatever relating to it. I cannot say as a matter of fact that I did record my dissent. If I did so in the form of a resolution unseconded, it would not appear on the minutes. I do not suggest that I made such a motion, and that it was not seconded. I have asked to see the scroll Minutes. Looking dispassionately at those documents, it convinces me that the Secretary assumed powers which I was not aware that he had at the time. The Minute of 12th April 1865 gave him the power of advancing on shares to any extent. After reading those documents I am satisfied that the Secretary had greater powers than I considered him to have when I made my former statement.

Question.—Is there any minute between 6th August 1863 and 12th April 1865 which limits the powers of the Secretary permanently?

Answer.—I am aware of none.

Question.—After 12th April 1865 till the rules of 19th March 1866, do you know of any limit put upon the powers of the Secretary? (Mr. A. Brown suggests one of 4th May 1865. Read as follows:—

"No new constituent of the Bank shall receive credit beyond three lakhs without the sanction of three Directors.)"

Answer.—I was not in Bombay on 4th May 1865, and do not know why that resolution was passed. The resolution certainly seems by implication to give the Secretary power to advance sums beyond 3 lakhs to others than new constituents. It would seem that my former statement as to half a lakh must have been incorrect. My attention was first attracted in March 1865 to the fact that the Bank was making advances (other than discounts) on personal security. I cannot tax my memory with having made any remarks about it. To a certain extent I approved of that course. I am not aware that it ever came under discussion, or occurred to me to consider whether the Secretary should have the same power to lend on personal security as on other securities. I thought it material, but that it was controlled by the knowledge which the President and Directors would have of those advances. I relied upon the advances appearing in some form or other before the Directors concurrently with the granting of the loans. The practice was to circulate on a minute to the Weekly Committee the proposals for loans. All applications for loans should have been entered in the Application Book or in the Register of Bills discounted. The Application Book was not always laid before the Directors at their weekly meeting. To persons of certain standing, and with a limit, I had no objection to loans on personal security. I would not have assented to very large loans on personal security. None of the Directors objected to advance on personal security to my knowledge.

As to loan No. 1, Ardaseer Cursetjee Dady, 8th December 1864, a discount for Rupees 1,50,000. I recollect nothing of that transaction. My recollection of him at that time is that he was a merchant of respectable standing and of a respectable family. It appears to have been a promissory note on a single name. No security was taken originally. I do not know by whom he was recommended to the Board. [Looks at a letter shown to him.] The endorsement upon this letter is in a handwriting which I recognize. I believe Ardaseer Cursetjee Dady shortly afterwards submitted a statement of his affairs to his creditors. On the 29th June 1865, the Board, with my concurrence, sanctioned his estate being wound up by Trustees. My recollection is that the assets were so satisfactory, and of such a nature as to lead to our assent. We had, I have no doubt, a statement of his affairs before us produced by the Secretary. I cannot recollect whether he informed us that he had verified the statement. I exercised my own judgment. I did not anticipate that there would be a loss of 74,260 Rupees in the transaction.

My attention is called to loans by the Bank of Bombay to the Alliance Financial Corporation. The first advance appears to have been one of five lakhs to Dr. Diver, Hurbhum Nursey, Ghellabhoy Puddumsey, and others, Directors of the Association, on the 21st October 1864. I have referred to the Bank's books, but can find no trace of the transaction, except that a bill was discounted for five lakhs. I do not find that any security was taken. The loan appears to have been to Dr. Diver, Hurbham Nursey, and others as Directors. They were considered respectable and of means. Dr. Diver was an uncovenanted doctor, and a speculator. The Alliance Financial was a Corporation for lending money and other purposes. On making the advance inquiries would be directed to the character of its shareholders and of its Directors. I believe the Directors were Directors of other Companies.

I find there was a lakh lent to the Deccan Cotton Cleaning Company. Hurbhum Nursey was a director of that. A separate loan of one lakh was made to Ghellabhoy Puddumsey. I have no doubt an inquiry was made as to the list of shareholders in the Alliance Corporation. I think Mr. Blair would inquire, though he was a shareholder in the Company. I did not know that Mr. Blair had 30 shares, and that Mr. Robertson had 25 shares in that Company, or that Mr. Ryland had 25 shares in it. I think on 21st October 1864 Mr. Ryland was an Officer in the Bank of Bombay. I was not aware that Gopall Shaba Senoy Shroff had 5 shares in it, or that Balkissondass Vizbhoocundass of the Kalbadevi Branch, had shares in the Company. Premchund Roychund was not a Director of the Bank of Bombay when the five lakhs were lent. I did not know that he had a thousand shares in the Alliance Financial Association. I cannot speak positively as to any inquiry that was made as to the character of the Company when the advance was made. I did not know at the time, but I know now that Premchund Roychund recommended the Company to the Bank of Bombay. I believe he retired from the Board of the Bank of Bombay on the 29th June 1865, under certain conditions. I do not remember reading the letter from the Bank of Bengal about advancing on the shares of such Companies until it was referred to before the Commission. I consider it decidedly lending on more than one name. We had the security of the shareholders. I myself made no inquiry about the Company. I cannot recollect instructing the Secretary to do so.

I must have been cognisant of the loan. I am informed by Mr. Rodgie that the second advance made to that Company of Rs. 1,06,000 was a renewal of two small loans. I have not traced them. Terms of compromise were offered by the Company to us and rejected about April 1866. We did not consider the terms offered sufficiently favourable. They offered two lakhs down, and to bind themselves to settle the balance six months after date, with interest at 9 per cent. We have only obtained 1,16,000 Rupees. We did not think that we should get the two lakhs or any cash whatever. The Directors did not consider it a fair offer from inquiries we made outside. I believe we tried to get cash from the parties offering. It was refused because the Bank Directors expected to get more.

Dr. Diver has been released by the Insolvent Court, I believe, not by the Bank. The advance appears in the Discount Book, and must have been noticed.

I am referred to the statement of Mr. Brown's loans, at page 114 of the Blue Book. Rupees 2,50,000 were advanced entirely without my knowledge. I have reason to know that. The advances of 50,000 Rupees, and 30,000 Rupees ought to have been known to the Bank Directors, as they were discounts. The application for the loan of Rupees 2,50,000 does not appear in the Application Book. I know Mr. Brown slightly; he was an exchange broker, in excellent business, in partnership with Mr. Best. I believe he was formerly an assistant in the establishment of Smith, Elder & Co., Booksellers at Bombay. Mr. C. F. Heycock was in business for himself, and a son of the Manager of the Central Bank. He absconded from Bombay. I believe Mr. Brown is in England on holiday. I think he was not here last month. I do not know Venayek Pandoorung. Mr. Macfarlane is a Solicitor. I do not suppose he is in large practice. Brown and Best went under trust in June 1865. Their business is still carried on. I understand that no security was given for the 2,50,000 Rupees. The other two loans must have been running when that sum was lent.

[Looks at page 114 of the Blue Book.] I do not know anything about the preparation of this return, in which the loans are transposed, and the dates all omitted. Mr. Robertson did not consult me about the return. I first heard of this transaction when I came back from China in June 1865. I objected, to the Secretary, and told him that the loan should not have been made. I considered that the personal standing of the borrowers did not warrant it. I only objected verbally. Share certificates were afterwards deposited with the Bank as collateral security for the loan of Rs. 2,50,000; 46 Port Canning shares, I think. I cannot speak as to this loan having been renewed. I do not know who recommended the loan. The letter now shown to me gives me information on this point. The loan was subsequently discussed at the Board. I cannot say whether any of my co-Directors knew of the granting of the loan. I do not remember that anything transpired at those discussions as to their having known of it. Mr. Brown subsequently received a release from the Bank.

I am referred to the following passages in the minutes of the Board of 6th July 1865.

"Read letters from Messrs. Dallas, Lynch, and Langdale, requesting the consent of the Directors to the execution by the Secretary of the Trust Deeds of Nowrojee Ardaseer Davur and Bhawoo Dajee."

"Sanctioned, and the Secretary authorized to attend meetings of creditors of parties indebted to the Bank, and at his discretion, to agree to any resolutions proposed and agreed to by the representatives of other Banks; and he is further authorized to sign all agreements, deeds, or other necessary documents in connexion with such estates, reporting the same to the Board at their first meeting thereafter."

I do not believe that I concurred in that resolution. I see no record about my not concurring. I think that the investiture of power was an improper one. On 13th July 1865 the Secretary reported that Mr. Brown had laid a statement of his affairs before his creditors. There is no record in the Minute Book of what I did. My resolution is not entered because it was not seconded. I moved the following resolution:—

"To add to resolution passed on the 6th instant, with reference to power to the Secretary to attend meetings of creditors, with discretion to agree, &c., the words, 'in cases where there are no special circumstances which should be known to the Directors.'"

Mr. Robertson, the Bank's Secretary, attended the meeting of Mr. Brown's creditors. I did not.

On the 20th July 1865 there was a Board meeting. I objected to the signing of the release. I thought that the report showed an amount of speculation in a short time that was not justifiable, and it was currently reported that Mr. Brown had not disclosed the names of parties who had speculated with him. He failed for two crores. I moved the following resolution:—

"That in the case of Mr. F. L. Brown the Secretary do not sign a deed on behalf of the bank."

It was not seconded, and does not appear on the minutes.

On 13th July 1865, Messrs. Hannay, Lushington, Ballard, F. S. Chapman, Tracey, Cowasjee Manockjee, and I, were present. On the 20th July Messrs. Hannay, Lushington, Tracey, Brown, Cowasjee Manockjee, and I were the Directors present, and Colonel Ballard and Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy were also there. I was defeated because no one went with me. It was urged that it was impolitic to allow the public to know that such loans were made of the Bank's money. There was hesitation on the part of the Directors about allowing Brown to go through the Insolvent Court. It was thought undesirable to allow the transaction to be made a matter of public discussion.

Mr. Best was subsequently released. He is in Bombay. I was present at a Board meeting of the 17th July 1866, and consented to Mr. Best's release. His transactions appeared of a much smaller amount, and much more straightforward than Mr. Brown's. He was to pay half his income for the next two years to the Bank. As to Mr. Macfarlane I do not know whether he has been released. On 1st February 1868 I was not a Director.

2 July 1868.

Mr. Lidderdale.

[After a short adjournment, on the sitting being resumed, the witness spoke as follows] :—

With reference to Mr. Brown's release. I wish to say in addition to what I have already stated about the release to Mr. Brown that my colleagues considered that the Bank was not called upon to put itself in the position of a public prosecutor or a censor of morals.

Examination resumed.—As to the Eastern Financial Association a loan of 10 lakhs was obtained by it from the Bank of Bombay on the 18th October 1864. All the Discount Minutes and Memoranda of 1864 are not forthcoming. I first became aware of the large advance to the Eastern Financial Association in June 1865. It is entered in the Register of Bills Discounted. I do not think the Register was regularly laid upon the table before the Directors. The Daily Books would show that more than 10 lakhs had been disbursed on the day before under the head of Bombay Bills. I certainly ought to have had my attention attracted by so large an item. The Bills Discounted Book would have shown the name of the borrower. There is no entry in the Application Book of the 25,000 Rupees on the 15th August 1865. The item of 23rd March 1866 for Rupees 1,86,441 does not appear in the Application Book. We heard of the bills discounted by the Kurrachee Branch, and found fault with the Agent there. I cannot remember that the large debt was brought to our notice until the crisis. I cannot recollect any inquiry being made by the Board about these transactions. I cannot say whether Mr. Blair made any report to the Board about them. I can find no trace of it. I think he must have done so. I was not in the habit of looking at the Opinion Book. I never saw it previous to becoming President in 1866.

The entry referring to the Eastern Financial Association is in Mr. Blair's handwriting. I do not know who recommended the Association to the Bank. I did not make any inquiry. I believe the Application Book was put on the table after an application was granted. I should say Mr. Blair was taken to task about the loan of 10 lakhs, and that he said he had made the loan with the sanction of his Directors. I do not think I ever saw this letter before (marked A 36). I know the handwriting. I have seen the return commencing at page 96 of the Blue Book. I have not seen the letter calling for this return. I should consider all overdrafts overdue unless by special agreement. The manager and Mr. Birch, who daily visited the Bank, would probably remember these large loans. I think they must have been brought before Mr. Birch. I instituted no inquiries about the Association. An inquiry was instituted when the Association could not pay—about June 1865, I think. I have no recollection of finding anything out about the Association. There were such innumerable inquiries. I should say the payment of 15th August 1865 was brought before the Board and sanctioned. It was a payment of a call for shares. About August 1865 I was informed that Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff was a shareholder in the Association.

As to 50,000 Rupees advanced to Mr. Currie and Mr. S. M. Pelly, I know nothing about the loan. Mr. Currie was a manager of a Bank. They were not in trade. I should not have lent money to any person who applied.

With regard to the advances to Cursetjee Furdoonjee, there was a fixed loan on the 28th December 1864 of Rupees 6,25,000, and an advance on the 16th January 1865 of Rupees 3,00,000. There is also apparently a cash credit for Rupees 2,08,366. There is a loss altogether on this account of Rupees 10,25,520.

I cannot trace in the books any particular reference to these loans. If the circular or Discount Minutes were forthcoming, some trace would be found of them. Cursetjee Furdoonjee had obtained Rupees 9,25,000 without security. He gave security, I am informed, when the third loan was granted. I should say that the feeling of the Board was that his position and standing warranted a large loan. He was very largely engaged in trade, and was probably considered one of the wealthiest merchants in the place. I have heard of fixed loans without security by English banks. I cannot speak of any existing English bank making such advances. The feeling at the time was that Cursetjee Furdoonjee was of good standing. In April 1866 there was great distrust. We wrote off 7 lakhs of his debt in September 1866 as irrecoverable. There had been a great fall in cotton. He was connected with the firm of Sirjamsetjee Jejeebhoy, Sons, and Company. He had large dealings with Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy. It was not known that they were trading together until after Cursetjee failed. I was not aware that there were any joint transactions between them, so far as their business came to my knowledge in my business. I do not think that the Directors could have ascertained that they were dealing together. Cursetjee had turned the tables upon Rustomjee, bringing him in a debtor, although Rustomjee claimed to be a creditor of Cursetjee. I do not think that the Directors could have considered that an advance of 11 lakhs to Cursetjee and of 14 lakhs to Rustomjee were one and the same thing. I do not know who recommended this large advance to be made to Cursetjee Furdoonjee.

I look at a letter of 4th January 1865 which is shown to me (marked A 37). This is Mr. Blair's handwriting. Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy was a Director of the Bank on 28th December 1864 and 16th January 1865. Premchund Roychund was also a Director on those dates. I turn to the Application Book. I find an application by Cursetjee Furdoonjee, on 27th December 1864, for a renewal for 3,20,000 Rupees at 10 per cent. interest on security of Government paper of the value of Rs. 3,09,500, but I do not find any application for a loan of Rs. 6,25,000, or of an application on 16th January 1865 for Rupees 3,00,000, by Cursetjee Furdoonjee. I do not recollect the making of the loans. I do not remember any investigation even after Cursetjee had failed. I do not think Mr. Blair was ever called to account for making such large loans on personal security. I do not think his conduct was approved of by the Directors. The Board, who manifested their dissent to his proceedings, asked Mr. Blair to resign. I think it was in 1866. The question of dismissing him twice came before the Board, not on the ground of his granting those loans, but on the ground of his not being equal to the situation. The loans were considered good at the time. He was at liberty to return. He was on leave in England, and the Directors thought that it would not be for the good of the Bank that he should do so. A letter of dismissal was written, but he resigned. It was a general disapproval of his conduct that the Board entertained.

As to an item of 27th December 1864, a cash credit of one lakh to Messrs. Macculloch, John, and Company, I should say it was without security, from my inquiries. In April 1865 there was an advance of one lakh to Mr. Macculloch, and Mr. W. H. Crawford, Solicitor. Mr. Macculloch was formerly manager of the Agra Bank here. He opened a mercantile firm with Mr. John. He is gone to England. I believe he had large transactions with Premchund Roychund. Mr. W. H. Crawford was a Solicitor. He is dead. His circumstances were greatly involved. I do not know that any inquiry was made about Mr. Macculloch or Mr. John. A prudent banker would have inquired whether the money was wanted for speculation.

As to the loans to Mr. G. Taylor and Dr. Diver, 10th January 1865. Bill discounted 2 lakhs. Mr. G. Taylor 2 lakhs on 28th December 1864, fixed loan, security taken. Mr. G. Taylor, Dr. Diver, and Atmaram Madhowjee 5½ lakhs, 11th October 1864.

2 July 1868.

Mr. Lidderdale.

Another bill, Taylor, Brice, and Company, on 21st April 1865, one lakh. Altogether Mr. Taylor 10½ lakhs, and Dr. Diver 7½ lakhs. Mr. Taylor is a barrister. He was Master in Equity for some years. He was known to be a wealthy man when the loan was made, in October 1864. He held shares in many Banks.

I look at an entry in the "Opinion Book" which is shown to me. This does not alter my opinion that Mr. Taylor's position in October 1864 warranted a larger advance than is indicated in the Opinion Book in June 1864. I can find no trace of the advance of 5,50,000 Rupees to him in the Application Book. Nor of the loan of 2 lakhs on Bank of Bengal shares.

Atmaram Madhowjee was a broker to the firm of Brice and Company. I am again referred to the Opinion Book. It appears extraordinary that in the face of that opinion Atmaram Madhowjee should have been allowed to have twelve lakhs. I cannot say how there could be any justification of such a loan, not being able to find any traces of it. The advance to Mr. Taylor, Dr. Diver, and Mr. Atmaram were, I should suppose, made under the influence of Premchund. The loans were very improper ones.

I am referred to the accounts of Shapoorjee Dhunjeebhoy and Byramjee Manockjee. There appears to have been a debt to the Bank of Bombay contracted by them on the 14th December 1865, of 3 lakhs, and a separate debt by Shapoorjee Dhunjeebhoy alone of one lakh. I cannot find any information whatever about these loans. Shapoorjee Dhunjeebhoy was a man of respectable family, brother-in-law of the present Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, and in a respectable position. The Bank could not know that he was plunging into speculation. I am again referred to the Opinion Book. The loans appear to me surprising after that entry. There was a co-obligor as to the first loan. I wish here prominently to bring forward that there were Minutes and Discount Circulars sent round to the Directors, and unless these are forthcoming, I cannot say whether I knew of particular loans. The business of the Bank had become so enormously large that the Directors must have attended all day if the business had not been sent round in circulars. I am referred to a Minute of 31st July 1866 recording a letter from Mr. King, Under-Secretary to Government, addressed to the Bank Secretary, calling for particulars of the advances made by the Bank to Atmaram Madhowjee and Shapoorjee Dhunjeebhoy, and of the securities taken, together with a statement of the authority on which the loans were made, Atmaram Madhowjee and Shapoorjee Dhunjeebhoy, having then been reported in the newspapers as insolvents. I remember the answer to the letter was deferred to enable the Directors to confer with Mr. F. S. Chapman as to the object of asking for the information called for. I went home sick immediately afterwards. I do not know whether an answer was sent.

3rd July 1868.

3 July 1868.

Examination continued.—I am referred to the account of loans to Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy and Sorabjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy :—

14th July 1864, a Cash Credit of	-	Rs. 5,00,000
17th January 1865, a Bill Discounted		„ 2,21,000
17th July 1865, Cash Credit	- -	„ 1,75,000
22nd July 1865, Bill Discounted	-	„ 1,00,000
11th April 1866, Cash Credit	- -	„ 2,12,375
15th December 1865, Cash Credit	-	„ 2,10,000
Total	-	Rs. 14,18,357

Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy was the managing man in his father's lifetime in the firm of Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, Sons, and Company, and afterwards kept up the concern. Sorabjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy was, I think, brought up as a merchant, but had not followed mercantile pursuits. I believe in 1864 he was shipping cotton. I cannot say whether the two loans of 5 lakhs and 2,21,000 were taken with security. I do not know when they first gave security to the Bank. I do not know the circumstances under which the loan of 2,10,000 Rupees of December 1865 was granted. I have no recollection of any distinct promise having been given when that loan was granted. After reading the letters now shown to me (marked A 38 and A 39) I can say that no security seems to have been taken, but that there was a distinct promise to repay that money in 17 days. I am aware the loss has been large. I have no reason to doubt that it amounts to Rupees 5,86,833 on these loans to Rustomjee and Sorabjee. Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy was a Director of the Bank of Bombay during the whole of 1864. He sat till May 1865 when he became disqualified. He was consequently a Director when the first two loans were granted. He was re-elected, I believe, on 13th July 1865. There appear to have been two advances to him in July,—one on 17th July of 1,75,000 Rupees, and another of one lakh on the 22nd July 1865, on which days he was a Director. He was a Director in December 1865, when the loan of 2,10,000 Rupees appears to have been granted. I believe he attended the Board till the 16th January 1866, but irregularly. On the 8th May 1866 it was reported that he was disqualified. He was a Director when all those advances to him were made, except the one of the 11th April 1866. I cannot say whether the loan of April 1866 was a transfer of an overdrawn account commenced to be overdrawn in April 1865, without examination of the books. I can only speak with any certainty as to my knowledge of those debts subsequent to June 1865. I was aware that Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy was indebted to the Bank, but did not know the amount. Had I known that the debt was seven lakhs I should not have been alarmed. He received money from his father, and had made a large amount in cotton to my knowledge. I cannot say whether Sorabjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy had made money by trading. I cannot say on whose recommendation these large advances were made. After reading this letter (marked A 40) I have no doubt who recommended the advance. The loans to Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy were not discussed at the Board that I remember. I think now that it would be only proper to have brought such large loans to a Director before a full Board. I do not know whether there is any evidence in the minutes of those loans having been brought before the Board. The application for the loan of December 1865 was not referred to any Director, so far as I know. Mr. Hannay was a Director at that time. I can say after looking at the letters A 38 and A 39 that Mr. Hannay sanctioned the loan of December 1865, but on imperfect information as it appears. Looking back I consider the advances too large, but not much too large. I would myself have lent Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy five lakhs without security. I acknowledge that the loans were too large to be on two names without security. Speaking now, I do not think it prudent banking. I was not aware of the magnitude of his transactions till after June 1865. When I heard of their magnitude I insisted on security being given. I cannot say at what date. No securities had been taken before that to my knowledge. If securities were deposited on the 29th May 1865, I do not recollect them. Other security was given after my personally speaking to the Secretary about it. It is quite possible he may have given security in August 1866, but what I do know is that, immediately after my requiring security to be given, it was given, but I do not remember on what date. The Apollo Press Company's shares were valuable security. They are even now worth 10,500 Rupees a share. Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy was a man of known large wealth at the time, and any banker in Bombay would have advanced him money on his promissory note.

3 July 1868.

Mr. Lidderdale.

I am referred to Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff's account :—

2nd July 1864, a cash credit for		rupees	60,000
18th October 1864	„	„	40,000
14th December 1864, a fixed loan		„	97,000
21st April 1865	„	„	5,00,000

Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff was undoubtedly connected with the Companies springing up in 1864. He was connected with the Eastern Financial Association. I think he was a Director of that association. He was not connected with the Alliance Financial Corporation, or the Bombay Reclamation Company, as far as I know. I know as a general fact that he speculated largely, although I cannot speak to the concerns with which he was connected. I believe I did ascertain in the course of business who recommended him to the Bank of Bombay for the loan of 5 lakhs. I believe security was taken for the loans of Rupees 60,000 and Rupees 40,000. 1,348 Commercial Bank shares were given by him as security for the loan of 5 lakhs. I turn to the Application Book. It appears that the first entry in it of an application for a loan on shares, the interest on which was not guaranteed by Government, is dated on the 21st April 1865. I notice that it is subsequent to the resolution of 12th April 1865. Looking at this Application Book I see that several applications for loans on such shares were subsequently entered. They seem to be regularly entered. Commercial Bank shares were well thought of in 1865. I am referred to the Private Opinion Book kept in the Bank. The passage shown to me which has reference to Pestonjee is in Mr. Blair's handwriting. It shows that at the end of 1864 he was estimated to be good for a lakh. Shortly after the loan in June 1865, Pestonjee Cursetjee submitted a statement of his affairs to his creditors. He subsequently filed a petition in the Insolvent Court. His petition was dismissed; I do not know on what grounds. It may have been for gross overtrading. I am aware that he was a great speculator at the time. The means of the Commercial Directors for ascertaining whether a man was speculating were rather meagre. It has always been very difficult to ascertain the position of natives in Bombay. The Directors could have ascertained that he was speculating, but not the extent of what he was doing.

I am referred to Byramjee Hormusjee Cama's account with the Bank. He obtained on the 30th June 1864 a cash credit of Rs. 51,000, and obtained other large advances in 1864 and 1865, and there was an ultimate debit owing by him to the Bank of Rs. 17,71,682. I cannot say what the Bank has received on account by way of dividend from his estate. It may be Rs. 3,33,849. I do not know whether the total sum received is Rs. 4,88,000. I cannot explain how Byramjee Hormusjee Cama was allowed to run up such a debt. Part of the advance was made in my absence, one lakh. He traded extensively, and was in good credit, trading largely in Cotton and with China. I am not aware whether he did a speculative business. He failed in May 1865. He was the first to fail. I do not know on whose recommendation the loan to him of 7 lakhs on 14th October 1864 was made. I believe an inquiry was made in the Bank afterwards. I cannot speak with certainty as to who appeared to be responsible for these large losses. I believe the result of the inquiry was not recorded in writing. I do not know to whom it was referred to investigate the matter. In February 1866 the Directors made up their minds as to a portion of the loan being bad. I do not remember how much was written off as bad. It is impossible to recollect the transactions of the Bank at that time, they were so numerous. My attention was called to his account after his failure was reported, on my return from China. I do not think that the state of Byramjee Hormusjee Cama's account was known to any Director but Mr. Hannay. It might have been known to him. He succeeded Mr. Birch as President. Mr. Blair and Mr. Birch the President should be able to give most information about the advances to Byramjee Hormusjee. I find no trace in the minutes about it till his insolvency.

The President.—We will now turn to the advances of 1865.

Witness resumes.—I am referred to the Account of Ameerchund Bechurdass. On the 22nd April 1865, he had a bill discounted for Rupees 2 lacs. The loss may be Rupees 1,97,831 on that transaction. I was absent from Bombay when that advance was made. I find 537 Commercial Bank shares were deposited by Ameerchund two days after the discount was made. The Commercial Bank failed in May 1866. I have no doubt that the Directors were afraid of the effect which would have been produced by selling the shares. I have no doubt the payment of the bill was pressed for. He was possibly out of Bombay. The Directors did not sell the shares, because, had the Bank pressed its securities on the market, it would have destroyed the value of all shares. I believe that opinion was coincided in by the whole Board. It was both in the interest of the Shareholders of the Bank and of the public that we refrained from selling shares. As things have turned out it would have been a more prudent measure to have sold some of the securities, and to have renewed the bill for a smaller amount. The failure of the Commercial Bank was a most unexpected event. I believe Ameerchund Bechurdass was the Shroff of a respectable firm of long standing.

As to the advances to the Bombay Joint Stock Corporation :—

1865, 29th May, a discount of Rs. 3,00,000
„ 24th June, ditto Rs. 1,00,000

I was not in Bombay when the advance of 3 lakhs was made to that Corporation. I am not aware whether any security was taken for the first advance. The Corporation was in good credit. Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy was a Director of the Corporation; Limjee Manockjee, a brother of Cowasjee Manockjee, was another. I think there was a European director; Mr. Coke, I believe. I am not aware whether any of the officials of the Bank of Bombay were connected with the Corporation. I believe shares were subsequently deposited with the Bank by the Corporation. I cannot say whether the loss on this debt has been Rupees 1,50,000 and upwards. It appears from the Minutes (marked A 41 and A 42) that the first loan to the Corporation was sanctioned by Messrs. Hannay, Tracey, and Lushington, and the loan for one lakh by Messrs. Hannay, Brown, Tracey, and myself. My recollection is that I inquired to what purpose the one lakh was to be put, and that the whole or the greater part of it was to return to the Bank's coffers. It was due by the Corporation to certain debtors to the bank, who were being pressed by us for payment. I personally took no steps to see that the money reached those debtors. I believe at the time it was a bonâ fide concern, but I have since to a certain extent been undeceived. The meaning of my minute is that I wanted the money to return to the Bank, and not to create a new debt. I do not know how much per share had been paid up in the Corporation. I was aware that it had enormous deposits. I cannot at this distance of time say what I meant by the words "though I fear it will do no good." I believe Mr. Gubbay was a Director, and is now in Bombay. I believe Mr. Coke was a Director as well as Manager. Mr. F. A. Spencer, one of the Liquidators of that Corporation, is also in Bombay.

President.—We now come to Mr. Bendir's loan.

Witness.—I remember a letter being sent to Government stating that in future advances would not be made by the Bank on shares. The loan to Mr. Bendir, of 11th December 1865, would be a violation of that letter, if made on shares. After the date of the letter to Government we used to take shares to secure ourselves, although we did not make advances on shares. Such shares were at first taken with a blank transfer and Power of Attorney, and a letter to show the Bank's interest. A blank transfer was taken in order that the Bank should not become liable for calls. If a call was made whilst the Bank held shares, payment was made in the name of the registered shareholder. That course was changed in consequence of a decision in the High Court by Mr. Justice Anstey, which took from the Bank of Bombay shares held by them. The Board met and considered how they could prevent an attachment depriving them of shares in future, and they determined to have the best class of shares transferred into the names of officers of the Bank. We acted under legal advice in adopting that device. I cannot recollect whether, after the letter of 30th June 1865 to Government, shares were taken by the Bank, on which an unpaid liability existed. That decision of Mr. Anstey's was afterwards reversed, after it had caused great loss to the Bank and to others.

I am referred to the following particulars of the loans to Cowasjee Rustomjee Pochajee and Company, and Sorabjee and Nowrojee Nanabhoy.

On the 16th March 1865 a cash credit of Rs. 1,00,000 and in August 1865 a discount of Rs. 82,000. The loss on these transactions may have been, as I am informed, Rs. 1,37,673.

I do not know when the 36 United Victoria and Colaba Company's shares were deposited with the Bank. I do not know what inquiry was made as to their circumstances. The cash credit of one lakh was sanctioned by the Board on security. I cannot say of my own knowledge what loss there is on these loans. I have not seen any detailed list of the affairs of the Bank since August 1866. The securities were deposited in August 1865. That would appear to be a violation of the letter to Government of June 1865. The Victoria Land and Press Company was in liquidation, and about to make a distribution on its shares. The loan was well secured, because the value of the shares was far in excess of the discounts, and the deposit was believed to make the position of the Bank more secure. I see by these letters (marked A 43, A 44, and A 45) who recommended these borrowers. I was present at the Board when the discounts for Rs. 82,000 were granted on security of the shares.

I am referred to Dosabhoy Merwanjee and Company's Account :—

	Rupees.
24th February 1865 - -	1,00,000
23rd May 1865 - - -	2,00,000
17th March 1866 - -	1,00,000

I cannot find that any security was taken for the first loan. I was absent when the second loan was granted. I believe security was given for the third loan at the time, or subsequently to granting it. There was landed property given as security. I am referred to the Minute of 17th May 1865. I see that there was a proposal to lend three lakhs, which does not appear to have been carried out. The security for the third loan was, I believe, referred to the Bank Solicitor. I do not know what the Opinion Book says about that firm. I have said that I never saw that book until I became President of the Bank. I have a full recollection that the third loan was fully covered. It was the subject of particular discussion. No advances were made on Bombay Bank shares within my knowledge. Several apparent instances are pointed out to me, but I am satisfied that Bank of Bombay shares were only stopped, not taken as security.

As to the Imperial Banking and Trading Company's loans :—

	Rupees.
28th March 1865 - -	3,00,000
30th March 1865 - -	2,00,000

I was not in Bombay when those loans were granted. I believe no security was taken. I know very little about that Company. I cannot give any explanation about the dealings with it.

I know Jumnadass Doolubdass as a Broker. I know nothing about the transaction with him.

I am referred to Khuttow Khemjee's account. I know nothing of the advances to him. He was a Cotton Merchant, and a co-obligant with Premchund Roychund on a Bill. I am not aware what business connexion they had between them. I believe Premchund Roychund recommended Khuttow Khemjee to the Bank of Bombay. I recollect when the affairs of Khuttow Khemjee were under consideration that I had a letter from Premchund asking for a favourable consideration of Khuttow Khemjee. This minute (marked A 46) is in the handwriting of Mr. Tracey. It shows that the second loan to Khuttow Khemjee was sanctioned by him and Mr. Lushington. I can only recollect that Khuttow Khemjee was then in good credit.

I am referred to the Kattiawar Trading Company's account. I do not know anything about the Company or its shareholders :—

I am referred to Premabhoy Hemabhoy's account :—

	Rupees.
15th May 1865 - - -	3,00,000
1st December 1865 - -	5,00,000

I was not in Bombay when the first loan was granted. He was of first-class standing both here and in Guzerat. He was a member of the Bombay Legislative Council, and the head of a firm of Shroffs who had been in business for many years. 20 Back Bay shares were deposited as security for the second loan. I have never heard that he disappeared from Bombay until very lately. I understand that the Bank had been forced to compromise with him. I cannot say whether that is owing to his keeping away. I do not know whether they have accepted a lakh. I should think that his name was so well known that he did not require any recommendation for the first loan. The last loan was a transfer from his son's account. I believe they were undivided, but possessed separate property. I believe that Premabhoy Hemabhoy was looked upon as better security than his son. I believe that the son's debt was at first unsecured, but secured subsequently. Probably the son's security had depreciated before the transfer was made. I believe the original debt was larger. In 1864 it would not have been considered folly to advance such large sums. It may now be considered an illustration of the folly of such a system of banking.

I am referred to Manockjee Limjee and Company's account. They obtained from the Bank in January 1865 a cash credit for five lakhs, and in June 1865 a further loan of four lakhs, and I believe that the loss to the Bank on those advances amounts to Rs. 4,76,421. Manockjee Limjee was a member of a most respectable family, and broker to my firm at one time. I know nothing of the second loan. The first loan was probably justified by the position of the parties. I am aware that Government securities had been deposited with the Bank by Manockjee Limjee and Company for some years. The securities were realized by my orders. Manockjee Limjee, and subsequently his two sons, were my firm's brokers. They were bankers also, and traded as well. I did not recommend them to the Bank. I turn to the Application Book. I observe on 2nd June 1865 an open credit of four lakhs was applied for by them. Cowasjee Manockjee was a brother and partner of Limjee Manockjee. They were my firm's brokers till the beginning of June 1865. I observe from the minute of 1st June 1865 that they obtained a loan to enable them to take up a bill of Leckie and Company's, endorsed by them. The loss has been so great because the assets of the firm have so depreciated in value since April 1866, when they presented their statement to their creditors. They then expected to pay 14 annas in the rupee. It transpired that they had been speculating largely in shares. 100 shares of the United Victoria Company were taken as security. The loss may be Rupees 2,94,000. I have no knowledge of it. There will be a dividend from their estate. I should like to correct a mistake in the Blue Book at page 97, debt No. 9, which refers to Manockjee Limjee and Company. The 248 shares of the Bank of Bombay were not taken as security, but were stopped by me. That statement throughout is incorrect as regards the securities, and in many instances as regards the original loans.

I am referred to Kursondass Madhowdass' account; it is apparently an open loan for Rupees 11,00,000, on the 9th December 1865. I cannot get information from the books as to this loan. I believe it was a transfer from another account. The persons who can explain the original transaction are Mr. Birch and the Secretary. It was a transfer from the names of other debtors. I am not aware that I consulted the Opinion Book about Kursondass Madhowdass' credit. I turn to the Opinion Book. The entry referring to him is in Mr. Blair's handwriting. Premchund Roychund was a Director of the Bank of Bombay in August 1864. He appears to have been the channel through which the matter was transacted.

Navalchund Namchund was a broker, and is brother-in-law of Premchund Roychund. I do not know anything of the transaction with Navalchund.

I remember inquiring into Mr. Ryland's being allowed to overdraw his account. He was Deputy Secretary of the Bank of Bombay. I did not discover by whom the permission was given. His shares in the Bank were stopped, not taken by way of security. Mr. Ryland left the Bank for a better situation. I believe there has been a loss through him.

I was President when the loans were made to the Asiatic Bank. The Directors were in England. The Consulting Committee in Bombay were, I think, advertised as Mr. Scott and Mr. G. Steel. I believe Mr. Hannay was afterwards a member of that Committee during some part of 1865 and 1866. He was also a Director of the Bank of Bombay. I have not heard that Mr. Tracey was a member of the Committee. I believe Mr. Cowasjee Jehangeer was a large shareholder, and a member of that Committee. Mr. G. Steel was a Director of the Bank of Bombay. Mr. Blair was not a shareholder of the Asiatic Bank to my knowledge. I do not know whether he kept his private account there. I do not know whether Mr. Robertson was a shareholder of the Asiatic Bank. I was not a shareholder in that Bank. I refused to have anything to do with it. Mr. A. Brown was not a shareholder in it, or a member of the Consulting Committee. Nor was Mr. F. S. Chapman or Mr. Lushington or Mr. Norman. I believe Mr. Tracey was a shareholder in it. The Asiatic Bank was established under the auspices of Mr. Michael Scott, Mr. Gavin Steel, and Cowasjee Jehangeer. It received from the Bombay Reclamation Company a deposit of nearly two millions sterling, I believe. I think it was established in 1864. Mr. Baker was the Deputy Manager of that Bank for the greater part of its existence. There was an original issue of shares, and a second issue before the first had been paid up. The Asiatic Bank first applied for assistance to the Bank of Bombay on the 14th May 1866. [Reads from Minute of that date showing fifteen lakhs granted on security.] The loan was afterwards increased to twenty lakhs.

The Weekly Committee telegraphed to the Bank of Bengal to give credit for three lakhs. [Reads from Minute of 13th July 1866 "an extension to 1st September of credit of 20 lakhs granted."] There are letters in the Bank of Bombay relating to these advances. The total due may have been 19,66,000 when the Asiatic Bank failed. The amount still due may be nine lakhs. I do not know how much the loss is likely to be. The Bank has not paid a dividend. I should say that the Asiatic Bank thought it preferable to apply to the Bank of Bombay rather than to make a call on their shareholders and alarm them. The manager of the Asiatic Bank was called before the full Board, and questioned as to whether the advance would clear him. We considered the securities sufficient. A security was promised, which was never given. It was a lien on the uncalled up capital of the Bank. The manager, Mr. Morison, undertook to obtain such a security from the Directors in England. The securities were Apollo Press Company's shares, Iron Ship Company's shares, a lien on funds telegraphed as coming from Calcutta, and funds lying there. I believe the Java guilders lying at Calcutta did not come into our hands. On 13th July 1866, Mr. A. Brown, Mr. Lushington, Messrs. C. E. Chapman, Norman, and Tracey were present.

[Reads Minute of 23rd August 1866.] Mr. Brown and Mr. C. E. Chapman can speak as to whether the substituted securities were handed to the Bank of Bombay. We granted the loan in the expectation that the Asiatic Bank would receive help from London, and it received a Credit for 100,000*l*. It did everything but make a call on its shareholders. [Reads Minute of 28th August 1866.] It appears from this Minute that the hypothecation of the securities was then completed. I left Bombay about the 9th August 1866, and cannot speak to the liquidation of the Asiatic Bank, or to any transactions since that date.

On 11th May 1866 we lent one lakh to Mr. W. H. Crawford, a solicitor, who deposited shares as a security. The shares taken fully covered the advance, and left a large margin. There was also a charge offered on the costs due to him from the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company. It was a special transaction.

Question.—After all your experience at that time, how did you enter into such a transaction?

Answer.—We believed ourselves to be fully secured.

Question.—There was another lakh of Rupees due by Mr. Crawford jointly with Mr. Macculloch, on which a total loss is expected?

Answer.—I believe a dividend is expected from Mr. Crawford's estate. The second loan would not have been granted unless it was thought to make the first more secure. I am satisfied that it was done to improve the Bank's position. The securities deposited by Mr. Crawford were 92 shares of the Chartered Bank of India, 50 shares of the Chartered Mercantile, 6 of the Bombay United Spinning and Weaving Company's shares, 5 Landing and Shipping Company's shares, 6 Bombay Reclamation Company's shares, 10 Apollo Bonded Warehouse Company's shares. The securities were worth nearly a lakh.

6th July 1868.

On the sitting being resumed, the witness said:—

I wish to correct a statement which I made as to Mr. Gavin Steel. I am informed by his representative here that he was not a promoter of the Asiatic Bank, although he was a shareholder, and is also a creditor of the Bank.

Examination continued.—I am referred to a scroll minute as to the loan to Mr. Crawford (marked A 47). It contains a record of the discussion which took place. There was another meeting at which the loan was agreed to. I am referred to a paper as to the Scotch system of advances (marked A 48). The alteration which appears in it is in Mr. Blair's handwriting.

As to Premchund Roychund's loans.

On 1st December 1865 a fixed loan of 9 lakhs was outstanding. On 19th December 1865 he was jointly liable on a discount with Mayabhoy Premabhoy for Rs. 4,50,000. On the 22nd April 1866 he may have overdrawn his account to the amount of Rs. 5,13,000. The accounts are so complicated that I find it impossible to trace them. The fixed loan of 9 lakhs was the renewal of a loan or draft (which I do not know,) dating as far back as December 1864. It is very difficult to trace any of these accounts to their source, there have been so many transfers. As far as I can find, the debt originated in an adjustment of a debt of 25 lakhs, due by Mayabhoy Premabhoy, Muggun Huttising, and Kursondass Madhowdass, of which Premchund Roychund took 9 lakhs upon himself. I believe the bill for Rupees 4,50,000 was a portion of the same debt of 25 lakhs. It was a joint bill with Mayabhoy Premabhoy. I do not know how the overdrawn account arose. Premchund Roychund was well known to all the Directors as a late Director of the Bank of Bombay, and as a very great speculator. I opposed his re-election as a Director of the Bank on the last occasion on this account. We did not allow him to have these large loans without security. 34 shares of the Bombay Reclamation Company were deposited as security for the 9 lakhs loan. I believe 23 Bombay Reclamation Company's shares were deposited in respect of the discount of Rupees 4,50,000. Although it was a transfer, security would be taken if there was doubt about the security of Premchund Roychund. I do not know when those shares were lodged; at the time the security was considered sufficient. Additional security was taken for the 9 lakhs loan, but I cannot say on what date. The Bank has a claim on his estate for 25 lakhs. I know nothing about the overdraft. I look at a letter from Premchund Roychund to Mr. Robertson of 12th June 1865 (marked A 49) which contains the following postscript:—

"P.S. I told Mr. Blair about 5 lakhs of my overdraft, and he told me to keep as long as I like.

I was not aware of any such understanding as that mentioned in the postscript. Previous to April 1866 I am not aware of there being any discussion at the Board as to his account.

On the 26th April 1866 Premchund Roychund made an application to the Bank for 25 lakhs. Mr. Robertson came to me about it. I suggested a meeting of the Directors, and that an account of his liabilities to the Bank of Bombay should be shown; not an account of his general liabilities. In the afternoon of 26th April a meeting of the Board was held. There were present myself, President; Messrs. C. E. Chapman, G. Norman, A. Brown, A. Stewart, and R. L. Tracey. Mr. Macculloch was not present on behalf of Premchund Roychund. Premchund Roychund was not there. Mr. Kelly, our solicitor, I think, was not there. The managers of the following Banks also attended—Mr. Moir, Oriental Bank; Mr. Campbell, Mercantile Bank; Mr. Morison, Asiatic Bank; and Mr. Thomson, Hindostan Bank. We asked them to come, as their Banks were so greatly interested in maintaining Premchund's credit, that we considered they ought to share in making any large loan to him. It was the general impression that he was directly or indirectly indebted to all the Banks. No statement of Premchund's affairs was produced at that Meeting. The Directors had obtained information from their Secretary as to Premchund's account with the Bank of Bombay, but I believe it was insufficient. There was no statement of his affairs produced. Mr. Robertson did not state before those Managers the particulars of his account with us. The Managers of the four Banks represented agreed in the necessity for a loan to Premchund Roychund, and they wished as many as possible of their brother Bankers to attend. I cannot charge my memory with any particular discussion, but it seemed for the advantage of the public and of the Bank that the loan should be made. There would have been a general depreciation of shares and of all mercantile securities if he failed. It was important certainly to make the assistance effectual. The Secretary was instructed to obtain full particulars as to his position, and whether the loan would be sufficient to enable him to maintain his position. We had only a part of this information before us at the meeting. Another meeting was called to meet at my house next morning, at which Premchund Roychund was to attend. No memorandum of any consequence was made as to what took place at the meeting of the afternoon of 26th April. It only came to one definite conclusion, which was to assist him, and the Directors were agreed as to the policy of assisting him. All appear from the minute to have been present except the native Director, Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy. At 7 o'clock on the following morning another meeting was held at my house. The same Directors of the Bank of Bombay, and the same Bank managers were present, and in addition Mr. Beattie, for the Commercial Bank, and Mr. Müller of the Comptoir d'Escompte. Premchund Roychund was present, in the verandah, not in the room, during the discussion. He was frequently communicated with during the discussion by the Secretary, Mr. Robertson, and on one or two occasions, I think, by Mr. Tracey. I sent for Mr. Kelly, the solicitor to the Bank, and he was present. A rough statement of Premchund's affairs was produced. I have not seen it since, and do not know where it is. It was a very rough statement, and was examined. It was not verified in any way, I think. It was taken as true without inquiry, but with some reservation; we had no means of checking it. It was not verified, but I do not think we can be said exactly to have accepted it as true. I should say we put the statement entirely out of question, as we could not act upon it. We acted on the assertion of Premchund Roychund that this advance would be sufficient to carry him through all his difficulties. I do not think we ascertained his position with respect to the other Banks, although the remarks made at the time that they were all interested in keeping him up, was not contradicted, with one exception. They kept their own council as to what was due to them. The single exception was Mr. Müller, who said that he did it from motives of public policy, and not in the interest of his Bank. Securities were offered by Premchund Roychund. A statement, in pencil, I believe, of the value of the securities was produced. The jewels were said to be worth from 15 to 20 lakhs.

The lands were enumerated, and their supposed value, and I think their cost. I put a direct question to Mr. Kelly as to the legal bearings of the loan. The legality of an advance upon land was discussed, I have no doubt. I cannot say whether the clause in the charter prohibiting advances on land was referred to. Means were taken to verify the statement as to the value of lands. The title deeds of nearly all the property enumerated were produced. It appeared that some portion of the property, I think, had been recently purchased. The calculation of the value of the land did not proceed upon the cost of the property mentioned in the title deeds, but on the figures stated in the list. Some of the lands were known to the Directors of the Bank, and to the managers of the other Banks. We reduced the values of the lands in some instances. We did not accept the statement as to the value in two or three cases. We had to adopt the statement as to the value of the jewels. They were not produced. I am not aware that any of the Directors of the Bank of Bombay had seen them. There was a reason for completing the matter at that time; we could not have taken further time to investigate his affairs. We took additional precaution in the interests of the shareholders; viz. a joint promissory note signed by Premchund Roychund, Roychund Deepchund, Candass Narondass, and Cursondass Madhowdass. It was not an afterthought. It was arranged at the meeting. The names of these parties were given by Premchund Roychund at the meeting, and their standing as commercial men was considered at the meeting. A discussion took place as to the proportions in which the other Banks should contribute. They eventually all agreed to contribute. The arrangement ultimately arrived at was that the Bank of Bombay should have these securities vested in it for the benefit of all, and advance the money by open credit. No agreement was entered into as to when the other Banks should advance their respective shares. No minute was made by any Director. The Secretary was present, and should have drawn up the necessary minute.

Question.—Do you consider the interests of the shareholders sufficiently protected by your acting on a statement of Premchund Roychund's affairs which was not verified; by your acting on a statement of the value of his landed property which you only discussed and reduced; by your accepting a statement as to his jewels which you had never seen; by accepting a promissory note which was not then given; and by omitting to take any memorandum of the agreements entered into?

Answer.—I think so. Although no agreement or minute was drawn up, the Solicitor and Secretary were both present there. It was our intention to open credits for him up-country on that day. The Solicitor was instructed to prepare an agreement for immediate signature, and the Secretary was to receive the title deeds and jewels. I cannot say that any paper had been signed when the advance was made. I have no doubt I consulted Mr. Kelly as to the preparation of the agreement. It did occur to me that it ought to be reduced into writing, and I should say it occurred to all the Directors and to the Secretary. I said both to the Secretary and to Mr. Kelly that the agreement must be reduced into writing. I have no doubt my brother directors heard that remark. I have no recollection of what they said. I do not say that they did not respond. They heard the instruction given to reduce the agreement into writing. I supposed Mr. Kelly was taking notes for the agreement, which I found out afterwards was not the case. I believed that the agreement would be reduced into writing in the course of the morning, before any advance was made. I gave instructions to the Secretary to see that it was carried out. I cannot say that I instructed him to see the agreement carried out before the money was parted with. I believed when I left the room that an agreement would be signed in the morning, before the money was parted with. I did not give positive instructions that the money was not to be parted with before the agreement was signed. I inferred that this would be done. I took no steps to see whether it was done until the afternoon of that day or the next morning. I was constantly in and out of the Bank during the day. I urged that the agreement should be at once completed and signed. A great deal of the money had not, I think, been paid by the next morning. Some of it had, I did not know how much. I am not aware that there is anything of this on the minutes, unless it may be on the minutes of the Daily Committee. I do not mean to say that we might not have done better. Our neglect would be in not seeing that the money was retained until the agreement was executed, but we had a confidential Secretary, and a Solicitor of many years connexion with the Bank, and we thought that they might be trusted. I am not aware why the signatures of the Bank managers were not taken afterwards. Many of them have since repudiated the transaction. We had no agreement in writing when we consented to advance the money. I cannot now say that we sufficiently protected the shareholders, although I thought so then. Mr. Tracey was a partner in the firm of Ritchie, Steuart, and Company. Premchund Roychund was their broker. When he failed he did not pull down that firm. It is still standing. Its corresponding firm in England, I believe, compromised with its creditors. Mr. Tracey was not a more influential Director than others. I am not aware of any particular anxiety displayed by him at the time for the loan to be made to Premchund. I do not know when Premchund failed. It might have been in August 1866. I was in England at that date. Part of our object in making this loan was to improve the Bank's position as to previous loans. Another reason was that his failure would have depreciated all property in Bombay, and caused great ruin. I did consider the interests of the shareholders, and was a large shareholder myself. I believe the Bombay Government was communicated with on the afternoon of the same day, before the money had passed out of the Bank's hands. I think Mr. C. E. Chapman and I first waited on the Governor the same afternoon. We did not find him. I believe Mr. Chapman communicated with him otherwise, and so did I, before the whole of the money had been parted with. As far as I know Government was not communicated with before the meeting. I do not know when the advances were made. I believe some advances had been made before Government was communicated with. I communicated with the Governor by letter. I cannot say on what date. No other Government Director but Mr. C. E. Chapman communicated with the Governor to my knowledge. I cannot recollect whether I received an answer from the Governor. I had conversations with him. I cannot say when I first spoke to him about it. I think I saw him the next day. A portion of the money had then been paid. Mr. Chapman may have seen the Governor on the previous afternoon. I think the title deeds of all but one property were deposited on the 27th April, and the rest afterwards. A portion of the jewels was, I think, deposited on the 28th April, the remainder in about a week. I believe that the lands depreciated largely in value afterwards, and did not realise the amount expected. Lands, I think, depreciated 50 per cent. after April 1866. There was a crisis in 1865, and another about a month after this advance. I regret that the advance to Premchund had not a very beneficial effect, because many failures took place at that time for large amounts, and went on increasing with great rapidity. Property had depreciated in value before the loan was made. There was an immense number of insolvents, but their property however had not been forced to a sale. The Collector of Bombay could speak to the depreciation in value of land. I keep a private register of the price of shares, and so do all merchants, I believe. I am not aware that Mr. Tracey had become a guarantee for Premchund, but he had, I believe, pledged the name of his firm for a loan of Premchund's from the Bank of Bombay. I believe the guarantee was then in existence. I am still a considerable shareholder in the Bank of Bombay. I hold some shares for others. The only share which I held at any time in any other company was one share in the Port Canning Company.

I should like to explain that the evidence given by me at this date, 1868, has a very different aspect to what it would have had in 1865 and 1866, when the circumstances of the events now detailed were much fresher in my mind, and a better estimate could have been made of the true value of land, and of shares, and of the position of the Bank's debtors. When I left the Bank in August 1866, the assets were valued very carefully, and the valuation came within 20 lakhs of the paid-up capital; and within two months afterwards an independent Committee of investigation (one of the members being appointed by the Government of India) verified that valuation, and expressed their opinion that it was correct at the time it was made. I think I saw the Governor on the 28th April. I spoke of the loan, and that it was not done on the judgment of the Directors alone, but also on that of the managers of other Banks, and he expressed his approbation of the policy of the Bank in supporting individuals but not as to this particular transaction, of which he could not have detailed knowledge.

To Mr. Melvill.—The control of the Branches was left to the Secretary and the Inspector of Branches. I have not seen any list of discounts furnished by the Agents of Branches. I think the Agent of the Branch at Kalbadevi was called before the Board about May 1866, and questioned; many objectionable loans having come to their knowledge. It had its Agent, but it was directly under the Secretary. It was a distinct branch of the Bank. I observe that by Section 41 of the Act branches can only be established out of Bombay. The question of the establishment of the branch in Bombay was considered, and Mr. Kelly's opinion was taken. I discovered that in the case of Bháu Dáji a loan had been granted at the Branch after it had been refused at the Head Office.

Mr. Lidderdale

Witness recalled.—I remember handing to the Commissioners some correspondence previous to my examination; some copies of my letters to the Governor of Bombay, and three letters from him. I believe I stated in evidence that after failing to see the Governor on the 27th April 1866, I wrote to him and also saw him. I alluded to one of the letters in your possession. [Letters handed to him.] This letter of the 11th May 1866 (marked L 1) was the letter I referred to. From the Governor's reply of the 24th I apprehend that I had sent him another letter of which I have no copy. I cannot find any other letter or copy in my possession. This is his answer (marked L 2). I never communicated with Government or any member of it about any advance by the Bank except about the advances mentioned in the letters before you. I never told anyone that I remembered that I had done so. I do not remember that I ever told anyone that I had obtained the sanction of Government before the loan of 25 lakhs was advanced to Premchund, but if the Commissioners have been so informed I do not think it is inaccurate, because from inquiries which I have been making during the last few days, I believe the Governor was informed of the loan to Premchund before any money had been parted with. I believe I verbally communicated with the Governor at an interview which I now believe I had with him on the day on which the loan was sanctioned, to the best of my belief in the afternoon of that day. I cannot say when it took place. I cannot remember what took place at it. I have refreshed my memory by speaking to other persons. My personal recollection does not serve me. From conversations with others I believe that I left my office in the afternoon of the day of the meeting at which the loan was granted, in order to see the Governor. I was in bad health at the time, and I cannot recollect anything about it. I have inquired in my office whether I left it specially on that day, and one of my clerks says I left my office at 12 o'clock in my own carriage, and my idea is that I must have gone to see the Governor,—but I cannot remember. I did not then attach the importance to it which you do now. I should think no one else was present when I saw the Governor. I have no indication that I mentioned the interview afterwards to any of my co-Directors. Less importance was attached to it probably from the knowledge that he had been communicated with otherwise. I must have gone with the express object of seeing him. I do not think I told Mr. Chapman when I parted from him that I was going to Parell. All I can remember is that I believe myself to have made a special communication to the Governor immediately after the transaction took place, but my mind is a blank sheet regarding it. I did not keep a regular diary at that time. I have searched my papers for further letters without success.

I should like, in justice to Mr. Tracey, to remark that he knew that considerable security had been lodged for Premchund's overdraft.

6 July 1868.

Mr. Ryan.

EDWARD GUNNING RYAN, sworn and examined at the European General Hospital.

I was manager of the Eastern Financial Association. I was appointed in August 1864. I ceased to act on the 25th December 1864. Mr. Watson succeeded me as manager. I remained in the office as Secretary and Accountant after December 1864, up to the closing of the Association. I was at the Dharwar Agency for some time.

I remember the loan for 10 lakhs being obtained from the Bank of Bombay. The negociations were carried on between Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff and Mr. Blair; and Premchund Roychund acted as Broker. The Directors of the Association were :—Alladeen Hubibhoy, Cassum Dhurrumsey, and another Mahomedan, who was asked to resign. I forget his name. Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff was not at first a Director; he claimed to be so. He was an original allottee for 1,000 shares. Premchund Roychund was an allottee for 1,000 shares also. I was not an allottee for 189 shares; they were put in my name. I had just joined the Association before the promissory note for ten lakhs was given. I was Deputy Accountant to the Agra Bank at the time. It was a loan taken from the Bank of Bombay to pay for shares bought from Premchund. He obtained the loan. He was the broker, and Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff was the chief negociator as Director. I saw Mr. Blair, and he declined to grant an advance until a Power of Attorney was registered, enabling me to sign. On the second occasion, when I saw Mr. Blair, I signed the note. I was not asked by him for what the money was wanted, as far as I recollect. The whole matter must have been arranged before I went. I was told by Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff and Premchund Roychund to go to Mr. Blair. They told me they had negociated the loan with the Bank of Bombay, and I was to go and get the amount credited in a current account. They stated it was required to pay for shares. I attended and signed the note, and credit was given in a current account. The sum of eight lakhs was paid to Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff, and it was afterwards paid by him to Premchund Roychund. Pestonjee Cursetjee told me it was wanted for payment of 65 Bombay Reclamation Company's shares. I debited it to Suspense Account, not knowing the details of the shares, and not to Share Investment Account, as Pestonjee Cursetjee told me to do. I thought it was the right way of keeping the books until I could obtain particulars of the shares.

[Points out an entry in the Cash Book (E 3) of the Eastern Financial Association, Limited, "October 18th, 1864, by amount paid to Mr. Pestonjee for Reclamation Shares Rs. 8,00,000."] This entry is in my handwriting.

(Shows counterfoil of cheque for eight lakhs.) This is in my handwriting. On the 20th December the particulars of the purchase of the 65 Shares were entered in Suspense Account. (Points out the entries at page 122 of the Cash Book.) Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff, I believe, handed over the cheque to Premchund. I did not see him do so, but Premchund was pressing for the money. The 65 Bombay Reclamation Company's Shares were resold by the Association for delivery to Premchund Roychund on the 1st July 1865, or some date about that time. The number of each share was entered in the agreement. These sales were entered in a register of shares of the Association. (Points out entry No. 1 in Share List Book of the Eastern Financial Association, Limited, marked E 2.) Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff handed over the share certificates to me in the evening of the day on which he received the cheque, and I believe he obtained them from Premchund during the day. After the shares were purchased, I retained them, and they were resold to Premchund Roychund as a time-bargain for delivery at a certain date, about 1st July 1865. It was a time-bargain. The registry of these sales was made in a detailed account in a Register of Shares sold for time delivery. (Points out entries No. 1 and No. 2 in Share List Book, marked E 2).

How do you know that the cheque for 8 lakhs went into the hands of Premchund Roychund?

I did not see him receive the cheque from Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff, but Pestonjee Cursetjee

6 July 1868.

Mr. Ryan.

Shroff asked me to draw the cheque in order to pay Premchund Roychund. I saw them both afterwards, but never asked them about it. I got the share certificates from Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff. I know they came from Premchund Roychund, but I cannot prove it.

A few days after another cheque was paid to Premchund Roychund through Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff. It was a cheque for 2 lakhs on the Asiatic Bank. There was also a cheque on the East India Bank, which went to pay Premchund Roychund for more shares. As regards the time-bargain transaction, it stood in the name of Premchund Roychund for some time. Afterwards Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff said that another person was the purchaser, and not Premchund Roychund, that is, that the time-bargain as to the shares had been transferred to another person, Cursetjee Furdoonjee. He added that Premchund Roychund would be security for Cursetjee Furdoonjee in case the time-bargain was not taken up.

It was supposed that by a sale of a 2nd issue of shares, sufficient would be realized to repay the Bank of Bombay. I think Rupees 100 had been paid on each share of the original issue; at least that amount had been called up, but not all paid. Premchund Roychund's first call was paid by Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff, and when the shares were at a high premium, Premchund Roychund sold them in the market, and paid Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff.

The value of each share was Rupees 250, I think. The second issue was made when only Rupees 100 had been called up, and with the proceeds of the sale the Directors of the Association intended to pay the Bombay Bank. The sale took place in January 1865. Half the new issue went to old shareholders, and 12,500 shares were put up to auction. There were some bonâ fide purchasers, but they took a very small number. Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff nominally bought several thousand shares at an average of 45 per cent. premium. He did not pay, but the call was debited to his account in the books of our Company. He did it to rig the market. The Eastern Financial Association sued Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff, and their claim was thrown out, the Court holding that there was a corrupt agreement between Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff and the other directors to rig the market. A very small amount was realized by the sale. The whole of the first and second calls in the original issue were paid, but not all the third. The loan of 10 lakhs was renewed. There was a delay of a day or two. Premchund Roychund effected the renewal. I am sure of it. Premchund Roychund was not often at our office, but all our transactions with him were effected at the office of Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff. Eventually Cursetjee Furdoonjee was registered for the time-bargains. Premchund Roychund does not dispute the fact that he sold them to him.

A cash credit was opened with the Bank of Bombay for 2 lakhs on 27th January 1865. That was under Mr. Watson's management. The two lakhs were required for the purchase of shares. That was the principal business of the Eastern Financial. It was paid off by a loan from the Hindostan Bank. A new cash credit was opened on the 16th March 1865. I know nothing about this.

When Cursetjee Furdoonjee failed, the Eastern Financial Association, in order to enforce Premchund's guarantee, registered the sales in Premchund's name on the 3rd December 1864.

ROWLAND HAMILTON, sworn.

I am one of the Liquidators of the Eastern Financial Association. There were three originally, and now only two; Nusserwanjee Ardaser Wadia is the other. I was appointed towards the end of 1865, and first acted 12th December 1865. The Association failed in July 1865. There was a great amount of action backwards and forwards. It was first put under the Court, and that was not acted on. There was great doubt as to the validity of the orders that were made. This accounts for my not acting till December 1865. From the failure till liquidation, Mr. Watson, the manager, had charge of the books, and Mr. Ryan was Secretary. The Company was registered about the 24th August 1864. Its chief employment of its capital was in buying and selling shares; and it borrowed money and received money on deposit, and entered into time-bargains to a large extent; that is, it sold for future delivery the shares it had purchased. The nominal capital was one million, divided into 25,000 shares of 400 Rupees each, 100 Rupees a share being paid up. The sum of 100 Rupees was paid up on very nearly all the shares. The total capital paid up on the first issue was 24,36,000 Rupees in two calls, the first of 50 Rupees a share, and the second of 50 Rupees a share, in November 1864. The second call was not paid on 1,280 shares. The shares of the first issue rose to a premium of 70 per cent. A second issue of shares was resolved on, of the same nominal amount of capital of one million; half the shares to be issued to shareholders, one new to two old, and half the shares to be sold by auction. 100 Rupees was to be paid up at once on each share. I cannot say whether it was usual in Bombay in those days to issue new shares before the original capital had been called up. There was no formal register kept of shares purchased; there was one being written up by Mr. Watson at the time of the failure. It was not so complete that we could act upon it, but it was stopped by seizure of the books under legal process. There is a register of the shares held in the Association by its shareholders. The names of the Directors appear in the Articles of Association. I do not know them.

I am referred to the name of Premchund Roychund in the Register. He held 1,000 shares in the first issue, and 500 in the new one, according to this ledger. Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff had originally 1,000 shares of the original issue, and paid the calls on them. He had 7,205 of the second issue. He was a steady buyer of them from January to June 1865, and bought a great many in May. He paid the calls in account. He was debited with them. His account is an exceedingly complicated one. Alladeen Hubibhoy was one of the first Directors. He had 500 shares. Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff was not at first a Director. I do not know when he was elected. Kessowjee Naik was also a Director. He had 500 shares originally. He purchased others subsequently. He paid up his calls. Cassum Dhurrumsey was also a Director; he had 550 shares paid up. I have found only a small number of European names amongst the shareholders. I find only Mr. Rodgie of the officers of the Bank of Bombay as a shareholder of the Association. He had seven shares. Mr. Blair and Mr. Robertson were not, I believe, shareholders of the Association. There is a list of time bargains. It is not a formally kept book [produces it]. The correspondence is very scanty; the books were only fairly commenced on the 1st January 1865. I do not know who were the promoters of the Association. Four annas and a half in the rupee have been paid as dividend. A compromise of six annas in the rupee has been agreed on for every one who will demand it. Four annas and a half have been paid or reserved to outside creditors. They will get the rest up to six annas in the rupee. I have sent in a claim against Premchund Roychund's estate. There were five lakhs taken by him, in two sums of four lakhs and one lakh. They appear in the cash book which I produce. [Reads]:—

"16th November 1864, earnest money paid Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff for purchase of land Rupees 1,00,000.

"Ditto, ditto Premchund Roychund, ditto Rupees 4,00,000."

These entries relate to the Frere Land Reclamation Company. I am referred to my account against Premchund Roychund's Trustees. I debited him with those sums and interest in the claim. The whole claim against his estate was twenty-two lakhs and upwards. The entire paid-up capital of the Association was about Rupees 32,00,000. The first loan was for three lakhs, in respect of shares purchased for Premchund Roychund, and his one-fifth portion in a joint transaction in the United Victoria and Colaba shares. Those were the principal items; a little short of three lakhs. There was security, and we obtained the amount in full. The next matter was the five lakhs; it was very difficult to trace. The entries were made by Mr. Ryan and his subordinates, I believe, at the dictation of Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff. I never took the books without corroboration. I believe the Cash Book, although very irregular, is honestly kept, and it has been gone through by an Accountant. We recovered the five lakhs. Premchund Roychund tried to avoid it, but he gave a promissory note in 1866, secured by shares. We took his note for six lakhs, and we got 600 Bank of Guzerat shares from him, and we set it off ultimately against a debt of six lakhs owing by the Association to the Bank of Guzerat. The third loan relates to 65 Bombay Reclamation Company's shares purchased. There was a dispute about it, and the Liquidators held that Premchund Roychund had guaranteed the transaction. We were prepared to commence proceedings against Premchund rather than against Cursetjee Furdoonjee, until Premchund failed, and it was understood that there was nothing for unsecured creditors. We therefore abandoned our suit against him, and sued Cursetjee Furdoonjee's estate, which yields a much better dividend than Premchund's estate. We did not substantiate our case, except as to ten shares out of the (65) sixty-five. The case was tried in the High Court before Sir Joseph Arnould. We gave notice of appeal, and it was finally compromised for a much larger sum than the amount of the verdict.

7 July 1868.
Mr. Hamilton.

Premchund's debt of twenty-two lakhs and upwards was made up by these debts which I have mentioned. Only five lakhs were paid to him out of the funds of the Association.

F. A. Spencer and Rughoonath Narayen are the Liquidators, and Mr. Shaw is manager, of the Bombay Joint Stock Corporation.

7th July 1868.

WILLIAM WATSON, sworn.

Mr. Watson.

I was manager of the Eastern Financial Association. I was appointed in October 1864, and entered upon my duties in January 1865. I came to Bombay in November 1864. I took no part in the management then; Mr. Ryan was then Acting Manager. Kessowjee Naik, Alladeen Hubibhoy, Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff, Cassum Dhurrumsey, and Rahim Alladeen were the Directors. Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff bought most of the shares for the Association after I became Manager. We bought from any broker; we had no special broker. Premchund Roychund was not directly employed. I cannot say whether he was employed indirectly. I heard Mr. Hamilton's evidence as to the second issue of shares, and the amount paid up on them. The second issue was made. The old shares were at about 80 premium. On the 22nd December 1864 a resolution was passed at a meeting of shareholders to issue new capital. It was resolved to give half the new shares to the shareholders, and to sell the other half by auction. The sale took place in January 1865. I cannot say Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff was employed to rig the market. I have read Sir R. Couch's judgment in which that is stated. I believed that Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff had bought the shares on his own account bonâ fide. I gave evidence to that effect, but Sir R. Couch did not hold that view. I attended the sale. I heard Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff bid for, and buy the shares. He was a Director at that time. He did not pay the calls on those shares. He gave his promissory note. I still thought it a bonâ fide purchase by him.

He did not pay the deposit according to the conditions of sale. He was in good credit, and I expected that he would gradually sell his shares, and pay. There were some bonâ fide buyers who paid the deposits. The shares of those who did not were not forfeited agreeably to the conditions of sale. The Association did not appeal from that judgment; notice of appeal was given, but afterwards withdrawn. On the second issue of shares a total sum of Rupees 12,47,250 was paid up. As the result of the sale Rupees 1,65,000 were received, and there was paid up by the shareholders on their allotments Rs. 10,82,000. The Directors paid their calls on that second allotment. I know nothing of the origin of the loan of ten lacs from the Bank of Bombay. I had to renew it in the course of my duty. I ascertained from the books how the money had gone. I did not ascertain how it was obtained. I believe it was given by the Bank of Bombay in the belief that the Association was good for that amount. According to the books the ten lacs were applied in the purchase of Bombay Reclamation Company's shares. I cannot say whether 65 shares, or what number.

I turn to the item of 8 lakhs in Cash Book (marked E 3). An interlineation appears as follows:—

"18th October 1864. Paid to Mr. Pestonjee for Reclamation shares Rs. 8,00,000."

It is in Mr. Ryan's handwriting. I think it must have been entered within the month, because the total is correct. Pestonjee must have bought from a broker. I believe the greater part of the Bombay Reclamation Company's shares purchased by the Association were bought from Premchund Roychund. The money was first carried to a Suspense Account. The money was given to Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff to buy the shares with. The eight lakhs were carried to a Suspense Account, because the details of the shares bought were not known. (Points out entries at page 232, Book E 3, headed "Share Purchase B Account," and entries at page 172, Book E 3, headed "Premium on Stock Account B a c.") These entries show the total cost to the Association of the 65 Bombay Reclamation Company's shares, divided into the amount paid up on the shares for the first call, and the amount paid as premium.

I am referred to a list of the Bombay Reclamation Company's shares sold for future delivery by the Association, in the Share List Book of the Association for the years 1864, 1865 (entry No. 1 Book E 2), they having been bought of Premchund in November 1864; they were re-sold and entered here. They are entered in the name of Cursetjee Furdoonjee. The contract for the sale by the Association of these shares was originally in the name of Premchund Roychund, but he stated that he was not the real purchaser, and that the shares having gone up, the real purchasers, Cursetjee Furdoonjee and others, wished the contracts to be made in their own names. That was done, and the Directors held that Premchund Roychund guaranteed the transaction. They were first bought for cash by the Association, and then sold for future delivery to Premchund Roychund, as we thought, but really to Cursetjee Furdoonjee. I am telling what I found out. It was before I joined the Association.

Mr. Watson.

I turn to the next page in the Share List Book (entry No. 2 Book E 2). We had the duplicate contracts, and we re-entered the shares in Premchund Roychund's name. It was done by the Directors' orders. There was no transfer from Cursetjee Furdoonjee to him, but we considered that Premchund guaranteed the sale, and we thought it safe to enter them in his name as well. The other two lakhs went in the same way as the eight lakhs. The Association borrowed five lakhs from the Asiatic Bank, five lakhs from the Central Bank, five lakhs from Hindostan Bank, and three lakhs from the East India Bank. I see entries of one lakh and four lakhs in this book on November 16th, 1864 (marked E 3). They relate to the same transaction as the entry of the loan of five lakhs on 14th November to Premchund Roychund in this other book (marked E 4). He admitted it and gave a bill for the amounts. It was at first paid for earnest money, I understand, on account of the Frere Land Company. I look upon it as a payment for which Premchund Roychund was responsible; the money had gone to him. I have heard that there was a receipt for the money, but I have never seen it. I have investigated the transaction as far as I can. The Association became entitled to a share of the purchase money for the lands; it must have gone through the hands of Premchund to purchase the lands. I do not know this of my own knowledge. I do not know the land. I do not know whether the transaction was ever completed or not. We have held it as due by Premchund Roychund, and that he was accountable for the money. I believe the payment secured to the Association a share in the profit of the purchase money of the land. There are no papers about it.

When the ten lakhs became due on 18th January 1865, I asked Mr. Robertson at the Bank of Bombay to renew the loan. I spoke about it first to Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff. I do not know whether he had done anything about it. Mr. Blair was absent from Bombay, I believe. Mr. Robertson at once agreed to renew the bills; he made no difficulty. He asked for no security. I believe Premchund Roychund asked for the loan, and was thought to be connected with the Association, and that the Bank of Bombay therefore thought the Association was good for the amount. I think the bill was renewed on the 21st January at the end of the three days' grace. On the 27th January 1865 I negociated a loan for two lakhs with the Bank of Bombay at one month, at 13 per cent. I signed a promissory note for the Eastern Financial Association. Mr. Blair was still out of Bombay. I saw Mr. Robertson about it. It did not transpire that Mr. Blair had been spoken to about it by any one. There was no difficulty made about the advance. Mr. Robertson did not ask me what was to be done with the money. Mr. Robertson did not refer to any Director before renewing the loan. The ten lakhs loan was not referred to. The two lakhs went to Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff, I believe. It went I believe to his own private account. He had an account with the Association. He drew on the Association, and we drew on the Bank of Bombay. The two lakhs were not applied to the purchase of shares for the Association. The amount was afterwards paid by the Bank of Hindostan. Mr. Ryland was then the Manager of the Bank of Hindostan. He had been speculating largely, I believe. The money was not borrowed from the Bank of Bombay for Mr. Ryland's use.

On the 16th March 1865 I negociated another advance with Mr. Robertson for two lakhs for fifteen days. I think Mr. Blair was absent. The Bank of Bombay called it a cash credit, but credited it to our Account Current. I may have given the assurance that the Association would repay it in fifteen days. Payment was not pressed for. I find on the 18th March 1865 there was a payment of two lakhs through the hands of Premchund Roychund to the Bank of Surat. Premchund Roychund was almost a Dictator in the Bank of Surat. On 16th March 1865 I did not tell Mr. Robertson that the Association intended to apply within a few days at the Kurrachee Branch for Rupees 2,20,000, and at the Surat Branch for 2 lakhs. The Association had branches at Kurrachee and Surat, and credit was pretty far gone in Bombay in March 1865. A great fall had taken place in shares. The Association had large advances, and we thought it would be impossible to renew them again in Bombay for the full amount. We thought if we could get funds from the Branches, and pay on account, our advances might be renewed to some extent. We asked our Agents whether they could sell their drafts on us at 2 or 3 months' sight, and send us funds. We did not ask them whether they could sell our bills to the Branches of the Bank of Bombay. We sent them instructions. We did not think we could get credit for Rupees 4,20,000. We therefore tried the Branches. It was to pay advances in Bombay. We did not pay anything to the Bank of Bombay. We were pressed by other banks.

Question.—Would it not have been a more legitimate transaction to go to the Head Office of the Bank of Bombay, and negociate the loan here?

Answer.—They would not have done it, and we did not know that they would do it at the Branches. Our Agents addressed themselves to the country Agents of the Bank of Bombay. The bill for ten lakhs became due on the 24th April 1865, and the Bank of Bombay refused to renew it for the full sum. They asked for payment of 2 lakhs. The Association could not pay it, and they received security from the Association; five Bombay Reclamation Company's shares, twenty Elphinstone Company's shares, and twenty new ditto, and other securities were deposited with the Bank of Bombay. The value of the securities was Rupees 2,49,500. I spoke to Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff. He did not go himself. He said that Premchund Roychund would see and get it arranged. I said we expected to get some money in. I am quite sure I did not offer to pay any.

I look at this letter shown to me (marked E 5). I must have sent some money to the Bank of Bombay on the 24th April 1865.

Question.—How was it that Rupees 1,25,000 was refused by the Bank of Bombay?

Answer.—We paid 1,40,000 to the credit of our current account with the Bank of Bombay; not on account of the 10 lakhs bill as appears from our Pass Book. I did not remember the letter when I spoke. I cannot explain the matter. I think we hoped to reduce the bill also.

President.—You were in funds on the current deposit account. Why did the money go to the credit of that account instead of on account of the bill for 10 lakhs? You had three lakhs to the credit of the current deposit account when the Rupees 1,40,000 were paid in? By whose instrumentality was that arranged?

Answer.—I should like to look at the Pass Book. (After looking at it.) We were not in funds, if the past due cash credit is taken into consideration. I believe the Rs. 1,40,000 was paid to reduce the cash credit. The bill for 10 lakhs remained past due with these securities held for it. There were some letters about it.

To Mr. Melvill.—I overdrew my account with the Bank of Bombay to the amount of 20,000 Rupees. I paid 2,000 Rupees in cash, and handed over some shares, and they compromised the debt. In September 1864 I was a Manager of a Branch of the Bank of Bombay. Mr. Robertson allowed me to overdraw. Mr. Blair was absent up-country. I was not an officer of the Bank of Bombay when I was allowed to overdraw.

To the President.—There is no register showing from whom shares were bought. Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff bought most of the shares, and acted as a broker. I do not know that there was any desire to keep back the names. I was preparing such a register before the failure of the Association. I believe it was being prepared in March, but we could not find the names of the sellers from the books, as to shares purchased through Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff.

7 July 1868.

Mr. Watson.

After an adjournment for a short time, on the re-assembling of the Commissioners, the witness added—

I wish to state that the Liquidators were of opinion after they took charge that the creditors of the Association would be paid in full. I produce a bundle of letters and memoranda received by me (marked E 6). Some of them are private ones.

20th July 1868.

20 July 1868.

Mr. Watson.

William Watson, recalled.—I look at a letter from Mr. Maclean to me of the 9th January 1865, taken from the bundle of letters (marked E 6) which I handed in at my former examination. (After reading it.) He must have had a speculation in Eastern Financial shares, and imagined that I knew of it. It was not a speculation in which I was interested with him. It is true that the letter does not mention Eastern Financial shares. I was the manager of that Company, and suppose he referred to shares in the Company. It is only a surmise.

I look at another letter shown to me, of 3rd February 1865. I received that letter from Mr. Robertson. The word "Madras" is a mistake. It should be "Surat." Mr. Blair and Mr. Robertson both had allotments in the Bank of Surat, and the Eastern Financial Association received the calls on Bank of Surat shares.

I also received from Mr. Robertson these two letters of 31st January and February 1865, relating to those allotments.

7 July 1868.

Mr. Best.

WILLIAM JAMES BEST, sworn.

I am an Exchange Broker. Forrest Loudon Brown joined me in partnership in 1864. My partner Mr. Grant died, and Mr. Brown succeeded him; he was chosen by Mr. Grant's Executor in my absence to carry on my business, and I confirmed that arrangement. I think he was an Exchange Broker for six months before. He was an Assistant formerly in the establishment of Smith, Elder and Company, Booksellers. I do not know when.

This is our Ledger of share operations (marked F 1). We only keep a book of daily transactions. Share buying was not our business; our books would not show for whom we bought and sold shares. Mr. Brown is in Scotland. We address him 19, Cumberland Place, Glasgow. Both he and I bought and sold shares principally on our own account. We each worked privately and separately in shares, not as a firm.

I produce Mr. Brown's book of his transactions (marked F 2). My own is in England. There is little or no information in it. I know nothing of the bills for Rs. 60,000 or Rs. 30,000 given to the Bank of Bombay by Mr. Brown jointly with other parties. I have not come to know anything about them in the course of my business. When I obtained from the Bank of Bombay the large loan of Rs. 2,50,000 jointly with Mr. Brown on the 25th February 1865, I did not know of those other loans to him. I went to the Bank of Bombay and asked for the loan of Rs. 2,50,000, which I obtained. I have heard since that there was a recommendation. I first heard of that two days ago. I made the first application, not Mr. Brown. (Looks at letter of 24th February 1865 from Mr. Brown to Mr. Robertson.) I did not know before that Mr. Brown had previously written this letter. I applied to the Manager for the loan and my impression is that he said "certainly." I do not remember that any party told Mr. Robertson that he might apply to him. There was no security lodged with the Bank. I presume Mr. Robertson thought it a good operation lending on my simple request without security. He knew that I was buying or had bought fifty Port Canning shares on speculation. The shares cost nearly five lakhs of Rupees. I probably saw the Directors of the Bank of Bombay every day, but I do not know of any recommendation being given on my account. I do not remember ever doing any share business for either Mr. Blair or Mr. Robertson. We only did share business for our friends for large amounts. We used to do business for the Bank of Bombay every day. I do not remember doing any business for any officials of the Bank individually. The loan was for fourteen days. I do not remember what took place at the end of that time. It must have been held over or renewed.

I think the shares were deposited with the Bank when the loan was renewed, forty-six shares, then worth four lakhs. The present value is about Rs. 300 a share. I do not remember when the new Bond was taken from us, whether when the shares were lodged or later. Our firm never had liabilities. Both Mr. Brown and I made private arrangements with our creditors. Mr. Brown's liabilities were, I think, from 40 to 43 lakhs. He had been speculating largely on his own account. I do not know of an instance in which he concealed the name of any person for whom he acted with respect to any loan from any Bank. I do not know of my own knowledge of his taking any shares in his own name for any other person. He laid a statement before his creditors. I attended the meeting of his creditors. I produce the minute of that meeting (marked F 3). Many of the Banks were interested as creditors. Mr. Campbell, of the Mercantile Bank, moved a resolution. I believe it was seconded by Mr. Macculloch of the City Bank. I have no copy of Mr. Brown's statement. I do not know where the original is. I do not believe that there is a copy in Bombay. Mr. Robertson was the sole trustee of the estate. He handed over to me the book (marked F 2) and the minute (marked F 3) and he said he had handed over all the papers.

That must be the original minute which I have handed in. There were not two meetings of Mr. Brown's creditors so far as I know. I do not know of any second meeting, I have searched through Mr. Brown's papers. There appear to be scarcely any other creditors but Managers of Banks and Financial Associations.

I produce the daily register of our transactions from 1st August 1863 down to the year 1866 (marked F 4). The liabilities were for loans from the Banks. We obtained such loans for ourselves, both of us. I always gave security. The security was verbally given when the loan of Rs. 2,50,000 was obtained. The security was not lodged. There were other creditors not present at the meeting. All agreed to the resolution. I do not remember an adjournment being proposed. Shortly afterwards the release was given. Mr. Brown may have bought shares for Bank Managers in his own name in some instances, but never for any official of the Bank of Bombay. I cannot tell you of my own knowledge that Brown did this for anybody. If you let me look at his book I will tell you. I see Mr. Davison's name in the book (marked F 2). He was a Bank Manager. Mr. Brown was not in the habit of buying for Bank Directors. It is very likely he did occasionally. I do not know of any purchase which would affect any Bank Managers so as to make them unwilling to have it exposed. I can account for Brown being released by there being a general impression that he ought not to be harassed any more.

Question.—How had he been harassed: he had called his creditors together but a fortnight before, had he not?

Answer.—Yes.

I have had joint operations with some Bank Managers, with Mr. Morrison of the Asiatic Bank. Never with Mr. Blair. Never to the best of my belief with Mr. Robertson. I was an intimate friend of theirs. I think I should have heard if Mr. Brown had had any transactions with them.

Question.—Were there any operations with any other Bank official that you know of?

Answer.—The transaction for which the Rs. 2,50,000 were obtained from the Bank of Bombay was a joint transaction in Port Canning Company's shares between Mr. Tracey, Mr. Brown, and myself. The transaction is entered in page 53 of this book (marked F 1). Mr. Tracey had no connexion with the loan. You will see that the sum of Rupees 1,50,000 was found by Mr. Tracey. I found the other Rs. one lakh, and the loan supplied the rest. Mr. Tracey knew that the loan had been obtained. The transaction was on the 25th February 1865. I do not know that Mr. Tracey was a Director of the Bank of Bombay at that time.

President.—He was elected on 26th January 1865.

Question.—To your knowledge did Mr. Tracey recommend you to the Bank of Bombay?

Answer.—Not to my certain knowledge. I think that it is very likely that he did. I have no doubt that he did.

I should like to state that the transaction with Mr. Morrison was a trifling one in Commercial Bank shares.

24th July 1868.

Mr. Best.

W. J. Best, recalled.—I look at page 55 of the book of my partnership transactions (F 1). I do not know to whom the initials here refer without examining the entries. (Looks at page 55 for some time.) I cannot say at present to whom they refer. I am referred to the Index. I see the same initials there. I do not remember the transaction, and I do not know for whom the initials stand. I do not think that "T" stands for "Tracey." The fact that Premchund Roychund paid Rs. 1,62,000 and took the shares does not recall it to my mind; the R is separate from the T. I do not know who P. C. M. stands for. I do not know anybody with those initials, the entries on both sides of page 55 are in Mr. F. L. Brown's handwriting. It is evident that the names are not shown. If we were acting as confidential Agents, I do not see any necessity for the names being shown. It is not my experience that where there is concealment there is generally something wrong. I conceal all I do as a Broker. The names might as well have been entered in our books; no one could have seen our books if this Commission had not been instituted.

I am referred to an entry in Book F 4 relating to Byramjee Hormusjee Cama on the 9th February 1865. This is incorrectly entered. Byramjee Hormusjee Cama was to pay the brokerage. One hundred and fifty Port Canning shares were sold to him, and he was to pay the brokerage. "From" means the brokerage was to come from him. I explain "J. G." to be the seller. I always understood Byramjee Hormusjee Cama to be the buyer. He is entered in the first column here, as he was to pay the brokerage. I had nothing to do with the transaction. This entry is not made by me. I was not accustomed to look at these books.

I signed the deed of release to my partner Brown, now produced. I cannot say that I read it all through.

[President reads recitals to the effect that Mr. Brown had become indebted in the course of his trade and business as a Broker to the several persons, Corporations, and Firms named in the Schedule annexed to the Deed, marked A, and was unable to pay in full the debts mentioned in the Schedule.]

Examination continued.—His debts were contracted whilst he was carrying on business as a Broker. Of course they were not debts on account of that business. I suppose the Schedule A is in Mr. Brown's possession. I have no doubt there is such a Schedule. I will not swear that there was any Schedule. The signatures show to whom he was indebted.

I have received a letter from Mr. Brown in which he says he did not receive any portion of the money advanced on the note signed by him, Mr. C. F. Heycock, and Venayek Pandoorung, and that he only gave his name to oblige them.

In my previous evidence I said that I was not aware of any joint transaction in which any Bank Manager was engaged with us. It is not a pleasant thing to have to say, but I find there was a loan for Rupees 10,000 or Rupees 11,000 to Mr. Macculloch of the City Bank, for which we signed; he was not an intimate friend of ours; we had no consideration for signing.

After a short adjournment, on the re-assembling of the Commissioners, witness added—

I wish to make a correction of my statement of this morning. Byramjee Hormusjee Cama was the seller of the one hundred and fifty Port Canning shares. I have only ascertained that by referring to Mr. John Gordon, who I supposed was the broker, but who appears to have been the buyer; the transaction however was disputed by him. I produce a letter from Mr. Gordon as to the entry in Book F 4. I have been making inquiries since I was examined this morning about the initials which appear in that entry, but I cannot explain them.

ROBERT CLARKE, sworn.

I came out to the Bank of Bombay as Senior Assistant in 1865. I am referred to the Statement at page 114 of the Blue Book. I remember seeing a form like this in writing in the Bank of Bombay. It was at the beginning of 1866. The form had been prepared for Mr. F. S. Chapman, not signed by him. The scroll of it was prepared by Mr. Robertson, the Officiating Secretary of the Bank. I received directions to make a fair copy of it. I made a fair copy, and handed both to Mr. Robertson.

Mr. Steel.

WILLIAM STEEL, sworn.

I am the Agent in Bombay of the Liquidator of the Asiatic Banking Corporation; it is in liquidation in the Court of Chancery in England. I was appointed Agent here last March. The Register of Shareholders of the Company is in the Court in England. I have not a single paper relating to the shares. Mr. Michael Scott, a partner in the firm of Ritchie, Steuart, and Company, was a promoter of the Corporation. I have not any minutes of the Consulting Committee of the Corporation. I do not think any minutes were kept. I was at one or two of the first meetings myself; they were entirely oral. I do not know whether that is usual in Bombay. The nominal capital was one million with power to increase to two millions; there were two issues of shares, the first for 500,000*l.* fully paid up, the second issue for 500,000*l.* but only half paid up.

The Consulting Committee originally were Mr. Michael Scott, Mr. Robert Hannay, and Mr. Cowasjee Jehangeer. I do not know what subsequent changes took place in it. The newspapers of the day would show. Mr. Baker the Sub-agent, and Mr. Barker, a clerk in the Bank, will be able to give more information on the subject. Mr. Gavin Steel never was a member of it. Mr. Tracey may have been. I cannot say with certainty. Mr. Alexander Stewart was not.

8 July 1868.
Mr. Steel.

I produce the printed list (marked G 1) of contributories of the Corporation. Mr. Blair is a contributory for one hundred and fifty old shares and one hundred and seventy-five of the second issue. Mr. Robertson is also a contributory for twenty old and forty new shares. Mr. Ryland and Mr. Rodgie are not contributories. Mr. Maclean is down as a contributory for three hundred and forty-five old shares. Mr. Birch is a contributory also for one hundred new shares. This list came to me from the Liquidator in the course of business. There is a regular official list in my custody. The shares deposited by the Asiatic Banking Corporation as security with the Bank of Bombay are not all realized. The balance of the debt now due is Rs. 9,50,000; the rest of the securities will, I think, realize from three to three and a half lakhs. Many of the Asiatic Bank shares have got into fictitious names, I believe. The Corporation went into liquidation in October 1866. It has not yet paid a dividend. The calls are responded to very badly. The liquidation is not a promising one. Mr. Blair and Mr. Robertson have private accounts with the Asiatic Banking Corporation.

William Steel comes forward and says—I was asked in my examination whether the Asiatic Bank had paid anything to its creditors. We have paid some compromises, one was with the Bombay Reclamation Company for a considerable amount, but we have not paid anything to the general creditors.

ROBERT HOSIER BAKER, sworn.

I was Sub-Agent in Bombay of the Asiatic Banking Corporation. I was Accountant at first. I was made Sub-Agent at the end of 1864. Mr. Anthony Morrison was the Agent of the Corporation in Bombay. He is now in England. I was employed in the Corporation throughout its existence. The Directors in England were Mr. Boykett, Chairman, Mr. Russell, Mr. Fearon, Mr. Cardwell, and another. Afterwards Mr. Michael Scott and Mr. S. D. Birch joined the direction in England. Mr. M. Scott, Mr. R. Hannay, and Mr. Cowasjee Jehangeer were the promoters and first Consulting Committee in Bombay of the Corporation. Cowasjee Jehangeer resigned very soon after the Bank opened, and Mr. Scott went home at the end of 1864. Mr. Hannay was then left alone. No one else was appointed. Mr. Hannay went home, I think, in the spring of 1866, and Mr. Scott came out shortly afterwards, in June 1866, I believe. I think after his return he became a Director of the Bank of Bombay. After the Asiatic Bank opened, the Consulting Committee used to meet, but it soon discontinued that practice, and Mr. Morrison used to consult Mr. Scott or Mr. Hannay. Originally the Bank was started in Bombay as the Bombay Joint Stock Bank. I do not know who were the original shareholders. There was a new deed made for the Asiatic Bank. Mr. Blair and Mr. Robertson were original shareholders. Mr. Rodgie was not. Mr. Maclean was not a shareholder in his own right. The shares in his name are not his own property. He holds them for the Bank of Bombay. I believe they were placed in his name in consequence of Mr. Anstey's decision. Mr. Birch became a shareholder when the second issue was made in order to qualify himself to be a Director. The second issue was made, I think, in February 1865. The Corporation was promoted about fifteen months before the Bombay Reclamation Company's was created, but it became connected with that Company. The Asiatic Banking Corporation received from that Company one million, its subscribed capital, and one million from the sale by auction of some of its shares. Mr. Morrison negociated the overdrafts with the Directors of the Bank of Bombay. He attended some of their meetings.

GEORGE RAMSEY WILSON, sworn.

I am the Liquidator of the Alliance Financial Association, Limited, and produce its books. Its Capital was ten millions of Rupees, divided into shares of 400 Rupees each, with 100 Rupees per share paid up. There was only one issue of shares. The Company was registered at the end of 1864. Dr. Thomas Diver, Chairman, Atmaram Madhowjee, Hurbhum Nursey, Gellabhoy Puddumsey, Sewjee Welljee, and afterwards George Taylor, were its Directors. I know that a few of the officials of Bombay Banks were shareholders in the Association. I am not prepared to say that most of the Bombay Banks are represented in the share list. I turn to the Register of Shareholders. Mr. Robertson was an allottee of shares in the Association. Mr. Blair also had 30 shares allotted to him. Mr. Ryland was an allottee of 25 shares. Gopall Shaba Senoy of the Bank of Bombay had five shares. Balkisondass Vizbookundass, of the Kalbadevi Branch of the Bank of Bombay had five shares. Mr. Nicholson, of the Chartered Mercantile Bank, was an allottee in the Association. The following names also appear in the Register as allottees of shares in the Association:—Mr. D. A. Christie, of the Indian Peninsular Bank; Mr. Dickson, of the same Bank; Mr. McNeil, of the Oriental Bank; Mr. Macpherson, of the Bank of India; Mr. Flinders, of the Agra Bank; Mr. Sudanund Mooncoondjee, of the same Bank; Gunoo Babajee, of the same Bank; Mr. E. H. Wallace, of the East India Bank; Mr. Pringle of the Presidency Bank; Mr. G. H. Warren, of the Royal Bank; Pandoorung Antoba, of the Agra Bank; Mr. J. R. Davison, of the City Bank; Chabuldass Permanundass, of the Agra Bank; Anundrow Sudasheo, of the Royal Bank; Cursetjee Dhunjeebhoy, of the Central Bank; Mr. de Quadros, of the Commercial Bank;

Mr. H. Wilson, of the Oriental Bank; Juggonath Pandoorung, of the Royal Bank; Bhasker Naronjee, of the same Bank; Mr. E. Heycock, of the Central Bank; Mr. W. C. Currie, of the East India Bank; Mr. W. F. Wiesche, of the Alliance Bank; Mr. J. Smith, of the Financial Association of India and China; Mr. A. Morrison, of the Asiatic Bank; Cursetjee Merwanjee, of the Alliance Bank. It does appear that allotments were given to nearly all the Bank Officers in Bombay.

Premchund Roychund had 1,000 shares in the Association. The Directors of the Deccan Cotton Cleaning Company were nearly the same as the Directors of this Company, but I am not aware of any connexion between them. Mr. Cooper was a shareholder of the Association. The Native Directors know most of the Association's affairs. Dr. Diver attended, I believe, regularly. I do not know that Mr. Taylor took an active interest in its affairs. I know nothing of the circumstances under which advances were made to the Association by the Bank of Bombay.

I am not aware of the offers made on the 3rd April and 19th June 1866 to the Bank of Bombay by the Association for a compromise. I took charge in August 1866. I am aware of a general compromise with all the creditors for six annas in the Rupee, including the Bank of Bombay. Four annas have been paid on account. I am referred to a minute of 14th December 1866 (marked A 49) circulated by Mr. Robertson amongst the Directors of the Bank of Bombay. The statement that many of the shareholders of the Association are clerks on small salaries, menial servants, and Police Sepoys, is perfectly true.

Mr. Venayek Pandoorung.

VENAYEK PANDOORUNG, affirmed.

I signed a bill with Mr. C. F. Heycock and Mr. Brown to the Bank of Bombay. There was no security given. Mr. Brown applied for the loan, and next morning Mr. Heycock said three names were necessary. I lent my name at Mr. Heycock's request. I know that Mr. Heycock said they wanted to pay for Bank of India shares. I do not know by whose recommendation the loan was made when the bill fell due. Mr. Brown said it would be renewed on payment of 5,000 Rupees. Mr. C. F. Heycock was a merchant, and the son of Mr. E. Heycock of the Central Bank. He has bolted, I believe.

I offered Mr. Robertson 8 annas in the Rupee—that was refused, and I took the benefit of Act XXVIII. of 1865.

To Mr. Melvill.—I used to do a large business in Cotton and other goods at the time of the loan.

I know Premchund Roychund, but I do not know that I was recommended by him to the Bank of Bombay for the loan.

Venayek Pandoorung comes forward and says.—Since I gave evidence I have referred to my books in the hands of my trustees. I find I was interested to the extent of one-third in the loan referred to in my evidence of 50,000 Rupees, in which the names of Mr. Brown, Mr. C. F. Heycock, and myself appear. I was not merely a surety in the transaction.

Mr. Spencer.

F. A. SPENCER, sworn.

I am one of the Official Liquidators of the Bombay Joint Stock Corporation. I was at first a liquidator appointed by the Shareholders, and was afterwards appointed officially by the Court. I produce the books of the Corporation.

Sorabjee Pestonjee Framjee, Aaron Moses Gubbay, Limjee Manockjee, Vurjeevundass Madhowdass, and Nasserwanjee Manockjee Petit were the Directors of the Corporation. Mr. Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy never was a Director. Limjee Manockjee is brother to Cowasjee Manockjee, the Director of the Bank of Bombay. Cowasjee Manockjee was a shareholder in the Corporation.

The list of allottees is imperfect; there was no stock ledger kept. There was no register of the original allottees kept in the office of the Corporation. The Capital of the Corporation was 20 lakhs, in shares of Rs. 300 each—200 Rupees per share were paid up on the first issue; there was a second issue of 10,000 shares, but only 3,232 shares were taken up.

I do not know why the second issue was made before the first issue was paid up. The shares of the first issue were at a premium, that may have been the reason for the second issue. Some of the Directors took some of the new issue. Mr. Gubbay took up 445 new shares. He had 890 old ones; Vurjeevundass Madhowdass took up 145 of the new shares.

They were debited with the call, and they were compromised with.

Mr. George Inverarity was a contributory for 75 shares.

Mr. Rodgie, of the Bank of Bombay, was not a contributory. I cannot say whether he was an allottee.

Limjee Manockjee was a partner in a transaction of about 4,379 shares. They were purchased on account of nine parties, the Corporation being interested in the purchase. The nine buyers were—A. M. Gubbay, Premchund Roychund, Sorabjee Pestonjee Framjee, Dhunjeebhoy Framjee, Limjee Manockjee, Cursetjee Nasserwanjee Cama, Vurjeevundass Madhowdass, Nusserwanjee Manockjee Petit, and the Corporation. The Corporation had power to buy and sell shares on commission, but I do not know whether it could legally buy and sell its own shares. The words of the Deed are very extensive. The shares were bought in the market on 20th December 1864. The transaction terminated in a loss.

As liquidator I have become acquainted with the particulars of the advances obtained by the Corporation from the Bank of Bombay—on 29th May 1865, Rs. 3,00,000; on 24th June 1865, Rs. 1,00,000. There is a loss of Rs. 1,50,000 on the loan of three lakhs; the one lakh was paid off. Security was given by a deposit of shares for the three lakhs loan. On the 4th October 1865 there was a loan of five lakhs obtained by the Corporation from the Bank of Bombay. There is a loss of Rs. 3,17,500 on that advance, which, added to Rs. 1,50,000 on the first loan, makes Rs. 4,67,500. The Corporation subsequently paid Rs. 17,500, leaving a balance against the Corporation of Rupees 4,50,000. The sum now due is Rs. 1,76,988-10-6. The liquidators appointed by the shareholders paid four annas in the rupee, and the official liquidators have paid six annas. There may be a further payment of 2½ per cent.

I am a Liquidator of the Bombay Reclamation Company. I was appointed at the meeting of November 1866. I produce the books of the Company. I produce a book containing a copy of the original allotment of shares from which the certificates were issued. The subsequent registers of shareholders are amongst the books. The Directors' Minute Book is here. On looking at it I see that Mr. M. Scott, Mr. W. R. Cassels, Mr. Gavin Steel, Cowasjee Jeehangeer, and Premchund Roychund were the first Directors of the Company. In August 1864 I find Mr. Tracey was added as a Director; he became the sixth Director. I find Mr. R. Hannay was acting afterwards, I believe, in the place of Mr. Steel, in January 1865. In July 1865 and in January 1866 Mr. Tracey, Mr. Hannay, Mr. Kelly, the Solicitor of the Bank of Bombay, Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, and Cowasjee Manockjee were the Directors. In June 1866 Mr. A. Morrison of the Asiatic Bank, Mr. M. H. Scott, and Mr. Manisty were acting as three of the Directors.

I am Manager for the Liquidators of the Bombay Joint Stock Corporation. I heard the evidence given by Mr. A. F. Spencer. I concur in the evidence which he gave as to the Corporation's affairs. His address will be obtained from Messrs. Sassoon.

Mr. Diver.

THOMAS DIVER, sworn.

I and the other Directors of the Alliance Financial Corporation obtained advances from the Bank of Bombay. I believe we discounted our Bill with the Bank on the 21st October 1864 for Rs. 5,00,000, and obtained a cash credit in November 1864 for Rs. 5,00,000. I cannot speak to the particulars of the advances. I cannot recollect anything about a discount of the 7th July 1865 for Rs. 1,06,000. If it is in the books of the Bank of Bombay it is no doubt correct. I have no accounts of the Alliance Financial Association in my possession. The above-mentioned three advances were on account of the Alliance Financial Corporation.

I remember the advance in the names of Mr. Taylor, Atmaram Madhowjee, and myself for Rs. 5,50,000 on the 11th October 1864. I remember an advance to G. Taylor and myself for Rs. 2,00,000 on the 10th January 1865. I remember an advance to myself, Atmaram Madhowjee, and Treacher and Company of Rs. 60,000 on the 19th January 1865. Altogether the transactions in which my name appears amount to Rs. 19,00,000. The total loss may be Rs. 3,87,000 on the advances to the Alliance Financial Corporation. I do not know the amount. The loss on the private debts may be Rs. 7,58,317. I went to Mr. Robertson for the advance of five lakhs in October 1864. Mr. Blair was not present. It was late in the evening. I asked for ten lakhs for the Company. I received no answer then. I believe the application was referred to the Directors. Mr. Robertson said he would mention it to the Board. I was told that the rate of interest was likely to increase, and that it would benefit the Company to borrow and lend it out at a higher rate. The loan was granted for five lakhs. I cannot recall the circumstances of the granting of the cash credit for five lakhs in November. If it is in the books of the Bank of Bombay it is correct. Probably the Secretary of the Alliance Financial Corporation, Mr. Wilson, went to the Bank of Bombay about it. No security was asked for. I did not see Mr. Blair about that loan. Premchund Roychund recommended me to apply for the first loan in order to lend it out at a higher rate of interest, but I do not know whether any recommendation was given by him to the Bank. I did not ask him to use any influence with the Bank. I look at a letter from Premchund to Mr. Robertson now shown to me (marked A 50).

(After reading it.) I have an indistinct recollection that there was a second loan. I have no doubt of it after reading that letter. I do not doubt, after reading that letter, that it was by Premchund Roychund's influence that the cash credit was extended; not but what I think it might have been done without him. Premchund held 1,000 shares in the Corporation. I do not recollect the discount of 7th July 1865 for Rs. 1,06,000. I may have signed the note for that sum. Perhaps the signing by the Secretary was objected to. I recollect the advance on 11th October 1864 to G. Taylor, Atmaram Madhowjee, and myself for Rs. 5,50,000. I did not apply for it, not that I am aware of. Premchund called upon me (or I saw him at his house, I forget which,) and told me that Bombay Reclamation Company's shares were likely to become very valuable. He also told me that the Bank of Bombay would advance money upon them at the then market price until 1st July 1865 upon a bill or note falling due then or on the 30th June (I forget which) without any margin whatever. The joint promissory note of Mr. Taylor, Atmaram Madhowjee, and myself was to be given. Premchund told me that the Bank was prepared to do it, and he would arrange it. I conferred with Mr. Taylor and Atmaram Madhowjee on the matter, and the promissory note was sent to us for signature. I forget who sent it; I think Mr. Blair. I never saw Mr. Blair about making the advance. I believe Taylor and Atmaram Madhowjee did not see him either. It was all arranged by Premchund. I signed the promissory note. I was recommended by Premchund to do it, and I did it. I do not know what was done with the money. I did not see the share certificates. Twenty Bombay Reclamation Company's share certificates were to be deposited with the Bank of Bombay. It was represented to us that that security was to be deposited—the certificates of twenty Bombay Reclamation Company's shares. I did not arrange about lodging the security, but I understood that it was to be given. The Bank lent the full amount for the purpose of the twenty shares being bought. I understood Premchund to have bought the shares, to have lodged the certificates with the Bank, and to have received the money. If he delivered the share certificates I should expect to find that the sum of Rs. 5,50,000 was paid to him. If he did not deliver the share certificates the Bank should not have paid him the money, unless there was a new understanding between them. We expected to profit by the rise in the market. We intended to resell when the price rose. The shares reached a high price, nearly double the then value, and were sold for future delivery, but not then accepted by the purchasers.

Mr. Taylor, Atmaram Madhowjee, Treacher and

Co., and I borrowed the Rs. 60,000. We bought a piece of land at Poona from Treacher and Co. The advance was made by the Bank on the title deeds. The price was very nearly one lakh, and Treacher and Co. wanted Rs. 60,000 paid down. They therefore joined in the loan as sureties.

I and Mr. Taylor borrowed Rs. 2,00,000 from the Bank in January 1865. The loan was negociated by Mr. Taylor or me with Mr. Blair, I believe; I forget which of us. He made no difficulty. I daresay fifteen lakhs were owing by us and the Corporation at that time, to the Bank. No security was asked for, and no difficulty was made. At the time we were thought to be wealthy. We were known to be speculating largely. I do not know by whom we were recommended. I did not apply to any Director, and did not use any influence with any Director. I am not aware that Premchund's influence was used. I did not speak to him about it. I have no doubt we obtained the loan for the purchase of shares. I do not know what shares we bought. I cannot trace it by reference to books. I am not aware that we had entered into any contract to buy shares.

I am acquainted with Jumnadass Doolubdass. He was a broker in partnership with Davidass Luckmeedass. I know him. They were, I believe, in some instances employed by the Alliance Corporation. I have no doubt they were employed largely. I employed them to obtain loans from the Banks for myself. They got loans for me, Mr. Taylor, and Atmaram Madhowjee in their own names. We ordered them to purchase certain shares. They obtained the money and bought the shares. They said they would supply the money by getting it from Banks and Shroffs. They may have obtained money from the Bank of Bombay for us three. I remember one instance in which they borrowed money on Mazagon shares for us. I do not remember the date of the transaction.

I do not know of an advance on the 2nd April 1865 of Rs. 1,50,000, and on the 22nd April 1865 of another loan of Rs. 22,000 by the Bank of Bombay to Jumnadass Doolubdass. I know nothing about those advances. We instructed Davidass and Jumnadass at various times to buy shares up to March 1865. I do not know at what time we commenced so instructing them. The orders were generally given through Atmaram Madhowjee. The money was sometimes brought from the bazaar. I do not remember having the curiosity to ascertain how much they borrowed from the Bank of Bombay. I never asked them what influence they brought to bear to obtain money. They were dealing for many other people besides us. I do not know of any advance being made by the Kalbadevi branch of the Bank of Bombay to them. I am referred to a loan obtained by them for us at the Head Office for Rs. 84,000. I never instructed them to go to the Kalbadevi branch. I did not know that that sum was obtained there.

I do not know anything about an advance on the 16th March 1865 of Rs. 1,80,000, or about another on the 28th March for Rupees 13,000. Davidass, Luckmeedass, and Ramdass Toolseydass were working together. Ramdass was not employed by us. I do not know of their obtaining in January 1865 a loan of Rs. 1,00,000 from the Bank of Bombay. I do not know that Davidass and Burjorjee Rustomjee obtained five lakhs from the Kalbadevi branch.

Jumnadass and Davidass had large credit in the bazaar, and we did not inquire where they obtained the money, they had no security from us that we should ever repay them. Business was so done at that time in Bombay. I never authorized them to use my name. I always went myself for my loans. Atmaram Madhowjee knows where the loans were obtained.

The Mazagon Land Reclamation Company was promoted by the Directors of the Alliance Financial Corporation. Premchund bought the property from Government. I believe Mr. M. Scott and Mr. Gavin Steel and others were interested in the purchase. I cannot swear to that. They gave forty lakhs to Government for the property, and resold to us for sixty lakhs. A Company was formed which we promoted. The Promoters were Atmaram Madhowjee, Ghellabhoy Puddumsey, Hurbun Nursey, Sewjee Welljee, myself, and Mr. Taylor, who was not prominently put forward. He was not a director. He was Master in Equity of the High Court at that time. I think there was an advance of five lakhs obtained from the Asiatic Banking Corporation for that purchase. I do not remember borrowing from any other Bank. A great many wealthy natives were shareholders. The right to allot one-half of the shares was left to Premchund Roychund. That was part of the bargain. He appeared to take a great interest in the Mazagon Company. I am not aware of his having interfered in any other transaction except the loan of Rs. 5,50,000 to get money from the Bank of Bombay for the Alliance Financial Corporation, or for me, Mr. Taylor, or Atmaram Madhowjee. He used his influence with the Bank, I think, to obtain a loan for the Mazagon Company, just about the time when the Company was started. I do not know the present state of the affairs of the Mazagon Company. I do not know whether the Deccan Cotton Cleaning Company had any connection with the Alliance Financial Corporation. The native directors of the Corporation were speculators. I admit that I was a speculator, so was Mr. Taylor; almost everybody was at that time.

I generally saw Mr. Blair at the Bank of Bombay. Sometimes Mr. Robertson. I think Mr. Blair acted on his own responsibility. Whenever I applied to him the loans were granted immediately. I produce a number of letters and memoranda which I have found amongst my papers (marked H). I was sued by the Bank of Bombay for Rs. 5,50,000. I gave them a judgment. I believe that nothing has been paid under it. I know nothing of the Kattiawar Trading Company, or of the Imperial Banking and Trading Company. Jumnadass Doolubdass is in Bombay. I have not seen Davidass Luckmeedass lately.

ATMARAM MADHOWJEE, affirmed.

I was a Director of the Alliance Financial Corporation. I was also a Director of the Mazagon Land Reclamation Company, but not a Director of the Deccan Cotton Cleaning Company, or of any other Company.

The Alliance Financial Corporation obtained from the Bank of Bombay on 21st October 1864, Rs. 5,00,000, and on the 8th November 1864, Rs. 5,00,000. I took no active part in obtaining these loans. I do not know exactly who negociated them. I believe Premchund did, but I cannot say with whom. My belief that they were obtained by him does not rest on any particular circumstance. I cannot say that I know it.

These sums were taken at a low rate of interest, to be lent out by the Corporation at a higher rate. The money was to be used in making advances and loans on security of shares. There was no particular person to be accommodated, it was to put more money into the hands of the Alliance Financial Corporation. There was no particular broker appointed at that time for the Company. Our brokers were Davidass Luckmeedass and one or two Marwaree brokers. I was not well acquainted with Mr. Blair. I never applied to him for a loan.

On the 11th October 1864, Dr. Diver, Mr. Taylor, and I obtained a loan for Rs. 5,50,000 from the Bank of Bombay, Premchund having bought twenty shares in the Bombay Reclamation Company for us, he arranged for the money with the Bank of Bombay. Dr. Diver told me this. I did not then understand that Premchund had sold his own shares to us. He bought for us. We had to pay him for them. I do not know how the money was drawn out of the Bank of Bombay. We signed the note and a slip which we returned to Premchund, and he or his clerk would draw out the money. It was understood that Premchund was to deliver the share certificates to the Bank. Subsequently we learnt that for a month or so the Bank had not obtained the share certificates. I do not know that the Bank ever realised the shares. There was some litigation about them.

I do not remember the advance of Rs. 1,06,000, or whether it was a renewal of two former bills. Jumnadass Doolubdass is a broker in partnership with Davidass Luckmeedass. They were not employed by the Alliance Financial Association. They did a good portion of our individual business. They used to buy shares for us, and get the money from different sources. They did not report where they had obtained money for us. They took margin money from us and provided the rest of the money as they liked. They borrowed in their own names. The share certificates remained with them. It was a common practice in Bombay at that time. The shares were not registered in our names. The broker pledged the shares in his own name. The person advancing the money got possession of the share certificates. He knew nothing of us. Sometimes the lender would have the shares transferred into his name. Sometimes only blank transfers were taken. We had to pay the broker. He did not trust to our credit wholly. We paid him margin money. The shares were ours, and bought on our responsibility. They were known as our brokers. They had no occasion to mention our names to the Banks. I know nothing of their advances obtained from the Head Office of the Bank of Bombay. I know of a loan for Rs. 2,41,000, and another for Rs. 5,000 obtained by them from the Kalbadevi Branch. I signed the note when those loans were renewed. Davidass asked me to put my name. The security was sufficient, therefore I signed. I did not know at the time that the money was borrowed for us.

I know nothing about the Rs. 84,000 being borrowed from the Kalbadevi Branch for me, Mr. Diver, and Mr. Taylor. I venture to contradict Dr. Diver about it as far as my knowledge goes. Ramdass was Davidass' servant. I do not know of any advances to Davidass and Burjorjee Rustomjee, except one mentioned in this statement which I have prepared. (Marked I.) I know nothing of the borrowing of five lakhs by Davidass and Burjorjee from the Branch Bank. I know of the Rs. 2,50,000 loan. Burjorjee was my friend, and I joined in it because the loan was well secured. My name was not given on the original loan. I cannot say exactly that the money was not borrowed on our account. They may have borrowed some of that money for us. We employed them to finance for us. They might go to the Bank of Bombay or any other Bank. I did not put my name to the bill for Rs. 2,50,000, because the money had been obtained for me.

I was a promoter and Director of the Mazagon Land Reclamation Company. The property was purchased by Mr. M. Scott, Cowasjee Jehangeer, Premchund Roychund, and, I believe, Mr. Cassels and Mr. Hannay. They gave forty lakhs. We bought it of them for sixty lakhs; we five promoters. It was one of the stipulations that each of the Vendors was to receive 100 shares. They received five lakhs a piece and 100 shares. The Alliance Financial acted as Bankers to the Mazagon Company, and received an allotment of 100 shares in the Company. It was formed about the beginning of November 1864.

Question.—Might not the ten lakhs borrowed from the Bank of Bombay on the 21st October and 8th November 1864 have been borrowed to pay part of the purchase money of the land, and not to lend at interest?

Answer.—Perhaps so.

Question.—That might explain how you got it so easily?

Answer.—Perhaps so, I cannot say.

Question.—It was of course material to Mr. Scott and Premchund and the other vendors to obtain the sixty lakhs?

No doubt it was material to them, but we could have paid the money out of the first call on the Mazagon Company's shares, amounting to sixty lakhs; that would have paid for it. We borrowed five lakhs ourselves from the Alliance Bank to pay for earnest money. That was for a few days. It was quite in our power to pay the sixty lakhs from the call on the Mazagon shares. The allotments were made, and the money came in immediately.

I was not a Director of the Deccan Cotton Cleaning Company, or of the Kattiawar Trading Company, or of the Imperial Banking and Trading Company. I was jointly liable with Davidass for two loans, one of Rs. 2,50,000 and one of Rs. 80,000 to the Bank of Bombay. I obtained the Rs. 80,000, and Davidass gave his name. I know nothing about their borrowing from the Kalbadevi Branch of the Bank of Bombay. I deny that I knew they borrowed for us. I put my name to oblige Davidass for the loan of Rs. 2,50,000.

I am a Merchant. I was broker to Messrs. Brice and Co. I have passed under Act XXVIII. of 1865. I have had time-bargains in shares. It was not my chief business. No dividend has yet been paid out of my estate. I took the benefit of Act XXVIII. of 1865 in July 1866; there is a large claim by my estate against Brice and Company. I think some of it will be recovered.

Before the renewal of the bill for Rs. 2,50,000 I was not in any joint transaction with Davidass and Burjorjee, except one of Rs. 30,000, which I suppose was reduced to Rs. 25,000 at renewal. There were none at the Branch Bank. I was an allottee in the Alliance Bank. The calls of the Alliance Financial Corporation were first paid into the Alliance Bank. The Directors of the Alliance Bank were Mr. Kelly, Hurbum Nursey, Ghellabhoy Puddumsey, Sewjee Velljee, and J. A. Sassoon. Hurbum Nursey, Ghellabhoy Puddumsey, and Sewjee Velljee were also Directors of the Alliance Financial Corporation and of the Mazagon Company. The Alliance Bank is also in liquidation.

I had accounts with Jumnadass Doolubdass and Davidass Luckmeedass. I produce a book in which they are entered. The share transactions only are entered. This book contains accounts of transactions with Jumnadass and Davidass only (marked I 2).

GEORGE TAYLOR, sworn.

In 1864 I was Master in Equity of the High Court, Bombay. I was much engaged in speculations in shares. I was a shareholder in the Alliance Financial Corporation, and became a Director of it in February 1865. I was a shareholder in the Mazagon Reclamation Company. I was not a shareholder in the Alliance Bank. I obtained the following advances from the Bank of Bombay:—

On the 11th October 1864 a fixed loan of Rs. 5,50,000 was granted to Dr. Diver, Atmaram Madhowjee, and myself.

On the 28th December 1864 a fixed loan of Rs. 2,00,000 on security of twenty Bengal Bank shares was granted to me.

On the 10th January 1865 a bill was discounted by the Bank for Rs. 2,00,000 in my name and Dr. Diver's.

On the 21st April 1865 a discount of Rs. 1,00,000 was obtained, in which Messrs. Brice and Co. were concerned.

On the first loan there has been a total loss. The second loan was secured by Bengal Bank Shares. They fell nearly 1,000 Rs. a share almost immediately after the deposit. The loan for Rs. 5,50,000 I know nothing of. I have frequently heard from Dr. Diver that Premchund said he would finance for the purchase of twenty Bombay Reclamation Company's shares. I did not communicate with Premchund Roychund about it. I never saw Mr. Blair on the subject or Mr. Robertson. I signed the note, and I believed the share certificates were deposited in the Bank. The money was borrowed to buy Bombay Reclamation Company's shares from Premchund or through him. I supposed the money would not be advanced by the bank till the shares were lodged.

The two lakhs were borrowed on security of Bengal Bank Shares. There may have been a loss on that loan of Rs. 91,358. I recollect, I think, seeing Mr. Blair about that advance. I think Mr. Diver had an interest in the purchase of the shares. I raised money also from the Agra and Asiatic Banks. I had some Bengal Bank shares of my own at the time. I think that parcel of shares was got through Premchund, as well as some Asiatic Banking Corporation shares, which I bought at the time. I deposited my own shares with the Agra Bank. On the renewal of the note for Rs. 2,00,000 I paid Rs. 5,000. We did not lodge security, but I was a large shareholder in the Bank of Bombay, and they had a lien on my shares. I do not recollect negociating that loan. I know of no difficulty having occurred in raising the loan. I do not know who negociated it, and I did not use any influence with any Director of the Bank until, when credit was gone, I wanted a sum of Rs. 5,000 or Rs. 10,000 for family purposes, and the Secretary referred to Mr. Hannay, who authorized that advance, and I repaid it.

I have not the slightest idea what the Rs. 2,00,000 was raised for. I jotted down in my Diary transactions at the time, but so indistinctly that it will not give the information.

I had not an account with the Asiatic Bank at the time. If the advance of two lakhs went there, then Premchund paid it to his own account. There were transactions in which others were interested besides me and Mr. Diver. I know very little about the transactions. Dr. Diver and Atmaram Madhowjee managed everything in fact for the Alliance Financial Corporation.

I paid on April 7th, 1865, Rs. 5,000 on the renewal of the two lakhs loan. I find an entry to that effect in my Diary. I cannot swear whether any difficulty was made about renewing the advance for two lakhs. I certainly had no interview at which any difficulty was experienced. I am slightly acquainted with Cowasjee Manockjee. I never asked him to influence a renewal of the loan. I have no doubt the two lakhs were borrowed in connexion with some speculation. I do not know from whom shares were to be bought.

The loan with Brice and Company for rupees 1,00,000 was for the purchase by the house and Land Investment Company of land at Breach Candy for building a Club or Hotel. Dr. Diver, who had been elected a Director of that Company, objected to the land being taken. The result was that Mr. Brice, Mr. Macfarlane, myself, and Nowrojee Ardaseer Davur took the land and borrowed the money; and the land depreciating in value the contract was not completed. The seller took back the land for a consideration, and Mr. Brice went into trust, so did Mr. Macfarlane, and Nowrojee Adaseer Davur, and I am much in the same position. I do not know how the loan was obtained. Mr. Brice, I think, managed it, and I only signed my name to the note. I only knew that the money had been obtained. I am informed that on this advance a total loss has been sustained by the Bank; and on all the transactions there may have been a loss of Rs. 9,11,942. On the cessation of the American War, which was made known by telegram, everything went down about four hundred per cent. I was a speculator, but I was known to be a man of wealth. My income for at least a year previous was Rs. 1,20,000. £4,000 was my official income. I received £4,000 a year from my Agra Bank shares and from other shares £4,000 a year more. The Agra Bank and the Bombay Bank in which I had twenty shares failed, the value of my private property fell from ten lakhs to nothing. I know Jumnadass Doolubdass and Davidass Luckmeedass. They were brokers, employed by Dr. Diver, Atmaram Madhowjee, and me to purchase shares for us. They were simply brokers. In some instances they were not supplied with funds, but purchased the shares and pledged them, receiving margin money from us. They only delivered to us bought notes, and asked for their margin, twenty-five per cent. or whatever it might be. I meddled very little in the matter. I knew that the money was got from the Shroffs. When bad news came I told Dr. Diver that the loans must be put into our names, and that was done in several Banks. I do not think that there are any debts of ours to the Bank of Bombay in their names. I am not aware of any, certainly. I am not aware of their being sent round to the Banks to borrow for us, and I think not for the Alliance Financial. I know nothing of the Alliance Bank, it was founded before the Alliance Financial Corporation and Mazagon Company.

I had a large allotment of shares in the Mazagon Company. Dr. Diver and Ghellabhoy Puddumsey acted in concert with Premchund, and got up the Mazagon Company. I did not see anybody about it. I was not a promoter of it, or a Director in it. I had a large allotment, as Dr. Diver's friend. I did not make any allotment of the shares. There is still an instalment of the original purchase money due to Government. I gave up 50 of my 100 shares upon the understanding that the other Directors should do the same, and that the shares given up by us should be allotted to Europeans. Mr. M. Scott, Cowasjee Jehangeer, and Mr. Cassells were projectors of the Company. I believe all my shares in the Bank of Bombay have been sold under the lien. I cannot give any explanation as to how these large loans came to us, except that all the Banks made such advances. It had been going on for some years, and was suddenly brought to an end. Many of the Banks suffered in the same way.

CASSINATH BABAJEE, affirmed.

I am employed in the New Bank of Bombay, Limited. I was employed in the Bank of Bombay. Mr. Robertson sent me a memorandum directing me to give up Roychund Deepchund's Government securities. I gave the memorandum to Mr. de Ga to be pasted in his book, as the notes were a security for a cash credit.

I referred to Mr. deGa to learn whether the cash credit was paid off. Mr. deGa then sent a memorandum to Mr. Robertson to make the matter more clear. He did not show it to me on its return from Mr. Robertson, I did not see it so far as I remember. Mr. deGa came to my desk and said to me, "Give up the Government paper deposited by Roychund Deepchund." I do not exactly recollect to whom I gave the Government notes. Roychund Deepchund did not himself apply to me, I think. I gave up the notes on the same day.

CURSETJEE FURDOONJEE, sworn.

On the 27th December 1864 I applied to the Bank of Bombay for a loan of Rs. 3,20,000 on security of Government paper. I gave security, and the loan has been repaid.

On the next day, the 28th December 1864, I obtained a fixed loan from the Bank of Bombay of Rs. 6,25,000.

On the 16th January 1865 I obtained a fixed loan for Rs. 3,00,000. I gave a promissory note. I did not give any security for that loan or for the Rs. 6,25,000. I had overdrawn my current account from November 1864. I drew the money at different times. There is only one account in my name. It was overdrawn on 11th April 1866 to the amount of Rs. 2,08,000. I do not know that the Bank opened a cash credit account in my name. I kept only the current deposit account in my books. Premchund Roychund sold me Bombay Reclamation Company's shares, and he negotiated for me with the Bank of Bombay a loan of Rs. 6,25,000 on a deposit of ten shares. Premchund sent for my signature a promissory note to the Bank for that amount. This is the document which I signed (marked A 51). I do not think I signed any other document. Premchund fixed the rate of interest. I do not know whether he deposited the share certificates with the Bank. I did not deposit them, and I do not know when they were deposited.

The next loan was for three lakhs. There was no security given. I do not recollect how I obtained that loan, or whether I saw Mr. Blair or not. I do not think there was any difficulty made about the advance. I do not recollect whether security was asked for. I do not know whether any one recommended me. I knew many of the Directors. I knew Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy very well. I do not know whether he was attending then as a Director. He was often sick. I might have asked him to assist me to get that loan. I was not trading with him in January 1865. I ceased to trade with him in October 1864. Our joint transactions were chiefly in cotton, and they ceased at the Dewallee, 30th October 1864. I am quite sure that they ceased then. We were on good terms after our partnership ceased. The three lakhs were taken on 15th August 1864, and the loan was renewed on 15th November 1864, and again on the 16th January 1865. When the loan was obtained I think Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy was a Director of the Bank, and he was engaged with me in a joint trade in August 1864. I think I was not asked for security. I think the money was not taken for the purchase of shares. It was for the purposes of trade. I was trading with him only in cotton. I cannot say whether I expended the money in that trade or for what purpose.

I came to be allowed to overdraw my account on account of my credit with the Bank. I had had large transactions with the Bank. I never had a penny of the Rs. 6,25,000. I do not recollect any remonstrance about my overdrawing for so large a sum as two lakhs. I do not know whether it was allowed by the Bank to others. I obtained leave to overdraw from the Secretary on the 16th November 1864. I asked for leave to overdraw up to two lakhs; it was more like a cash credit. I do not recollect that any influence was used to obtain that permission. I obtained it myself, although I had more than 12 lakhs outstanding. I did not need any other person's influence. Some influence may have been used. I do not remember asking Rustomjee Jamsetjeee Jejeebhoy to exert his influence with the Bank. I may have asked him to do so. I used to apply in person to the Secretary for my advances. I have no recollection of obtaining the influence of others. Premchund had nothing to do with that loan that I recollect.

I remember a time-bargain with Premchund about Bombay Reclamation Company's shares, but I did not know that the shares belonged to the Eastern Financial Association until the contract was sent for my signature; there was a time-bargain paper sent for my signature. The paper was dated the 26th November 1864, but not sent to me for my signature until January 1865. When the paper was sent to me I found that the shares belonged to the Eastern Financial Association. I heard afterwards that Premchund signed a time-bargain paper, and there was a dispute in Court between the Liquidator of the Eastern Financial Association and him at the time. I dealt with Premchund. I thought I was dealing with him alone. He did not mention the Eastern Financial Association. I cannot give any information about the proceedings of the Bank of Bombay in granting loans in 1864 and 1865.

I am not now a shareholder in the Bank.

14th July 1868.

14 July 1868.

Mr. Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy.

RUSTOMJEE JAMSETJEE JEJEEBHOY, sworn.

On the 14th July 1864 a cash credit of Rs. 5,00,000 was obtained from the Bank of Bombay by my brother, Sorabjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy. On the 17th July 1865 there was an advance for Rs. 1,00,000 in his name and mine. Some security had been then given to the Bank. There was also a bill discounted for Rs. 1,75,000 in July 1865 to clear off Sorabjee's original loan.

In December 1865 there was an advance in the name of Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy and Company for Rs. 2,00,000.

On 22nd July 1864 I obtained a discount for Rs. 2,21,000; it was renewed in January 1865.

On the 5th April 1865 I had an advance on Government securities and railway stock, ending in a debit of Rs. 2,12,377 in April 1866. The total advances were Rs. 14,18,357. Including my brother's debt the loss on my transactions was Rs. 2,14,000, and the total loss about Rs. 8,00,000, I think, on all the transactions. No security was given for the loan on the 14th July 1864 of Rs. 5,00,000. I was a Director of the Bank of Bombay at that time. I was elected a Director in December 1863, and remained a Director during 1864, but was absent from ill-health. I attended on 9th February 1865 merely to keep my seat on the Board. I had had an operation performed. I ceased to sit from that day, and therefore became disqualified as a Director in May 1865. From the 20th November 1864 to 9th February 1865 I did not attend the Board meetings. I was re-elected on the 13th July 1865, and remained a Director till May 1866. I ceased to attend early in 1866 on account of sickness. I did not sit after the 16th January, and was therefore disqualified on the 16th April 1866.

Mr. Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy.

The loan for Rs. 5,00,000 was obtained on the 14th July 1864. I believe I was not in Bombay. I did not negociate that loan. I knew very little about my brother's affairs. I did not ask any Director to grant the loan. I did not borrow it. I was at Poona. I was not responsible in 1864 for Sorabjee's debts. I lent my name for him on the 15th July 1865, when I guaranteed all his debts. I was no party to obtaining the loan. My brother's Mehta, Vizbhoocundass Pranjeewundass, says that Premchund took that money away.

On the 11th January 1865 there was a renewal granted to me of a loan obtained on 22nd July 1864 for Rs. 2,21,000. I did not give any security to the Bank for that loan. I was in Poona, and may have negociated it through my son-in-law, Shapoorjee Jewajee. A portion of it has been paid off, leaving a balance of Rs. 1,66,000. I cannot say by whom that transaction was recommended to the Directors. The money was borrowed to pay calls on new shares issued by the Bank of Bengal.

On the 17th July 1865 there was an advance taken from the Bank of Rs. 1,00,000 to pay off Sorabjee's debts.

The debt of Rs. 1,75,000 originated in a loan of two lakhs. It was originally granted him on 8th March 1865 without my knowledge. Sorabjee paid Rs. 25,000, and got a renewal for Rs. 1,75,000. It was on the 10th July 1865, not the 17th, I believe. Some security may have been given. I do not recollect about Sorabjee's debts and affairs. I was a Director of the Bank in July 1865. I think Sorabjee obtained the loan through Mr. Greig, an agent of his. It was before I was re-elected. There was no opposition to my re-election by my brother Directors. I was elected without my consent being asked. It is for my brother Directors to say whether they objected on account of my liability to the Bank.

I commenced to overdraw my account on the 5th April 1865, and deposited with the Bank Government Notes for Rs. 2,24,000 and £10,000 Railway stock. I cannot say what the securities realised. I had permission to overdraw to the extent of three lakhs. I actually drew only Rs. 2,12,357.

The last advance was in December 1865. It was an advance to me of Rs. 2,10,000. It was on a distinct promise that I would repay it in a fortnight or three weeks. I wrote to that effect to the Secretary. On 23rd December 1865 I paid one lakh to the Bank. I had a promise of another lakh from a friend, and he did not pay me. Had he done so my loan would have been paid off. The loan was for a very short time. (Looks at letters shewn to him.) This is my letter (marked A 38). No security was asked for. I do not remember applying to any of my brother Directors to obtain that loan. I did not apply to Mr. Hannay. I believe I was a Director at the time. The money was borrowed to pay for up-country hoondies at short dates. I did not experience any difficulty after failing to keep my promise about that loan in obtaining renewals in January 1866. Mr. Lidderdale asked me to try and reduce the loans, and I reduced them. Shortly after January 1866 I ceased to attend as a Director. When I borrowed it was understood that I was only a guarantee for Sorabjee, and that time was to be given to me to pay. Having been connected with the Bank for twenty-six years, and they being the bankers of my family, I did not wish to go for loans elsewhere. If I had foreseen the difficulty that was coming upon me I would not have gone to the Bank of Bombay. No one foresaw it.

Shapoorjee Dhunjeebhoy is married to my sister. On the 14th December 1864 he had a loan from the Bank of Rs. 3,00,000 with Byramjee Manockjee, and on 28th April 1865 Rs. 1,00,000 on his sole account. On the 14th December 1864 I was laid up, and on the 28th April I was absent from Bombay, at Khandalla, for change. I do not know how he obtained the loans. I do not know anything of any joint loan of his with Atmaram Madhowjee. When I saw his name on the discount list on a former occasion I remonstrated with Mr. Blair. I knew Shapoorjee's circumstances, and told Mr. Blair Rs. 50,000 was enough to advance him. I cannot tell you how he subsequently obtained such large advances from the Bank in the face of my opinion. I disclaim all knowledge as to how he obtained the money.

I was neither a promoter nor a Director of the Bombay Joint Stock Corporation. I bought two hundred shares in that Company on the recommendation of the Chairman, Sorabjee Pestonjee Framjee. I had nothing to do with the management of the Company. I was a shareholder formerly in the Bank of Bombay.

Mr. Lidderdale in his evidence stated that the Native Directors were opposed to applications from natives for loans being brought before the Board, but I deny that as far as I am concerned. I, as a Native Director, made no such objection.

VIZBHOOCUNDASS PRANJEEWUNDASS, affirmed.

I am a book-keeper in the employment of Sorabjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, and produce his books. The cash credit of Rs. 5,00,000 was obtained from the Bank of Bombay by Sorabjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, and with that sum Bombay Reclamation Company's shares were brought from Premchund Roychund. I do not know who obtained the money from the Bank of Bombay.

There was another loan obtained from the Bank of Bombay by Sorabjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, and it was renewed on the 8th March 1865. Reads an entry as follows :—

"Rupees 3,00,000 which had been borrowed on the 9th December 1864 at three months fell due this day; paid on that account Rs. 2,00,000 and one lakh in notes by the hands of Framjee Bomanjee."

The three lakhs were paid on the 10th December to Gopall Mulhar for cotton.

This letter (marked A 52) shown to me is signed by my master Sorabjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy. There is no account with Premchund in Sorabjee's books. Premchund received from him upwards of ten lakhs; five lakhs were borrowed from the Bank of Bombay, and Rs. 5,66,500 were borrowed from the Asiatic Bank, and paid to him for Bombay Reclamation Company's shares.

SHAPOORJEE JEWAJEE.

I was an assistant in Rustomjee's business. The loan of 22nd July 1864 of Rs. 2,21,000 from the Bank of Bombay was obtained by my applying to the Secretary of the Bank, Mr. Blair, if I recollect rightly. No security was asked for that I can recollect. I believe the money was borrowed to pay for new shares in the Bank of Bengal. I do not think Mr. Blair knew for what purpose the money was wanted. No other loan was outstanding at the time. No difficulty was made about it.

DAVIDASS LUCKMEEDASS, affirmed.

14 July 1868.

Mr. Davidass Luckmeedass.

I am a broker in partnership with Jumnadass Doolubdass. I was employed by Mr. Taylor, Dr. Diver, and Atmaram Madhowjee, to buy shares for them in 1864. They gave a deposit or margin money after I had bought the shares. They did not supply me with money to buy. Money was raised from Banks and Merchants, and the shares were paid for. I did not borrow the money first and then buy the shares. I used to buy shares in the market, and report to my employers the price at which I had bought. The shares were to be paid for in a certain number of days, and in order to pay for them I borrowed money from the Banks and Merchants and transferred the shares to the lenders.

Sometimes my employers paid margin money; sometimes I paid it. We accommodated one another. The sellers attended at the Banks to receive their money, and transfer the shares. They did not part with the shares before they got the money.

I was employed by Mr. Taylor, Dr. Diver, and Atmaram Madhowjee in many transactions. I was not jointly liable with Atmaram Madowjee in any transactions.

(Cautioned by the President.) I was not concerned in any partnership transactions. Sometimes I accommodated him with my name to bills, and he did the same thing for me. We were very intimate. I was allowed to overdraw my account with the Alliance Financial Association to the amount of Rs. 5,000 or Rs. 10,000 only. Very likely I owe the Association ten lakhs, but the debt is secured. I was frequently with Atmaram Madhowjee, and did brokerage business for him, and was very intimate with him. I did not report to him, Mr. Taylor, and Dr. Diver, where I obtained money for the share purchases. I do not remember whether I reported to Dr. Diver an advance of Rs. 84,000 on some shares.

Question.—Could Dr. Diver have been able to state in his evidence that the money had been obtained from the Bank of Bombay unless you had told him?

Answer.—I might have told him.

Question.—At the Kalbadevi Branch there were two loans for Rs. 61,000 and Rs. 1,80,000; do you not remember telling Atmaram Madhowjee of those loans?

Answer.—I did report that transaction to him, I wanted his signature for it. I went to the Kalbadevi Branch rather than to the Head Office, because it was more convenient to me. I lived close by the Branch. I negociated the advances with Mr. Bullock. I did not take any recommendation. I obtained a small sum at first, and afterwards other sums.

Question.—Did you not obtain Rs. 13,000 in your own name?

Answer.—Very likely I did.

Question.—Did you not obtain the following loans:

7th January 1865	- - - Rs.	84,000
11th January „	- - - „	61,000
24th February „	- - - „	75,000
16th March „	- - - „	1,80,000
7th January „ with Ramdass	- „	1,00,000
And on the 1st February 1865, with Burjorjee Rustomjee	- - „	5,00,000?

Answer.—I dare say I did; they were all secured by deposits of shares. I was a security for Burjorjee. They were not lent without security.

(President again cautions him.)—My books are with my trustees. I did not transact the advance for five lakhs. Burjorjee Rustomjee did it for himself. I believe Burjorjee paid that money to Premchund for shares which Burjorjee had bought of him. Burjorjee said that Premchund had negociated that loan for him with the Bank, when he asked me to put my name to the bill, and that the money was to be paid to Premchund.

Question.—Who recommended you to the Kalbadevi Branch of the Bank? Be careful in answering.

Answer.—There was no recommendation. I asked the manager to advance to me on shares, and he consented. The manager did not refer to anyone. I was personally known to Mr. Bullock. Security was taken on all occasions of advances to me. The Rs. 13,000 were secured by shares. Ramdass was my security for Rs. 1,00,000. He was also my book keeper. I gave his name as my security for one lakh. I told Mr. Bullock that Ramdass was my servant.

(Cautioned again.)—I believe I told him. Very likely I did. He did not trust to the signatures merely; he took the security of shares, and the amount advanced was twenty-five or thirty per cent. less than the maket value of the shares. I recollect these advances of Rs. 61,000 and Rs. 1,80,000. They were not taken to enable me to buy shares for Mr. Taylor, Dr. Diver, and Atmaram Madhowjee. It was in respect of general share transactions, either for them or other gentlemen.

Atmaram Madhowjee signed the note renewing the loans, because there was a large sum of money due by him to me at that time in respect of share transactions previously effected. I cannot say that Atmaram Madhowjee knew of all the advances I had taken from the Bank of Bombay. Very likely he did know that I had borrowed money from the Bank for these transactions. I do not remember exactly at this distance of time what motive actuated him. He was in my debt. Very likely he knew that I had obtained money from the Bank of Bombay and other places. He went to the Bank and gave his signature there. This note (marked A 53) which is shewn to me is the note. (Dated 6th June 1865, Rs. 2,41,000, payable one month after date, and signed by Davidass Luckmeedass, Atmaram Madhowjee, and Jumnadass Doolubdass). Atmaram Madhowjee was not accustomed to inspect my books. I had an account with him. The transactions with him were entered in a separate book from which accounts were made out.

Question.—Do you mean to say that Atmaram Madhowjee did not know that you were indebted to the Bank of Bombay for the shares bought for him?

Answer.—I conclude that he knew it, as he put his name to the note.

SUCCARAM ANTOBA, affirmed.

I am a clerk in the New Bank of Bombay, Limited. I was employed in the Bank of Bombay. I entered the Board Minutes of 6th August 1863 in this book (A 1). I notice the following Resolution at the end of the minutes—"Resolved, that for the present, and until further orders, any application for advances on any bank shares, or other public company, other than Government Banks, be submitted to the Board, and not made by the Secretary."

It is in my handwriting. I added this resolution either on the day on which the minutes were written or on the following day. I cannot speak as to what is in the scroll minute; perhaps it was through an oversight that the passage was omitted here. All that appears in the minutes here was written in this book before the omitted Resolution was entered, but Mr. Foggo had not signed. The words "Vice President" at the foot of the minutes had been written. I am quite sure that the amendment was made before the minutes were confirmed at the next meeting of the Board.

Mr. Jumnadass Doolubdass.

JUMNADASS DOOLUBDASS, affirmed.

I am a broker. I was a partner with Davidass Luckmeedass. I was employed by Mr. Taylor, Mr. Diver, and Atmaram Madhowjee to buy shares for them. I received from them margin money to buy the shares. I bought the shares in the market, and then went with the sellers to the Bank of Bombay to borrow money on them. In some cases the sellers trusted me with the certificates. I borrowed the money, but not the full amount of the price, and deposited the shares, and then obtained the margin money from Dr. Diver or Atmaram Madhowjee.

When the margin money had been paid by them the shares belonged to those gentlemen. They were responsible to me, and I to the Bank. They had the security of the account between me and them for the margin money and for the shares being delivered to them. They did not know where the shares were deposited. It was a matter of confidence between me and them. I did not report that to them. That has been a practice between me and them for eight years. They knew what shares were bought, but I did not report to them where the shares were deposited. They left the depositing to me. I was at liberty to deposit them where I liked.

I obtained altogether Rs. 3,47,000 from the Head Office, and from the Kalbadevi Branch of the Bombay Bank Rs. 3,25,000, in my name, or in my name and in the name of Davidass Luckmeedass. I obtained these large sums on security of shares. The loss may be Rs. 3,35,000 at the Head Office, and at the Kalbadevi Branch Rs. 1,70,442. The shares stood in such high credit that they were advanced upon like gold. I used to write to the Manager of the Bank for the advances, and he used to answer me.

My partner was well acquainted with Mr. Bullock, the Manager of the Kalbadevi Branch; not intimately acquainted, but well acquainted in business as a broker.

I know Premchund's handwriting.

P. R."]

I cannot identify Premchund's handwriting on these papers. I can only read his Guzeratee handwriting. Perhaps Premchund recommended us to the Bank of Bombay. Very likely he did. We had business with him. Very likely some of the shares bought for Mr. Taylor, Dr. Diver, and Atmaram Madhowjee were bought from Premchund. He was a broker, and we bought from him and from other brokers. I do not remember having asked him to recommend us to the Bank; he may have been asked, and perhaps he did recommend us.

I deposited fourteen shares of the Mazagon Land and Reclamation Company as security for an advance from the Kalbadevi Branch of Rs. 84,000. This is an entry of it in my ledger, which I produce (enter marked J 1). I turn to the account of Premchund Roychund at page two in my ledger. I was in debt to him to the amount of Rs. 1,14,656 at the Dewallee of 1864. There is an entry on the 23rd April 1865 of Rs. 2,90,213, and on the 26th April 1865 another of Rs. 85,040.

There was an advance in which Atmaram Madhowjee was a joint obligor with me to the Bank. He and Mr. Taylor and Dr. Diver owed us a large amount for the purchase of shares. Some of them had been pledged to the Bank of Bombay, and I therefore called upon him to join in the note.

Some days before the sum of Rs. 2,90,213 appears in Premchund's account with him, I obtained Rs. 1,50,000 from the Bank of Bombay. I paid that sum Rs. 1,50,000 to the Presidency Bank. I borrowed it on the 2nd April. Shares were delivered to Premchund. It was not cash which I paid him. I delivered shares to him, and debited him in account with Rs. 2,90,213. I borrowed Rs. 1,22,000 from the Bank of Bombay on the 25th April 1865. The sum of Rs. 85,040 credited to Premchund represents the cost of two hundred and forty shares of the Royal Bank bought by him from us.

Question.—Did not Premchund Roychund require you to lessen your debt to him by delivering those shares to him?

Answer.—He had paid me the sum of three lakhs to enable me to buy the shares. I had many transactions with Premchund as a broker. I did not negociate the loan with the Kalbadevi Branch. My partner did. I cannot say who recommended us. It was more convenient for my partner to go to the Branch than to the Head Office.

When we obtained the further advances at the Head office nothing was said about the debt at the Kalbadevi Branch. They were very likely aware of it, but Commercial Bank shares were deposited at the Head Office for those advances. Four hundred of the Commercial Bank shares came from the Presidency Bank. All the shares were deposited in our name with the Bank of Bombay. I did not mention the names of Mr. Taylor, Dr. Diver, and Atmaram Madhowjee. I had many customers. The share certificates were deposited generally in our name with blank transfers attached to them.

16th July 1868.

Mr. Chapman.

CHARLES EDWARD CHAPMAN, sworn.

I am a member of the Bengal Civil Service, and am at present employed in the Financial Department. In 1866 I was officiating Accountant General at Bombay in Mr. Lushington's absence.

I was appointed a Director of the Bank of Bombay on the 23rd April 1866, and attended the first meeting of the Board on 24th April. The Government Directors received the usual honorarium of Rs. 30 for attending on the Board. Mr. Norman was the only other Government Director at that time, as Mr. Lushington's place was not filled up. I took Colonel Marriott's place.

I received no instructions whatever from Government when I was appointed. I was never employed in commercial pursuits, or engaged in any Bank business before. I was not appointed on account of any peculiar knowledge which I possessed.

It was the view of the Government of India that the Accountant General should be ex-officio a Director of the Bank of Bombay. They insisted upon it, but the Bombay Government did not take the same view. I believe as a matter of fact the Accountant General had always been a Government Director, and the Government of India insisted that he should be. The Government Directors are liable frequently to be changed; they are liable to go to another Presidency, and to accompany the Government of Bombay on tours. The Officers of the Financial Department were not so liable to be removed. When a Government Director went on a tour with the Government of Bombay for two or three months I cannot say whether any other Government Director was appointed. It was not customary so long as I have been connected with the Bank. The removal of a Government Director for two or three months I do not think would affect his particular knowledge of his duties. I think it would so far interfere as to break the thread of his knowledge of what was going on in the Bank.

The Government Directors sat there as representatives of Government, which was a large shareholder. They were not in the same position for all purposes as the Commercial Directors. It was impossible for them to be acquainted with the credit and standing of the persons borrowing from the Bank, and they necessarily looked to their colleagues, who were acquainted with the commercial world, and who were therefore primarily responsible for the business of the Bank. The Government Directors were liable to be influenced by the Commercial Directors on all points touching the credit of the customers. The Government Directors were not, therefore, equally qualified with the Commercial Directors to judge in all respects. I have reason to suppose that they were kept ignorant with respect to one large transaction as to points known to their colleagues, and which ought to have been made known to them. I think they were kept ignorant both by their brother Commercial Directors and by the Secretary. I know of one or two transactions in which we were kept in ignorance by the Secretary, and misled in answer to questions which we put. There was one case in particular in which this occurred.

President.—We will refer to that presently.

Examination continued.—Immediately after my appointment I brought to the notice of Government that there had been no audit of the accounts as provided for by Section 6 of the agreement between the Government of Bombay and the Bank. I produce a copy of a letter which I addressed to the Secretary of the Bombay Government on the subject, and a copy of the reply which I received (Exhibits marked K 1 and K 2). I was nominated Auditor. I pointed out that I could not act in that capacity, being a Director. Mr. Tyndall and Mr. Benn were appointed, and I was associated with them. I counted the cash balance, and found it correct.

During my incumbency I was not accustomed to consult the Government, but when the Chief Secretary was a Director he was in constant communication with the Governor, and I have no doubt kept him personally informed of the affairs of the Bank. He was in daily communication with the Governor, and I suppose this from the probability of the case. After Mr. J. L. Lushington resumed his post as a Government Director on the 11th May he was accustomed to communicate with the local Government by letter and with the Government of India. During my incumbency the senior Government Director would address the Government demi-officially, whenever there was anything which Government ought to know. There was no written order to that effect that I am aware of. I have no letters on the subject; there are no written communications in my possession but those to which I have referred. I did not write to Government; any communications which I had with Government were verbal ones. Mr. Lushington, my chief, would have written to Government, and I should have conferred with him before he wrote.

I have read the Shareholders' Memorial in the Blue Book, and the charges against the Government Directors as to speculating largely. I have never held a share in my life, except shares in the Bank of Bombay. I have no interest in the Asiatic Bank or in the Bombay Reclamation Company. I have not been under any obligation, pecuniary or otherwise, to any Native Director or any one else in this place.

On 26th April 1866 I was summoned to a meeting at the Bank of Bombay at 3 P.M. There were present at that meeting Mr. Lidderdale, the Chairman, Mr. A. Brown, Mr. A. Stewart, Mr. Tracey, and Mr. Norman. There were also present by invitation Mr. Moir of the Oriental Bank, Mr. Campbell of the Chartered Mercantile Bank, Mr. Thomson of the Bank of Hindostan, and Mr. Morrison of the Asiatic Bank. Mr. Kelly, the Solicitor of the Bank of Bombay, and Premchund Roychund were not present. The Bank Managers whom I have named were invited, because the Bank of Bombay would not take upon itself the responsibility of granting Premchund the advance which he required to carry him on. Mr. Lidderdale opened the discussion by stating that Premchund was in difficulties, and would suspend payment next day unless immediately assisted. He added that the amount required to enable Premchund to carry on was twenty-five lakhs, which was a larger sum than the Bank felt justified in advancing; that it was a matter of interest to all the Banks of Bombay that Premchund should be supported, and that he had therefore convened their Managers to consider the matter. Mr. Moir, I think, stated in reply that he had no interest in supporting Premchund, and I think Mr. Campbell also made a similar statement; but Mr. Moir said he would for the general benefit of the place bear his share in supporting Premchund. I forget his exact words. There was no secret about Mr. Morrison being interested in supporting Premchund, and he agreed; so did Mr. Thomson. There was some discussion as to the amount which Mr. Moir and Mr. Campbell should respectively contribute, and as it was growing late the meeting was adjourned to Mr. Lidderdale's bungalow for the following morning, partly to give time to Mr. Moir and Mr. Campbell to consider to what extent they would agree to be responsible, and generally to give time to the Managers of the Banks for further discussion. I did not avail myself of the adjournment to seek advice elsewhere. It was said to be extremely important to keep the matter secret, and I should not have felt justified in mentioning it outside the Bank parlour.

I attended the meeting at 7 A.M. next morning at Mr. Lidderdale's bungalow. All who were present at the previous meeting were there, and Mr. Müller, of the Comptoir d'Escompte, and Mr. Beattie, of the Commercial Bank, also attended. Mr. Kelly was brought up, and sat at the President's right hand. The Secretary of the Bank of Bombay was present, but going to and fro between the President and Premchund, who was sitting outside in the porch. Mr. Tracey was also the medium of communication between the Directors and Premchund. I look at a document (marked A 58). I do not think I could recognize the original, as I think it did not come into my hand. A full statement of Premchund's affairs was not produced. I only remember a rough statement of his pressing liabilities. I only saw it passed about amongst one or two Directors. It was very slightly discussed; it was in no respect verified as to its truth. No mention whatever was made of his liability to any of the Banks. There was no statement of his affairs generally. I did not see one or hear one discussed. The object was to stave off his pressing difficulties. He had up-country bills to meet, and it was necessary to enable him to telegraph up-country.

Question.—How could any person at the meeting have formed an idea whether the assistance he asked for would enable him to tide over his difficulties if you had not a general statement of his affairs?

Answer.—The only explanation I can give is that Premchund held a peculiar position in Bombay. The idea of his insolvency had hardly been realized, and all the Directors, with one exception, must have been ignorant of his true position.

Question.—Was not his peculiar position that of being the greatest speculator in Bombay?

16 July 1868.

Mr. Chapman.

Answer.—Undoubtedly he was the greatest speculator in Bombay, but he had been courted by all classes of society. His position was far above that of an ordinary speculator, and I should call him the keystone of the commercial prosperity of Bombay. We certainly were considering the question whether we should stave off his insolvency, and on learning the large advance he required our eyes were opened to the nature of his position. Undoubtedly we ought to have had a full statement of his affairs. I cannot say that I remember any one suggesting that there should be an inquiry into his position. Premchund was not asked to satisfy us that if 25 lakhs were advanced, that sum would effect our object.

I do not think that Mr. Robertson was sent out to ask him as to his securities. There was a rough pencilled list made by Mr. Robertson at the time as to his securities. I look at a document (marked A 59).

This paper purports to be a copy of the above-mentioned pencilled list. The original statement was something to the same effect: it was sometimes in Mr. Robertson's hand, and sometimes in Mr. Tracey's. Mr. Norman, the Collector, knew the lands personally. I cannot say whether he knew whether they were incumbered. I do not remember any discussion as to whether the Bank could advance on lands. I spoke to Mr. Lidderdale shortly afterwards about it. The great question was to obtain as much security as possible. Mr. Tracey said, after going to Premchund, that he said that if we really gave him so much trouble he would prefer stopping at once. Mr. Tracey took an active part on that occasion. I should say that Mr. Tracey, not Mr. Robertson, was the exponent of Premchund's statements on that occasion. The jewels were stated to be worth twenty lakhs; they were not seen at the time. I believe some had to be obtained from his wife. I do not think that any of the jewels were known to the Directors, although it was known that he was possessed of valuable jewels. Very little discussion took place. It was considered that the advance would be well covered by the securities, and they satisfied the joint guarantors,—the Managers of the other Banks. He was to have assistance that morning, else it would be useless; there was no dissenting voice. I think I and the Government Directors felt we could not oppose our opinion against that of the Commercial Directors. We knew what the effect of Premchund's stoppage would be, and we could not incur the responsibility of opposing the loan. I should like to add for myself that I had then only been two days on the Direction, and I did not feel at liberty to take any leading part in this transaction.

The agreement come to was that the Bank of Bombay should, if need be, advance the whole of the money, but that the responsibility should be shared by the Banks in the several proportions accepted by their several Managers. I have come to know that the arrangement was not reduced into writing. I cannot say no note was taken. The Bank's Solicitor was sitting there with instructions to take a note, and reduce the matter to a legal form. Mr. Lidderdale's partner, Mr. Steuart, went for Mr. Kelly, and brought him to the meeting. I did not hear Mr. Lidderdale give him any instructions. He was there as the Bank's legal adviser. He did not reduce the arrangement into writing. I did not hear any order given to him to do so, but seeing him there with his pens and paper, we of course assumed that he would perform the business for which he had been summoned to the meeting. I understood he was there to do it, and would do it. If he had done it there I should have seen it. I did not think he was doing it then. I did not see any paper handed round for the Bank Managers to sign. I did not hear Mr. Lidderdale tell him to prepare it before the money was paid out on that afternoon. I was sitting at some distance from Mr. Lidderdale, and I might not have heard.

Question.—Do you think that you sufficiently protected the shareholders by leaving the room without the full statement of Premchund's affairs, without verifying the securities offered, and without reducing the agreement into writing, and having it signed by the Managers of the other Banks?

Answer.—I must admit it was a great omission, and I can only say in extenuation that I was quite new to the way in which business was then done, and I took it for granted that it would be properly done. I cannot remember that there was any suggestion that the terms of the arrangement should be taken down. I think it was strange not to do so. I knew that a portion of the money would have to be paid that day. I and Mr. Norman remained to breakfast with Mr. Lidderdale, and after breakfast I and Mr. Norman discussed who should go to report to the Governor of Bombay, and I and Mr. Lidderdale went. We went to Malabar Point, and were told that the Governor was at Parell, and much engaged in preparations for going to Mahabuleshwur. I had my duties to perform as Accountant General, and Mr. Lidderdale drove me back to my house and left me there. I made up my mind to see the Governor next morning, as my duties were pressing, and Parell was five miles off. I did not see the Governor or report the circumstance of the meeting to any member of Government that day.

I wrote to an Aide-de-Camp the following day. A public breakfast was given by the Governor at Malabar Hill, and I wrote to ask for a private interview with the Governor. It was the Governor's custom to have gentlemen up who wished to speak to him, one by one, after breakfast. I went in my turn. I knew Sir Bartle Frere very slightly then. I did not therefore enter into a long conversation with him, but I told him that Premchund was in difficulties, and had made an application to the Bank of Bombay for an advance. I cannot swear that I mentioned twenty-five lakhs, but to the best of my belief I said that the amount required was twenty-five lakhs. I also told Sir Bartle of the arrangement with the Managers of the leading Banks. Sir Bartle's reply was very brief. As far as I remember he said, "Have you satisfied yourselves with regard to the security?" to which I assented. I believed at the time that the President (Mr. Lidderdale) had communicated with the Governor, and I was not surprised that he did not enter more fully with me into the circumstances of the case. That was all that passed about it. Sir Bartle proceeded to talk to me about the clause as to auditing the accounts in the agreement which I brought to his notice as having been neglected, and discussed at some length his reasons for not having appointed me a Government Director when I became Officiating Accountant General. He did not express approval or disapproval of the advance to Premchund. This took place between 9 and 10 AM. on the 28th April. I believe the Bank books show that money had been paid out by the Bank on the 27th April. I cannot be sure without reference to the books. I cannot say how much was paid on the 27th April. I acted for Mr. Norman and myself in the matter in visiting the Governor. There was no other Government Director, and I and the President represented both classes of Directors.

When I said all the Directors but one were ignorant of Premchund's affairs, I referred to Mr. Tracey as the exception. I said I had been kept in ignorance by some of my brother Directors; perhaps I should have said by one of them. The occasion was this. Very shortly after the loan to Premchund had been given it appeared in our books, which were lying on the Board, that there was an amount overdrawn by Premchund to the extent of Rs. 3,50,000. I asked the Secretary, Mr. Robertson, by what authority this overdraft was allowed. I could get no information at that meeting, and I reverted to it at the next Board meeting, whereupon Mr. Robertson, looking across the table at Mr. Tracey, said that the overdraft was guaranteed by Messrs. Ritchie, Steuart, and Company. My colleagues were apparently satisfied with this explanation,—Ritchie, Steuart, and Company's firm being of undoubted standing. My mind was also satisfied, as I knew that Mr. Tracey was a partner in that firm. When Premchund failed we insisted upon the production of this guarantee, which will be found, I have no doubt, in the Bank. It was a mere note, saying, "My dear Robinson, I guarantee the payment of Premchund's overdraft." It was signed by Mr. Tracey in his own name, and the year did not appear. The letter was utterly worthless, and no guarantee. That is why I say that in this instance the Government Directors were misled. We were advised by the Bank's Solicitor that we could not recover upon it. Mr. Tracey must have been aware that it was not a guarantee. Mr. Robertson also, I think, misled us in this instance. Mr. Robertson told me afterwards that on the morning when the loan of 25 lakhs was granted, he had had a conversation with Mr. Tracey on his way to Mr. Lidderdale's bungalow, and had asked Mr. Tracey whether, in the event of the loan being granted, he would not wish a portion of it devoted to paying off the overdraft of three lakhs, and that Mr. Tracey said "No." On that morning I think the Government Directors had a right to know from the rest, that Premchund owed this money to the Bank. It was a matter on which we were neeessarily ignorant. The knowledge of it would have materially influenced our judgment. I cannot say when the title deeds were deposited. The bulk of the jewels was deposited next day, I think. I understand Rs. 2,30,000, is offered for the jewels.

Mr. Chapman.

I never heard of the Government of Bombay or any member of it being consulted as to any other loans by the Bank.

As to the Asiatic Banking Corporation's securities we thought ourselves at the time amply secured. We had constant meetings on the subject. Besides shares, there was a good deal of cash expected on which we had a lien. The full extent of the depreciation in value of shares had not, I think, been ascertained in May or June 1866. At the final meeting I believe there was a careful valuation. We were expecting an improvement, I think, at that time, and the valuation of the shares was well considered. I should like to look at the minute. Additional securities for ten lakhs were taken. I believe the fall in the value of land and in shares was unprecedented. The great fall was in June 1866. The Commercial Directors know most about these things. We lent a good deal on them.

As to the loan to Mr. Crawford, I think I recorded an objection to it, and that Mr. Lushington did also. I am not a shareholder of the Bank of Bombay now. I believe the shares taken from the Asiatic Bank were taken at the price of the day. They were not then at a premium. I do not remember that there was any margin fixed at that time with respect to advances on shares. We left some margin, I think.

There is a report by an independent Committee appointed by Government in 1866 to value the assets of the Bank, and you will find that they took the shares held as security at their market value.

I never saw the byelaws for the guidance of the Secretary that I remember; they must have been a dead letter. I have seen in the Blue Book the letter of 30th June 1865 to Government, agreeing not to make any further advances on shares. I am not aware that it was ever infringed. The overdraft by the Asiatic Bank was allowed on a deposit of shares as collateral security. If I had known what had been done in 1865 I should, no doubt, have objected. I had not then seen the letter. I do not know whether a promissory note was given.

(To Mr. Melvill.)—I was not aware that there was a practice of allowing overdrafts to everybody during my time. We reprimanded Mr. Robertson for allowing it in Premchund's case.

I wish to call the attention of the Commission to the following Resolutions in the Minute Book as showing the action of the Government Directors on the 5th June 1866:—

"Read the following proposition brought forward by the Government Directors on the 31st May 1866, and which was circulated amongst the Directors with short minutes of that date.

"Looking to the critical state of matters in Bombay, and considering the numerous failures which are daily taking place, the Government Directors are of opinion that sufficient supervision cannot be exercised over the management of the Bank by ordinary weekly meetings. They therefore consider that a Sub-Committee, composed of the Directors for the week, should daily meet at the Bank, and then and there issue in writing such instructions to the Secretary as from time to time may seem necessary. These instructions to be produced at each Board Meeting with notes by the Secretary, showing what has been done in each case.

"Resolved, That the Directors for the week meet daily at the Bank at 12 o'clock for the transaction of business that may be brought before them.

"The Secretary reported that he had been appointed one of Mr. Cursetjee Furdoonjee's Trustees.

"The Board here desired the Secretary to record their opinion and instruction with reference to Section XXIX. of the Bank's Charter, that no Officer of the Bank is to accept any office or transact any business besides that of the Bank without the special authority of the Board, and that it be understood that whatever remuneration be paid for such extra work is to be the property of the Bank, and disposable by the Directors at pleasure.

"Moved by Mr. Chapman, that in future all orders of any importance contained in Circulars be entered on the Minute of the Bank's transactions, and recorded and read at the ensuing regular Meeting."

Mr. Burjorjee Rustomjee.

BURJORJEE RUSTOMJEE, sworn.

I am a son of Rustomjee the cabinet-maker. On the 1st February 1865 I got a bill discounted at the Kalbadevi Branch of the Bank of Bombay for Rs. 5,00,000. Davidass Luckmeedass was a surety with me for that loan.

I had purchased two shares of the Elphinstone Land Company from Premchund. I paid him Rs. 40,000 in cash and the balance out of the loan. He said he had made arrangements with the Branch, and I was to go there, and the five lakhs would be advanced upon my two shares and my Bombay Reclamation Company's shares.

I bought the Bombay Reclamation Company's shares some time before, at Rs. 43,000 premium per share. I do not remember whether from Premchund's father or from whom. I did not negociate the loan; it was done by Premchund. I borrowed the five lakhs because I owed Rs. 3,65,000 to Premchund for shares in the Elphinstone Land Company, which I had purchased from him.

My two shares of the Bombay Reclamation Company were held by the Presidency Bank as a pledge for Rs. 50,000; and as to the balance, that went to pay interest to the Bank of Bombay. Davidass Luckmeedass was my broker, and lent his name only.

I had other transactions with the Bank of Bombay. I borrowed Rs. 2,50,000 from them on shares in the Commercial Bank with Atmaram Madhowjee. It was renewed on my paying Rs. 30,000. I negociated that loan personally with Mr. Bullock. It was for the purpose of buying those Commercial Bank shares. I paid Premchund Rs. 3,65,000 for those two Elphinstone Land shares.

16 July 1868.

Mr. Burjorjee Rustomjee.

(To Mr. Melvill.)—I paid Rs. 25,000 to Davidass Luckmeedass on account of some share transactions. Premchund only received Rs. 3,65,000 out of the loan of five lakhs.

In August and September 1865, I wrote to Mr. Robertson to realise my securities, as he would recover ten annas in the Rupee. I repeatedly pressed this upon him verbally and in writing, but he would not realise. He said, "Who will pay the balance?" and I promised to do so when able. He did not give me any satisfactory reason for not selling my shares.

16th July 1868.

BYRAMJEE HORMUSJEE CAMA, sworn.

I had a cash credit with the Bank of Bombay for Rs. 51,000, ending in a debit of Rs. 47,774. Another, commencing on the 12th December 1864, and ending in a debit of Rs. 98,260. A third, of Rs. 3,00,000, on the 30th January 1864, ending in June 1866 in a debit of Rs. 6,05,000. There was also a fixed loan on the 16th October 1864 for Rs. 7,00,000, and another on 9th February 1865 for Rs. 94,800. Another fixed loan on the 1st May 1865 for Rs. 1,25,000, and a bill in April 1865 for Rs. 1,00,000, and another on the 30th, making a total of Rs. 17,71,684, on which there has been a loss to the Bank of Rs. 10,20,900.

I obtained the cash credit of three lakhs on 30th January 1864, through Premchund's recommendation. It was for my general business. (Looks at a paper shown to him) (A 60). This is in his handwriting. I was allowed to overdraw up to Rs. 6,05,000 through Premchund's influence. He was employed as my broker, and I carried on joint shipments with him of cotton to Liverpool for a large amount.

I got the loan of Rs. 1,00,000 through one of my clerks. I never saw Mr. Blair, and I only saw Mr. Robertson for the first time after my suspension. I had great credit, and was carrying on an extensive business. The loan of seven lakhs was obtained through Premchund. I bought twenty-five Bombay Reclamation Company's shares from Premchund, and had paid him. The shares remained with Premchund. Afterwards he obtained the loan, and the shares were deposited with the Bank. I used the money in my general business. I have looked into my books to-day, and can say that none of the money went into Premchund's pocket.

The debit of Rs. 1,25,000 was the balance of a loan for Rs. 1,50,000, of which Rs. 25,000 had been paid off. This and other small loans were negociated by my clerk.

At my suspension I owed Premchund money; five lakhs first, and about two and a half lakhs afterwards. On the 31st October 1864 (the Dewallee) my account with Premchund appears from my books to have stood at Rs. 3,96,000 and upwards to his credit. At the end of 1864 Rs. 3,86,000 stood to his credit, and the same amount in February 1865. He was doing a large business with me as broker and joint shipper of cotton. He was particularly well acquainted with my transactions.

I failed in May 1865. In October 1864 my house was flourishing; until March 1865 I thought myself quite safe. I had shipments on my own account as well as with him. I had a large loss in Elphinstone Company's shares.

(To Mr. Melvill.) I heard of the resolution of the Directors of the Bank of Bombay of 12th April 1865 as to advancing money on security of shares at Messrs. Nicol and Company's office. I cannot say whether before or after the resolution was passed. I believe Mr. Maxwell, in Messrs. Nicol's office, told me. He said the Bank was going to take that step to relieve the public.

(To Major Innes.) I had obtained loans from the Bank before on shares, but it was only as an obligation to me that the Bank lent on twenty-five Bombay Reclamation Company's shares. It was not a usual proceeding.

20 July 1868.

Mr. Merwanjee Framjee.

20th July 1868.

MERWANJEE FRAMJEE PANDAY, sworn.

I was the Chairman of the Imperial Banking and Trading Company, which was registered on the 1st August 1864. The other Directors were Merwanjee Nusserwanjee Patell, Veerchund Deepchund, and Tulloghur Dullalgur.

The nominal capital of the Company was sixty lakhs, of which twelve lakhs were paid up. We had one general meeting of shareholders before the Company dissolved. This is the printed Report which was presented to the meeting at the end of 1865 (marked No. 1.)

The President reads from the Report as follows:—

"The Directors here beg to express their sense of grateful acknowledgment to Premchund Roychund, Esq., for the very valuable assistance invariably rendered by that gentleman, so as to afford great facilities in the management of the Company's affairs, and thus ensure great benefit to the shareholders."

Question.—To what assistance does the report here refer?

Answer.—We particularly referred in that paragraph to Premchund's giving good advice, to his buying and selling shares for us, and also to his recommending us for loans.

The Company obtained the following advances from the Bank of Bombay:—On the 8th December 1864 Rs. 5,00,000, which was paid off in March 1865; on 28th March 1865 Rs. 3,00,000, and on the 30th March 1865 Rs. 2,00,000. The last loan of two lakhs was reduced to one lakh by a payment, and renewed for one lakh. That was afterwards paid off, and the loan of three lakhs was reduced by a payment of Rs. 40,000 to Rs. 2,60,000.

We gave no security to the Bank for any of these loans. We compromised the last debt by a payment of eight annas in the Rupee, so that the loss to the Bank was Rs. 1,30,000.

The advance of five lakhs on the 8th December 1864 was taken for a joint purchase by the Imperial Banking and Trading Company and Premchund of sixty-two Bombay Reclamation Company's shares; an interest to the extent of one-third in that purchase was taken by our Company, and the remaining two-thirds by Premchund. He supplied the shares. Premchund managed the advance of five lakhs from the Bank of Bombay, and obtained also six lakhs from the Asiatic Bank. We paid the five lakhs borrowed from the Bank of Bombay to the credit of the Imperial Banking and Trading Company's account with the Asiatic Bank. I do not know that it was transferred there to his account on the same day.

Premchund sent word to me through Veerchund Deepchund; recommending the Company to buy one hundred Bombay Reclamation Company's shares. I replied that the Company had not sufficient money, but I could buy to the extent of fifty shares if he would take an interest to the extent of two-thirds of the purchase. I wrote to him on the 22nd November 1864, and I produce a copy of my letter (marked N 2, and translated by the Interpreter to the Commission as follows:—"The message which you sent to me through Bhai Veerchund Saheb to the effect that I should buy fifty Back Bay shares for the present, on account of my Bank, out of which I am to have one-third share, and you are to have two-thirds, has been received. I will debit to your account the amount of your share, and the Imperial Banking and Trading Company's shares will be debited to the account of the company.")

Three or four days afterwards he came to my bungalow, and asked me whether I had bought the shares, and I replied "No, I looked to you to buy." He then referred to my note which he took out of his pocket, and said "Yes, it is so, I will buy them." I afterwards received from him this letter (marked N 3):—

"My dear Sett Merwanjee, I have got six lakhs from the Asiatic, and you shall have five from Mr. Blair, but I will send the receipt from him to you.

"Yours truly,

"6th December 1864. PREMCHUND R."

The promissory notes of the 28th and 30th March were renewals of the old loan of Rs. 5,00,000. The renewals were arranged partly by our Secretary and partly by Premchund. Loans were arranged by Premchund when the Company was in any difficulty.

On the 11th October 1865 we paid off Rs. 1,00,000 of the note for two lakhs, and it was renewed for the balance of Rs. 1,00,000, that left us owing four lakhs to the Bank of Bombay. We paid another lakh, and discharged the note for Rs. 1,00,000. Our final debt to the Bank was Rs. 2,60,000 for which we gave a promissory note on which the Bank obtained a judgment against the Company.

Mr. Merwanjee Framjee.

On the 18th April 1865 the Imperial Banking and Trading Company obtained from the Bank of Bombay another loan of Rs. 2,50,000 in the name of my Muccadum, Doongersey Gopajee. Ten Back Bay shares were deposited as security for that advance. On the 24th April 1865 we obtained another loan of two lakhs in the name of Dhunjeebhoy Pestonjee, my nephew, on security of ten Back Bay shares. We took those loans in the names of those persons because it was not creditable to the Imperial Banking and Trading Company to obtain loans on deposit of shares. The Company was in the habit of obtaining advances on its promissory note alone.

Both those loans were subsequently transferred into Premchund's account with the Bank of Bombay. Premchund owed the Imperial Banking and Trading Company about eight lakhs, and when the Company wanted money and pressed him to pay this debt and clear off his shares, those debts to the Bank of Bombay were transferred to him. The Bank accepted him. I do not know that Premchund gave a promissory note with Meyabhoy Premabhoy to the Bank of Bombay for Rs. 4,50,000. He took off our hands our liability to the Bank for the two sums of Rs. 2,50,000 and Rs. 2,00,000.

(To Mr. Melvill.) Those twenty shares were bought long before. I cannot say who arranged those two loans with the Bank of Bombay.

(To President.) I have never seen Mr. Blair. The two loans were obtained when the Bank was lending money on shares at fixed rates.

Mr. Merwanjee Framjee.

MERWANJEE FRAMJEE PANDAY recalled, after Jehangeer Rustomjee had been examined.

I do not remember that at any time the Company was in want of a loan of eight lakhs. Premchund might have asked Mr. Blair for eight lakhs for us.

He owed the Company that amount. Looks at a paper shewn to him (marked A 62). I cannot read this handwriting. I do not recollect that Premchund ever suggested that he would get a loan of eight lakhs from the Bank of Bombay for the Company.

20th July 1868.

20 July 1868.
Mr. Jehangeer Rustomjee.

JEHANGEER RUSTOMJEE MODY, sworn.

I was the Secretary of the Imperial Banking and Trading Company. I have heard the evidence given by the Chairman of the Company. I concur in all that he has said.

On the 20th October 1864 there was an advance of five lakhs to the Company by the Bank of Bombay. I applied by letter of the 18th October 1864 to the Secretary of the Bank. I produce his reply (marked N 4). I do not know who recommended that loan.

Looks at a letter shewn to him (marked A 61). I recognise Premchund's handwriting on this letter. These five lakhs were obtained for the general purposes of the Company. The debt was paid off on the 21st January 1865. The amount of the loan less the discount was lodged to the credit of the Company with the Asiatic Bank. About April and May 1865 the Company was often in want of money. I look at a paper shewn to me (marked A 62). The letter P makes me believe this to be Premchund's handwriting, but I cannot speak to it. I cannot recollect asking Premchund to obtain a loan of eight lakhs for the company. I see that the paper bears Mr. Blair's initials.

The first loan to the Company was made in September 1864. The money was borrowed for the general business of the Company, and was paid off on the 8th December 1864. It was a loan of one lakh for three months.

I look at another letter shown to me (marked A 63). It is in Premchund's handwriting. I do not know of any recommendation being given by Premchund for the loan of one lakh. I applied for it by a letter of the 5th September. No one recommended the Company for it. The sixty-two Bombay Reclamation Company's shares were all bought by Premchund—twenty-five on the 16th December 1864, twenty-five on the 23rd December 1864, and twelve on different dates.

On the 3rd February 1865 there was another loan for two lakhs in the names of Merwanjee Framjee and Company, and Veerchund Deepchund. That money was obtained for the purchase of shares. The principal business of the Imperial Banking and Trading Company was the purchase of shares. That loan was paid off. There was no other transaction which has not been mentioned by Merwanjee Framjee in his evidence.

20 July 1868.

KURSONDASS MADHOWDASS, affirmed.

I am a Merchant. In August 1864 there were several loans granted to me by the Bank of Bombay. On the 24th August 1864 four lakhs were obtained in my own name. On the 29th August 1864 eight lakhs in the name of my partner Meyabhoy Premabhoy, and in the name of my partner Muggon Huttising eight lakhs, and on 26th September five lakhs in my own name.

No security was given for the loan of four lakhs; security was given for the three loans of eight lakhs, eight lakhs, and five lakhs. Eighty Back Bay shares were lodged with the Bank of Bombay on account of those loans. The loss to the Bank on my loans is Rs. 7,80,000.

Before I obtained the loan of four lakhs Premchund came to me and said that he was asked by the Bank of Bombay to get money invested, and asked me whether I would take a loan of three or four lakhs. He said "They do not know what to do with their money." I took four lakhs for three months. I gave a promissory note without security. As to the three loans amounting to twenty-one lakhs a proposal came to me through Veerchund Deepchund to buy Bombay Reclamation Company's shares on the joint account of Premabhoy Hemabhoy Premchund Roychund, and my firm.

My firm consisted of Meyabhoy Premabhoy, Muggon Huttising, and Veerchund Deepchund, besides myself. The proposal was to buy one hundred Back Bay shares at Rs. 24,000 or Rs. 25,000 premium. That was the ruling rate. The money was to be obtained from the Bank of Bombay as a fixed loan till the 1st July 1865 on security of the shares. I believe that the two loans of eight lakhs each were obtained by Meyabhoy Premabhoy and Muggon Huttising through Premchund's influence. The loan to me of five lakhs was negociated through Premchund with the Bank of Bombay.

Question.—Why were Premabhoy's and Premchund's names kept back?

Answer.—It never occurred to me that it was better to keep back their names. There was no reason for suppressing Premchund's name. He was a Director of the Bank at the time. The question of keeping back his name was never discussed between us. The eighty shares were deposited in the Bank. I bought them in the Bazaar through several brokers. Premchund was one of them. Fifty-three shares were bought from Premchund. Premabhoy Hemabhoy, Premchund Roychund, and my firm were the purchasers. Meyabhoy and Muggon were members of my firm, and their names were used. The eighty shares were lying in the Bank, and I sold fifty-two of them for Rs. 25,80,000 to Cursetjee Furdoonjee for delivery on the 1st July 1865, but they were never paid for.

The whole of the twenty-one lakhs was transferred by the Bank of Bombay in December 1864 as follows:—To Premabhoy Hemabhoy five lakhs, to Premchund Roychund nine lakhs, and to myself eleven lakhs. My share included my first loan of four lakhs.

The time bargain transaction with Cursetjee Furdoonjee not having been settled for at the due date, I represented to the Bank of Bombay the loss which I had incurred by the transaction not being carried out, and with a view to make the Bank safe and secure, and to reduce the liability which rested on my shoulders, as Premchund's position was undoubted (he was considered a man of immense wealth, and Premabhoy also was a wealthy man), I proposed that the loans should be transferred to the parties in the proportions in which they were beneficially interested. I wrote a letter to the Secretary, Mr. Robertson, and my proposal was acceded to by the Bank.

The Bank looked to my firm as liable for the two loans of eight lakhs each; I therefore wanted to shift some of the responsibility to Premchund and Premabhoy. I was only interested in the loans to the extent of nine lakhs, but my partners were liable for the rest; and I agreed to become responsible for eleven lakhs. I also gave further security to the Bank. The claim on Cursetjee Furdoonjee's estate was pledged to them, and the dividends on that claim are paid to the Bank. The Bank gained by the transfer. In December 1865 Premchund was looked upon as a millionaire, and the Bank obtained Premabhoy and Premchund as its debtors instead of Meyabhoy and Muggon, and Premabhoy alone gave securities costing him, as I know, twenty lakhs.

There were amongst them a number of shares in the Bombay and Bengal Steam Ship Company. In February 1866 his shares forming part of the original purchase of Back Bay shares were deposited, and he gave additional security. I have not been sued by the Bank. Premabhoy was. I was only sued as a security for the loan of twenty-five lakhs to Premchund, made in April 1866. The result of the suit was a compromise. My trustees were sued, not I. The Bank did not obtain much by the action.

The loss upon my transactions with the Bank, exclusive of that suretyship, has been Rs. 7,80,000. I failed on the 16th May 1866. Meyabhoy was a son of Premabhoy. He was twenty-five or thirty years of age. I do not know of his having joined Premchund in a note for Rs. 4,50,000 to the Bank of Bombay.

20 July 1868.

Mr. Dossabhoy Dhunjeebhoy.

DOSSABHOY DHUNJEEBHOY, sworn.

I was Premchund Roychund's Manager in 1864 and 1865. His account in the Asiatic Bank stood in my name. I had two advances from the Bank of Bombay; the first on the 27th May 1865 of Rs. 30,000, and on the 31st August in the same year a loan of Rs. 70,000. The loss to the Bank may have been Rs. 44,542 on those advances. For the first loan I was told by the Secretary that I must give approved security. The money was paid to me on the 27th May 1865. I believe the receipt for the deposit of shares was given to me on the 8th June by the Bank. To the best of my knowledge I deposited the securities before I received the money. I obtained the next loan on the 31st August 1865. I deposited the securities for it on the 8th September.

I believe I promised to deliver the shares in a day or two.

I do not know that it was the custom of the Bank to part with money without first having the securities deposited. For the last loan I asked Mr. Robertson to let me have the money to buy the shares with, on my promise to deposit the shares. He knew I was Premchund's Manager. I used to see Mr. Robertson every day. The money which I borrowed from the Bank was for my own business, not for Premchund's.

20th July 1868.

20 July 1868.

Mr. Navulchud Nanchund.

NAVULCHUD NANCHUND affirmed.

I am an Exchange and Share Broker. I trade on my own account also. I am Premchund's brother-in-law. On the 13th April 1865 I obtained a loan from the Bank of Bombay of four lakhs. On the 24th of February 1865 I had a loan from the Bank of two lakhs, which was partly paid off, and renewed on the 5th June 1865 for the balance of Rs. 80,000.

No security was given for the loan of two lakhs. It was obtained on a promissory note. No security was given for the loan of four lakhs at the time, but subsequently security was given. I do not remember exactly when. I do not think I was applying for the renewal of the loan of two lakhs at the time I deposited security for the other loan. At the time when I applied for the four lakhs I offered to deposit two hundred shares of the Elphinstone Land and Press Company. I was expecting to receive those shares. I cannot remember that the deposit was not made till the 1st June.

(Looks at a paper shewn to him, being an acknowledgment by Messrs. Nicol and Company, the Managers of the Company, dated 13th April 1865, that witness was entitled to receive two hundred fully paid up share certificates to be delivered on the 18th April; marked A 64.)

I cannot say that I deposited this paper when I applied for the four lakhs. I went to the Secretary. I said that I wanted four lakhs, and would deposit my shares in the Elphinstone Land Company, which I expected to receive from Messrs. Nicol and Company. I was asked to draw a cheque on the Bank of Bombay for four lakhs. I accordingly drew a cheque for that amount in favour of Messrs. Nicol and Company, and the Bank of Bombay paid the amount of that cheque to them for the Elphinstone Company. At that time the shares would have realised from six and a half to seven lakhs. The loss on these loans may be Rs. 3,88,932.

Question.—How did you obtain these large loans?

Answer.—I was a broker and in the habit of frequenting all the Banks.

I do not remember asking Premchund to use his influence to obtain the loans for me. Perhaps I did have a conversation about it with him, but I cannot remember it. I certainly did obtain loans from the Bank for six lakhs without security, but I promised to lodge security, and I did so when I obtained the renewal for Rs. 80,000. I do not think I experienced any difficulty, although I owed four lakhs. I was told to make a payment on account and to renew the rest.

I believe the amount will appear in Nicol and Company's books. They are the Managers of the Elphinstone Land and Press Company. I bought a large number of shares at the auction sale of Elphinstone Land and Press Company's shares, and paid money as the share certificates were ready. I bought the shares for myself and Cumulsee Premjee, but they stood in my name in the Elphinstone Land and Press Company's books. Cumulsee is a broker.

20th July 1868.

20 July 1868.

Mr. Jaiverlall Umiashunker.

JAIVERLALL UMIASHUNKER, affirmed.

I was Secretary to the Kattiawar Trading Company, also to the Broach Cotton Mill. A loan of one lakh was granted by the Bank on the 6th March 1864 for two months at fifteen per cent. to the Kattiawar Trading Company. I did not give any security for that loan. Rs. 25,000 were paid on the 9th May, and the loan renewed for three months for Rs. 75,000 at thirteen per cent. There was no security given on that renewal. That note fell due in August 1864, and was renewed. It was reduced by a payment of Rs. 19,000 arising from the sale of a Back Bay share, which made the debit Rs. 56,600. Two Back Bay shares were deposited I believe on the 15th August 1864.

The Directors of the Kattiawar Trading Company were Bharmull Purbhutt Veerchund Deepchund, Jugjeewandass Hemjee, Gopallrow Bulwunt, and Tullockchund Hookumchund. I believe that no Official of the Bank of Bombay was a shareholder in the Company. I believe the Company obtained its advances from the Bank of Bombay through the influence of Premchund Roychund.

On the 13th December 1864 the Company had a loan of Rs. 50,000 from the Bank, which was repaid on the 6th March 1865. I do not know who recommended the Company to the Bank.

This letter shewn to me (marked A 65) has Premchund's writing across it, and it appears that he recommended the Company for the loan. The Directors were well known to him, and I believe they must have obtained the other loan through him.

I obtained three loans from the Bank in my own name:—

On 12th April 1865	Rs.	50,000
On the 20th April 1865	,,	80,500
And on the 27th April 1865	,,	94,500
Making altogether	Rs.	2,25,000

on which the Bank of Bombay has sustained a loss of Rs. 1,45,290. I gave no security for the loan of Rs. 50,000. Two hundred and thirty Asiatic Bank shares were deposited for the loan of Rs. 80,500. I do not know on what day. That loan and the loan for Rs. 94,500 were granted on security of shares.

President.—On the 30th May you deposited securities; were not the loans granted without security?

Answer.—I promised to give security, and I deposited the shares on the 30th May following. I had a previous loan of one lakh from the Bank on the 19th December 1864, which I paid off.

I do not remember having applied to anyone to recommend me to the Bank of Bombay. I know Premchund well. I do not remember asking him to recommend me to the Bank for these loans. He may have done so. I made a payment of Rs. 5,000 on the 17th July 1865, and some other payments, reducing the debt to Rs. 2,10,000, for which a new note was given on 4th December 1865. There has been a loss to the Bank of Rs. 1,45,290. As further security for this loan I made over two Back Bay shares in August 1865, and the title deeds of my property in Portuguese Church Street, worth Rs. 80,000, and three months further time was given.

After September 1865 a reaction in the value of shares took place. Asiatic Bank shares went up to sixty per cent. premium, and I urged the Secretary to sell and pay off the debt. It would have realised the Bank debt and left me a surplus. Mr. Robertson expected a further rise, and he did not realise the securities. I made subsequent payments, and reduced the loan of Rs. 2,10,000 to Rs. 1,45,290. I protested against the usurious rate of interest, and begged for a reduction to a moderate rate.

The loan of Rs. 1,00,000 to the Kattiawar Trading Company, was for the purchase of two Back Bay shares. They were bought from different Brokers. My loans from the Bank of Bombay were obtained for the purchase of Back Bay shares. The purchase was a joint transaction with Premchund Roychund and Veerchund Deepchund. We raised a loan of five lakhs from the Asiatic Bank for the same purpose. The first transaction I had with the Bank I settled at the due date, and I cannot recollect that Premchund Roychund recommended me for the subsequent ones.

22nd July 1868.

Mr. Sorabjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy.

SORABJEE JAMSETJEE JEJEEBHOY, examined without oath at Bandora.

I obtained a cash credit of five lakhs from the Bank on the 14th July 1864. I had a Bill discounted on the 17th July 1865 for Rs. 1,75,000, and another on the 22nd July for Rs. 1,00,000, making a total in my name of Rs, 7,75,000.

For the first loan of five lakhs I gave no security. I merely signed a promissory note. The advance was negociated by Premchund Roychund for me; I did not request him to do so. He came to me one day in July 1864 at my bungalow on Malabar Hill, and asked me if I had any Bombay Reclamation Company's shares. I said, "No." He told me to apply for them to Mr. Cowasjee Jehangeer. I wrote a note to Cowasjee Jehangeer. He said in reply that all the shares he had were distributed amongst his friends, and that there were no more remaining with him to give me.

Next day Premchund called on me and asked whether I had received a favourable reply from Cowasjee. I said "No," and produced Cowasjee's note. He read it and said it was all bosh. Afterwards he recommended me to apply for them to the then Honourable Mr. Scott. I wrote a note to Mr. Scott. He was just leaving for Poona, and he sent me "Salaam." I heard no more from him. Premchund again called on me to know whether I had received any shares from Mr. Scott. I replied in the negative. He said, "Never mind, I will manage all that for you," and told me to give him a commission to purchase for me as many shares as I wished. I told him that I was short of money, and I could do no more than purchase a few shares. Premchund thereupon said "Take my word, Sorabjee, and do not trouble yourself about money. I will get you as much money as you require. But do not go in for less than one hundred shares." I expressed surprise at his proposal, seeing that I was unable to pay for all these shares. He told me that he could procure ten lakhs of Rupees in a twinkling. I agreed to it, and asked how he could manage it. He said he would get the money from the Asiatic and the Bombay Banks. The next day or the day after that, he sent me two notes, one addressed to Mr. Morrison, the Manager of the Asiatic Bank, and one to Mr. Blair. In the latter he wrote—"My dear Mr. Blair, could you accommodate Sorabjee with five lakhs?" The letter to Mr. Morrison was of the same purport. On the other side of the two chits (notes) he had got replies from Mr. Blair and Mr. Morrison, saying they would give the money with pleasure.

Next day he called on me at my office, and asked me if I was able now to go in for shares. I said "No, not the hundred," and gave him a commission for forty-three shares only. Ten lakhs were not sufficient for the purchase money of forty-three shares, so Premchund asked me to send in some money to the Banks to my credit. I accordingly did so. It was about Rs. 60,000 (referring to his books), Rs. 26,500 to the Bank of Bombay, and Rs. 40,000 to the Asiatic. On the 14th July he came to me personally for the cheques, and asked me to hand them over to him. I accordingly did so. I cannot remember whether I ever signed a promissory note. Cash credits had been opened in my name. I think that was all. I gave Premchund cheques for the whole amount out of both Banks.

Two or three days after that, I asked him for the share certificates. He said he would send them in a day or so. A few days after he sent me allotment certificates of forty-three shares, standing in the names of Premchund himself, his father Roychund, Navalchund his brother-in-law, Heerjee Jehangeer, brother of Cowasjee Jehangeer, and Mr. Cassels, accompanied with a note from him (Premchund) to me. I produce the note (marked O).

"MY DEAR SETT SORABJEE,

"I herewith send you 43 shares, and I will get them all transferred from these names to yours when I come back from Poonah on Tuesday. This I send you in case anything happens to me.

"Yours sincerely,

"15th July 1864. PREMCHUND R."

I was rather at a loss to account for shares belonging to Premchund, his father, and brother-in-law, and other Directors of the Bombay Reclamation Company being for sale. I therefore wrote a note to a friend of mine in the Direction (Mr. Cassels), asking his advice as to whether it was a profitable concern to invest money in, and giving as my reason for asking, that I was astonished at finding from the share certificates which Mr. Premchund had delivered to me, that some of the shares were in the names of parties whose shares I should not have expected to be in the Bazaar. The reply I received was that it was a good concern to invest money in, and that at the end of a year there would be a vast profit. With regard to the shares of the Directors I got the reply that they belonged to their up-country friends, and that they wished them to be sold. This satisfied me. Premchund afterwards got the shares transferred to my name.

The Bill of Rs. 1,75,000, dated the 17th July 1865, was a renewal. I had obtained three lakhs on a promissory note on the 9th December 1864. I gave no security. I negociated that loan myself. I forget whether it was with Mr. Blair or Mr. Robertson. I think Mr. Blair. He said I could have the money. I went to him myself. I got no one to recommend me. I was buying cotton, for which I wanted money. The money went to one Gopall Mhyral for the cotton. Subsequently, on the 8th March 1865, I paid one lakh and got a renewal for two lakhs, which I reduced to Rs. 1,75,000 on the 13th June following by a payment of Rs. 25,000 from my Current Deposit Account. The debt of Rs. 1,75,000 was allowed to stand over till the 17th July 1865, when, being in difficulties, I got my brother Rustomjee to arrange my affairs with the Bank. I do not know what securities were deposited by him for the debt. On the date of the third loan for one lakh I was laid up with sickness, and do not know how the loan was obtained.

I was indebted to the Elphinstone Financial Company for one lakh just before I made over my accounts to Rustomjee. He had to pay one lakh on my account to the Elphinstone Financial Company, and he got the debt transferred to the Bombay Bank. I think the Bombay Bank had an account with the Elphinstone Financial Company, and they arranged it between them. I owed the Elphinstone Financial Company one lakh, and they owed the Bombay Bank one lakh, and they induced the Bank to allow my debt to be substituted for their own. It was all done through Rustomjee, who guaranteed the debt. I did not commence trading till 1863, when I began to trade with Premabhaee Hemabhaee. I had never meddled with shares until the occasion to which I have referred. Besides the transfer of the one lakh from the Elphinstone Financial Company, Rustomjee got two lakhs which I owed to the Asiatic Bank transferred to the Bombay Bank. Why I do not know.

24th July 1868.

Mr. Bomanjee Cursetjee Cama.

BOMANJEE CURSETJEE CAMA, sworn.

I had three transactions with the Bank of Bombay. First a cash credit on the 9th October 1863 for Rs. 2,00,000, for which I gave a promissory note without security. I had also a bill discounted jointly with Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff on the 14th February 1865 for Rs. 1,00,000, and on the 27th April 1865 a Bill in my own name was discounted for Rs. 2,00,000. I do not know that the loss on the transaction with Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff amounts to Rs. 99,610, or that the loss in respect of the two other loans amounts to Rs. 2,91,350.

As to the cash credit in October 1863 Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff informed me that the Bank of Bombay was granting cash credits on promissory notes, and procured the credit for me. I believe it was not generally known that the Bank was granting such cash credits. I did not know it at least. I do not know where Pestonjee Cursetjee obtained the information. I believe Pestonjee Cursetjee negociated the loan with the Manager of the Bank, but I do not know it with certainty. I do not know that anyone recommended me to the Bank for the loan. Pestonjee Cursetjee received the money. I do not know to what purpose the money was applied; it was borrowed for him for a few days. He said he could not get the credit in his own name, and therefore he would use mine. I believe when the time of the credit expired I asked Pestonjee Cursetjee to pay the amount, and to the best of my recollection he paid it off by several payments. I was not further troubled about it. I never heard of it again until the present time. I do not know whether Pestonjee Cursetjee was on intimate terms with the Bank officials. I have never heard till now that any portion of that advance is due, and never had a letter from Mr. Blair or Mr. Robertson about it.

As to the Bill for Rs. 1,00,000, that money was obtained for the use of Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff himself. He was a great friend of mine. I signed merely to accommodate him. He is not in Bombay now. I hear that he is in the Guicowar's territory. He has never paid anything to me on account of these liabilities.

Mr. Bomanjee Cursetjee Cama.

The Rs. 2,00,000 borrowed on the 27th April 1865 were secured by a deposit of the certificates of six hundred shares of the Commercial Bank. It was transacted by Pestonjee Cursetjee, and was for his benefit, and I do not know the particulars about it. I cannot explain why the money was paid on the 27th April, and the share certificates not deposited till the 30th May following. I was very friendly with him, and therefore lent him my name for these large loans. I do not know how he employed the money. At that time he was in a position to pay off those loans, and I did not consider it necessary to inquire about them.

I applied for the last loan of 27th April 1865 at Pestonjee Cursetjee's request. (Looks at a letter shewn to him marked A 66.) This signature, which purports to be mine, is not mine, and the letter was not written by me. I believe that Pestonjee Cursetjee cannot write English. This writing across the letter I believe to be Premchund's from the signature. I never applied to the Bank of Bombay for five lakhs.

On the 24th April 1865 I did not hold one thousand three hundred and fifty Commercial Bank shares. I had not any shares in that Bank. I mean I had no interest in any. Some may have stood in my name. I never authorized Pestonjee Cursetjee to use my name in applications to the Bank even for a pie. The shares deposited with the Bank belonged to Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff. He had the whole of the money which was obtained from the Bank of Bombay by loans, in which my name appears.

Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff said he had negociated the loan for two lakhs. He brought the bill and asked for my signature. When the subsequent loans were obtained he assured me he had paid off the first loan for two lakhs. I never went to the Bank to inquire whether he had done so.

24th July 1868.

24 July 1868.

Mr. Macfarlane.

JOHN MACFARLANE, sworn.

I am a Solicitor practising in Bombay.

There were four bills with the Bank of Bombay to which my name was attached. The first dated 23rd June 1864 jointly with Merwanjee Nasserwanjee for Rs. 15,000, the second on the 15th July 1864 jointly with Mr. Brown for Rs. 30,000. Another on the 18th February 1865 jointly with Framjee Ardaseer Davur for Rs. 30,000, and the last on the 21st April 1865 with Mr. Brice and others for one lakh. No security was taken by the Bank for any of these advances.

The loan to me and Merwanjee Nasserwanjee was for an Oil Pressing Company, which was being wound up. Merwanjee was one of the Directors of it, and he asked me to join him as the Bank required two names. The Bank claimed against the Company, and not against my estate.

The advance to me and to Mr. Brown was obtained by him either from Mr. Blair or Mr. Robertson. I believe I heard of no difficulty in obtaining it. We were not asked for security. We divided the money between us. I do not recollect what I did with the money which I received. I cannot say whether I purchased shares with it.

I obtained the loan to myself and Framjee Ardaseer. I saw either Mr. Blair or Mr. Robertson. No difficulty was raised. I do not recollect any remark being made about outstanding advances. The former bills had been renewed. Rupees 10,000 had been paid on the loan with Mr. Brown. We were asked to pay something.

The money borrowed with Framjee Ardaseer was taken to buy shares with. He almost invariably bought the shares. He was in the habit of seeing Brokers. I only obtained the money. I believe Framjee Ardaseer is in Bombay.

The loan to me, Mr. Brice, Mr. Taylor, and Nowrojee Ardaseer Davur was obtained, I believe, by Mr. Brice. He saw the Manager of the Bank, I believe. I did not hear of any difficulty about obtaining the advance, although we were all under advances to the Bank at the time. Mr. Brice said he had arranged the loan, and we had only to sign the note. It was for the purchase of land. I believe the Bank Manager was told the purpose for which the money was wanted.

I signed Mr. Brown's release. I did not attend the meeting of his creditors.

Question.—As a Solicitor and a man of business, I suppose you looked through the deed before you signed it?

Answer.—I looked over the deed, and knew the purport of it. I did not care much about it. I scarcely regarded myself as a creditor. The only transaction I had with him was the joint note for Rs. 30,000 to the Bank of Bombay.

Question.—Can you account for the recitals in the Deed that Mr. Brown had become indebted in the course of his business as a Broker to the creditors named in the Schedule, and that their debts are mentioned in the Schedule, no Schedule of debts appearing in fact in the Deed?

Answer.—I cannot explain why there is no Schedule of Debts appended to the Deed. I had very little interest in the matter. His debts were not contracted in his business as a Broker. I believe the Deed was prepared in the office of the late Mr. Crawford.

I had a transaction with Mr. A. Morrison of the Asiatic Bank in Back Bay shares. I had no knowledge till yesterday that Mr. Tracey had any connexion with it. Mr. Brown transacted the purchase as a Broker for me. The purchase was made about October or November 1864. I supposed I had bought six Back Bay shares from Mr. A. Morrison. I had no idea that Mr. Tracey had anything to do with it, till I heard it from Mr. Chauntrell yesterday.

Mr. Macfarlane.

I believed at first I was dealing with Mr. Morrison individually. Afterwards I was told it was with the Asiatic Bank. I was not aware that the dividend on my estate had been credited to Mr. Tracey. I cannot give any reasons for the concealment of Mr. Tracey's name. I am not a shareholder in the Bank of Bombay.

24th July 1868.

24 July 1868.
Mr. Bhow Dajee.

BHOW DAJEE, affirmed.

I am a medical practitioner in Bombay. I am not a trader in any way. I obtained the following advances from the Bank of Bombay. On the 16th November 1864 Rs. 30,000, and on the 20th December 1864 Rs. 30,000. These were from the Head Office, and resulted in a loss to the Bank of Rs. 60,000. At the Kalbadevi Branch of the Bank I obtained Rs. 50,000 on the 25th January 1865, and on the 16th February 1865 a sum of Rs. 25,000. I gave no security for any of these loans. I only signed promissory notes. I obtained the two discounts of Rs. 30,000 each myself. I had been dealing with the Bank for six months at that time, and had paid off former advances.

I was introduced to the Bank by Premchund Roychund. My brother, who is also a medical practitioner, chiefly attended him and his family. I did also. I was not asked any questions about the use I intended to make of the money. I used the money in buying shares. I bought them in the bazaar through different Brokers. Most of them were allotment certificates blank endorsed. I cannot say from whom I bought. I did not buy from Premchund Roychund. On the 25th January 1865 I obtained the first loan at the Kalbadevi Branch for Rs. 50,000.

Question.—Did you not first apply at the Head Office for Rs. 50,000?

Answer.—No.

President.—Is it not the fact that you applied at the Head Office and were refused?

Answer.—No, I do not remember it.

Question.—How did you happen to go to the Kalbadevi Branch?

Answer.—I was recommended by Premchund to go there and apply. He told me that he had arranged the loan there, and that if I went I should get it. I had previously applied to Premchund Roychund to assist me himself. He afterwards told me I could go to the Kalbadevi Branch. I went there and saw Mr. Bullock the Agent. I told him I was recommended by Premchund to see him, and that I wanted a loan of Rs. 50,000. I think I did not tell him that I owed Rs. 60,000 at the Head Office. He did not inquire whether I owed any money at the Head Office. He did not ask why I had come there, instead of applying to the Head Office. There was no difficulty made about the advance. It had been arranged by Premchund. I got the money in a few minutes.

The money was obtained for speculation and to pay margin money. There were a large number of shares which I had mortgaged. I had to pay money to Kokul Futtechund, and I think I had to pay margin money to the Indian Peninsular Bank. Premchund gave me some money about that date, Rs. 28,000 on account of some Back Bay shares, which he had bought and sold for me at some profit. It was a voluntary offer of his to do it. The Rs. 50,000 were not borrowed to enable me to pay him, not a Rupee of it went to him.

I was surety for my brother on account of the loan from the Bank of Bombay for Rs. 25,000 He deposited some Back Bay shares to secure it. I did not know how he obtained the money. I did not see Mr. Bullock about obtaining that loan. I do not know what recommendation was given. I do not know when the shares were lodged. I have only been told by my brother that he deposited shares.

Question.—Should you not be surprised to learn that no shares were lodged till the 21st April 1865?

Answer.—It may be so. I cannot give any information about it. The Bank of Bombay signed my trust deed. I am quite sure that I did not first apply at the Head Office for the loan of Rs. 50,000 before going to the Kalbadevi Branch.

24 July 1868
Mr. Sorabjee Byramjee Colah.

SORABJEE BYRAMJEE COLAH, sworn.

There are two bills to the Bank of Bombay outstanding against me in the names of myself and Cursondass Mathuradass. He was my book-keeper. The Bank of Bombay required two names, therefore I put my servant in as surety. I cannot say whether that is the usual way of meeting the Bank's requisition for two names.

There were two loans. On the 6th January 1865 a bill was discounted for Rs. 50,000, and another for the same amount on the 1st March 1865. The loss on those advances may be Rs. 87,866. There were previous advances made to me, one with Mr. De Quadros of Rs. 40,000, and another sum of Rs. 50,000. These have been paid off. There was not any loan of one lakh. I remember sending in this slip for discount (marked A 67). I saw Mr. Blair about the first advance for Rs. 50,000. I do not know whom he consulted. I went another day and he told me I could have it. I was known to Premchund. I did not ask him to get me the money. I am not aware of his having recommended me. I obtained the second advance of Rs. 50,000 from Mr. Blair or Mr. Robertson. I went myself. The Rs. 90,000 had been paid off, and think I had paid Rs. 50,000 on a renewal of the first bill for Rs. 50,000. No security was asked for. I had no difficulty. I paid away the first Rs. 50,000 to some Banks. I paid the second sum of Rs. 50,000 into my account with the Commercial Bank.

24th July 1868.

24 July 1868.
Mr. Caundass Narrondass.

CAUNDASS NARRONDASS, affirmed.

I am a general merchant. I know nothing of a loan of three lakhs from the Bank of Bombay in my name in May 1865. This letter shown to me is in Premchund's handwriting (A 68). I produce my cash book. There is no such entry in it. If I owed the money to Premchund there would be an entry of the amount in his account. I look at his account, there is no such entry in it. I do not remember any such transaction. I have lost my memory. Premchund used to transact all my business on my behalf.

President.—Has it been paid off?

Answer.—That may be, but my books have no record of the transaction.

My first loan from the Bank was two lakhs on the 27th September 1865. No security was given when the loan was granted. This loan was negociated by Premchund. So were all my loans. Out of these two lakhs I paid one lakh to the Brokers' Bank, and Rs. 96,800 to the Commercial Bank to my own account. I had confidence in Premchund, and friendship for many years with him, and therefore allowed him to manage my affairs. I paid him no commission. In many of my transactions he was interested as a partner to the extent of one-half. Those joint transactions came down to my failure, which took place on the 29th September 1866. I cannot say from memory when they commenced. I believe the first joint transaction took place fifteen years ago; they were going on for the last fourteen years before my failure.

Question.—I suppose that was the reason why you signed as a surety on the note for twenty-five lakhs advanced to him?

Answer.—Yes.

The joint transactions between us were numerous. I at first declined to become security for the twenty-five lakhs. He then assured me that he had given security to the Bank to the value of thirty-nine lakhs in the shape of jewellery and landed property, and that his father and Kursondass Madhowdass were also sureties for the amount, and that I need not therefore be afraid. I have not paid any part of that loan to the Bank, and I did not receive any part of the amount.

When the twenty-five lakhs fell due to the Bank, I wrote to Premchund and received this letter from him (exhibit marked P). I had become security for him to the extent of eleven lakhs to other Banks. He was interested with me in shipments of cotton to the extent of twenty-eight thousand bales, and in share transactions on which there is a loss of seventeen lakhs. (Looks at his Schedule, produced by the Official Assignee.) I have not represented here that I owe the Bank of Bombay five lakhs. The debt is entered as Rs. 2,55,717–12–0 exclusive of my security for the twenty-five lakhs.

Mr. Caundass Narrondass.

I received from the Bank on 7th June 1866 Rs. 82,254–4–8, and paid for hoondies drawn on account of my joint cotton transactions with Premchund. The hoondies were drawn on me by Premchund's Agents in the Mofussil. This sum was overdrawn, or drawn from my current deposit account with the Bank. On 22nd May 1866 Rs. 40,000 were drawn by me from the Bank of Bombay. Another sum of Rs. 40,000 was drawn by me on 23rd May 1866; that was for the same purpose. Premchund's branch houses in the Mofussil drew on me for that sum. There was also a promissory note of the 19th April 1866 for Rs. 1,00,000, which fell due in 1866. That was chiefly to pay hoondies also drawn by Premchund's branch houses in the Mofussil—making a total of Rs. 2,62,254–4–0, out of which I paid on 28th May 1866 - Rs. 3,100 0 0 and I debited on 17th September 1866 to the Bank, proceeds of silks sold by the Bank on my account - Rs. 3,436 9 0

Leaving a Balance due of - Rs. 2,55,717 12 0

I obtained a loan of Rs. 1,00,000 from the Bank through Premchund, as well as the permission to overdraw for the other amounts.

Mr. Mahomed Cassum.

MAHOMED CASSUM, affirmed.

There is a discount outstanding by the Bank of Bombay against Cassumbhoy Nathoobhoy, Sons, and Company, of the 27th May 1865 for Rs. 1,50,000. My brother, who is dead, managed the firm's business. There was a promissory note for Rs. 1,25,000 on the 26th November 1864. I believe my book-keeper can speak to these transactions.

Mr. Govindjee Kessowjee.

GOVINDJEE KESSOWJEE, affirmed.

I am a book-keeper of Mahomed Cassum, the last witness. The firm of Cassumbhoy, Nathoobhoy, Sons, and Company discounted a bill for Rs. 1,50,000 on the 27th May 1865 with the Bank of Bombay.

There was a payment made on account of that debt. There was a previous loan. The firm had transactions with the Bank of Bombay for several years.

No security was given for the loan of Rs. 1,50,000. I do not know by whose influence it was obtained. My master has been interested in the firm since 1859.

His two eldest brothers conducted the affairs.

The money was obtained for their business. I do not know whether it was used in buying shares in Joint Stock Companies.

24th July 1868.

24 July 1868.

Mr. Bullock.

WILLIAM BULLOCK, sworn.

I was Manager of the Kalbadevi Branch of the Bank of Bombay. I was appointed about May 1864. I received no instructions from the Secretary or Directors. I had a simple letter of appointment. Nothing was said as to the way in which I was to ascertain the credit of parties applying for loans or discounts, or as to what credit was to be given.

There was an Inspector of Branches. I am unable to say how often it was his duty to visit the Branches. Mr. Watson, who was then Inspector, never inspected my Branch during the year 1864. He afterwards became Manager of the Eastern Financial Association. During 1865 no inspection whatever of my Branch took place. Mr. Fraser came upon one occasion in 1866, partly to relieve me whilst I was in attendance on the Directors at the Head Office, and I believe he then inspected the Kalbadevi Branch. Up to that time I had no consultation whatever with the Directors as a body. I think in May or July 1866 I first communicated with them as a body. I was in constant communication with the Secretary; first with Mr. Blair, afterwards with Mr. Robertson. I had verbal instructions only. They did not refer me to any written instructions applicable to all the Branches. I carried on the Branch in the same way as the Head Office was carried on.

Question.—Suppose a bill brought to you for discount, what did you do?

Answer.—If it was a discount for a person whom I knew, I discounted it without reference to anyone. I do not say to any limit, but there was no limit except my own discretion. Both fixed loans and cash credits were granted at the Branch, but I never gave a cash credit except on Government paper, and I never had an overdrawn account.

I believe I made one written report only to the Head Office during the whole time of my management. I had no discount list furnished to me to show to what extent I might discount bills. Very frequently, and especially when Mr. Premchund became a Director of the Bank, I referred to him. Some time before he became a Director of the Bank on the occasion of my seeing Mr. Blair with regard to business offering at the Branch Bank, he told me that none of the Agents at the other Branches had any instructions, but that I might in cases of doubt refer to Mr. Premchund. I acted to some extent on that advice given me by Mr. Blair. Where I thought more reliable information could be obtained, I made use of it. I frequently referred to Shroffs in the bazaar. We frequently purchased hoondies, and I considered that Premchund would not be so good an authority as many of the Marwaree Shroffs. I cannot say that I remember any instructions from Mr. Robertson confirming Mr. Blair's. The business came to an end about June 1865, and all we did was to recover debts. I never saw Mr. Fraser's report.

Mr. Bullock.

President reads from Board Minutes of 4th September 1866 extract from Mr. Fraser's Report—"As regards business of the nature of discounts, &c., offered to the Branch, were the usual precautions in such cases adopted, and all applications for accommodation submitted daily to the Directors for disposal, no risks beyond those of ordinary banking would result. Unfortunately hitherto, through influence which has since become known to the Directors, business of this nature has been undertaken without reference to Head Office, and regardless whether the applicants had previously contracted obligations there or not."

It is extremely likely he refers to Premchund having passed loans at the Branch. Mr. Fraser was in possession of all the facts. Long previously to that I had been called on to explain on what security certain loans had been granted. I replied that they had been granted after a reference to Premchund, and the reply of the Board was that they were glad to learn that I had referred to Premchund before granting the loans. I am referring to loans which were particularised in a letter to me. I do not refer to loans to Atmaram Madhowjee and Mr. Brice. With regard to a particular class of business done, no doubt Premchund was the governing authority at the Kalbadevi Branch.

Question.—Can you mention any instance in which Premchund's authority has been used prejudicially to the Bank's interests?

Answer.—An answer to that would be a list of nearly all the bills outstanding.

Question.—Did then all the bills discounted under his advice end in loss to the Bank?

Answer.—Very nearly so. I remember Bhow Dajee applying to me. I believe in the first instance Dr. Bhow Dajee came to me himself and I told him I could not give him a reply then.

Question.—Were you not in the habit of asking applicants whether they had anything outstanding at the Head Office?

Answer.—I did not at that time. I think I ought to have done so, and I did so afterwards, but unfortunately I did not do so then. I did not ask Bhow Dajee whether he had anything outstanding at the Head Office. Next day I met Premchund, and he told me what I had already ascertained, that Bhow Dajee was a man of considerable means, that he owned the house in which he lived, and I believe it was added that he wanted money for building operations, and Premchund said it was perfectly safe, and the loan was granted. On the 16th February 1865 there was an advance to Bhow Dajee's brother on shares. I am unable to state what the loss has been on those transactions.

Question.—What was your habit as to taking security? What were your instructions about it from Mr. Blair?

Answer.—I had no instructions from him from first to last. When the Branch was opened I tried to extract instructions from him, but never could get anything more from him than a direction to follow Premchund's advice. Mr. Blair, in matters of business, was a most inaccessible man. It was not easy to confer with him. He was not a man of much judgment, and had little to communicate to others. I cannot say that no Branch Manager ever received any instructions. The result of the entire business at the Kalbadevi Branch was not unsatisfactory. I consider the loss small compared with the amount of business done. The loss was estimated at fifteen lakhs, but whilst the Bank paid no dividend, the Kalbadevi Branch earned two lakhs of profit.

President.—Not exactly so. I think Rs. 15,28,000 were written off in February 1867, and that there is a further estimated loss of Rs. 3,72,000, which gives a total of Rupees 19,00,000.

I have had no control over the affairs of the Bank since April or May 1866. I was very little engaged in speculation. I bought shares in the Elphinstone Land and Press Company, and in the Commercial Bank. As far as I remember I only applied for allotments in the Old Financial, and in the China Bank, and obtained allotments in them. I used no influence of any kind. I sent in an application like any ordinary applicant.

I wanted money in 1865, and borrowed it from the Asiatic Bank. I did not borrow from anyone else, I think, in 1865. I did borrow money once jointly with Roychund Deepchund; that was in 1866. I applied to the Asiatic Bank for a loan. I was still the Agent of the Branch at that time. I applied for Rs. 7,000 on security of shares, Elphinstone Company's and Old Financial shares. The Asiatic Bank required a second name as a matter of form, although they took security, and I asked Roychund Deepchund to lend his name. He was quite ready to do so. If I had the same experience to go through again I would not do it. I had been acquainted with Roychund Deepchund for nine or ten years. I believe I had one other transaction in which I owed money to Roychund Deepchund. A balance of Rs. 500 remained owing for shares which he had purchased for me. I paid him, but I believe he claims a balance against me. It might have been three or four months before May 1866 when the Commercial Bank failed. I never received any money from Premchund, nor any favour from him. I never had a transaction with Premchund in my life. I never bought a share from him and never received a share from him, or any favour whatever. I have seen these rules (marked A 69) which were circulated when the first Branches of the Bank were first opened in 1862, I believe. No copy of these rules was ever given to me. I must have seen them before. I had been employed in the Bank before I became Agent of the Branch. The Rules refer chiefly to matters of account. There is a Rule that the Agent is at liberty to discount up to Rupees . The blank space for defining the amount was never, I believe, filled up.

To Mr. Melvill.—Mr. Blair told me to consult Premchund before he became a Director of the Bank.

27th July 1868.

27 July 1868.
Hon. Mr. Brown.

The Honourable ALEXANDER BROWN, sworn.

I am a partner in the firm of Nicol and Company, Merchants, and a Member of the Legislative Council, Bombay. I was a Director of the Bank of Bombay. I was elected on the 30th March 1865, and first sat at the Board on the 6th April 1865. I resigned in the beginning of December 1865. I was re-elected on the 17th April 1866. I resigned for the second time shortly before the Bank went into liquidation. My qualification was twenty-four shares standing in my name belonging to my firm. I had absolute control over them. I had not the sole interest in those shares. I think that qualification was sufficient. Mr. Hannay offered to transfer into my name some of his own shares in case I required a qualification. Such a qualification as the one I possessed was never objected to at that time. I was elected just before the meeting of the 12th April 1865. I was present at that meeting, and assented to the Resolution of that date to advance on shares.

Question.—You observe that this Resolution rescinded the wise Resolution of 6th August 1863?

Answer.—I have no recollection of that preamble having been brought to the notice of the Board. I am quite sure that the Chairman did not call attention prominently to that preamble. My first conversation with any Director about that resolution was after I had entered the Board Room that morning, before the Resolution was put (I spoke to Mr. Hannay). I had consequently very little time to consider it, and in assenting to it, I must admit that I trusted almost entirely to the experience of my colleagues. No discussion took place to the best of my recollection about the prudence of advancing on shares on which all calls had not been paid up. I think it was very unwise to advance on such shares. As regards the value of the shares I may mention that the only shares mentioned in the Resolution about which I knew anything were the shares of the Elphinstone Land Company. I had never possessed or had any transaction in any of the other shares.

In conversation with Mr. Hannay, prior to taking our places at the Board, I expressed great doubts about the propriety of advancing upon Back Bay Shares. I told him I did not understand the scheme, and must entirely trust to him in the matter, and he expressed entire confidence in their being worth the sum named. He did not mention Asiatic Bank Shares. I do not understand that the "discretion" given to the Secretary referred to the amount which he might advance. My attention is called to the words, "It "is distinctly to be understood that such advances are "only to be granted to first-class applicants." It was on that I mainly relied in assenting to the resolution.

Question.—Who was to be the judge as to who were first-class applicants?

Answer.—A new Director was entitled to believe that the proper machinery existed in the Bank for ascertaining who were first-class applicants. The Secretary must have had occasion to judge about that with regard to every transaction of the Bank.

Question.—From what has come out in evidence before the Commission, you must admit that many who obtained such advances were not first-class applicants?

Answer.—Most assuredly they were not. At the Board very little discussion took place, but Mr. Hannay gave me to understand that it was intended to be a relief to the money market, or I should rather say to good substantial men who had somewhat over-invested in local securities. I would ask permission to call the attention of the Commissioners to a letter which is entered on the minutes of the 9th November 1865, which shows distinctly what the views of the Directors were at the time.

9th November 1865.

The Secretary to Government, Financial Department.

Sir,—I have the honour to acknowledge your endorsement No. 922, of 26th October, enclosing copy of a communication from Sir Charles Wood. I am requested by the Directors to say in reply that it appears to them the Secretary of State has either been much misinformed relative to the transactions of the Bank of Bombay, or else that he has quite misunderstood the information supplied.

The Bank of Bombay has never advanced money directly on shares, but, during the trying crisis that occurred in the early part of this year, the times were so exceptional, that the Directors considered it prudent, seeing so much money was lent on personal security only, to obtain as much collateral security as possible when granting loans. This was done, and it enabled the bank to assist many of their constituents who possessed shares in sound undertakings and of undoubted value, but required money.

Upon calmly looking at the circumstances of the past, the Directors are of opinion that, had any other course been adopted, the result would have been most disastrous, and had the Government Directors not given their consent to the course commented on, they would have been responsible for ruin, probably more general and wide-spread than was ever before seen in any city or commercial community.

With reference to the alteration of the charter this is a matter over which the Directors have no control, but seeing that the clause referred to has never been taken advantage of, the Directors do not see that any change is either necessary or desirable.

Witness resumes.

There was a large sum of money lying in the Bank unemployed. The letter of the Government Directors of 30th June 1865 is correct on that point. I think the capital had been improperly increased, and it was impossible for the Bank legitimately to employ so much capital in 1864. There were very few bonâ fide borrowers of good standing at that time.

Question.—Might not the Directors have been frightened at seeing so much money out on promissory notes without security, and have adopted this resolution as partly a conservative measure?

Answer.—I cannot exactly say that they were alarmed. I was utterly ignorant of the reckless manner in which credits had been given. The letter of the 9th November 1865 answers the question to a certain extent. I believe there is no foundation for the allegation in the Shareholders' Memorial, that the Companies on whose shares advances were made were bubble Companies. The Back Bay Company might have been: certainly none of the rest.

Question.—Looking back with all the light of the past years do you consider the resolution to have been a prudent one?

Answer.—Most decidedly I do not, and it was not till long after that I knew what a reckless use was made of it. I became alarmed by rumours which I heard about the Bank. Soon after I became a Director, I heard that the Bank was involved in loans to men who had speculated largely, and who had large time-bargains in shares for settlement on the 1st July following. I could hardly believe there was any ground for alarm, because Mr. Hannay, when I joined the Board, said that the shares of the Bank were well worth Rs. 120 per cent., the premium at which I think they then stood, but on taking my seat at the Board on the 27th April 1865, I asked Mr. Tracey whether in his opinion there was any ground for the rumours afloat. Business was just about to commence, and I had only time to get his answer that we had better not discuss the subject, as the Government Directors were only too apt to take alarm. Nothing was done about it at that Board Meeting, but Mr. Tracey's answer made me very uneasy, and on going home I told my partner, Mr. Fleming, that I had very nearly determined to retire from the Direction, but after a conversation with him I resolved to remain on the Board, and endeavour to bring about a better state of things.

At the next Board meeting Mr. F. S. Chapman, a Government Director, asked me if I was satisfied at the way in which business was being done. He particularly referred to the utter ignorance in which the Directors were kept as to the business and everything that was going on, and we agreed in opinion that the Directors were ciphers, and the Secretary apparently uncontrolled. Mr. F. S. Chapman then told me that both he and Mr. Lushington, the two Government Directors, had come prepared to move in the matter, and I willingly agreed to support him. Mr. Lushington then proposed, to the best of my recollection, that restrictions should be put upon the Secretary's powers.

President (reading from Minute*.)

* For Minute see ante p. 12.

Hon. Mr. Brown.

Mr. Hannay, Mr. Lushington, Mr. F. S. Chapman, Mr. Tracey, and you were present at that meeting on the 4th May?

Answer.—Yes, and I thought Premchund was also present Mr. Lushington's proposal was strongly opposed by Mr. Hannay, and I think by Mr. Tracey. Mr. Hannay was the spokesman, and said that unless the Secretary was left unfettered it would be impossible to make him feel his responsibility. I think Mr. Tracey joined him in that, and Mr. Hannay added that men of standing had too much self-respect to submit to have their applications scrutinized by the whole Board, and that, if we insisted, the Bank would lose much valuable business. The Resolution come to at that meeting on the 4th May was a sort of compromise, and there was an understanding arrived at that, considering the perilous nature of the times, and particularly as Mr. Robertson was just entering upon office as officiating Secretary, all new business was to be submitted to the Board, or the Weekly Committee, and I think that understanding was acted on. I cannot say why that understanding was not entered in the Minutes. The Resolution certainly fell far short of it. I was present at the next meeting, when the Minutes of the Meeting of the 4th May 1865 were confirmed. I did not object that anything had been omitted from the last Minutes, but I think you will find that the subsequent practice was as I have stated. It certainly appears from the Resolution that we knew that the Secretary was granting loans on his own authority for more than three lakhs, and that we allowed him to continue to do so, but I think we qualified the permission by the understanding we came to. The qualification certainly ought to have been entered in the Minutes, but I am sorry to say the Minutes were often kept in a slip-shod manner.

Question.—Does it not appear that you required three Directors to be consulted only when new constituents required more than three lakhs, and not when old constituents of the Bank required more than that amount?

Answer.—Yes. Immediately after the passing of that Resolution the crisis was upon us, and no new business was to be undertaken, and the Secretary was told not to enter upon any new business without consulting the Board. There is no record of that order to the Secretary. I did not give him the order, but I know that such instructions were given by the Board. I do not know who conveyed the order to him.

Question.—Do you think it was wise or prudent or business-like, not to put those qualifications of the Minute of 4th May into writing?

Answer.—I certainly should do so now, if the thing had to be done again. I should qualify what I have said so far as regards Bank Bills; they were never brought before the Board at any time. I am referred to Mr. Robertson's letter to Mr. Hannay of the 7th March 1866 (marked A 34). I have not seen this before.

Question.—Is it not clear from that letter that Mr. Robertson claimed almost unlimited power at that time?

Answer.—I think not. I think he is right in claiming unlimited power in regard to Bank Bills and first-class Mercantile Bills. He certainly in the letter claims very great power in other matters, but I did not agree with him. I do not recollect any restriction in writing on the power of the Secretary except that of the 4th May 1865, which provided that he was not to advance more than three lakhs to new constituents, but as I have said before the understanding was clear that restrictions were in force. I am referred to Mr. Hannay's letter to the Board of 15th March 1866 (A 33). (Witness reads the letter.)

Question.—Is it not clear from this letter that the Directors did not know what the powers of the Secretary were?

Answer.—Yes.

Question.—Is it not clear from the same letter that the Chairman did not know what the powers of the Secretary were, and thought it best to ask him?

Answer.—I do not think that the best way of ascertaining the powers of the Secretary was to write to him and ask.

Question repeated.

Answer.—Yes, that is clear.

Question.—Do you not remark that the Chairman does not deny the accuracy of any statement made by Mr. Robertson as to his powers?

Answer.—It is so.

Question.—Does it not appear that the Chairman proposed three things:—

First, to allow the Secretary to discount up to three lakhs only;

Secondly, to allow him a wider discretion as to Bank Bills;

Thirdly, to restrict him in those exceptional times from granting any new loan without the consent of the President or two Members of the Board?

Answer.—Yes.

Question.—I believe those recommendations were adopted by the Board?

Answer.—I was not on the Board then, but I believe a code of byelaws was adopted by the Board. I had the misfortune to join the Board a second time in very evil days, when the Bank was almost in liquidation, and I never saw the byelaws until long afterwards. I never had any occasion to refer to them.

President.—We will now turn to the practice of the Bank as to making advances and granting cash credits, discounts, and fixed loans.

Mr. Brown.—I wish to say that during 1865 there was a totally exceptional state of matters. Our main object was to get in as many outstanding debts as possible, and we hardly did any new business.

Question.—Do you know the practice of the Bank as to loans on promissory notes? What was the practice as to advancing on them?

Answer.—We decided every case as it came before us.

Question.—Did you lay down any rule that there should be a surety?

Answer.—I know of no such rule. There were, I believe, one or two transactions, known to me at the time, of advances on the name of the borrower or borrowers only.

Question.—Do you consider that good banking?

Answer.—Not as a general rule.

Question.—Do you consider it good banking to advance on accommodation bills?

Answer.—I think a banker when a bill is brought to him considers the status of the parties signing it. It would be impossible for a banker to distinguish between accommodation bills and real mercantile bills.

Question.—Is it not the practice in Banks to ask the purpose for which the money is borrowed?

Answer.—I do not know that it is the practice to do so. Very long ago, under the former charter of the Bank, bills with two names were discounted freely. It is the practice to ask all about the parties. I see no objection to advancing on promissory notes if we were satisfied with the names of the parties. It is very difficult to say whether it is wise to leave it to the Secretary to ascertain the sufficiency of the parties in bad times. I certainly would not, or I would take care to know what he was doing.

Question.—Were you often referred to as to the credit of parties?

Answer.—I was after the 4th of May 1865. I think nearly all the business came before the Board after that time; it came either to the Board or was circulated amongst the Weekly Committee. This confirms my view that the Secretary knew he was not to do any new business without reference to the Board.

Question.—Am I to understand from that that you were unaware of the practice of sending out a note to a native Director and obtaining his opinion, and thereupon granting the advance?

Answer.—I never sanctioned such a practice.

27 July 1868.
Hon. Mr. Brown.

Question.—Were you not aware of the practice of a native Director sending parties with a recommendation to Mr. Blair, and of Mr. Blair writing to a native Director, and obtaining his sanction to an advance?

Answer.—I did not know it at the time, but I know it now.

Question.—Do you not know that Mr. Robertson continued that practice?

Answer.—I think it very likely that Mr. Robertson referred to the native Directors for their opinion. There was no one whose opinion was more highly valued in 1864 and the beginning of 1865 than Premchund Roychund. I have heard it stated that he was the confidential adviser of all the Banks in the place. I do not know that his opinion was taken by the Secretary of the Bank of Bombay when he was not a Director of the Bank.

Question.—When did you become aware that the Bank had advanced largely on promissory notes?

Answer.—The first statement I ever saw was shortly after the 30th of June 1865. It disclosed that large sums had been lent on personal security merely. Several large failures had taken place, which completely revealed the practice. Government and the public must have known it, because the Bank's name was published as a claimant on several estates.

Question.—Do you remember an application for a discount by Cursetjee Hormusjee Chinoy of Rs. 50,000 for three months on personal security, and by M. & M. Manockjee Cursetjee Cama and Company for two lakhs for two months?

Answer.—Yes. I have had an opportunity of refreshing my memory, but I should like to refer to the Minutes with regard to those applications. (Reads Minutes of 11th May 1865.) My reason for assenting to the granting of those loans is expressed in one of my minutes. Mr. Lushington's Minute is, "I would grant no loans on personal security only." Mr. Hannay minuted as follows: "I agree with our late "President, Mr. Birch, that good personal security is "far better than any other." My second minute is as follows: "It is true that credit is for the time "severely shaken in Bombay, but I cannot agree with "Mr. Lushington that on this account all loans on "personal security should be refused; such a policy "would surely precipitate a panic, and recoil tenfold "on the Bank itself." (Exhibit marked A 70.) I considered that a change of policy would have been very undesirable at that time. It was a time of great dullness and panic, and any sudden change in the policy of the Bank would have precipitated disaster. I never saw this second minute by Mr. Lushington of the 13th of May 1865; it was not circulated. I see that he adhered to his former opinion, and he adds, "Loans on personal security are strongly advocated "by our President and the late President, but I "would ask whether it is not upon such loans that "our greatest losses are likely to occur?" (Exhibit marked A 71.)

Question.—Had it not been the practice to advance enormous sums (as much as ten lakhs at a time) on mere promissory notes, especially in 1864, and not to call for securities till difficulties had set in?

Answer.—It was the practice. Difficulties at that time were never thought of.

Question.—Should not all banking loans be for a short period?

Answer.—Yes; about three months is considered the right limit, and our loans were for that period.

Question.—But constant renewals make long loans, do they not?

Answer.—Certainly.

Question.—I ask you as a mercantile man, is it not bad banking to make loans and then to renew them continually?

Answer.—Yes.

Question.—Are not such loans apt to become dead loans?

Answer.—Yes, that is the idea of a banker. I do not think any fixed loan was ever granted in my time.

Question.—Was it legitimate banking business to lend large sums to persons who were not in trade, to Barristers and Doctors, for speculative purposes?

Answer.—I think not, and I remember minuting to that effect upon some application which was made to the Bank in 1866.

Question.—Was it good banking to lend money on shares which had not been fully paid up, and to make advances on the premia of shares?

Answer.—Certainly not. I would not make such advances now.

President.—We will now turn to the practice of the Bank as to cash credits. On what principle were they granted, and was it usual for the borrower to execute a bond?

Answer.—I can hardly say. In 1865 we were in a transition state. I believe the rule was to take a bond, and sometimes to require a surety, but I cannot positively say what the practice was. I have not had my attention called to the Resolution of 2nd June 1864 regarding cash credits except by this investigation. I look at the scroll minute (marked A 48) shown to me. I observe that the Scotch system of granting cash credits is there referred to, and that after making mention of a bond being signed by the party borrowing, the words "together with two good names as security" have been altered to "with or without good names as security, according to the credit of the party." The alteration is, I think, in Mr. Blair's handwriting, but I am not sure. I believe he is a Scotchman. I do not know whether he came from a Scotch Bank. I am aware that current deposits accounts were allowed to be overdrawn, but not after May 1865?

President.—Look at these memoranda of Mr. De Ga's (marked A 31); does it not appear that there were many overdrafts in 1865 and 1866?

Answer.—This is the first time I have seen these memoranda; the overdrafts in 1866 were never brought to my notice. I could not go into the Bank and examine the books.

Question.—Would it not have been desirable to have before the Board a list of all accounts overdrawn?

Answer.—There was a list of outstandings laid before the Board after the middle of 1865. I am not aware that the Bank advanced on real property. There were two cases in which real property was taken as collateral security at the advice of the Bank's Solicitor. Dossabhoy Merwanjee and Co. and Premchund Roychund were the two parties. I have seen the clause in the Bank Act restricting the Bank from making advances on land.

Question—Was not Dossabhoy Merwanjee's case one of an original loan on security of real property?

Answer.—No; they owed money to the Bank, and were about to stop payment, and we took security to cover the loan then unsecured, as well as for the advance then made. Our Solicitor's opinion was that we might go further than this. He thought that we were perfectly at liberty to take title deeds as collateral security for a loan at the time of lending the money.

Dossabhoy Merwanjee and Co. were a house of old standing in the French and American trades, and were in temporary difficulties for some reason which was explained by the President of the Bank, who said he considered two objects would be effected by granting their application, viz., that the Bank would be secured as to the first lakh then owing, and secondly we should tide an old respectable firm over their difficulties. The security was considered far more than sufficient to cover the debt. The Board only consented to make the advance on condition of the Solicitor's opinion pronouncing it a legal transaction. I do not remember that he advised that the Bank could advance on land, if an old debt were due. I do not think the matter ever came before us, except on two occasions. Mr. Kelly advised us at the meeting about the loan of twenty-five lakhs to Prem.

Hon. Mr. Brown.

chund. Mr. Manisty, his partner, wrote an opinion after Mr. Kelly had gone home.

President.—We now come to the transfers of debts. Were they brought before the Board? Sorabjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy in giving evidence before us, stated that he owed the Elphinstone Financial Company a lakh, and that the Elphinstone Financial owed a similar sum to the Bank of Bombay, and that by some arrangement his debt was transferred to the Bank, his brother Rustomjee becoming jointly liable with him on account of it to the Bank.

Mr. Brown.—I never heard about it before; such a transaction ought to have been brought before the Board. The President, Mr. Hannay, attended for hours daily at the Bank and took a great deal of trouble about the Bank's affairs. I cannot say what the duties of a President were. They were not defined, but his responsibility was considered to be much greater than that of the other Directors. I declined to become President on account of the demands on my time which the office would make. I am not able to speak as to the amount of time which Mr. Birch was accustomed to spend in the Bank when he was President. I have, however, seen a letter which mentions the extreme care and attention which he used to bestow upon the affairs of the Bank. The Application Book and the Register of Bills discounted were laid before the Directors at our meetings. As a general rule, it was a formal thing laying them before the Directors. I used to look at them occasionally. In July 1865 I first saw a list of the outstandings, and I went over it with Mr. Hannay, and we determined not to declare a dividend. A list of outstandings was not regularly brought before us at our Weekly Boards till June or July 1866. I believe the only opportunity which the Directors had before that of ascertaining the position of the Bank was when the balance sheet was made out every half-year. When times were good, and there were no bad debts, it was not thought necessary to do more. In July 1865 things were so bad that it was impossible to value the assets of the Bank.

Question.—What was the system of superintendence of the Branches?

Answer.—There was an Inspsctor of the Branches. I cannot say who appointed the Agents. I do not know who appointed the Shroffs. I believe there were elaborate returns made by the Branches every week, but they never came before the Board. I believe the affairs of the Branches were tacitly left in the hands of the President and Secretary. Orders were given shortly after I joined to the Agents at the branches to send in all their available cash, which was tantamount to stopping all business. Balance sheets were sent by the Branches to the Head Office in July 1866. I am not aware of any being sent up before. No special reports from the Branches were called for, that I recollect. I do not recollect any rules being promulgated for the Branches. I do not know how the Kalbadevi Branch of the Bank was managed. I never went there. I do not know that any other Director did. All I know about that Branch is, that I believe it was established for the purpose of receiving deposits, facilitating the cashing of currency notes, and collup country hoondies. It was near the Native Shroff's bazaar, and a good profit was made. I had not the least idea that discounts were being made and loans granted there. There could be no object in having a branch in Bombay for that purpose. The Inspector was generally up country. I cannot say whether he visited the Kalbadevi Branch before 1866. Mr. Bullock was probably right in saying that his Branch had not been inspected before 1866. At a late period we attached Mr. Fraser to the Head Office as Deputy Secretary, and we had then no occasion for an Inspector, as there was no business done at the Branches. I first knew about July 1866 of there having been losses at the Branches. I am referred to a statement in the Board Minutes of 20th July 1865 putting the losses of the Branches at Rs. 22,836-9-2.

Question.—Do you understand what Mr. Fraser means in his Report about the Kalbadevi Branch when he speaks of influence which has become known to the Directors?

Answer.—The influence he speaks of was that of Premchund Roychund. We had summoned Mr. Bullock before us, and I think he had stated that he had followed the instructions of Mr. Blair, that he should be guided by the advice of Premchund in the business that he did. He did not mention that he had any such instructions from Mr. Robertson. Very little business was done at the Kalbadevi Branch after Mr. Robertson became Officiating Secretary—that is what Mr. Fraser meant, I think. We had no knowledge on the subject besides Mr. Bullock's statement. We did not institute any inquiries in consequence of Mr. Fraser's Report. We had enough to do to get in money. I came to the opinion that the management of the Branches was bad and discreditable beyond anything I had ever seen. I speak chiefly of the Kalbadevi Branch, though it was bad at Poona too. I thought the system was most to blame for the mismanagement, and that the Head Office could hardly cast a stone. I do not know that any instructions were given to allow of the discounting of bills at the Kalbadevi Branch. I do not know what the intentions of the founders of the Branch were, but I have stated my own idea.

Question.—Are you not aware that Mr. Bullock was in the daily habit of seeing Mr. Blair.

Answer.—I am not aware of it. I was not aware that the officers of the Bank were engaged in speculation. I do not think the matter ever came before me. I never heard that Mr. Robertson or Mr. Rodgie were engaged in share speculations. Mr. Blair's dismissal was not on account of share speculations, but simply because he was considered incompetent. A letter was written to him by the Chairman when he was absent on leave. There was no suspicion as to his honesty, but I had anything but a favourable opinion of him as a man of business. I never had occasion to consider Mr. Blair's relations towards Premchund or any member of his family. It is a hard thing to say, but it was his incompetency for which he was dismissed. It was sufficiently shown by the state of matters which was found to exist after he left.

I knew very well that some of the Directors of the Bank were holders of shares, but I did not know that they were speculators in shares. I did not know that Mr. Tracey was largely speculating in shares. Mr. Hannay, at a meeting in July 1865, disclaimed it for himself, and on behalf of Mr. Tracey. I had no means of knowing what Mr. Hannay's interest was in the Asiatic Bank, but I knew that either he or his partner, Mr. Gavin Steel, had been a Promoter of it. I was not aware that there were intimate business relations between Mr. Tracey personally and Premchund Roychund. I knew that Premchund was a native constituent of the firm of Ritchie, Steuart, and Company. He was not their broker. He guaranteed them from loss on native consignments.

Question.—Why were the Asiatic Bank, Bombay Reclamation Company, and Elphinstone Land and Press Company selected out of other Companies as Companies on whose shares advances should be made by the Bank?

Answer.—The Elphinstone Land and Press Company started in 1858, but unfortunately in 1864 its shares had become a medium of simple gambling. I had no shares in the Asiatic Bank. My partners in London were asked to join it and refused. We declined also. It was a standing rule of our firm that we should never identify ourselves with any other Bank but the Bank of Bombay. Premchund had many shares in the Asiatic Bank. I believe the Bombay Reclamation was chosen because many men of good standing had bought its shares. Mr. Hannay was Chairman of it. Premchund was a director, and held many shares in it. I have no doubt Mr. Tracey was a shareholder in it.

My firm were Secretaries and Treasurers of the Elphinstone Land and Press Company. I was Chairman of the Company. Mr. Hannay had nothing to do with it. Mr. Tracey was at one time on the Direction, but I think not then. Premchund may have had shares in it. Mr. F. S. Chapman and Mr. Lushington had nothing to do with it. I had no interest in raising or depressing the shares of the Elphinstone Land and Press Company, nor had my firm, or the Company itself. Every share belonging to me then, I still hold. I say the same for my partners, and the Company itself had more money than it knew what to do with. The Company is carrying on its business, and will pay a dividend next month.

I was present and heard Mr. C. E. Chapman give his evidence. I heard him say that he thought the Government Directors had in two instances been kept in ignorance. I did not keep back anything. I was frank and open in my communications. When Mr. Tracey said to me that the Government Directors were only too apt to take alarm, I thought then that he meant that what would strike a commercial man as nothing very alarming was likely to alarm a Government Director; however I am not defending Mr. Tracey.

President.—Have you any reason to think that important facts were kept back by the Secretary.

Answer.—I would answer that by saying that I do not think things were intentionally kept back from us, but that the Secretary was not so communicative as he might have been. I should not like to accuse Mr. Robertson of purposely keeping back anything. He was apt to make random statements. I do not think there was a disinclination on either the part of the Commercial Directors or the Secretary to confer freely in the presence of the Government Directors, under the impression that things might reach Government.

President.—Was the same weight given to the opinion of the Government Directors on questions of credit?

Answer.—No, because they were not in a position to be acquainted with the standing of persons in Bombay.

President.—Yet that is most important in a Bank.

Answer.—Undoubtedly. I am not going to defend the system of Government Directors.

President.—Do you think that they were equally qualified with the Commercial Directors in other respects?

Answer.—Some of them certainly were not, others, and notably Colonel Marriott, had bestowed a great deal of thought upon the science of banking. Generally their previous experience had not been such as to qualify them for the position. I think the system as to Commercial Directors had great disadvantages, and that under the best Board of Directors the success of a Bank must depend upon the integrity and ability of the Manager and other officers. I do not think the Directors can sufficiently curb the manager if he is disposed to disregard the rules of the Bank. It is the case in Bombay particularly, where all the Directors are busy men. There is no class of men here such as there is in London, who can give their time to the management of a Bank. When bad times such as 1865 and 1866 come upon us, it of necessity happens that the Commercial Directors have just the least time to give to the affairs of a Bank; they are too much occupied with their own concerns. The Commercial Directors had the same honorarium as the Government Directors. Rupees thirty for attending at each meeting. It was considered a creditable thing to be a Director of the Bank. If I had known what trouble it would have brought upon me I would never have joined the direction.

President.—Do you think that very large concerns of this kind can be well managed by a Board of Directors receiving a mere honorarium for their attendance?

Answer.—Judging from my experience the influence of Directors is not so great as it ought to be.

27 July 1868.

Hon. Mr. Brown.

Question put by Major Innes.—You said that you considered that on questions of the credit of applicants, Government Directors are not so useful as Commercial Directors; are there not other ways in which the Government Directors are more useful than the Commercial Directors?

Answer.—Perhaps they are. I think that in some cases the advice of a man like Mr. C. E. Chapman was of great value. I think the Government Directors were also more inclined from previous habits, than the Commercial Directors, to see that rules existed for conducting business, and also more inclined to insist upon the rules being observed.

President.—I will now ask you as to debts due to the Bank. Take the case of the Alliance Financial Association which obtained large advances.

Did the renewal of the Bill of 7th July 1865 for Rs. 1,06,000 come before the Directors?

Answer.—I believe not.

President.—[After pointing out that the renewal is entered in the Bill Discounted Register.] Was it not your duty to look into the matter? Would you not have seen that there was then ten lakhs outstanding?

Answer.—There may have been ten lakhs owing by the Association at the time. It was my duty to inquire into it, but I have no recollection of the matter. There was a rule that twenty-five per cent. should be paid off on renewals being granted. Perhaps this was an exceptional case. We did take steps to get the money in. There may have been a particular reason for renewal. The Secretary only had signed the first bill, and by the second the Directors made themselves personally liable. I cannot say that this was the reason. I did not consider it of importance to examine the Application Book, and Bills Discounted Register, because it was understood that there was to be no new business undertaken without reference to the Board. The question of renewals generally was left to the President and Secretary.

President.—Did you at any time make any inquiry as to the large loans by the Bank to the Alliance Financial Association?

Answer.—We were very anxious about it at an early date, and we sued and got judgment against the Directors and the Company. The result was that we seized every scrap of property belonging to the Company, its shares which appear as security for the debt, and its books, and also a Hindoo temple belonging to a Native Director. I remember their offer of compromise when the Native Directors of the Association were in hiding after the property was attached. They wrote a letter to us. It is on the minutes of the 3rd April 1866. President reads the letter. The three Native Directors, Ghellabhoy Puddumsey, Hurbum Nursey, and Sewjee Welljee, were men of position in the Wania caste. The caste considered that a great indignity, by warrants being out against their head men, and by the proceedings against the temple, and the Directors of the Bank thought better terms would be offered. On the 12th June 1866 further terms were offered. I thought them very good. The Board did not accede to them. Kessowjee Naik and another member of the caste came very frequently to my office to discuss the terms. I went with them to Mr. Robertson on several occasions, and took some trouble about it. Kessowjee came forward with an ultimatum, and my head clerk wrote it out, and I corrected it, and it was that letter which went before the Board. I therefore at the Board stated that I should not vote on the proposal. Mr. A. Stewart and Mr. Lidderdale thought the Board would get better terms, and the Government Directors followed suit. Mr. A. Stewart thought that the whole debt would be recovered. Hurbum Nursey was hiding in a bungalow of Tricum Velljee, and an Official of the Bank of Bombay lived near that house, and saw him, and tried to arrest him, and Hurbum Nursey eluded him and got away to Damaun, and the other Native Directors got away also, and an hope of getting better terms was lost. There were subseqnent offers, but they did not take any definite shape.

President.—Did you hear anything further of these men?

Answer.—Not till December, when Mr. W. H. Crawford, a Solicitor, came forward and offered six annas in the rupee. We accepted this offer, and there is a mystery about it which has never been cleared up. The Bank only obtained four annas per rupee. The Bank has compromised the debt of the Native Directors with them for two annas in the rupee. I said at the time that the previous offers ought to be accepted, but the Board thought it was for the interests of the Bank to decline them. I know that my brother Directors acted with due consideration in refusing the offers. There were of course casual inquiries as to how it happened that such large sums had been advanced on promissory notes in 1864. It never occurred to us to inquire through whose influence these large loans had been made. I think it was pretty well understood that Premchund Roychund was the confidential adviser of the Managers of the Banks, and the Directors did not think it necessary to pursue the matter further. I do not know that there was any business connexion between Premchund and Mr. Blair.

President.—We now turn to the loan to Ameerchund Bechardass of Rs. 2,00,000 on the 22nd April 1865, resulting in a loss of Rs. 1,99,831.

Witness resumes.—I do not remember the making of the advance to him, or the renewals of the bill. He is dead I believe. He was a book-keeper of Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff, and was worth nothing. He was afterwards a partner of Rustomjee Cursetjee Shroff, Pestonjee's brother.

President.—It is not the fact that the loan was renewed continually, until the Commercial Bank had failed, and the shares deposited were worth nothing.

Answer.—I know nothing of the subsequent renewals. The Directors no doubt continued to hold the shares under the impression that their value would improve. There was a panic in Bombay from April to July 1865, and about that time there was a great disaster hanging over Bombay, viz., the difficulties of Cursetjee Furdoonjee. It was afterwards understood that he had been assisted by his friends, and telegrams were received about the same time from England of an advance there in cotton, and cotton continued to improve from ninepence to eighteenpence a pound. Confidence was greatly restored, and with it the price of almost all securities in Bombay revived. Bank of Bombay shares, which had been below par, went up to between sixty and seventy per cent. premium.

The revival did much harm. Shares were held over, and ultimately fell, and the result you know. On the day before the loan was made to Ameerchund Bechardas, Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff obtained an advance from the Bank of five lakhs on security of a deposit of Commercial Bank shares. At the time of the advance to Ameerchund the Board did not know that he was a book-keeper of Pestonjee.

The President next refers to the advances to the Asiatic Banking Corporation amounting altogether to Rs. 19,66,567.

Witness resumes.—On the 13th July 1866 extended credit was given to the Asiatic Banking Corporation. The first shares were taken on that day—one hundred and two shares Apollo Press Company, Rs. 2,25,000. They realised about two lakhs.

Iron Ship Company's shares costing Rs. 3,000 per share were taken at Rs. 1,000 per share. That Company is now in liquidation, and will return Rs. 1,900 a share. There were other shares deposited by the Asiatic Bank on the 23rd August in substitution for a lien on a consignment of five lakhs which we never received. Mr. Morrison explained that he had been misled by cipher telegrams about the consignment, and he offered us shares instead. We had the pick of the Asiatic Bank's securities, and took what we thought best. I have no doubt we ascertained what the property was, and what it was worth. As to the stock-in-trade of Messrs. Macindoe, Rogers, and Company, we could not tell its value. We believed that Mr. Morrison had really been misled.

President.—Then you advanced money in the first instance without getting the security into your hand, and afterwards took property in security, the value of which you could not verify ?

Answer.—Certainly we could not verify all. He offered us besides the security of a lien on the call to be made on the shareholders on the Asiatic Bank when the circumstances of Bombay would justify it.

President.—Did you not advance before the security was obtained ?

Answer.—Mr. Morrison showed us his cipher telegrams, and interpreted them, and we thought we were justified in advancing. It was a great object to keep up the Asiatic Bank.

President.—Is it not the fact that you did it without obtaining the security, and on the faith of telegrams which it appears that Mr. Morrison did not properly understand ?

Answer.—It is so. We assisted several other Banks in the same manner without sustaining any loss, and assisted in carrying them through.

President.—Were you not accustomed to have your securities valued from time to time ?

Answer.—There were several valuations made at different times. There was one in June 1866. A Government Committee was afterwards appointed, and the result published, and several other valuations were afterwards made. In times of panic and distress I think that Banks like the Bank of Bombay are justified in stretching a point to support other Banks if they can do so consistently with the interests of their shareholders. We did primarily consider the interests of the shareholders. As regards the depreciation of securities, I wish to state that the securities held by the Bank have shown an immense depreciation at every subsequent valuation. When Mr. Stewart came back he thought the assets of the Bank amounted to a crore. Afterwards he valued them at fifty lakhs. We did consider that we had taken a sufficient margin of securities for our advances to the Asiatic Bank. The depreciation has been such as no one could have foreseen.

29th July 1868.

29 July 1868.

I should like to state that I was absent from Bombay from April 1864 until the 14th March 1865.

President.—We resume the consideration of the advances to the Asiatic Bank. I find the first meeting of the Board was held on the 14th May 1866, and that there was another Board meeting on the 13th July 1866.

[Reads the Minutes of those meetings and refers to the letters produced by Mr. Stuart relating to the transaction.]

Witness resumes.—I am referred to a letter of 2nd May 1866 from Mr. A. Morrison, the Manager of the Asiatic Bank, applying for the advance of fifteen lakhs. There is no list of securities attached to this letter. The advance was very carefully gone into at the time. I shall be much surprised if any of the documents are not forthcoming. Government paper and Bank Bills were part of the securities which were offered. (Reads from Circular Minute of 14th May 1866,

" Resolved that the credit be granted on his giving " up all the securities stated in the list, and a " written guarantee to deposit immediately on " receipt the Bills and Government Paper now
" on the way from Calcutta and China.")

I believe the Bills formed part of the ten lakhs. My note in the margin refers to Bank Bills. The amount mentioned in the second Board Minute as due from Byramjee Hormusjee Cama's estate was due to the Bank of Bombay. To the best of my recollection the Trustees of Byramjee Hormusjee Cama's estate had made some mistake as to the dividend. The Asiatic Bank had to pay the dividend to the creditors, that was one of the pressing difficulties of the Asiatic Bank. They were the Bankers for the Trustees. A considerable portion of the funds of Byramjee Hormusjee's estate was locked up in Court in Hong Kong, and the Trustees led us to believe that the funds would be released and come to us at an early date. Both Mr. Robertson, our Secretary, and Mr. Morrison were trustees of Byramjee Hormusjee Cama's estate.

[The President reads from the Minute the list of securities, and adds, Five lakhs are mentioned as coming from Calcutta, but no mention is made of a remittance expected from China.]

Witness.—The reason why no mention is made of funds coming from China is because they were coming to Byramjee Hormusjee Cama's Trustees. It was a sum of five lakhs that was coming from China.

President.—You let them have a credit of twenty lakhs, and consented to postpone the drawing of a sum of three lakhs to which the Bank was entitled as a dividend from Byramjee Hormusjee Cama's estate?

Answer.—Yes.

President.—On looking at the "Advances on Shares Book of the Bank" I find that on the 14th July 1866 one hundred and three Apollo Press Company's share certificates, and eighty-four Iron Ship Company's share certificates had been deposited, and that the share certificates were most of them subsequently withdrawn. Can you explain this?

Answer.—I have never seen those books. I cannot throw any light upon them. I have no doubt that those were sales, and the amounts realised and carried to the credit of the Bank. I presume that twenty-three lakhs was the largest sum which the Asiatic Bank owed to the Bank of Bombay at one time. Those shares were always saleable.

President.—[After referring to the Board Minute of 23rd August 1866.] What is the meaning of this statement in the Minute, "Six lakhs on its way to Calcutta from China." They are not mentioned in the original proposal for the advance?

Answer.—I cannot explain it, I fear, if the letters do not throw any light upon it. Possibly it is referred to in Mr. Morrison's letters of the 13th July, where he says "we estimate a return from China before the end of September of funds for, say, five lakhs at least." I admit that it is an extraordinary thing that loss has happened on this account, considering the care the Directors took about it.

President.—When you were told that five lakhs were coming from Calcutta and about five lakhs from China, Mr. Morrison told you that telegrams had been received?

Question.—Did you ask to see the telegram in the case of the five lakhs from Calcutta, and for the letters referring to the money at China released by the Court?

Answer.—As to the five lakhs as to which there was a telegram, to the best of my recollection Mr. Morrison was called before the Board, and he had the telegraphic advices with him; as regards the funds coming from China to Byramjee Hormusjee Cama's estate, Mr. Robertson, our own Secretary, stated that he knew these were to be received. He knew it in his capacity of a Trustee of Byramjee Hormusjee Cama's estate. I cannot recollect that we asked to see the telegram, which would have been unintelligible to us without the code. I believe we asked to see the telegram deciphered. Any one who knows the state of the Indian Telegraph Department will not be surprised at a mistake having occurred.

President.—When Mr. Morrison was called upon for an explanation, was he asked to produce the telegram?

Answer.—My recollection does not serve me further than this, that we questioned Mr. Morrison most closely, and satisfied ourselves of the accuracy of his statements. I think it is almost certain that if the Board had then been asked to grant the credit we would not have done it on the securities offered, but we were obliged then to make the best of it.

President.—Was not the transaction this, that you were induced to make the advance supposing that eleven lakhs of solid money would shortly be in your possession; that you had no security for that sum of eleven lakhs, except the statement of Mr. Morrison that five lakhs were coming from Calcutta, and that Mr. Robertson stated that six lakhs were coming from China?

Answer.—Yes, but the statement of Mr. Morrison was supported by what we considered reliable business advices. I mean a telegram in cipher.

President.—Then having been disappointed as to eight lakhs out of the eleven you were forced to put up with the securities offered on the 23rd August 1866?

Answer.—Yes, but you observe that there was also the lien upon the uncalled up capital of the Asiatic Bank amounting to twenty-five lakhs. I believe, although that cannot properly be called a lien, the question was submitted to our Solicitor immediately. This was unfortunately one of the many transactions of the kind into which we were obliged to enter in connexion with the monetary institutions of Bombay, and we lost nothing by any other.

Mr Melvill.—You say in your Minute "it is a simple case of necessity equally for our own and the public, as the Asiatic Bank's interest;" how was it a necessity so far as the interests of the shareholders of the Bank of Bombay were concerned?

Answer.—I can only say that it was done on general principles of Banking.

President.—You said in your former examination that it was the duty of the Bank of Bombay to assist other Banks and even to stretch a point for the purpose.

Answer.—I consider that the Bank of Bombay occupies to a very large extent a similar position to that which the Bank of England occupies in London. I think it is to a large extent the guardian of public credit, and in that capacity under a species of moral obligation in times of panic to do all it can to alleviate panic, and to uphold other monetary institutions. It must have regard to two things: First—The interests of its shareholders; and secondly, other interests which Bankers must regard all the world over. I am hardly prepared to say that I would not feel justified in running some risk to support a Bank like the Asiatic Bank. I think the Directors of the Bank of Bombay are bound primarily to regard the interests of their shareholders, but that occasions may arise in which it is advisable to run some risk.

President.—Are not the Board of the Bank of Bombay bound to protect the interests of their shareholders as strictly as any other Bank?

Answer.—Yes, they are so.

President.—Why should they, if cases arise, run any risk?

Answer.—To save the Banks from worse evils than those that they run the risk of.

President.—Do you think the Bank of Bombay did the slightest good by supporting the Asiatic Bank?

Answer.—As things have turned out, I do not think any good was done, but the Directors thought they had sufficient security for the advances. We were not prepared for the crisis in May 1866, which followed the stoppage of Overend, Gurney, and Company and other houses.

Mr. Melvill.—Did not the necessity of supporting the Asiatic Bank, of which you speak, consist in a great measure in the fact that the Bank of Bombay held a number of Asiatic Bank shares, and that in case that Bank should fail, the Bank of Bombay would have been liable for calls on those shares?

29 July 1868.
Hon. Mr. Brown.

Answer.—I have no doubt that occurred to me at the time.

Mr. Melvill.—In point of fact the Bank of Bombay has had to pay a large sum for calls on Asiatic and Commercial Bank shares. The effect of advancing on shares and accepting transfers of them was to make the Bank of Bombay a partner in the concern, and when it got into difficulties, you were under a necessity to risk more money in order to escape the losses entailed by the advances.

Answer.—It had that result.

To the President.—I said yesterday I was not aware of any system of overdrafts. I am referred to the Board Minute of 13th July 1866, when permission was given by the Board to a customer to overdraw his account, at which time I was Vice-President. I cannot recall the circumstances of that transaction, but the customer was a shareholder of the Bank, and there was the security of his shares. I am referred to another similar transaction on the 24th July 1866 when I was also present. This customer was also a shareholder.

President.—I think Mr. Ryland, the Deputy Accountant, was allowed to overdraw to the extent of Rupees twenty-nine thousand and upwards?

Answer.—I do not know anything about it.

President.—Can you doubt after seeing that two instances were sanctioned by you, and after looking at Mr. De Ga's bundle of Memoranda, that there was a regular system of overdrafts in 1866?

Answer.—I consider that there was not a system, or else some would not have been brought before the Board. [A number of instances having been quoted from the memoranda kept by Mr. De Ga by the President.] There is no doubt that the overdrafts were numerous.

President.—We will turn to the advances to the Bombay Joint Stock Corporation. One bill for three lakhs was discounted on 29th May 1865, and another for one lakh on the 24th June 1865, on which the loss is Rs. 1,50,881.

Witness.—There were shares taken as security for the first loan. Ten lakhs were applied for and refused. The 29th May 1865 was about the height of the panic, but there were peculiar circumstances connected with that loan. About that date I believe the Bombay Joint Stock Corporation had a large payment of about fifty lakhs to make to the liquidators of the two Companies forming together the United Victoria and Colaba Company. The Bombay Joint Stock Corporation was the Banker of that Company. The Corporation had a difficulty in meeting the payment, and applied to the Bank for assistance. The Bank considered that it might advance three lakhs. All these circumstances were known to the Directors, although they are not recorded on the minutes.

President.—Were you not alarmed at the fact that they could not pay the fifty lakhs?

Answer.—The thing was well considered at the time.

President.—You cannot be ignorant that it was one of the bubble Companies of the time.

Answer.—It had respectable Directors, and it had enormous deposits. It had two crores from the Victoria and Colaba Company alone, and it was not considered a bubble Company. We did not know of the mismanagement that was going on. We did not know that they were dealing in their own shares. They had made a second issue of shares before calling up the amount of their first shares. But I do not know that we ought to have been alarmed by that. It was only taking advantage of the state of the money market to issue more stock. We made inquiries and were satisfied as to the Board of Directors and as to the Manager. The value of the securities deposited was well known to all our Directors. Their par value was three lakhs.

President.—Do you think it was a safe system to advance up to the par value?

Answer.—Not on the shares per se. I do not think there was anything objectionable in this advance, as there was the unpaid value of the shares to fall back upon. I am aware that loss occurred on the transaction, but all local property suffered terribly at the time. We took security for the second loan.

The President.—Not at the time.

Witness.—Allow me to look at the Minute (A 42). I cannot explain Mr. Lidderdale's remark that he feared the advance would do no good. We did good in helping the Corporation. It maintained its solvency for the time. It was left to the Secretary to take care that the one lakh which was advanced came back to the Bank from its debtors, the shareholders of the two Companies forming the United Victoria and Colaba Company.

President.—What steps did you take to recover the amount advanced?

Answer.—We instructed our Solicitor to recover as soon as we knew there was any risk. That was done in all cases. The Secretary was instructed to keep a strict watch, and to press on suits. We were much dissatisfied with the conduct of Mr. Kelly, the Solicitor of the Bank. We employed Mr. Rimington in his stead, and he joined Mr. Kelly afterwards. Mr. Kelly was far from well during the latter part of his connexion with the Bank, and is now dead—killed, I believe, by the wear and tear of the times.

President.—The next account is that of Byramjee Hormusjee Cama. There was a fixed loan on the 1st May 1865, of Rs. 1,25,000, with other loans making a total of Rs. 9,19,800.

Answer.—I have no recollection of the loan of Rs. 1,25,000. I find that on 13th May 1865 it would appear at first sight that he obtained a lakh of Rupees. The explanation I have obtained from the Officers of the Bank is that Byramjee Hormusjee Cama gave Mr. Robertson a bill for one lakh on Calcutta, on being pressed for security, and this bill came back on our hands.

President.—Did the state of this large account, which once amounted to 17 lakhs, attract your attention? His house stopped in May 1865.

Answer.—I was much surprised that his account was so large, but the Board seemed to think that to such a man as Byramjee Hormusjee Cama the credit was not too large. I could not understand it, it surprised me.

President.—The next account is that of Cowasjee Rustomjee Pochajee and Company. They had a cash credit of one lakh on the 16th March 1865, and further advances on the 15th and 22nd August 1865, amounting to Rs. 82,000.

Answer.—I do not recollect who Cowasjee Rustomjee Pochajee and Company were. I used to make inquiry when unknown names came before me.

President.—You appear to have sanctioned the advances to them in August 1865.

Answer.—S. and N. Nanabhoy were the joint debtors, and were a good firm. I am not aware of any securities having been substituted for the shares in the United Victoria and Colaba Company originally deposited with the Bank.

President.—How does the enormous loss of Rs. 1,37,000 occur?

Answer.—I cannot understand how the loan was renewed so often. The Secretary had instructions to obtain twenty-five per cent. on every renewal; and if he could not obtain it, it was his duty to refer to the Board.

President.—How is it that the Bank with its means of knowledge was so frequently wrong about the credit of its customers?

Answer.—I cannot say, except that it was the result of the times.

President.—It appears that on the 16th August 1865 the Secretary advanced to these debtors on the deposit of share certificates. Should not such an advance on shares have been brought to the notice of the Board?

Answer.—Yes; it was the duty of the Secretary to bring it before us.

President.—Such were his instructions?

Answer.—Yes; verbal instructions; it was a bonâ fide understanding.

President.—How is it that this was done after the letter to Government of the 30th June 1865 agreeing not to advance on shares?

Answer.—I never saw that letter at the time.

President.—Did not the Government Directors, Mr. F. S. Chapman and Mr. Lushington, tell you that there was a pledge given to Government not to advance further on shares?

Answer.—I have never heard that it was a pledge, it was not stated to the Board as such.

President.—The Government understood it as a pledge, and I think I shall be able to show you that they so understood it.

I will next refer to the loans to Mr. W. H. Crawford. A cash credit was granted to him and Mr. H. B. Macculloch on the 5th April 1865 of one lakh, and a bill of Mr. Crawford's for another lakh was discounted on the 4th May 1866. The first of these advances was a total loss. On the second there appears to have been a loss of Rs. 23,000. There was no security taken apparently for the first advance?

Answer.—It never came before me. Mr. Macculloch came out to Bombay as a Manager to the Agra Bank, and was a very able man of business. He subsequently became a London Agent of one of the Bombay Banks. He was considered to have made money, and he left his appointment and became a partner with a Mr. John in the firm of Macculloch, John, and Company, and they failed in 1866. The bill must have been renewed. I have reason to believe that he is the person referred to in Mr. Robertson's de bene esse examination in the High Court about the advance of twenty-five lakhs to Premchund Roychund as having come to Mr. Robertson, and told him that Premchund must be supported. Premchund having exhausted his credit with Messrs. Ritchie, Steuart, and Company, entered into business relations with Macculloch, John, and Company, and shipped a great quantity of cotton through them.

Shares were taken as security for the second loan. I did not approve of that advance to Mr. Crawford. I minuted against it; so did Mr. Norman. It was discussed again, and Mr. Crawford represented himself to be in considerable straits for money, that he had large bills of costs owing to him, but that he was pressed for time and could not manage to get his bills made out. He had in particular a large sum owing to him by the G. I. P. Railway Company, to which he was Solicitor. He agreed to assign his claim against the Railway Company to the Bank, and that, along with the other securities which he offered to deposit, was estimated to cover the advance, and a large portion of the former loan.

I have reason to believe that there was laxity on the part of the Bank Officials regarding the management of the transaction. The letter assigning the claim on the Railway Company is not forthcoming. Mr. Robertson is to blame, not only on account of that document not being forthcoming, but generally in the management of the transaction. The shares deposited have been sold. They were worth at the time Rs. 77,000, the claim for costs on the Railway Company was for Rs. 50,000 or Rs. 60,000. His executor refuses to recognize the claim of the Bank on those costs.

President.—The next case is that of Cursetjee Furdoonjee, who had a fixed loan on the 1st October 1864 for Rs. 3,20,000, renewed on the 16th January 1865 for three lakhs. He had also a fixed loan on the 28th December 1864 for Rs. 6,25,000, and a cash credit on the 11th April 1866 to discharge an overdrawn deposit account begun on 19th December 1864, and amounting to Rs. 2,80,366. The total loss on these advances is Rs. 10,25,510.

Answer.—I know nothing of the granting of any of these loans. My attention was first drawn to them about July 1865, when Cursetjee Furdoonjee was in difficulties. An arrangement was come to, some of his friends assisting him through his temporary difficulties.

I cannot recollect what was done about his debt to the Bank. Between that time and January 1866 it came before the Board again, but I was not on the Board at that time I think.

On the first occasion, in June or July 1865, I think the Bank gave him six months' time.

[The President reads from minutes of 30th January 1866 as follows:—

"Submitted the report of the Committee of Credi" tors of Mr. Cursetjee Furdoonjee.
"Resolved.—That the Secretary be authorized to " receive from Cursetjee Furdoonjee security to " the extent of three-fourths of his debt to the " Bank. The security offered to be valued by " competent valuators, and Cursetjee Furdoonjee
" to guarantee to take over not less than one-" half of the security so deposited, giving cash
" for an equal amount within six months by
" equal instalments payable at an end of two,
" four, and six months."]

Witness.—I think a deed was prepared by his Solicitor, Mr. Keir, who will be able to speak to the facts, and to produce the deed.

I do not remember the loan by which the balance overdrawn of the current deposit account was paid off. It was of course a mere transfer. I do not know that any one had pointed out the overdraft. I cannot say it was done to conceal the overdraft.

President.—The next account is that of Kursondass Madhowdass. Mr. Birch was Chairman of the Bank when the first loans were granted to Kursondass Madhowdass and his partners, in August and September 1864.

Witness.—On the 3rd August 1865 I was on the Board, and the original bills fell due. Kursondass wrote to the Board asking to have them renewed for six months, and deposited an acknowledgment of claim for twenty-five lakhs against Cursetjee Furdoonjee, and Bonds from Premchund Roychund and Premabhoy Hemabhoy. The loan fell due in December 1865, and it would appear that transfers were then made. Kursondass Madhowdass remained liable for eleven lakhs. Premabhoy Hemabhoy became liable for five lakhs, and Premchund Roychund for nine lakhs. I sat for the last time on the 7th December, and for some weeks before had not been able to attend to business. I believe that Kursondass was right in saying that the transfer of the loans improved the position of the Bank. Mr. Hannay knows most about that transaction. I believe that there was an understanding about the renewal of those loans. Kursondass was not to be pressed for payment.

To Mr. Melvill.—I think a careful estimate was made of the securities given by the Asiatic Bank, but as I have said before I cannot account for the heavy loss upon the transaction.

It was understood that the difficulties of the Bombay Joint Stock Corporation arose from their having recklessly lent out their large deposits amounting to two millions which they possessed; they were in consequence unable to meet the claim upon them for fifty lakhs. I have been asked what steps the Directors took with regard to past due Bills, and pushing on suits. Mr. Duncan was specially appointed to look after those matters. I can give no information about the advances to Jumnadass Doolubdass.

President.—We will turn to the account of Khuttow Khemjee. There was a bill of his discounted on the 26th April 1865 for Rs. 40,300, and another on the 12th September 1865 for Rs. 2,00,000; the loss on these transactions has been Rs. 1,50,000.

Witness.—Security was taken for the first loan. Asiatic Bank share certificates were lodged. I do not know on what date. It may have been on the 30th May 1865.

President.—Was it not the practice that persons came to the Bank for loans, and having obtained money from the Bank purchased shares and afterwards deposited the share certificates as security?

29 July 1868.
Hon. Mr. Brown.

Answer.—I am not aware that there was such a practice. Some things that have transpired before the Commission show that there have been some instances of it.

President.—In the case of Messrs. Best and Brown it was proved that they bought fifty Port Canning Company's shares, having obtained a loan for fourteen days for Rs. 2,50,000, and that at the expiration of the fourteen days they deposited the certificates for forty-six of the shares, and with respect to these loans to Khuttow Khemjee I can show you that the money was used for the purchase of Asiatic Bank shares.

[Reads from Minute of 7th August 1866 an entry showing that Premchund had acknowledged by a letter to the President of the Bank that the money borrowed from the Bank had been used for a joint speculation in Asiatic Bank shares by him and Khuttow Khemjee.]

Witness.—That had escaped my memory. It appears I was present at the Board Meeting. I am referred to a Circular Minute (marked A 46), and to a letter from Premchund of the 25th April 1865 (A 73), and a second letter from him of the 2nd August 1866 (A 72). After looking at these documents I have no doubt that the second loan was taken for the purpose of buying the Asiatic Bank shares which were deposited with the Bank. Khuttow Khemjee was a cotton merchant of good standing in April 1865, so that Premchund's recommendation of him was probably a perfectly honest one. It would have been useless to press Premchund for payment in August 1866. I am not aware that any additional security was obtained, or that the Secretary took steps to obtain any. I have no other information about this matter.

President.—We will turn to the account of Manockjee Limjee and Company. They had a cash credit from the 14th to the 31st January 1865, of Rs. 5,00,000, and an open loan on the 5th June 1865 of Rs. 4,00,000, on which advances there has been a loss of Rs. 4,76,421.

Witness.—Manockjee Limjee and Company were a very old and respectable firm. They were Brokers to Messrs. Leckie and Company. Cowasjee Manockjee Limjee was a Director of the Bank of Bombay. I am not sure that he was a partner in the firm. He was a near relative of Manockjee Limjee. I do not know the particulars of the loan of four lakhs. There is a Minute of 1st June 1865, which refers to it. When the second loan was granted, reference undoubtedly ought to have been made to the existing debt (looks at Minutes). I observe that there is not any reference to the five lakhs. I do not know what security was deposited for the first advance. Cowasjee Manockjee was not on the Board at that time. He was so in June 1865, and appears to have been present at the discussion about the second loan. I know nothing as to the security for the second loan but what appears on the Minute. I should think the loss has been upon the first loan. Under the worst circumstances, taking the securities at their lowest point of depreciation, there could not have been a loss of more than a lakh and a half on the second loan. The security fully covered the second loan, and their credit was first rate

President.—There was an open loan granted to Navulchund Namchund on the 13th April 1855 of Rs. 4,00,000, and in June 1865 an advance to him of Rs. 80,000. On these loans the loss has been Rs. 3,88,932.

Answer.—I did not know Navulchund Namchund. The four lakhs were advanced to him without my knowledge. The Rs. 80,000 must have been a renewal. I first heard of these loans when he became insolvent a long time afterwards. I recognize my signature to the certificate about the Elphinstone Land Company's shares that were to be delivered to him by Messrs. Nicol and Company. No doubt the advance was made under the Resolution of the 12th April 1865. I should not consider him a first-class applicant by any means. He is a brother-in-law of Premchund. He had to pay the sum mentioned in his evidence to the Elphinstone Land Company. I forget whether his estate was wound up under Act XXVIII. of 1865. I cannot say how that Act would have worked under vigilant and careful Trustees. I think any Trustee who did his duty under that Act had the same powers as the Official Assignee. The Act in its practical working was, I think, grossly abused. I can only speak from conjecture. I cannot say that any absolutely fraudulent Schedule was produced, or that any very indefensible proceedings took place, but that was my impression at the time. A great deal depended upon the choice of Trustees. The Act has proved a complete failure.

President.—Next as to Premchund Roychund's dealings with the Bank.

	Rs.
There were overdrafts which commenced on the 1st April 1865, ending in a debt of	1,62,839
A fixed loan on the 1st December 1865, being a transfer from Kursondass Madhowdass and others of	9,00,000
And on the 27th April 1866 a cash credit of	25,00,000
Making together	35,62,839
On these transactions the loss is	20,79,110
There are also the bills with Khuttow Khemjee of Rs. 2,40,000, on which the loss is	1,50,000
And the joint transaction with Mayabhoy Premabhoy for Rs. 4,50,000, the loss on which is	2,80,000
So that there is a total loss of	Rs. 25,99,110

Witness.—I was not aware that on the 27th April 1865 the overdrafts amounted to Rs. 5,13,000. Premchund's application for twenty-five lakhs took me very much by surprise. I considered him a very rich man at that time. I believe the surprise was shared by the other Directors of the Bank. Mr. Tracey expressed to me great surprise at it, and I have read a letter written by him to his partner in England in which he states that the news came upon him like a thunderbolt. Premchund at that time was not in the position of a common share gambler by any means. He had passed safely through the crisis of 1865. There was no whisper of discredit about him then. The universal belief was that, however much he had victimized and ruined others, he had amassed an enormous fortune for himself. He was then trading largely in cotton, and although loss might have been expected on his cotton shipments yet he had this great fortune to stand between him and ruin. At the meeting on the 26th April 1866 to the best of my recollection the discussion turned upon the policy of supporting Premchund. It was laid down as a basis of the transaction that we must have ample security, and it was felt that we must have further information as to his position beyond the mere statement that he was sound. It was therefore resolved to ask him to attend a meeting at Mr. Lidderdale's bungalow. I had inquired as to his position with regard to the Bank in the forenoon from Mr. Robertson. To the best of my recollection he told me that Premchund owed about eight lakhs for Hoondies, which had been drawn on account of purchases of cotton. When I ceased to act as a Director of the Bank in Bombay I do not think that he was a debtor to the Bank. The Managers of the other Banks were invited, as they were supposed to be interested in his position. As Mr. C. E. Chapman said in his evidence, Premchund was the keystone of the credit of Bombay, and it was impossible to estimate the disastrous consequences of his stoppage. Subsequent events showed that the other Banks were directly interested in supporting him, as they held a large amount of his paper, on houses which subsequently suspended owing to his failure. There was a particular reason as to some of the Banks. A very bad system prevailed in Bombay at that time of buying document bills with only a promise of documents to follow. Some of the Banks held a large amount of his bills with only his promise to deliver documents, which they never would have obtained if he had not been assisted, and Premchund's stoppage would have been followed by a run upon the Exchange Banks, which some of them could not have sustained, and that would have been followed by a run upon the Bank of Bombay. To our Bank there was the further inducement to support other debtors of the Bank, whose position depended upon Premchund's, and generally to prevent the depreciation of shares and securities which would have followed the crash.

The second meeting was held at Mr. Lidderdale's house principally for the sake of privacy. Premchund's position and affairs were discussed on the 27th April. A rough memorandum was produced to which we all felt no importance could be attached. It was I think in Premchund's handwriting. There was a discussion as to the particular difficulties pressing upon him. He was closely questioned by Mr. Robertson, and also through Mr. Tracey. It was explained to me and to the meeting, or understood by the meeting, that his difficulty was a temporary one, and arose from his having some payments to make, whilst he had a large sum of money locked up in the Dhollera districts, which he would receive on the satteh settling day. Mr. Tracey said that he he knew this sum was to be received. Except Mr. Tracey's statement there was no other information about his difficulties. I knew that there were large cotton shipments made by Premchund through Mr. Tracey's firm, on which there was a prospect of a loss. It subsequently transpired that Mr. Tracey had become guarantee to the Bank of Bombay for Premchund. Premchund declined to have the loan for six months, and said that he would sooner have it for three months with a prospect of renewal, because he felt sure of being in funds to meet it within the three months.

President.—How did you satisfy yourselves that this loan would be sufficient to prevent his failing?

Answer.—We could not satisfy ourselves on so short a notice. We trusted entirely to the security.

President.—Was there any verification of the security offered?

Answer.—There was as to the lands a rough estimate made at the time.

President.—How did you know that the lands were not encumbered?

Answer.—The title deeds were to be given to the Bank.

President.—But what did you know of their value?

Answer.—A rough estimate only of the value was before us, but we all had some knowledge about the landed property, especially Mr. Norman, the Collector. As to the jewels it was quite impossible to verify the valuation on the spot. I believed them to be worth twenty lakhs. I knew Premchund had invested largely in jewels.

President.—Were you not soon undeceived as to the value of the jewels?

Answer.—No.

President.—I have a letter of Mr. Lidderdale to the Governor written on the 11th May, in which he says, "We have a security over twenty lakhs in landed property and three or four lakhs in jewels, he (Premchund) says ten."

Witness.—Mr. Robertson in his de bene esse examination said they had been valued at fifteen lakhs. It was settled in the room that the promissory note should be taken with sureties. The Bank of Bombay was to advance the whole money in the first instance for the sake of convenience, but the other Banks were to subscribe to the extent agreed on.

President.—Is it not true that you came to this result without having any statement of Premchund's affairs before you?

Answer.—Yes.

President.—And without any verification of the difficulties pressing upon him that day, except Mr. Tracey's confirmation?

Answer.—Yes.

President.—Without any verification of the value of the jewels?

Answer.—Yes.

President.—And without any agreement or memorandum being signed there and then as to the understanding come to?

Answer.—Yes; but I would state with regard to the absence of a memorandum that our Solicitor was there, and by the consent of all present he was to draw up a Deed for carrying out the arrangement. I cannot say that I heard Mr. Lidderdale direct him to do so. Mr. Kelly was taking notes at the time, and it necessarily follows that he considered it his duty to prepare the Deed. I do not know whether he drew up the Deed; there was delay at all events about it. Instructions were verbally given to him to do it. Mr. Kelly was in wretched health at the time, and was obliged to leave for England immediately afterwards. That was his only justification. The Minutes of the Meeting were not drawn up at the time. I must admit it was a grave omission. The Minute of the Meeting which appears on the Board Minutes was drawn up before the next meeting of the Board. I see the addition to the Minute which refers to the promissory note being given. Mr. Lidderdale and Mr. Fraser will be able to explain when that addition was made to it. I cannot explain how that came to be omitted. It is extraordinary in a matter of such importance.

There is an important letter from Mr. Robertson to Mr. Douglas of the City Bank about this transaction. It appears from that letter that the title deeds of the landed property offered as security had been deposited with the Bank before the money was advanced. I wish to state that my view is that each of the Banks joining in the transaction was as much a principal in the loan as the Bank of Bombay. There was no doubt a great omission in not taking a memorandum at the time, but in that respect the Managers of those Banks were as much to blame as we were. Our Solicitor and Secretary were also to blame.

President.—I now turn to the account of Roychund Deepchund. There was a cash credit on the 4th May 1865 to him of Rs. 95,368, a cash credit on 28th August 1865 for Rs. 1,00,000, and a bill discounted on 24th April 1866, at the Kalbadevi Branch, of Rs. 40,000.

Witness.—I have no recollection of these loans. I do not know whether any security was given for them. I was not aware that there was a deposit of Government paper as security for the first cash credit, and that it had been returned by Mr. Robertson to Roychund. No officer of the Bank ever reported that to me. No doubt it was a loose practice to give up security before a debt was paid off. I am not aware whether Back Bay shares were deposited on account of the second debt.

[President reads from Minute of 18th December 1866, a proposal by Roychund to be allowed to sell forty shares in the Bank of Bombay, and to invest the proceeds in Bombay Reclamation Company's shares, to be held by the Bank in lieu of the forty Bank of Bombay shares.]

Witness.—I believe I was not in Bombay on that date. I see I am entered in the Minute as present. I recollect that the late Mr. Michael Scott and Mr. Cassels had some views of their own about the Bombay Reclamation Company's shares, and this may have induced the Board to consent to the proposal. It certainly appears extraordinary for a Bank to enter into a speculation of this kind with its debtor. I know nothing about Roychund's transactions with the Kalbadevi Branch. The affairs of the Kalbadevi Branch never came before us. It appears very extraordinary that a bill was discounted there so late as April 1866. We had ordered all discounts and loans there to cease. Mr. Bullock must explain it. I have not been engaged in any speculations in shares of Companies. I still hold the twenty-four shares in the Bank of Bombay which I have already mentioned. I believe that I have no further information to give which will be useful to the Commission. I should like to state that I was elected a Director on both occasions by the shareholders without any desire on my part to become a Director. I used no influence to get myself elected; it was altogether the shareholders' doing. The shareholders were so completely apathetic in those days that, to make a meeting, the Secretary has had to go out to look for shareholders and compel them to come in. I may mention also that I would not, with my experience of 1865, have rejoined the Board, had it not been that there was the greatest possible difficulty in getting anyone to join the direction; and I could not, looking to my connection with the Bank in 1865, refuse in honour to rejoin in 1866. I may observe further that the shareholders expressed their confidence in me by electing me as one of the members of the Committee appointed at the time when the Bank was put into liquidation. I referred on that occasion to certain letters that had appeared in the newspapers, which I thought unjustifiable, because they were anonymous, and which had called for criminal proceedings against the Directors; and I said that unless the shareholders would express their disavowal of any sympathy with such feeling I would not act. In reply to that the shareholders said they could not express their disavowal of the letter more strongly than by electing me.

31st July 1868.

31 July 1868. Hon. Mr. Brown.

On the reassembling of the Commission, Mr. Brown appeared and added to his evidence as follows:—

With reference to my attendance at the Board Meeting of the 18th December 1866, at which the letter from Roychund Deepchund to the Board was discussed, I find that I left for Calcutta by the evening train of that day, so that it is quite likely I was present at some part of that meeting, but I cannot recollect being present whilst the letter of Roychund Deepchund was considered.

29th July 1868.

29 July 1868. Mr. W. Fraser.

WILLIAM FRASER, sworn.

Since August 1863 I have held the following appointments in the Bank of Bombay. I was agent at the Kurrachee Branch till February 1865; from that time I was inspector of Branches till November 1867. I had a Power of Attorney to enable me to sign as Assistant Secretary at the Head Office in 1866. I am referred to a copy of a letter which appears in the Letter Book of the Bank, dated 9th September 1863 (A 74). It contains the following paragraph in the postscript:—

"I beg to inform you that I have to-day despatched "per Book Post a copy of the Bank's Charter to your "address, which should be carefully perused by you, "in order that you may take advantage of the re- "moval of sundry restrictions contained more "especially in Section XXVII. of the old Charter."

A copy of this paragraph was sent to all the Branches of the Bank which were then open. I received a copy of it at Kurrachee. I am referred to another copy of a letter which appears in the Bank's Letter Book, dated the 22nd September 1863 (A 75). This was only sent to Hydrabad in the Deccan, and Ahmedabad I think. It was not sent to Kurrachee. I am referred to another copy of a letter in the Bank's Letter Book, dated 1st December 1864 (A 76). A copy of this letter was sent to all the Branches with a slight modification in some instances, in regard to the amount of cash balances. I notice a copy of a letter, in the Bank's Letter Book, of the 6th January 1865 (A 77), referring the Agent of the Surat Branch to Premchund's Agent, Abbaichund Cullianchund, for information as to the standing of parties who might wish to do business with the Branch. I see a similar letter was sent to the Agent at Broach (A 78). From February 1863 to February 1865 I was Agent at Kurrachee. I took a copy of the printed Rules with me; they relate principally to matters of account, and to returns to be made to the Head Office. There was a paragraph referring to the amount of discount: a blank space is left for filling up the amount. It was never filled up to my knowledge. It was not filled up in my copy. I made out a discount list of the principal traders at Kurrachee, and sent it to Bombay, with particulars of the sums which I thought they were good for. It was revised at the Head Office, and returned to me. There were no other instructions sent to me as to granting discounts and loans. There were no special instructions given me as to the time for which Bills should run. In 1864 Bills were discounted in one or two cases for periods of nine months with promises of renewal. The Head Office felt bound to renew the bills on one or two occasions in consequence of the Agent's promises.

I am referred to the discounts to the Eastern Financial Association. They were not discounted while I was Agent at Kurrachee, but I have some knowledge of them. The bills were sent to Bombay for collection, but being for long dates the Association had failed by the time they fell due. The three bills were for Rs. 2,20,000. The bills remained at the Head Office here till last year, whilst negociations were in progress with the Eastern Financial with regard to all their debts.

Immediately after February 1865 the Eastern Financial Association employed Ootumram Khoobchund as Agent there. He tendered the Bills to Mr. Watson, the Agent at Kurrachee of the Branch, and he discounted them. Mr. Watson is dead. He was asked by the Directors to explain why he had granted such large discounts. A letter was written to him. There was a telegraph line open at that time. I would not say it was his duty to telegraph for instructions before taking the Bills. The Eastern Financial Association also about the same time obtained a discount at Surat of two lakhs from the Branch there. Those Bills in a similar way were presented to the Agent. He telegraphed to Bombay to know whether he was at liberty to buy the bills. A reply was sent. The Secretary wrote upon the back of the Agent's telegram an authority to buy the bills, and either a telegram or a letter was sent to the Agent at Surat authorizing him to take them. The date of the transaction was the 27th March 1865. This is a copy of the letter in the Bank's Letter Book (A 79) which was sent. The part relating to the transaction is in the following postscript—"You may take Eastern Financial Hoondies at a good paying rate." Whilst I was Agent at Kurrachee there was an Inspector of Branches. My Branch was never inspected. He was employed visiting other Branches, but never visited Kurrachee. He was not in direct communication with me.

President.—Have you anything to state about the management of the Branch at Kurrachee, and whether it was properly superintended by the Head Office ?

Answer.—I sent returns every week to the Head Office. I was only once called on to report specially as to all outstandings on advances made by the Branch. It was about June 1864. The weekly return showed all the business done, and the names of the parties. It did not mention securities. This is a form of the weekly return (A 80). I became Inspector of Branches in 1865. My duties were to inspect the Branches periodically. I had no special instructions from the Head Office, either written or verbal.

President.—You were left to your own sense of what was right ?

Answer.—Yes. I did not visit all the Branches. I never visited the Branch at Hydrabad in the Deccan. It was at a great distance. There was no occasion to visit it. All the transactions there were in perfect order. The bills were all duly met in Bombay. There were no past due Bills and no bad debts of any kind.

When proceeding to visit any Branch, I did not receive any special instructions. There was so much wrong in many the Branches that it took all my time to inspect them. I used to converse with the Secretary about them. He used not to give me particular instructions as to the best course to pursue. I had instructions in one case. Immediately after I came from Kurrachee, Sewmortee Ainapooree got into difficulties, and the Secretary sent me up-country to make the best arrangement I could with the view of securing the Bank. I was told before I left to speak to Premchund about it, and the Secretary's opinion was that it would not do to sue the man, and that giving time would be the best. Premchund was of the same opinion, and he confirmed the Secretary. That is the only case I can remember in which I had any special instructions. Previous to my visit to the Kalbadevi Branch, in September 1866, I only inspected that Branch in matters of account. I did not enter into the propriety of any discounts or loans.

President.—Why did you abstain from doing that ?

Answer.—Because that Branch was specially under the Head Office. I was not told that that was not to be part of my duties, but the Agent was daily in communication with the Head Office and the Secretary in reference to advances and loans at the Branch.

President.—You treated it in fact as an Office under the Secretary himself and therefore beyond your jurisdiction ?

Answer.—That is so.

President.—Was it originally intended that discounts and advances should be made at the Kalbadevi Branch ?

Answer.—I cannot answer that. I searched for the instructions when the Branch was opened, but cannot find any. The Branch did that business soon after opening in 1864. The discount operations there ceased almost entirely about the middle of 1865. A restraint was put upon the Agent at that time.

President.—Can you refer to the order or letter restricting the Agent ?

Answer.—There were several letters sent to the Agent. On 29th March 1865 there was a letter sent to the other Branches, and another on the 21st April 1865 (A 81) to the Branches generally, including the Kalbadevi Branch. (Refers to the copy of the letter.)

President.—I believe you were sent to inspect the Kalbadevi Branch in August or September 1866 ?

Answer.—Yes. This is a copy of my Report entered on the Board minutes. (Vide ante, p. 97, for extract from this Report, marked A 82.)

President.—Whose influence do you refer to by the words "unfortunately hitherto through influence which has since become known to the Directors, &c." ?

Answer.—I referred to Premchund's influence. I had nothing in writing to show it me, but my suspicion was strong against him. It was known that he had been authorized by the Head Office to sanction loans, and there was one particular transaction which must have satisfied the Directors that he had used his influence improperly. I refer to a loan made at the Head Office to Khuttow Khemjee. I suspected he had done the same thing at the Kalbadevi Branch. I had no conversation with Mr. Bullock on the subject. I did not inquire into any particular cases. I did not enter into the particulars of any of the discounts and loans. I have nothing to add to my Report.

President.—I believe it was your opinion that if the Kalbadevi Branch had been only used to receive deposits, it would have been very useful to the Head Office ?

Answer.—Yes, that was my opinion. I had something to do with carrying out the arrangements of the twenty-five lakhs loan to Premchund. I was employed to get the Bond signed by the other Banks —the preliminary Bond. I received the Bond for that purpose between the 10th and 16th May 1866. I fear that I cannot fix the date with greater certainty. I have on previous occasions endeavoured to ascertain it, and could not succeed. The Bond is, I believe, in the High Court. It was a preliminary Bond, an engagement by the Banks to sign the more formal one when ready. I went first to the Asiatic Bank. It was signed there by Mr. Morrison. I went next to the Bank of Hindoostan. The Bond was there signed by Mr. Thomson, the Manager. I went next to the Chartered Mercantile Bank. The Agent, Mr. Campbell, declined to sign the Bond, because I could not satisfy him that the Bank had received all the securities that had been stipulated for.

President.—Do you mean all the securities, or securities of the value stipulated for ?

Answer.—I mean that the security which had been agreed upon was not complete.

I went next to the Commercial Bank. Mr. Beattie, the Agent, declined to sign for the same reason. I then went to the French Bank, where the Agent declined to sign for a similar reason. I then went to the Oriental Bank, where the Agent refused to sign for the same reason. No reason was given to me at the Bank of Bombay why the Bond had not been sent round before. I believe the reason was that Mr. Kelly was ill, and unable to prepare the Bond, and that Mr. Manisty, his partner, had had to prepare it afterwards.

The jewels were given to me on the 30th April 1866, for the purpose of being valued. All the jewels that ever came into the Bank I believe were given to me. A gentleman from Mr. Rosselet's came to examine them. He was a foreigner. He said he had not great experience in such matters. He was a jeweller, that is why he was selected. He left Bombay immediately afterwards. He came to the Bank to value the jewels on Tuesday the 1st May. I returned to Bombay on the 29th April; on the 30th the jewels were given to me, and they were valued on the 1st May. No one else was present when he examined them. He expressed a not very favorable opinion of their value. I knew that they were reported to be worth not far short of twenty lakhs. His opinion was that they were not worth more than twenty-five or thirty per cent. of the value which I understood them to have.

President.—What did you feel it your duty to do ?

Answer.—He had only gone over one or two of the jewels, and finding them to be valued at so much less than I expected, I closed the jewel case, and went downstairs with a view of telling the Directors what this man's opinion was. I went into the Secretary's room which leads to the Board room. The Directors were sitting at the time to the best of my recollection. In the Secretary's room I saw the Secretary and Mr. Tracey. I stated what this man's opinion was of the jewels, and stated what the valuation of the jewels was as compared with what they were led to believe. Mr. Tracey expressed his disbelief in the man knowing what he was about, and I returned to complete the examination. I do not remember that Mr. Robertson said anything. I cannot state positively whether he and Mr. Tracey spoke to each other about it.

President.—Did they tell you to return and finish the valuation?

Answer.—I do not know that they did, but I did return and complete it.

President.—Subsequent events have shown that this gentleman was tolerably right?

Answer.—Yes. I thought I had discharged my duty by speaking to the Secretary and a Director. I did not think it necessary to go to the Board and report to the other Directors. I do not recollect telling Mr. Lidderdale subsequently that the jewels were of much less value than what was supposed. Mr. Robertson never referred to that conversation again to me, nor did Mr. Tracey or any Director. I was present during part of the time when Mr. Crawford afterwards valued the jewels. I do not remember the jewels being valued by Hurryvullubdass Calliandass. I cannot state the exact amount of Mr. Crawford's valuation. I think the jewels have realised altogether two and a half lakhs.

I am referred to the first Board Minute of 27th April 1866. The addition referring to the promissory note is in my handwriting. I made it by Mr. Robertson's direction. When I made the addition Mr. Lidderdale had not signed the Minute. I made the addition on the 8th August 1866. I wrote small because the words "meeting adjourned" were written at the foot of the Minute before I made the addition. I do not know why the Minute had been left unsigned so long. Mr. Robertson, I think, said it was an oversight on his part not having had it signed. I see that the Minute on the 1st May states that this Minute with others had been read and signed. I volunteered to take the Minute to Mr. Lidderdale's house to get it signed. Mr. Lidderdale had left his office, and was going to England next day. I saw him at his house, and he read it over and signed it. He put his initials to show that the addition had been made before he signed. Not a word passed between me and Mr. Lidderdale about his signature being omitted. I never heard any reason assigned for the Minute being left unsigned so long It is usual to have the Minutes signed at the next meeting.

I have speculated a little in shares. I had an allotment of one share in the Victoria and Colaba Company. The Promoters of the Company were, I think, Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy and others. I did not apply for shares in the Company. The allotment came to me through Rustomjee Framjee, of Kurrachee. I had one Trombay share allotted to me. The Promoters of the Trombay Company were I think Mr. Gubbay, Mr. Beren, and others. I had no other allotment of shares. I bought shares in the Elphinstone Land and Press Company, and the Bank of Bombay. I had ten Asiatic Bank shares, about ten of the Old Financial Association, twenty-two of the National Bank of India, which I hold now, and ten of the Commercial Bank, which I also hold, unfortunately. All the shares which I bought were purchased with my own money. I did not borrow any.

President.—Have you any other information which you can give us about the Bank?

Answer.—No, I believe not. I know nothing about Mr. Blair's speculations. Mr. Robertson told me in the beginning of 1865 that he expected to make a lakh of Rupees out of shares which he held. He did not tell me where he got the money to buy the shares with. I know that Mr. Maclean had shares in the Old Financial Association. I never heard that he had any joint speculation with Mr. Watson of the Eastern Financial Association.

To Major Innes.—I examined the returns of the Branches. They were examined at the Head Office. No examination was made as to persons having obtained money at Branches and also at the Head Office. I do not remember that there was any restriction at the Branches as to lending on one name.

To Mr. Melville.—The Branches were generally opened by the Secretary in person. Mr. Blair has visited the places in which Branches were, but not in order to inspect the Branches. He was brought into communication with the Agents, and so had the opportunity of giving them any instructions.

To Major Innes.—Does the fourth rule of the printed Rules and Regulations for the Agents (A 69) refer to Promissory Notes on a single name under the word "Bills"?

Answer.—I consider them included under it.

31st July 1868.

Balkissondass Vizbhoocundass.

BALKISSONDASS VIZBHOOCUNDASS, affirmed.

I was the Shroff of the Kalbadevi Branch of the Bank of Bombay. I was appointed on the recommendation of Mr. Cowasjee Jehangheer. I had been to see him, and he told me to go to the Bank of Bombay. Mr. Blair introduced me to Mr. Robertson, and he gave me a note to Mr. Bullock. I was appointed on the 1st July 1864. The Branch opened in June 1864. I obtained the appointment entirely through Mr. Cowasjee Jehangheer's influence. Davidass Luckmeedass is the father-in-law of my son. I am not otherwise connected with Davidass Luckmeedass. I did not interfere in any way as to Davidass Luckmeedass' loans from the Branch Bank. He obtained the loans on security of shares. They have turned out worthless, but there was a large margin at the time when they were taken as security. Davidass and Jumnadass were my sureties to the Bank of Bombay on my being appointed Shroff at the Branch.

President.—Under those circumstances you would have been happy to aid them?

Answer.—Yes, but it was not in my power. I never spoke to Mr. Bullock, or to Mr. Blair, or Mr. Robertson, in their behalf. I have no relationship with Jumnadass. He was Davidass's partner, and Davidass asked him to become the other surety. I made no payment to them for their kindness. They expected no return, and I did not give any. I know Ramdass Toolseydass. He was a Book-keeper in the service of Davidass Luckmeedass. I believe Mr. Bullock knew that Ramdass was a Book-keeper, his name was taken to comply with the Bank's rule by which two names were required.

President.—Did you not know that the rule was for the security of the Bank?

Answer.—Yes, it may be so. Ramdass was receiving forty Rupees a month, but he and his brothers were well off. They were beginning to build a house. I am positive that I told Mr. Bullock that Ramdass was Davidass's Book-keeper. It was not my business to notice the matter, and Mr. Bullock knew it perfectly well. I never entered into any kind of transaction with Davidass and Jumnadass, except that of the suretyship, nor have any of my relations.

Before large loans were granted at the Branch, Mr. Bullock use to tell the parties to call again, and obtained time to consult some one. Applications for small discounts he disposed of at once. He consulted me sometimes about small loans. He never consulted me as to advances to Davidass or Jumnadass. I was consulted as to small loans, and Mr. Bullock used to take a memorandum of what I said as to the credit of the parties.

31st July 1868.

MR. BULLOCK, recalled.

President.—You told us at your last examination that you never received any instructions from the Head Office.

Answer.—I referred generally to instructions when the Branch was opened, as to the general conduct of the Branch. I saw Mr. Blair almost every day. I used to go to the Head Office after the Branch Bank had closed at 4 o'clock, and sometimes, on special occasions, in the morning, before going to the Branch Bank.

President.—As a rule you went there almost every day, did you you not?

Answer.—Yes.

President.—Then you received instructions from Mr. Blair from time to time at those visits?

Answer.—Yes, very likely.

President.—I think you said that you were not in the habit of making any report to the Head Office; probably you were misled by my using the word "report"; but you were in the habit, were you not, of making constant returns of the business done at the Head Office?

Answer.—Yes, I was. The returns were made weekly. I do not remember that they were ever the subject of conversation between me and Mr. Blair, or between me and Mr. Robertson. I believe it was orignally intended that discount business should be carried on and advances be made at the Kalbadevi Branch. The first day the Branch was opened we purchased hoondies. I did not receive any instructions upon that point.

President.—Had you any instructions given you as to whether you should advance without security, or any other security than promissory notes, or whether you should advance on land or on shares?

Answer.—At that time I believe I had no instructions whatever. I understood the Branch to be opened for business in the same way that the other Branches had been opened.

President.—Had you any instructions as to the length of time you might discount bills for?

Answer.—No.

President.—Is it not a fact that discounts were granted for very long periods for some time after the Branch was opened?

Answer.—No, we never granted on more than a three months' bill. Never for nine months.

President.—You do not remember a transaction at your Branch in which a loan was granted for more than three months?

Answer.—A loan was never granted for more than three months.

President.—Was there no limit fixed beyond which you could not discount?

Answer.—No, not at that time; not at the commencement.

President.—Did you not receive any instructions as to consulting the Secretary?

Answer.—No.

President.—Am I to understand then that your visits to the Secretary were rather to report what you had done than what you were about to do?

Answer.—No. I do not think so; they were generally made with a view to ascertain whether it was desirable to make advances to particular parties, and I frequently saw him when a renewal took place.

President.—Then in point of fact you did consult Mr. Blair very largely as to the parties to whom you should advance, and to whom you might grant renewals?

Answer.—As long as Mr. Blair remained there I did. Mr. Blair I believe was not many months at the Head Office before leaving for England. He was away opening another Branch, if I remember rightly, somewhere at the end of 1864. I remember receiving a letter dated the 19th December 1864. I find a copy of it in the Branches' Letter Book, number 34.

Witness turns to the Letter Book and reads as follows:—

"To the AGENT of the BANK of BOMBAY, KALBADEVI.

"I observe that your fixed loans have increased this week to Rs. 2,50,000. Will you be kind enough to say on what information those advances have been granted; the same remark also applies to your bills discounted, which have also increased fully one lakh. Please mention your rates of fixed loans and bills discounted in your statement.

Yours &c.,
D. ROBERTSON." (Marked A. 83.)

I am referred to page 331 of Branch Book number one, and find there a copy of a letter dated the 23rd of December 1864.

Witness then read the letter as follows:—

"To the AGENT of the BANK of BOMBAY, KALBADEVI.

"Dear sir,—We observe that for some time back your drawings on Head Office have been very heavy. Please before making any large drafts to give notice of your intention to do so, and state for what purpose they are required. We hope these larger demands on us are not paid out in the way of advances by private bills, and such bills as you do take we trust you are satisfied from your information that they are perfectly safe. Before taking any large discounts that may be proposed to you, you ought to refer to Head Office; from your proximity to Head Office this can be easily done.

J. D. ROBERTSON." (Marked A 84.)

I am also referred to a copy of a letter dated January 10th, 1865, which is as follows:—

"To W. BULLOCK, Esq.

"Dear sir,—We observe you yesterday granted a draft on the Head Office in favour of Nowrojee Ardaseer Davur for Rs. 96,900. As this appears to be a discount of a bill for one lakh at the ruling rate for three months, we will feel obliged, if our assumption is correct, by your informing us on what security you have granted this advance?

"Before discounting bills of considerable amount, we wish you to refer to Head Office, as we are averse to the granting of discounts at Head Office and also at local Branches.

I am, &c.,
D. ROBERTSON." (Marked A 85.)

I am referred to the Private Letter Book of the Bank at page 58, where a copy of a letter appears as follows:—

"9th February 1865.

"Dear sir,—We beg to refer you to letters of 23rd December and 10th ultimo, in both of which you were told that before discounting bills of considerable amount you ought first to refer to Head Office for instructions regarding them. On looking into your states of 21st and 28th ultimo we see you have failed to give way to our wishes.

"In our letter of 10th ultimo we particularly instanced a discount to Nowrojee Ardaseer Davur of one lakh, and you were then told that the Bank was averse to opening a discount account with a constituent at your Branch when the same party already had a credit at Head Office. Notwithstanding this, we now observe you again discounted a lakh to Nowrojee on the 27th ultimo.

"You also appear to have discounted half a lakh to Dr. Bhau Daji on 25th ultimo. Please inform me if you were not aware that that party was in the habit of discounting at Head Office, and might have a considerable sum under discount when you took his note for Rs. 50,000.

31 July 1868.
Mr. Bullock.

"We observe a discount for Rs. 20,000 to Byramshaw Dhunjeebhoy on the 19th ultimo. This bill was refused discount in Head Office on account of the obligant's having already quite sufficient, and we will thank you to inform us, keeping in view our letters of 23rd December and 10th ultimo, on what authority or security you did this bill. A discount to Bhicoo Sazba and W. A. Hurst of Rs. 30,000 appears to be an advance not in accordance with our wishes, as expressed in our letters already referred to.

"We have been told to-day that you have discounted a note for Rs. 25,000 to Adam Allee Sultan Allee and Luckmanjee Keechabhai. This note was refused here a few days ago, and we will feel obliged by your letting us know on what security or on whose information you felt warranted in doing this. We may mention that the note by these parties has been repeatedly refused here. Please also to inform us on what security you discounted Rs. 1,15,000 to Hurchund Hurshunker and V. Tuback on 24th ultimo.

"We notice you are in the habit of discounting a number of small bills at rates considerably under what we are charging in Head Office, and it is as well to remind you that there can be no discretionary power granted to you to do such bills under the regular rate, even although their currency is short. We will feel obliged by your giving us the information we desire regarding the foregoing discounts, as early as possible, and also your reason for not acting on the spirit of the instructions given you.

"We notice your balance at Indore is at present very heavy. Please arrange for having this reduced immediately.

I am, &c.,
W. RODGIE." (Marked A 86.)

I am referred to the copy of another letter dated February 22nd, 1865, which is as follows:—

"To the AGENT, BANK of BOMBAY, KALBADEVI.

Dear sir,—I am in receipt of your favour of 11th instant in answer to our letter of 9th.

"We are glad to learn you availed yourself of the reliable information to be obtained from Mr. Premchund Roychund, before you discounted the major part of the bills referred to in our letter mentioned above. However, in the case of those parties doing business in the Fort to whom you have granted advances, Mr. Premchund or any other Director cannot be aware, when giving opinion, what amount the parties have current at the time with the Head Office, and thus excess of credit is apt to be obtained at your Branch when the full amount has already been drawn from Head Office. You will therefore please to discontinue giving advances to any one in the habit of transacting business in the Fort, and refer such applicants to Head Office.

"All advances of this description now current at your Branch you will be good enough to have run off as they mature. The other instructions conveyed in our letter of the 9th instant we shall thank you still to carry out.

"Your intention to send us a list of the shroffs and merchants doing business in the native town we think is very good, and we will thank you to forward it as quickly as possible.

"It would be as well to keep in view that the primary object of establishing the Kalbadevi Branch was for the collecting of deposits, and we think that, by prudent endeavours, and by offering the shroffs and merchants of the native town the privilege of current accounts, your deposit business might be largely increased.

"We will thank you to continue the reduction of your Head Office balance.

I am, &c.,
W. RODGIE." (Marked A 87.)

I produce a copy of my reply to the letter of 19th December 1864 (marked A 88), it is as follows:—

"Bank of Bombay, Kalbadevi Road, Bombay, 22nd December 1864.

"To the SECRETARY and TREASURER, BANK of BOMBAY.

"Dear sir,—In reply to your favour dated 19th instant, I beg to state, that our Fixed Loans have been for the most part, and are now, exclusively granted upon Government paper. In one or two cases, in which we accepted collateral securities, shares in the Bombay Reclamation Company, Deposit Receipts of the Asiatic Bank, &c., with private bills, we included these transactions with our Fixed Loans, but as they fall due we do not renew them, and collateral securities will, in future, be taken with private bills for safe custody, in the manner in which this is done at Head Office.

Our discounts have increased under the present demand for money; except for short dates at ten per cent., nothing is done under eleven; the rate shall for the future be particularized with each bill as desired.

I am, &c.,
(Signed) W. BULLOCK, Agent."

I am referred to the Branch Book number 6, page 369, I find there a letter dated the 5th of July 1865, it is as follows:—

"To the AGENT OF THE BANK of BOMBAY, KALBADEVI.

"Dear sir,—Regarding the sundry large loans which have been discounted at your Branch on the recommendation of Mr. Premchund Roychund, we would advise that you request that gentleman to assist you not only in recovering the amount due, but also to enable you to form some idea of the ultimate loss. Premchund Roychund has stated his willingness to assist in the recovery of any loans passed during the time he sat at the Board.

W. RODGIE." (Marked A 89.)

I look at number 1933 of the Branch Book, vol. 5, page 411, at a copy of a letter dated the 28th of March 1865, which is as follows:—

"To the AGENT of the BANK of BOMBAY, KALBADEVI.

"Dear sir,—We will feel obliged by your exercising at present the greatest amount of caution in your business generally, and in particular avoid all transactions with parties doing business in the Fort. Those who call on you may easily be referred to Head Office; in the case of all renewals and special bills we will be glad that you refer to us before renewing or discounting.

W. RODGIE." (Marked A 90.)

President.—Then there is the letter on the 21st of April 1865, which Mr. Fraser referred to, telling you to discontinue business to a great extent.

Mr. Bullock then read the letter referred to, which was as follows:—

"To the SUB-AGENT, BANK of BOMBAY.

"Dear sir,—Please note for your further guidance that without the sanction of Head Office you are not authorized for the present to advance on one party's name more than Rs. 20,000 at a time, and even for this amount we wish you to obtain collateral security, if at all possible.

WILLIAM RODGIE." (Exhibit A 81.)

Mr. Bullock continued.—I have do doubt but that it was chiefly under that letter that the business of the Branch was reduced; practically however a large portion of the business had then been reduced, for the Bank itself had been very largely reducing it.

President.—I am now going to take you through the greater portion of the loans of the Kalbadevi Branch, but before I do so I want to ask you a few questions about Balkissondass Vizbhookundass; he was a Shroff, was he not, employed at the Branch?

Answer.—I do not know by whom he was appointed, or by whose influence he obtained the appointment. I knew that he was connected with Davidass Luckmeedass. I can scarcely say at what date I came to know it, but I think I must have known it at a very early stage of his connection with the Branch. He did not interfere in any way with the granting of loans to Davidass Luckmeedass. I consulted him very little as to the credit of parties in the bazaar.

President.—Did he tell you that Ramdass Toolseydass was a Mehta of Davidass Luckmeedass?

Answer.—I am not sure that he told me, but I knew that he was.

President.—You knew that the man was a Mehta; then how came you to take him as a surety?

Answer.—The circumstances were these: the Branch had made an advance on the security of certain shares, and about the time when those bills became due, it was apparent to us that most of these men, brokers and others with whom the Bank had had large transactions, were irretrievably gone, unless the price of shares went up; these advances for the most part were to men who had acquired very large gains during the year 1864, which were invested in the purchase of shares, and the margin between the market price and the rate at which they had obtained the advance was for the most part an investment of their own money.

President.—Why was that a reason for taking a Mehta as a surety for the renewal of the loan and making further advances to him?

Answer.—These men, finding that position of things in March 1865 (I don't know the exact date, but it was probably from March till May), were unwilling or unable to take up their bills owing to the shares having then fallen, and the only way in which we could get them to re-arrange the bills was by a renewal and taking as much more in the way of security and payment in cash, as we could obtain.

President.—I don't see that that is any excuse for getting sham security like that of Ramdass Toolseydass?

Answer.—On one or two occasions men who had borrowed money informed me that they were not principals in respect of the transactions, and they gave me the names of other parties, and by their paying a certain amount we brought the advances upon the shares into a closer relation with the market rate of the day; and the bills were on two or three occasions renewed.

President.—It is true that there has been one renewal of this bill; upon January 7th, 1865, the bill was granted, and on February 10th, one month after the shares were deposited, the original transaction was renewed.

Witness.—It is quite likely I think that that was a bill of the time I am now referring to. I think it is.

President.—But the original loan was made to Davidass Luckmeedass and Ramdass Toolseydass?

Witness.—In that case it must have been on the security of shares, and at that time I should not have been aware of his being the Mehta of the other man.

President.—But Balkissondass said he came and told you?

Answer.—I certainly knew that he was a Mehta, but at what time I knew it I cannot tell.

President.—It may be satisfactory to yourself, but it is not a satisfactory reason to me why you should have taken a Mehta as security for the original debt of Davidass Luckmeedass.

Witness.—The bill at that time was secured, I have no doubt that it was an advance on shares; when advances were made on shares there was certainly less care taken as to the parties, more especially in a case like this where one was considered a good party, than when the bills were clean, and without other security.

President.—You have a list of all the outstanding debts at the Kalbadevi Branch I believe?

Witness.—I believe this (producing a document) contains a correct list, arranged alphabetically. The first transaction in the list, that of a loan to Atmaram Madhowjee and Burjorjee Rustomjee of Rs. 2,50,000, was an advance upon shares of the Commercial Bank. A sum of Rs. 25,000 was paid on renewal on the 24th March 1865. I should say that I am obliged to accept this list without having verified it.

President.—You obtained the list from the Bank?

Answer.—Yes.

President.—I believe there were large sums outstanding against these parties; did you inquire at the Head Office what amount was outstanding there against them?

Witness.—At this date I believe neither of those parties had a debt at the Head Office, that is, at the time this loan was first granted.

President.—That is not the fact; at that time Atmaram Madhowjee had nearly twenty lakhs outstanding against him. When you advanced Rs. 2,25,000, did you inquire at the Head Office what was outstanding against Atmaram Madhowjee?

Answer.—No.

President.—Were you not instructed in some of those letters which have been read to make these inquiries?

Answer.—The original advance was on the 16th December 1864, and there is nothing as far back as that; there were no instructions at that date.

President.—But were you not in constant communication with Mr. Blair? Did you inform him that you were going to discount a bill for Rs. 2,25,000 in favour of Atmaram Madhowjee and Burjorjee Rustomjee?

Answer.—It is difficult for me three and a half years afterwards to speak of each particular transaction.

President.—Should you have entered upon such a transaction as two and a half lakhs without consulting Mr. Blair?

Witness.—I do not think I should without consulting some one.

President.—How was it you made an advance in December 1864 on shares, when the Secretary himself had not power to do so?

Answer.—I am not aware of any such regulation.

President.—Are you not aware that upon the 6th of August 1863 there was an order made that there should be no advances upon shares except by bringing the matter before the full Board?

Answer.—No.

President.—And never heard that power was given from the 12th April 1865 to advance on shares?

Answer.—I believe the Head Office advanced upon shares a very long time previous to that.

The President.—Did Mr. Blair tell you to advance on shares? Be cautious; Mr. Blair will have an opportunity of having all this brought before him.

Answer.—I don't remember any statement on his part to that effect to advance on shares.

President.—Well, how came you to do so when the Secretary himself did not as a general rule advance on shares? upon what authority did you proceed?

Answer.—Generally I proceeded to do the business which I understood had been done at the Head Office; that was my general authority in the matter.

President.—But as a matter of fact it was not the style of business done at the Head Office. There may have been a few exceptions.

Answer.—I must have taken my rule from the exceptions.

31 July 1868.

Mr. Bullock.

President.—Then what exceptions do you know of Mr. Bullock? You were the Agent of this Branch, and you ought to be able to tell us better upon what principles you conducted it.

Answer.—I have no doubt but that I understood at the time that advances were made by the Bank, for which similar securities were taken.

President.—Do you mean to say that you communicated with Mr. Blair, and that he told you to make such advances?

Answer.—I have no doubt but that Mr. Blair told me.

Mr. Melvill.—There was only one single instance before the 1st of December 1864 of lending on shares at the Head Office.

Witness.—That is a matter of some surprise to me, but you have had access to the books for the purpose of ascertaining, and I have not.

President.—It seems very singular that you at the Branch should be carrying on a style of business which was not pursued at the Head Office; what led you to do that?

Answer.—My impression is that large advances were made at the Head Office on shares.

President.—That is not the fact; you must know upon what authority you carried on that course of business?

Answer.—Generally, as I have stated before, I followed the policy of the Head Office; in these particular cases which seem to be exceptions to that course I have some difficulty in giving an explanation.

President.—Did Mr. Blair know that you were advancing on shares?

Answer.—He must have known it.

President.—No, that does not follow; for the returns you sent in do not show the security.

Witness.—The monthly returns do. Monthly returns were to the best of my belief made at the time.

President.—To the best of your belief! You must surely know. We have not seen any monthly returns; are you quite sure that securities were mentioned in the monthly returns?

Answer.—Yes.

President.—Can you remember who recommended you to grant this loan of Rs. 2,50,000 to Burjorjee Rustomjee and Atmaram Madhowjee?

Answer.—I do not remember. It is three and a half years ago, and it is extremely difficult to remember what took place after the time that has elapsed since the loan was first granted; I find it extremely difficult to follow the circumstances under which it first originated.

Mr. Melvill.—Have you no papers or documents that will assist your memory?

Witness.—No. I did not keep an Application Book. I had a record of bills bought, and of the loans and discounts which I granted, but I have not had papers in my possession for a very long time. I kept them at my house.

President.—Did Mr. Blair approve of this transaction with Burjorjee Rustomjee and Atmaram Madhowjee?

Answer.—I never heard of any disapproval having been expressed of it.

President.—The loss upon that transaction Rs. 2,18,950?

Answer.—Yes. But with this must be taken the loan for five lakhs on the Elphinstone Company's shares. An offer of compromise was made which would have given the Bank fully nine or ten annas in the rupee, and the Bank would have escaped all liability in respect of the Commercial Bank shares. I endeavoured, as Burjorjee told you the other day, to carry out the compromise in respect of these bills, and the matter, I believe, was referred to the Directors; I do not know who they were,—but I know it was in the hands of one Director, Cowasjee Manockjee. I saw Mr. Robertson daily for some time. Burjorjee subsequently, finding that there was no chance of carrying out the compromise, employed his Solicitors, Messrs. Dallas and Lynch, who wrote a letter to the Bank in respect of these loans; and the reply, I believe, was that the Bank declined to accede to his proposal. I believe that proposal, taking the price of shares at that day, would have given the Bank at least nine or ten annas in the rupee on the whole claim, and there would not have been, as I said before, any further liability upon the Commercial Bank shares. The difference between the acceptance of that compromise and the loss which has now resulted amounts at the very least to nearly four and a half lakhs. Speaking for myself, I repudiate all responsibility, it having been withdrawn entirely from my own control. That has happened with a great number of these bills.

President.—What do you remember about the loan of five lakhs to Burjorjee Rustomjee and Davidass Luckmeedass?

Answer.—That loan of five lakhs was negociated with the Branch, and granted on the recommendation of Premchund, on the security of Elphinstone Company's shares and Back Bay shares. Davidass Luckmeedass was one of the class of men I have been speaking of.

President.—Was he a surety in this transaction?

Answer.—Yes.

President.—He must have been admitted as a mere nominal surety, for there was a very large amount outstanding against him at that time.

Witness.—Yes, no doubt, a very large sum.

President.—How was it Premchund recommended that transaction to you?

Answer.—Of my own knowledge I am unable to speak positively, such a long time has elapsed. Previous to the time when the bill was brought to the Bank, I know nothing whatever as to what the relations of the parties were.

President.—But you tell us it was brought to you recommended by Premchund Roychund; that either has a meaning or it has not. Premchund at that time was a Director of the Bank.

Answer.—He came, if I remember rightly, to the Branch with Burjorjee, and requested that the loan should be granted upon these securities.

President.—That was on the 1st February 1865. Do you mean to say that Premchund told you you might advance on shares at that time?

Answer.—Yes, I have no doubt about it.

It was my regular practice long before April 1865 to advance on shares. That was known to Premchund, but I am unable to say whether or not it was known to any of the other Directors.

President.—We will pass on to the second transaction in the list. Atmaram Madhowjee and Toolseedass Purmunandass gave a promissory note for Rs. 90,000, and calls have been paid on shares. What do you recollect of that transaction?

Answer.—This loan is one of the character to which I referred some little time since. It was a loan on shares. The loan was originally for Rs. 1,65,000, and was granted to Toolseedass Purmunandass. He was one of the men, to whom I have referred, whose means were swamped. This was on the 17th May 1865 when this bill had fallen due, and it was very plain that, unless the price of the shares went up, we should lose the money, as nothing could be got from him. I therefore made him disclose his principal; the principal in that particular case turned out to be Atmaram Madhowjee, and upon his paying as much as I could get from him, and depositing further securities, the bill was renewed as it stands. It was renewed for Rs. 90,000 instead of Rs. 1,65,000, and against this we held two shares in the Victoria Land and Press Company and two shares of the Old Victoria Reclamation Company, upon which it was expected that there would be a further dividend of Rs. 20,000 or Rs. 30,000 per share, but the Company went into liquidation, and what we got was something less than that, very much less; other securities we received became also much less than they were taken for at the time that this renewal was made.

President.—How was it then that there was so great a loss as Rs. 96,900 ? There was Rs. 86,000 written off as bad in February 1865, but the balance outstanding at the end of June was Rs. 96,905.

Answer.—The Asiatic Bank shares of course were valueless, and the Victoria Press shares realised very much less than it was expected they would.

President.—Suppose you did renew that (it is not as objectionable as some of the other proceedings), what steps were taken to recover this large balance ?

Answer.—We took proceedings against Atmaram Madhowjee, and arrested him for one of his debts to the Bank. We tried to recover something from him, but ultimately the Bank was obliged to accept, or thought it desirable to accept, a promissory note from his father, who then had no obligations, or I think not.

President.—Yes, he has outstandings at this moment, and on the 31st of March 1865 he got a bill out for Rs. 30,000 with Atmaram and Davidass from the Head Office.

Answer.—He was a man who owned large property ; it was only after very great difficulty that we got him to sign the promissory note, and to deposit some title deeds of property at Sion. I left the matter in the hands of the Bank Manager. I spoke to Atmaram Madhowjee some weeks ago about it, and he said that the title deeds were still at the Bank.

President.—The next transaction is in the names of Bharmall Parbutt and Co., and Macculloch, John and Co. ; a discount on March 15th, 1865, for Rs. 25,295 ; how long was that original loan granted for ?

Answer.—It was a sixty days' bill of Exchange drawn in England, a trading bill drawn by one party and accepted by the other. There was a great loss upon the transaction ; as both those parties have failed. The bill was brought by Bharmal Parbutt. It is not extraordinary that a trading bill of that kind should be brought to my Branch rather than to the Head Office. These men often had obligations falling due at the Branch on hoondies drawn up-country. They would often come to the Branch with hoondies and bills of exchange, and save themselves the trouble of going to the Fort. Bharmall Parbutt was the holder of this bill. I do not know for what purpose it was discounted.

President.—The next debtors on the list are Dr. Bhau Dajee and Narayan Dajee. You will see that they are debited with a sum of Rs. 50,000. Do you remember that in the letter which was written to you on the 9th of February 1865, and which you read just now, the Head Office blamed you for having discounted that bill on behalf of Bhau Dajee ?

Answer.—Yes. I had not called at the Head Office to see whether there was any discount there.

President.—The Directors had objected to your discounting a bill in the name of Bhau Dajee, and yet on the 16th of February, seven or eight days after you got that letter, you discounted another promissory note in the same names for Rs. 25,000.

Answer.—That was an advance on shares, and there was little or no loss, because the Back Bay shares which we held on it sold at Rs. 10,000 premium.

President. — There is at all events a loss of Rs. 5,164 upon that transaction ; but I want to know why you discounted that second bill : did you take it to Mr. Blair for his sanction ?

Answer.—It is impossible for me to remember at this time whether I did so or not.

President.—Upon the first transaction, the discount of Rs. 50,000, there has been a very considerable loss —a sum of Rs. 37,500 was remaining outstanding, after allowing for Rs. 11,927 dividend paid on the 10th of June ?

Answer. — A dividend has been paid since then.

President.—Then the loss has been reduced on that transaction ; you told us last time how it was you were induced to grant that loan, do you remain of the same opinion ?

Answer.—I do not alter what I said then.

President.—I wish to ask you if Premchund advised that matter himself, or whether you referred to him, for Bhau Dajee has stated in his evidence that Premchund came to you and arranged the loan.

Answer.—My impression is that Premchund saw me and told me he would send him to the Branch ; I had already had an application from Bhau Dajee, and shortly after I met Premchund, and he told me that he had sent Bhau Dajee to the Bank to get a loan for this amount.

President.—We will take the next transaction, an advance to Burjorjee Rustomjee of Rs. 15,000 on a promissory note.

Witness.—Security was taken of his property to the estimated value of Rs. 20,000. This loan was granted to pay calls upon one hundred and sixty shares in the Commercial Bank. In the first loan on the list calls were due by Burjorjee upon those shares held by the Bank in respect of the first loan. The title deeds of his property appear on the list to be held in respect of this particular bill, but that is not necessarily the case. The title deeds were deposited on the date of the loan, the 2nd September 1865. But this was not an advance upon landed property, it was simply taken over by me to secure the Bank against loss. It was not taken for this particular debt, but in order to secure an outstanding debt. I believe it is so expressed in the document which he signed. The security certainly was not directly taken to secure the Rs. 15,000. It was desirable to close at once, and I took a promissory note for the amount. The bank had to pay the call on the Commercial Bank shares.

President.—Did you take any legal advice about the matter ?

Answer.—The property was conveyed to the Bank by the Bank's Solicitors.

President.—The next debt is one of Rs. 20,000 advanced to Cursondass Luckmidass and Purbhoodass Mugonbhoy. There is, it appears, a total loss upon that, no securities whatever having been taken.

Witness.—This was a purchase of native hoondies. These men at that time had credit in the bazaar for ten times the amount at least. They failed almost immediately afterwards. The hoondies were purchased entirely on my own responsibility. Such Information as I could get from the bazaar and Branches I availed myself of. I may state that from June 1864 down to the beginning of 1865 my purchases in this way probably amounted to about one crore of rupees, and in respect of those transactions this is with one exception the only loss.

President.—Next we come to the one lakh granted to Davidass Luckmidass and Ramdass Toolseydass. Have you anything more to say about that ?

Witness.—It was an advance on Royal Bank shares. There seems to have been a total loss there. I see the whole sum was written off as bad in February 1867, and also Rs. 4,000 paid for calls on shares. The transaction cannot have ended in a total loss ; the Royal Bank Shares were never worth less than Rs. 50 a share. I think this statement must be incorrect ; there were three hundred and thirty-three shares of the Royal Bank, and three hundred and ten of the Central Bank ; it is, therefore, impossible that the transaction could result in an entire loss. The Central Bank has gone into liquidation, and its shares have always been worth something ; and the Royal Bank's shares were never worth less than Rs. 50 per share.

President.—The whole sum was written off as bad in February 1867.

Witness.—It may be that calls were paid, and that might account for it.

President.—Or the calls might not have been paid and the shares therefore forfeited.

Witness.—No, that is not the case.

President.—It stands in the Bank's books as a total loss.

Witness.—The statement must be incorrect. The calls would not have been more than Rs. 4,000, and the shares were worth at least half a lakh.

[President.—We will make inquiry into it.]

President.—Was not this statement drawn up by you?

Answer.—No, it was not.

President.—Have not you examined it carefully and kept it in your custody for more than a fortnight?

Answer.—No, I had it lent to me for about a week to make a copy of it, and to look into it so far as I could, but I have not made a copy, and have brought the original.

President.—Have not you gone to the Bank of Bombay and investigated these incorrect items you speak of?

Answer.—No.

President.—Why did you not? There is a great reflection upon your administration, and one would have thought that you would have taken care to go to the Bank and see about these items you speak of as incorrect. You have had a whole fortnight.

Witness.—That is not correct, Sir, I have only had three or four days.

Major Innes.—Have you not been at the Bank from day to day for a fortnight?

Answer.—No, I have not.

President.—You might certainly have seen about these items even if you had had only one day. This is only the eighth item on the list, and if it is such a very incorrect statement you might have investigated the items.

Witness.—I looked over a great number of the items, and wherever I saw an inaccuracy I investigated one or two particulars; without doing so I could not have given you the information which I have supplied already. This case I have noticed for the first time, but on the face of it there must be some mistake.

President.— Look at the item of Rs. 13,000 advanced to Davidass Luckmidass on a promissory note.

Witness.—That note was taken about the time when Davidass' bills were renewed. He paid an amount in cash and deposited certain securities, and he said he had money due to him in a few days, which would enable him to pay off Rs. 13,000 more. No money at that time left the Bank. The value of the shares was estimated, and the deficiency was so much—say Rs. 13,000,—and to make that up certain securities were given, and the note taken; in cases where it was thought that by taking a bill for fifteen days or a month anything more could be got we did so; this note originated in that way I believe. Unless we trace the thing entirely up to the commencement I will have very great difficulty in giving an explanation of it. The Rs. 13,000 might have been the deficiency in cash upon some previous transaction. There was a bill, you will observe, renewed to him on 8th March. I believe it was a transaction which originated in the renewal of other bills.

President.— Rs. 13,000 were due by him to the Bank, and you got him to sign a promissory note.

Answer.—Yes; a note at a short date.

President.—The next item comprises three loans to Davidass Luckmidass and Jumnadass Vullubdass for Rs. 84,000, Rs. 61,000, and Rs. 1,80,000; of these sums the sum of Rs. 1,70,000 were written off to profit and loss, and Rs. 41,576 was due at the beginning of this year; what do you know of that transaction?

Answer.—They were advances on shares of the Royal Bank, Chartered Bank, Mazagon Company, and of others.

President.—These are all advances on shares before the date when they were authorized at the Head Office; by whose influence did these people get these advances?

Answer.—I think Davidass and Jumnadass were referred to me by Premchund Roychund, who said they were perfectly safe for a large amount. He said one lakh on a clean bill. By clean bills I mean bills without any security. I look at a paper shown to me. The figures are Premchund's, and the names are mine. The words "one lakh" are written by Premchund; this was my discount list. There has been a very large loss upon this transaction. The Bank held the shares till they went down to the lowest rates, which was usually the case with the shares held by the Bank. I admit the mistake of advancing on shares, and the loss has been largely increased by the shares not being sold. There is scarcely a bill in this Branch in which collateral securities were not held. If these had been sold at any time before the end of 1865 the loss would scarcely have been more than in the previous half year. I remained in charge of the Branch down to the time it was closed, but I had no control over the proceedings of the Branch from the beginning of 1866. I had an Order from the Head Office to send the securities to the Bank; but that must have been later; at any rate my power of selling the securities must have been largely withdrawn some time about the end of 1865.

I am referred to another item, a loan of Rs. 35,000 granted to Davidass Luckmidass, Jewanjee Cursetjee Framjee, and Gungadass Toolseydass. This was a renewal of a loan on the security of shares at about the market value of the day. I did not advance on the premium of shares. All advances made by me on shares were below the par or paid-up value of the shares. There may be one or two exceptions, such as advances on Commercial Bank shares, but there are very few advances exceeding the par value of the shares advanced upon. It is the fact that the loss which has accrued upon this Rs. 35,000 is Rs. 34,183—nearly a total loss. I explain that simply by the fact of the shares having been held till they became valueless. That promissory note was never renewed. These people must have failed, I think, soon after the loan was granted. It was a similar case to the others, in which the means of the men were small, and almost entirely invested in the margin between the rate which the shares had cost and the advance obtained on them. Even in 1865 I sold a very great number of shares. As a rule, I sold off those securities which I thought it most dangerous to hold. I did not in 1865, I admit, realise the situation. I did not believe that all the Banks were involved to the extent which afterwards became apparent. I did however with very great risk to myself sell off a considerable amount of the securities held by the Bank, or induced parties to do so.

I am referred to the entry of the transaction with Govind Hurry Wullubchund and Gungaram Vuldera, who obtained Rs. 50,000 on a promissory note without any security being originally taken. Gungaram was a shroff in the bazaar, and Govind Hurry was a man largely engaged in cotton business, and of considerable means; and this bill, I am quite sure in my own mind, was referred to the Head Office at the time it was granted. I remember distinctly Govind coming to see me about it, and his being kept waiting some days before the loan was finally granted. He and Gungaram introduced themselves to me. I do not remember seeing Mr. Blair about it. It is a long time ago. But it was under the authority of the Head Office that I gave that loan without security; at a subsequent date some house property at Girgaum was given as collateral security. After the note became due I sent it to the Bank's Solicitors that they might take immediate steps with regard to it; it was mislaid in their office, and some months elapsed before it could be found, and any steps could be taken. It then appeared that the Head Office also had some claim against Govind Hurry Wullubchund, as one of the parties to a bill at the Head Office, and also that he was indebted to the Poona Branch in respect of some hoondies which had been sold there. These amounts were taken together, and the house at Girgaum was made over to the Bank, and subsequently sold; the result of the arrangement was to relieve the second party to the bill (Gungaram) from all liability in respect of it, and there has been a loss on that transaction of Rs. 17,000. I turn to another item, an advance of Rs. 60,000 to Gopalrao Bulwunt and Pranjivundass Hurjivundass, on a promissory note, without security. I think it was done under reference to Premchund. The paper now shown to me is my reference to Premchund and his recommendation is on the other side.

President.—You will remark that Premchund only recommends him for Rs. 50,000; how was it that he obtained Rs. 60,000?

Answer.—I am unable to explain that, unless Premchund afterwards altered the margin. I am unable to say whether in this case I applied at the Head Office to see whether these parties owed anything there. I admit that as a prudent Manager of a Branch, only about a mile from the Head Office, I ought to have made some inquiry there. Pranjivundass was a man of very considerable wealth, and lived in a house only a few doors from the Branch. His father was a Banker, and I think it was extremely likely I inquired at the time of this advance, and that his advances at the Head Office were either very moderate, or that there were nothing outstanding at all.

President. — I think you are mistaken. If you had inquired at the Head Office you would have found that his application had been refused. If you look at that letter you will see that he asked at the Head Office for two lakhs (Letter marked A 93).

Witness.—It appears to be so.

I must admit that, as I was continually seeing the Secretary at the Head Office, I ought to have mentioned these cases to him, and certainly there is no evidence just now that I did. I am next referred to a small transaction with Govindjee Jeewanjee and Hurrichund Hurrishunker. This was an advance of Rs. 10,000 on shares.

I am also referred to an advance of Rs. 15,000 to Gungadass Toolseydass and Vizbookundass Luckmeedass. The amount written off is Rs. 4,841, and there is due besides Rs. 5,532. This was a note taken in liquidation of a previous one, part of the debt being paid in cash, and security being given for the balance. Originally there was no security.

With regard to the debt of Mr. W. A. Hurst, Rs. 13,000, his note was taken in partial payment of a bill due by D. J. Lisboa on an advance on shares. As I found that Lisboa had a claim against Mr. Hurst, and that I could get nothing else, I took it over. It was not a discount to Mr. Hurst at all.

President.—I see there has been a great loss upon it?

Witness.—A sum of Rs. 25,000 was advanced to Heerjee Arut and Meghjee Mooljee on 11th January 1865, without any security being taken. They were merchants in the bazaar, doing a large business. Heerjee had obligations in every Bank in Bombay. I do not consider that any recommendation. I only state it to show that he was doing a large business, and had large credit. Heerjee came to me and I think I referred to a number of people. I did not know him very well myself at that time, but made the usual inquiries. The paper now shown to me is one of the references that I made.

President.—I will next call your attention to the two transactions with Hurrichund Hurrishunker and Venayek Trimbuck. This is a case in which the Head Office refused to advance, and then you grant Rs. 13,000 and one lakh without any security.

Witness.—These were granted on the security of shares. They were not lodged afterwards. The security must have been lodged at the time.

President.—The transaction was entered into in January, and the securities were not lodged till 20th June.

Witness.—That is a mistake, I am quite sure the securities were lodged at the time.

President.—There is a very accurate account kept by the Bank of Bombay as to when the securities were lodged, and these securities are entered in it as lodged in June 1865.

Witness.—It must be a mistake in the book. I am quite sure I could not advance to him without security.

President.—You have given a great many other advances without security?

Witness.—Not to a person of his means.

President.—What do you recollect of this transaction?

Witness.—I remember he came to the Branch, and obtained the loan on the deposit of these shares, which were at that time worth fully one-third more than the amount advanced. I do not remember any particular recommendation in this case. These shares were never realised. I did not sell them for the same reason which I have given before. I always thought the out-turn from these shares would be much greater than it has been.

President. — The consequence is a loss of Rs. 1,20,000.

Witness.—There is another reason, probably, why I did not sell in some cases where I otherwise would—namely, the great risk there was in doing so. If the shares had gone up the parties could have claimed the difference, and I individually would have been held responsible.

President.— Did you take Mr. Blair's or Mr. Robertson's advice about selling securities?

Answer.—No. Banks in Bombay at that time were in a state of great uncertainty as to what rights they held over shares deposited as collateral security. One or two decisions of Mr. Justice Anstey led to a good deal of confusion about that time. I am referred to the case of Hajee Moosa Yoosuf of the Commercial Bank, who on 7th May 1866 got Rs. 20,000. I had no reason to be surprised at a person in the Commercial Bank of India coming to me. It was a bill drawn in England, not two promissory notes. At present nothing has been written off, and the outstanding balance is Rs. 4,860.

Jejeebhoy Dhunjeebhoy and Toolseydass Purmanundass obtained Rs. 35,000 on shares on 17th May 1865. This originated in a discount to Pranjeevundass Doolubdass for Rs. 1,65,000. The bill for Rs. 1,65,000 was subdivided into two or three bills, and the principals' names were given. The loss has been Rs. 33,425. The Central Bank did not fail, but went into liquidation, and the shares of that Bank given to secure the debt were not realised in time. This is another case of the same kind as the others.

D. J. Lisboa and A. M. Gomes obtained Rs. 60,000, an advance on shares; the balance has been reduced to Rs. 29,000, and there has been nothing written off. Against that amount the Bank has a claim on Mr. Ramchunder Luximonjee, who is solvent. The matter was in the hands of Messrs. Cleveland for some time, but I am not able to explain why the amount has not been realised.

Meghjee Mooljee and Cooverjee Premjee obtained Rs. 25,000 without security. They were traders, and I think that was done under reference to Premchund. They were men of considerable standing at the time. I look at a paper shown to me; this is my reference in this case. Rs. 7,603 was written off, and Rs. 6,000 now remain due, of which fully half will be recovered. The Bank obtained a decree against Meghjee Mooljee; the other has absconded from Bombay. At the time of my leaving the Branch instalments were regularly paid in respect of this debt; since then I have no knowledge of it.

I am referred to the transaction with Macculloch, John, & Co., Jewraz Ruttonsey & Co., and Bharmull Purbutt and Co.—Rs. 26,355 on a promissory note, on 12th April 1866.

President.—How came you to discount that promissory note on 12th April 1866? I thought all such transactions had ceased at your Branch at that time?

Witness.—I think we had hoondies falling due on Bharmull Purbutt and Co., which they were unable to meet, and this was taken as part payment. At this time the bills falling due were very large indeed, and frequently they were not taken up, which led to a good deal of negotiation for their disposal, and in several instances in that way the Branch was led to take bills for the sake of doing the best, and releasing the paper in its hands.

31 July 1868.

Mr. Bullock.

I obtained a decree against the parties a short time before they failed, and they lodged with me some Insurance Company's and other shares.

President.—That was on 7th August?

Answer.—Some of the shares have been sold I believe, I do not know as to all of them.

The next entry relates to Madhoba Hurrychundjee. A promissory note was given by him on May 24th, 1866, for Rs. 25,000. That was the note I spoke of as having been taken as part payment of Atmaram Madhowjee's debt, and we still hold the title deeds of some lands at Sewree that were taken, as I have said, in the transaction. There was no security originally taken. Madhoba was then supposed to be in a very good position.

The next is the transaction with Narayenbhoy Tapidas, on 12th May 1865, for Rs. 15,000. He was a Guzerat shroff, a man whose credit at that day was considered very good indeed. The Bank had been in the habit of taking his hoondies up to Rs. 50,000. In the way I have described hoondies were falling due at Bombay, which he was unable to meet, and I made this advance of Rs. 15,000 on a Back Bay share, which must have been then worth considerably more, I should think. The loss on this bill has been Rs. 12,150. We appear to have renewed the bill on the 23rd June 1865. The value of a Back Bay share in June 1865 must have been at least Rs. 15,000 or Rs. 20,000 premium.

Nusserwanjee Nowrojee and Gungadass Toolseydass obtained one lakh. That was never renewed, but there has been a loss of Rs. 77,000. This arose in the same way partly. There was a bill previously discounted and further security was taken. A good deal of the security must have been realised. The Mazagon Company's shares were kept till calls became due on them. These shares were kept too long; if they had been realised at the time the bill became due there never would have been that loss.

There was also the loan to Pranjeevundass Hurgovundass and Ramdass Bapoobhoy of Rs. 80,000, on which there has been a loss of Rs. 41,180. That is a similar case. I never renewed, but the shares were held over, and never sold. I sold a Back Bay share for Rs. 8,000 premium, and that was all recovered. The shares taken were insufficient, but not when the security was taken. The next case is that of Premabhoy Hemabhoy who obtained Rs. 45,000. We had large transactions with Premabhoy at the Branch. chiefly on hoondies. He was a large dealer in Surat.

President.—Did not you inquire how he stood at the Head Office?

Answer.—With regard to shroffs no inquiry was made, for, even if we had ascertained how they stood at the Head Office, we should not have known how they stood at Branches, such as Baroda and Ahmedabad.

President.—But surely that would have been some guide. Would you have granted the accommodation if you had known that Premabhoy had eleven lakhs outstanding at the Head Office, and his son Rs. 4,50,000?

Witness.—No; not if I had known that they had those sums outstanding at the Head Office.

The next transaction is that of an advance of Rs. 40,000, to Roychund Deepchund, Premchund Roychund's father. I believe this originated in a transaction with Premchund. The date of the transaction is the 24th April 1866. We had hoondies due by Premchund Roychund about that time, and they were always paid at the Branch. Premchund used to sell the hoondies at Ahmedabad, Surat, and Indore, and they were sent to the Branch. Premchund's credit was then considerably shaken. That was a few days before the Directors made him an advance of twenty-five lakhs.

President.—Do you mean to say his credit was shaken on the 24th April 1866?

Answer.—I have no doubt of it.

President.—Do you, as Manager of the Kalbadevi Branch, say you had no doubt about that?

Answer.—I did not consider him good. I refused all business with him myself at that time, and I believe it was that that led to Roychund's name being given, and I do not think Premchund's name came into the Branch after that.

I believe hoondies for a large amount were due, and they were sent to the Head Office. Premchund said he had paid the money there, and on inquiry on that day I found the hoondies had not been paid there. This happened two or three times. I am not speaking of one occasion only.

President.—What happened?

Answer.—A difficulty in paying hoondies with Premchund and others as well. Every day we had cases of that sort arising, and arrangements had to be made with regard to these bills. In some cases they were protested.

President.—In some cases Premchund Roychund's bills were protested at the Branch before 24th April 1866?

Witness.—In some cases hoondies at the Branch were protested.

President.—Premchund's?

Answer.—I cannot say Premchund's were.

President.—I am asking you about the particular transaction which led to your taking Roychund's promissory note for Rs. 40,000. Premchund Roychund's hoondies had been sent into the Bank to the Head Office, he told you he had paid them there, and that happened oftener than once. That is what I understood you to say.

Witness.—I believe it was so in this case; many such cases occurred in 1865–66.

President.—But I want the particulars of this transaction.

Witness.—To the best of my belief it happened in this way; by discounting a bill to Roychund with these securities attached, the hoondies falling due by Premchund were paid off.

President.—You gave no money on the promissory note to Roychund Deepchund, but you got him to give you a promissory note for the debt due by Premchund?

Witness.—Yes. And the securities taken at that time were two Colaba Press Company's shares, worth about Rs. 18,000 each, and five Back Bay shares, which were then at about Rs. 5,000 each. The security taken amounted in all to about Rs. 60,000.

There was a similar transaction with Sewjee Velljee and Nagsee Kirpal. They signed a note for Rs. 1,25,000 on the 2nd October 1865. The debt subsequently, with money paid for calls on shares, amounted to Rs. 1,84,000, of which Rs. 32,000 has been written off as bad. That arose, I believe, in the same way as the last. They had very large hoondie transactions at that time; and a promissory note was taken, with the security of shares, in payment of hoondies falling due.

President.—At your examination the other day you stated that almost all the transactions were done under the advice of Premchund Roychund, and that the recommendations were almost as numerous as the bills outstanding.

Witness.—I think I stated that there had been a loss on nearly all the bills passed by Premchund.

President.—You have mentioned a great number of loans with which Premchund had nothing to do. It is only fair to say so.

Witness.—Some of the principal of them fall under that remark. In other cases I have not wished to impute blame to him. Except in the way of advice, he could have no ruling influence at the Kalbadevi Branch. During the time he was a Director, I should have considered his advice to carry a good deal of weight. I did not consult him only when he was a Director. He always had great weight, and was largely consulted by the Bankers in the place. I have never received any allotments of shares of Companies in which he was a promoter. Directly or indirectly I never had any favour from him. I never had any transaction with him. I am not a shareholder in the Bank of Bombay.

31 July 1868. Mr. Bullock.

Mr. Melvill.—You said Premchund came in person with Burjorjee Rustomjee; was that a single instance, or did he come often?

Answer.—That was one instance. He came perhaps three or four times during the whole time the Branch was open.

August 5th, 1868.

5 Aug. 1868. Mr. Premchund Roychund.

PREMCHUND ROYCHUND affirmed.

I am the son of Roychund Deepchund. He was the broker of the Bank of Bombay. He is not in Bombay, he is at Nowsari in the Guicowar's territory. He owes money in Bombay. I was first elected a Director of the Bank of Bombay on the 28th July 1864. I resigned that appointment on the 12th September 1864, as I was constantly going up to Poona during the rainy season, and had much business of my own to attend to. I was a broker also. I was again elected a Director of the Bank of Bombay on the 12th December 1864. My business had not decreased at that time. Some friends had pressed me to become a Director again.

President.—Who persuaded you?

Answer.—Some friends of mine.

President.—But I want to know who they were?

Answer.—Mr. Hannay and Mr. Tracey.

President.—Did Mr. Tracey press you?

Answer.—He was not a Director then.

President.—But you said Mr. Tracey?

Witness.—I do not know exactly about Mr. Tracey, but Hannay and Michael Scott also pressed me. I again resigned on the 29th June 1865.

I was not a promoter of the Bombay Reclamation Company. The promoters of it were Cowasjee Jehangheer, Gavin Steel, and Michael Scott. I was only a Director.

President.—When did you join them in this undertaking?

Answer.—I was with them always from the beginning. They were consulting me as to the allotment of shares, and all sorts of things.

President.—In fact you were their adviser in the promotion of the scheme?

Answer.—Yes.

I think the Company was started in June or July 1864. There was no prospectus or advertisement of the intended scheme; people knew that the Company was to come out. The first applications were sent in, I think, in June. I received some, Michael Scott received some, and Cowasjee Jehangheer Readymoney received some. I have only kept one application, it was made by Ardaseer Hormusjee Wadia. I received numerous applications. We received applications from everybody. I did not receive an application from Mr Blair. He did not send to me, but sent to Scott, I think. I did not receive any application from Mr. Robertson, his application was sent to Scott; most of the applications from Europeans were made to Mr. Scott. I did not receive any application from Mr. Birch, Mr. Scott received it. I did not receive any application from any Director of the Bank of Bombay. All the applications from Europeans went to Scott. I did not receive any applications from any of the Officials of the Bank of Bombay. I do not remember any.

President.—I suppose they were afterwards considered by you and the promoters, and you exercised your discretion as to whom you would allot shares to? To some you gave more, and to some less, than they asked for?

Answer.—Never more than they asked for; certainly not. We did not consider who might be useful to the Company when we were allotting shares; it was not done in that way at all; we gave shares to friends and to those whom we knew. There was a great demand for the shares. The first allotment was made on the 1st July 1864 I think. The shares were at a premium of about Rs. 10,000 before the applications were made. I do not remember exactly what premium they were at before the allotment was made on the 1st of July. I have no doubt that they were at a very large premium—it was more than Rs. 10,000. A person receiving an allotment of shares in the Company might have gone into the market at once, and realised a handsome profit. Immediately after the allotment they rose to Rs. 18,000 or Rs. 20,000 premium per share.

There was a supplementary allotment of shares. Anybody receiving an allotment of the supplementary issue received certainly a very handsome present. I think the applications for shares in this supplementary issue went to Scott and Cassels.

Some came to me. I exercised a very careful discretion before I allotted the supplementary issue. I did not give to some persons more, and others less, shares than they asked for. I gave them all less. I did not receive applications for shares in the first or second issue from Mr. Hannay. He had no occasion to apply. He was a partner of Gavin Steel's. I do not remember an application from Mr. Birch, but he must have made it, for he afterwards got shares, I know. I do not remember whether Mr. Birch had any shares in the supplementary allotment. (Turns to the register of allotments of the Company's shares produced by the Liquidators of the Company.) Mr. Hannay received twenty-five shares in the first allotment and twenty-two in the second. The letter shown to me is Mr. Birch's application (marked R 1), it is an application for six shares. I see Mr. Birch obtained eight shares in the first allotment. He received eight shares because he was a friend of Cowasjee, Scott, and everybody, myself included. He did not receive any of the supplementary issue. Mr. James Blair appears to have received five shares in the original allotment. I do not remember whether he applied for further shares. He did not obtain a further allotment of the supplementary issue. The supplementary issue was made about a month after the first allotment. Mr. Blair did not receive any shares of the second issue, but he bought some at auction. Mr. George Inverarity had four shares in the first allotment, none of the subsequent issue. Colonel Ballard had two shares, none of the new issue. Mr. H. L. Anderson five shares in the first allotment, none of the new issue. Mr. R. McIlwraith had ten of the first allotment only. Mr. Cassels had fifteen of the original and twenty-two of the supplementary issue. Mr. Tracey had two of the original, and ten of the supplementary issue. Mr. A. Stewart four of the first, of the new issue none. Mr. Ravenscroft had two of the first issue only. Mr. F. F. Lidderdale had five of the first issue only. Mr. Donald Robertson had two of the original and ten of the supplementary issue. Mr. W. Wilson of the Bank of Bombay had one share of the first allotment. Mr. A. D. Robertson received four, none of the new issue. Mr. Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy had ten of the first allotment, none of the second.

President.—Each of these gentlemen who received shares either in the original or supplemental allotment might have realised a handsome profit immediately by taking them into the market and selling them?

Answer.—Yes, I had twenty-five shares of the original and twenty-eight of the supplementary allotment. My father, Roychund Deepchund, received ten shares in the first allotment, and an additional one separately (I cannot explain why), and fifteen shares in the second allotment. Mr. Michael Scott had twenty-five of the old and twenty of the supplemental allotment.

I was not a promoter of the Surat Bank, I had the choice of the allotments. The promoters of that Bank were Abbaichund Cullianchund and some others.

President.—But there is no doubt about the fact, that you were the person principally concerned in the formation of the Surat Bank; you cannot disguise that fact?

Answer.—Yes, I was.

President.—The Surat Bank was yours in fact?

Answer.—Yes. No prospectus was issued. The Bank was established in Surat. I went to Surat; I saw those people, they said they wanted a Bank in Surat; and then they made applications for shares. The applications did not come from Surat to me in Bombay, it was at Surat they were received. The shares were at a considerable premium before the allotments were made. Mr. Tracey had shares in that Bank allotted to him I think. I do not remember whether thirty shares were allotted to Mr. James Blair, but I know that some were allotted to him. My books will not show the number of shares allotted to him. I do not remember how many shares I allotted to Mr. Donald Robertson. I did allot him shares, but I do not remember how many. I allotted some shares to Mr. Grant, the Agent of the Bank of Bombay at Surat. I cannot remember having allotted any to Mr. G. Inverarity.

President.—I think you allotted a great number of shares to most of the Agents of the Banks in Bombay?

Answer.—Yes, to those who applied to me I allotted shares. I may have allotted shares to Mr. A. Thomson, the Agent of the Bank of Hindustan. I think I did. I remember that I allotted some shares to Mr. D. S. Christie of the Indian Peninsula Bank, but I do not know how many; some to Mr. J. E. Flinders of the Agra Bank; and some to Mr. Cumming, a broker; he had nothing to do with the Commercial Bank. I also made allotments to Mr. Nicholson of the Chartered Mercantile Bank; Mr. Heycock of the Central Bank; Mr. Morrison of the Asiatic Bank; Mr. Gray of the Bank of India; and Mr. De Quadros of the Commercial Bank.

I was interested in the Asiatic Bank. It was formerly called the Bombay Joint Stock Bank, and was afterwards converted into the Asiatic Banking Corporation. I was not one of the promoters of that Company. I was consulted by those who were in the concern, and I took a large number of shares in it. There was no prospectus issued with regard to it. I do not remember when the original issue of shares in the Bank took place. Shares were allotted to me; they were at a premium before the allotment was made; not at a considerable premium, about twenty per cent. perhaps. I do not remember whether I allotted shares in the Asiatic Bank to Mr. J. Blair; I may have allotted him shares, but he was sure to have got them; so was Mr. Robertson and Mr. Birch. I do not remember how many I allotted to Mr. Birch. There was subsequently a new issue of shares in the Bank. The shares were at a considerable premium at that time, before the allotments were made of the new issue. I do not remember at what premium the new shares were before they were allotted; more than one hundred per cent. I think. A person getting an allotment of the new issue could immediately sell out, and make a handsome profit. I do not know whether there was an allotment of new shares to Mr. S. D. Birch. The allotment was made in England. The Head Office was in England. Any man who had two old shares would be entitled to get one share in the new issue. I do not know whether Mr. Birch had any shares in the old Bank. The new shares came out from England to be allotted here. If Mr. Birch had old shares he would get new shares; but if he had not he would not get any of the new shares. As a matter of fact I do not know that he got any.

I do not know whether Mr. Blair obtained shares in the new issue, or whether Mr. Robertson did. The allotment lists of the shares in the Company are in England. I do not remember whether Mr. Tracey did.

I was not a promoter of the Mazagon Land Reclamation Company. I was one of the parties who bought the land from Government. I was a purchaser with Scott, Cassels, Steel, and Cowasjee Jehangheer; we were five parties altogether. The purchase money to be paid to Government was forty lakhs. We paid ten lakhs and re-sold the land to the Directors of the Alliance Financial Corporation for sixty lakhs. I made the bargain with the Directors of the Alliance Financial Corporation for the sale of the land for sixty lakhs, and that each of the five sellers was to receive eighty shares in the new Company; the balance of two or three hundred shares I was to keep for my friends. The capital of the Company was divided into two thousand shares. It is an exaggeration to say that we were to have half the shares; it was not one half. The allotment of the shares in this Company was made in October 1864. I believe that was the date.

President.—Did you allot any shares in that Company to any Director of the Bank of Bombay?

Answer.—Mr. Cassels was a Director of the Bank, and of course he would have his eighty shares. I did not allot any of the shares I had to any Director of the Bank of Bombay. I allotted some shares in the Company to officials of the Bank of Bombay. I gave some to Mr. Robertson. I think I gave some to Mr. Blair. I did not give any shares to Mr. Maclean, the Chief Accountant of the Bank. I do not remember whether I allotted shares in this Company or in the Surat Bank to Mr. Ryland. I did not allot any of the shares of the Bombay Reclamation Company to him.

I do not remember whether he was in Bombay when the Asiatic Bank shares were allotted; if he was in Bombay, he would be sure to have got some shares.

President.—Upon what principle would he have been sure to have got some?

Answer.—All the Bank Managers got shares.

I was a promoter of the Asiatic Trading Company; I was not the sole promoter; I was with Scott, of Ritchie, Steuart, & Co. There was no statement issued to the public of the nature and objects of the Company. The Memorandum and Articles of Association of the Company were not published. Ritchie, Steuart, and Co. were to be the permanent Secretaries of the Company. The calls were all paid up. There was no price for the shares, except once in 1865, I think.

President.—When was the Company first stated?

Answer.—I do not know the date, but I think it was in 1864, or in the beginning of 1865. I do not remember whether it was the last of the Companies established. I think there were plenty of Companies started after that. There was the Port Canning Company, it had been started before in Calcutta, but it came out in Bombay afterwards.

President.—What other Companies were established after that?

Answer.—The Bombay Shipping Company.

President.—Did that come out after the Asiatic Trading Company?

Answer.—I do not remember the date.

Ritchie, Steuart and Co. and I made very large shipments of cotton on joint account with the Asiatic Trading Company. Mr. Blair and Mr. Robertson had shares in this Company allotted to them, one or two shares.

President.—Were any shares in that Company allotted to Directors of the Bank of Bombay?

Answer.—I do not remember, but I do not think so. These shipments of cotton upon behalf of this Company, of Ritchie, Steuart and Co. and myself, resulted in losses and the Company failed. Ritchie, Steuart and Co. were the only creditors of the Company. There were other shareholders. A meeting of the shareholders was called, and the debt to Ritchie, Steuart, and Co. was compromised. When Ritchie, Steuart, and Co. wanted to make another call, the shareholders all came to inquire about the accounts.

President.—Was not this Company the last Company that you formed for the purpose of raising money for speculation?

Answer.—The Company was formed for the purpose of carrying on the business or trade which was carried on by Ritchie, Steuart, and Co. and myself. The shares in it were not transferable.

President.—Were you the promoter of any other Company in this place?

Answer.—No; in fact I was no promoter of them at all. I had some interest in the Port Canning Company in allotting the shares here. Mr. Schiller, of the Port Canning Company, came round from Calcutta here to see after the allotments. He addressed himself to Scott and to John Fleming. Not to me, but to Ritchie, Steuart, and Co. I was consulted. There were a number of shares of the Port Canning Company to be put on the market here, to be allotted and distributed. I do not remember the names of the leading persons who got allotments in the Port Canning Company. I know plenty of persons did get allotments. The shares ran up to a good premium before the allotment was made. About 8,000 rupees. I do not remember whether Mr. Blair received an allotment of Port Canning Shares; if he was in Bombay at the time he was sure to have got an allotment. Mr. Schiller came here towards the end of 1864, I think, or the beginning of 1865. Mr. Robertson obtained some of the shares. I do not know whether Mr. Ryland got any. I do not remember whether Mr. Birch or Mr. A. D. Robertson received any allotment. Cowasjee Jehangheer got some shares. Mr. Tracey also, and Mr. Cassels. I do not remember any other Director of the Bank of Bombay who did.

President.—Is there any other Company in which you had anything to do with the allotment of shares?

Witness.—Yes, the Bombay Shipping Company. It was formed in 1864. It is in existence. Mr. Blair and Mr. Robertson both got allotments in that Company. I think the shares of the Company were at a premium before the allotment. I had an allotment of shares in it. I do not remember whether any other Director of the Bank of Bombay had an allotment of shares in that Company. When this Company came out, I think Mr. Tracey was not in the firm of Ritchie, Steuart, and Co. Cowasjee Jehangheer got some. I think Cassels got some. I do not remember any one else.

President.—Is there any other Company of which you had the allotment of the shares?

Answer.—I had an interest in the allotment of the shares in the Elphinstone Insurance Company. Those shares never rose to a premium.

President.—Was there any other Company?

Answer.—No. I do not remember any other Company.

President.—I believe that you were very intimate with Mr. James Blair of the Bank of Bombay, and were often consulted by him in the management of the Bank.

Answer.—Yes.

President.—Are you aware that Mr. Blair commenced granting cash credits upon personal security in August or September 1863?

Answer.—Yes.

President.—I believe that you and your father were the two first persons who ever took the benefit of that resolution of his, to grant cash credits upon personal security. You each of you got a cash credit of one lakh, did you not?

Answer.—My father got a lakh.

President.—You both got a cash credit in August or September; your father got a lakh, and you also got a lakh. Mr. Blair had never done this before, you know?

Witness.—I do not know that at all.

President.—But your father was the broker of the Bank, and all your life you have had transactions with the Bank; you must have known that they had never done so before?

Witness.—Not before, not while Mr. Stuart was there.

President.—How was it that you and your father contrived to induce Mr. Blair to break through the old rule of the Bank?

Answer.—I did not induce him; it was his own wish that the Bank should advance upon personal security.

President.—Was there a Bank Director in August or September 1863 who knew that Mr. Blair was advancing money upon personal security?

Answer.—I do not know.

President.—I want to know how it was that you and your father managed to get Mr. Blair to break through the rule of the Bank at Bombay, by granting cash credits upon personal security?

Answer.—The rule of the Bank was to advance upon two names.

President.—That was on bill transactions; I speak of cash credits. In former days a cash credit was never granted by the Bank unless upon Government Stock, Railway shares guaranteed by Government, or bullion; but you got him to let you have a cash credit upon personal security. Now that was so important a change in your monetary arrangements, that you must have some recollection of it; state what passed between you and Mr. Blair?

Answer.—It was this: some schoffs and native merchants, and European merchants also, did not like to bring their names before the Directors of the Bank, and the Directors of the Bank could get out no discounts at all. I said to Mr. Blair if the Bank would grant loans upon personal security he would get plenty of persons to come forward to take loans.

President.—You suggested then to Mr. Blair that if he would grant cash credits upon personal security, he would get plenty of applicants to come forward?

Answer.—Yes; and Mr. Blair said he would let me know after he had consulted with the Directors.

President.—Did Mr. Blair consult the Directors?

Answer.—I do not know that, Sir, he must have done so. How could he advance upon personal security without consulting the Directors at all?

President.—How do you know he did consult any one but yourself?

Answer.—He told me himself that he would consult with some of the Directors, and let me know the result.

President.—You knew most of the Directors of the Bank at that time?

Answer.—All of them.

President.—Can you say, that any of them knew that cash credits were granted upon personal security?

Answer.—I think they knew it.

President.—What Directors knew it?

Answer.—I do not know that.

President.—You must be able to tell us; mention the names of the Directors?

Answer.—Mr. Blair could not advance without the authority of the Directors, and he could not do anything without consulting them. He did not make any difficulty about granting the cash credit which my father obtained. He did not tell me to keep the matter quiet. I could have got any amount of money advanced to me outside. He did not enjoin secrecy upon me. I have read the newspaper report of Mr. Foggo's evidence, in which he says he never knew anything about such advances by the Bank; it may be that he never heard of it.

President.—You seem to have availed yourself of that advantage, and in the year 1863 to have got one loan of a lakh, and another of a lakh and a half, and Roychund Deepchund got one lakh. I suppose you told your friends of this, and said that you could get money from the Bank of Bombay upon personal security?

Answer.—Yes, I told them that the Bank of Bombay would advance money upon personal security, and it became known in the bazaar. I received this book of blank forms of promissory notes from Mr. Blair for obtaining such loans. (Marked R 2.)

President.—The names of the first persons who availed themselves of this privilege appear familiar to persons who are as conversant with your affairs as we are now: There is Calliandass Mohundass, he was a friend of yours?

Answer. — He was recommended by Cowasjee Jehangheer.

President.—Then there are Premabhoy Hemchund, Cursondass Madhowdass, Premabhoy Hemabhoy, Veerchund Deepchund, and Bomanjee Cursetjee Cama: these were all friends of yours, were they not?

Answer.—I knew them all. I was not Ritchie, Steuart, and Co.'s broker. I was a guarantor to them for consignments of cotton made through them to England, and in buying cotton up-country, and I shipped cotton through them. I did not obtain a cash credit for them from the Bank of Bombay of five lakhs in June 1864 upon personal security. Mr. Michael H. Scott was a partner in that firm, and he was also a Director of the Bank of Bombay upon the 2nd June 1864.

If I had obtained five lakhs for Ritchie, Steuart, and Company, it would appear in my books. I have not such a sum entered upon the 2nd June 1864. There is nothing of it in my books. They obtained their loans themselves, I think. Mr. McIlwraith was a partner in the firm of Nicol and Company. He was also a Director of the Bank of Bombay in 1864. I do not know anything of the affairs of Nicol and Company, and whether they got loans upon personal security from the Bank of Bombay.

I said Mr. Blair stated that he would ask the Directors whether they would advance money upon personal security; when he saw me upon the next occasion he said he was ready to advance upon personal security. He did not tell me that the Directors had sanctioned it. I did not ask him, and he did not tell me, but my impression was that the Directors all knew of it.

President.—When did you first begin to purchase shares for Mr. Blair?

Answer.—He was buying and selling shares frequently; his dealings in shares were generally managed by me. I can tell which was the first transaction by referring to my books. There were many occasions on which I bought and sold shares for him. There was no secrecy enjoined about it; he always kept it secret from the Directors, except one or two of them. I think Mr. Tracey always knew. I think Cowasjee Jehangheer and Scott knew. Mr. Scott left Bombay at the end of 1864. He came back to Bombay for two months in 1865, I think.

President.—In your Cash Book there is this entry on the 16th July 1864, "ten Back Bay shares purchased upon account of J. Blair," who is debited with Rs. 3,11,702; what do you recollect of that transaction?

Answer.—I bought shares at the auction. The auction of the four hundred shares refused by Government. Mr. Blair took ten of them. I had instructions previously to buy shares for him. I was acting as a broker in that transaction. I do not remember where he obtained the money to make that purchase of shares for Rs. 3,11,702.

President.—Did he not obtain that loan from the Asiatic Bank?

Answer.—Yes, he did. I did not negociate that loan with the Asiatic Bank for him. He did so himself. Mr. Morrison and he were friends. Mr. Morrison had an interest in those ten shares. Mr. Blair had five shares in the Back Bay Company originally allotted to him, and the ten which I purchased for him; thirty Bank of Surat shares, which I allotted him; one hundred shares in the Joint Stock Bank, which I bought for him at forty-two per cent. premium on the 5th March 1864. (Cash Book produced; entry marked R 3.) My books do not contain anything about one hundred shares in the Financial Association of India and China or United Victoria and Colaba Company's shares or Joint Stock Corporation's shares on Mr. Blair's account. I had a joint speculation with Mr. Blair in Elphinstone Land and Press Company's shares in December 1864. I turn to an entry in my Cash Book of a credit to the joint account of Mr. Blair, Mr. Tracey, Mr. Morrison, and myself: "proceeds of six shares in Nicol and Company's Elphinstone Land and Press Company, Rs. 9,05,211." I had also a joint speculation with Mr. Blair in Back Bay shares in 1864; the account is in the joint names of Scott, Tracey, Morrison, and myself. Mr. Blair's name is not mentioned, but it was with Mr. Morrison that he was interested. Fifty Back Bay shares were purchased for Rs. 12,59,860 between April and August 1865, on different dates. (Entry produced, marked R 4.)

President.—What other joint transactions had you with Mr. Blair? He seems to have operated under other names. You can look at your books?

Answer.—I do not remember any others.

President.—When did you first lend money to Mr. Blair?

Answer.—I never lent money to Mr. Blair at all. We entered into joint transactions, and I supplied the money.

President.—But did you not lend him money?

Premchund.—Do you mean to him personally?

[After being cautioned by the President, and having referred to his books:—]

Answer.—Yes, there is a loan of Rs. 20,000.

President.—That is not your first loan to Mr. Blair?

Answer.—There is the one I have mentioned to you, and Rs. 20,797-12-10 on the 6th December 1863. That was for the one hundred Joint Stock Bank shares debited to his account. I have mentioned that before. It was a loan, and was paid off three months afterwards, on the 5th of March 1864, with interest.

President.—You have mentioned another transaction of Rs. 20,000. What is the date of that loan?

Answer.—On the 22nd of June 1864 I paid Mr. Blair Rs. 20,000 by a cheque on the Asiatic Bank. That was paid off on the 7th July 1864. He asked me for the money, and I gave it to him. I do not know for what purpose he wanted it.

President.—I must ask you to tax your memory a little more; let us have the particulars of your other loans to Mr. Blair.

Answer.—There are no more that I know of; they are not in my books.

President.—Did you not receive the balance of a loan from him on the 20th April 1865? You ought to be able to recollect transactions of this kind with Mr. Blair.

Answer.—I have had many transactions with him.

President.—You did not often lend money to a Bank Manager, so you ought to recollect the transactions?

Answer.—I used to lend money to most of the Bank Managers. I may mention one thing which I have not got here (alluding to his ledger). Morrison and Blair kept an account in my name in the Asiatic Bank account in connection with their dealings in shares for themselves. I knew, of course, that they were using my name.

I am referred to my account in the Current Deposit Account Ledger of the Asiatic Bank, in which the following entry to my credit appears:—"By balance of James Blair's loan Rs. 22,929 in April 1865." That was a mistake, the account was debited the next day as follows: "To balance of Jaiverlall Umiashunkers's cheque credited you in error yesterday Rs. 22,929."

President.—Supposing the credit was made in error, and put right in a subsequent entry, still it shows that there was a loan by you to James Blair, does it not?

Answer.—It is not in my books. I have no account of Jaiverlall's in my books, but I will get an explanation.

President.—Do you mean to state that you never did lend Mr. Blair any money except those two sums? Will you swear you never lent him any besides?

Answer.—On personal security?

President.—On personal security or any other security?

Answer.—He got money from my father.

President.—I want to know about yourself.

Answer.—He was doing business in the Asiatic Bank in my name.

President.—I am coming to that presently, but I want to know if you will swear you did not lend him another sum of money?

Answer.—It is not in my books. I cannot remember; it is three or four years ago. Whenever he asked me for money I always gave it. He was in the habit of doing that sometimes. Whatever money he borrowed I have the account of it in my books, but if he borrowed in the morning and paid again in the evening it is not in my books. Sometimes he would borrow in the morning for some purpose, and pay me again at three o'clock.

President.—Do you mean to say that entry "balance of James Blair's loan" is a fiction, and that there was no such loan?

Answer.—I would not say that. I will give an explanation by and by after seeing the clerk of the Asiatic Bank.

President.—We will postpone the question till Friday morning, when you will be prepared to give us a full explanation of it. We will turn to another subject; to the account in your name in the Asiatic Bank books, opened by Mr. Blair and Mr. Morrison; please explain that.

Premchund.—Sometimes Blair and Morrison used to do business and open a separate account in the Asiatic Bank in my name, their own names being concealed. It was for their benefit. But it was opened in my name for the purpose of concealing their names from the Directors of the Asiatic Bank.

President.—Can you point out the particular account; how is it ear-marked, to prevent its being mixed up in your own account?

Answer.—I do not know, sir, you will find it in the books of the Bank. [Witness here referred to the Asiatic Banking Corporation's books, but appeared unable to find the account.] They did not draw cheques upon the account, they used to send slips to the clerk. Morrison used to operate upon it as Bank Manager, he used to write on a slip "debit Premchund Roychund with so much." I do not remember having any other transaction with Mr. Blair. He had some transactions with my father.

President.—After what has passed I feel quite justified in asking you whether you ever at any time made Mr. Blair a present of money?

Answer.—Of money, never.

President.—Or anything else, except allotments?

Answer.—When he went home I might have given him a shawl or ring. I do not recollect which. I always charged him interest on my loans to him. I look at a letter shown to me (marked A 49); it is in my handwriting and addressed to Mr. Robertson. The postscript is as follows:—"I told Blair about five "lakhs of overdraft, and he told me to keep it as "long as I liked.—PREMCHUND ROYCHUND." I had not lodged any security for that overdraft, but there were lots of shares standing in my name at that time, and he thought I was perfectly right at that time.

President.—Do you think that was a correct mode of doing business; first of all allowing overdrafts, and then letting a customer overdraw as long as he liked without security?

Answer.—No, I certainly do not, but at that time many people had plenty of credit, and there was no want of money. I have no further explanation to give of it.

President.—There is another small entry in the ledger of the Asiatic Bank of the 15th of July 1864 of Rs. 297 paid on account of Mr. Blair's shares in the Bombay Reclamation Company, and a payment which Mr. Blair seems to have made to you of Rs. 4,950 on the 22nd July 1865; can you explain those entries?

Witness appeared unable to give any explanation of these items, and was directed to be prepared to explain them at his next examination.

President.—Your father, Roychund Deepchund, had very large dealings with Mr. Blair; will you mention any that you know of?

Answer.—I cannot mention any just now.

President.—Do you know of any loans of money from your father to Mr. Blair?

Answer.—Yes, he used to lend him money.

President.—Can you specify any particular loans?

Answer.—No, I cannot now, but I can get you all the particulars.

President.—Are you aware that Mr. Blair owed your father a very large sum of money just before he went home to England?

Answer.—I don't remember, but I will get you all particulars about it. I think Mr. Blair had to deposit his Bank of Bombay shares as security, and raised a sum of money to pay my father off. I will get particulars of the whole transaction. Mr. Blair borrowed money from my father for the purpose of buying shares.

President.—How was it the Directors appear not to have been aware of his dealings; how did you manage to keep it so secret. We have heard of one or two transactions with the Asiatic Bank, and the allotments of shares in the different Companies were in his own name; and the purchase of the Back Bay shares was also in his own name. Can you explain how it was that his speculations were kept so secret?

Answer.—Some did know it; Tracey, Scott, and Cowasjee Jehangeer. I do not remember that any one else did, but I know that those Directors whose names I have mentioned knew it.

President.—When did you begin to do business with Mr. D. Robertson? You allotted shares to him in several Companies, and you told us in the early part of your examination to-day that he had two shares in the first allotment of Bombay Reclamation Company's shares, and ten shares in the supplementary allotment?

Answer.—Yes, but I think that the ten shares of the second allotment did not belong to him though they were put in his name. I do not know to whom they belonged, but they did not belong to him. I know it because he could not have had twelve shares allotted to him in the Company for himself.

President.—He never told you that they did not belong to him?

Answer.—No. I believe I alloted him twenty shares in the Surat Bank, and a share in the Frere Land Company, which was promoted by Bayley and others. I had not the allotment of the shares of that Company. At the time of the allotment I was present, and I asked for some for Robertson as a friend of mine. The letter shown to me is in my handwriting (marked A 96).

[The President reads from Premchund's letter to Mr. Robertson as follows: "I have got the share for you and one for Berry in the Frere Company."]

Witness.—Captain Berry had nothing to do with the Bank of Bombay.

The President. (After reading, "I will send forty-five Back Bays to you in the morning:—") What were the forty-five Back Bays referred to? The letter has no date, but was written about the 20th of December 1864.

Answer.—I do not remember just now. I remember receiving from Mr. Robertson, in reply to my letter respecting the Frere Reclamation Company's share, the letter now shown to me, dated the 23rd of December 1864, containing the following passage:—"I am much obliged for the Frere share so kindly sent me. I also received Captain Berry's share." (Letter marked A 97.) I did not allot to Mr. Robertson twenty-five shares in the Alliance Financial Corporation. I had nothing to do with the Alliance Financial allotment. I allotted him one share in the Asiatic Trading Company. I did not give him thirty-five shares in the Financial Association of India and China. I had nothing to do with that Cowasjee Jehangheer was the man. I bought shares for Mr. Robertson, a few only. I will bring a list of my transactions with him. He borrowed money of my father. I can bring particulars of those loans.

Aug. 1868.

Mr. Premchund Roychund.

President.—Bring them with you on Friday morning with the others. You have not Roychund Deepchund's books, have you? perhaps you will bring them too with you on Friday?

Answer.—Very good, Sir.

President.—Had not Mr. Robertson joint transactions with Mr. Tracey?

Answer.—I don't remember just now. He was doing business with Mr. Tracey.

President.—Can you explain an entry in Mr. Robertson's account in the Asiatic Bank Ledger of the 25th of November 1864, "Received by cheque from Roychund Deepchund Rs. 11,750"?

Answer.—He must have got that money from my father. I am not able to explain the transaction.

President.—Put that down in your notes and look to your father's book. Mr. Tracey, I think, became a Director of the Bank in January 1865, did he not?

Answer.—Yes. There was a contest between him and Mr. Foggo. Mr. Tracey was a member of the firm of Ritchie, Steuart, and Co. I was the Agent in many transactions of that firm. I supported Mr. Tracey at that election. I canvassed for him. I also employed Dossabhoy Dhunjeebhoy to vote for him, and sent messages to tell people to come, and they attended the meeting. Mr. Tracey was elected. I had many transactions with Mr. Tracey before and after that time; not with Mr. Tracey as a member of the firm of Ritchie, Steuart, and Co., but with him individually. I do not know whether Mr. Tracey on the 8th of December 1864 got a credit of five lakhs from the Bank of Bombay. Cowasjee Jehangheer, Ritchie, Steuart, Cassels, and I that day received five lakhs a piece.

My books show that in March 1865 Mr. Tracey was indebted to me in a very large sum of money, about twenty-nine lakhs. He reduced that considerably afterwards; it was reduced to Rs. 31,000 in the October following. Mr. Tracey was very much involved in 1865; he had a very large overdrawn account at the Asiatic Bank. I know of his transactions in Port Canning shares with Mr. Brown and Mr. Best. That was not a profitable scheme. I did not, I think, find the money for that speculation for Mr. Tracey that I remember. I remember buying fourteen Port Canning shares in February 1865 at a cost of Rs. 1,62,600 from Mr. Brown. I look at the entry in their book. I cannot explain the initials entered there. I do not know who the other sellers were.

There was a speculation in Port Canning shares in which I, Mr. Hannay, Mr. Tracey, Mr. M. H. Scott, and Mr. Schiller were concerned to the amount of fourteen and a half lakhs. Mr. Robertson had not anything to do with that. Mr. Scott was not in Bombay then. It was not a profitable speculation. Mr. Tracey had a great many speculations in shares. He was also mixed up in a great many speculative share transactions with me. He gave his guarantee for me to the Bank of Bombay for three lakhs,—a verbal guarantee first on the 15th April 1866, and he wrote it down some days afterwards.

The letter shown to me is the guarantee (marked A 98); it was written in my presence. Mr. Tracey was a man of business, and I have had a great deal of experience as a mercantile man. This note is, I think, a sufficient guarantee. I see that there is no stamp on it. At that time there was plenty of confidence, and I think now that it is a sufficient guarantee. I do not know whether legal opinions have been taken about its sufficiency.

President.—Why were you asked for a guarantee on that date?

Answer.—Mr. Robertson said that he could not allow me more money unless he had a guarantee. That was on the 15th April 1866, ten days before the loan to me of twenty-five lakhs. He said he could not allow me to have a further loan without a guarantee. I suppose he had a sufficient number of loans out. I do not know under whose advice Mr. Robertson was acting at that time. My credit was not then shaken.

President.—It must have been a new and startling thing for you to be told by anybody at that time that they would not give you an overdraft for three lakhs without a guarantee?

Answer.—I sold three lakhs of my bills on Calcutta in half an hour in the bazaar, and I could have sold twenty lakhs. There was no difficulty in meeting my bills at that time. If Mr. Bullock said it was so at that time, it was not true.

President.—It is an extraordinary thing that Mr. Robertson, with whom you used always to get on so well, would not grant you a loan without a guarantee; you are quite sure he was not acting under some superior order?

Answer.—I do not know about that, but he said that he could not let me get any more without a guarantee, and I said I would get it from Tracey, and I did so. There was another guarantee given by Mr. Tracey a short time afterwards. This is it in his handwriting (marked A 98). I obtained money from the Bank under this guarantee, and it has been paid off.

President.—That is not the way people would have treated you a year before; you were never before asked for any other guarantee but your name. Will you explain to us why they were so particular for a guarantee at that time, in the beginning of April 1866?

Answer.—I cannot assign any reason at all; I had shipped a very large amount of cotton.

President.—Did not Mr. Robertson know, in fact at that very time, the 15th of April, that your credit was shaken?

Answer.—I never supposed that Mr. Robertson thought so.

President.—You are not able to explain his asking for a guarantee then?

Answer.—No, Sir, I cannot explain it. Mr. Tracey was called upon to pay the money under the first guarantee. The Board thought they had got the guarantee of Ritchie, Steuart, and Co., and they were very much disappointed when they found that it was only a guarantee by Mr. Tracey. They have not been able to sue upon it. Tracey never paid anything, but I have given plenty of securities. There is money now outstanding on that guarantee, a small amount. Mr. Tracey has nothing to pay it with; he is not able to pay his debts. I do not know whether that guarantee was shown to the Board. He may have shown it.

President.—How can you say that, when you said that the Board thought that they had the guarantee of Ritchie, Steuart, and Company? I have no doubt he showed it afterwards, on the 22nd of May, for we find the Board minutes on it; but do you believe that at the time Mr. Robertson laid the guarantee of Mr. Tracey before the Board?

Answer.—I do not know.

President.—But you knew everything passing at the Bank, did you not?

Answer.—No.

President.—Mr. Tracey told you everything?

Answer.—No; sometimes I used to ask him when I wanted the information for my own purposes, and he would tell me.

President.—On the 12th of September 1865 I think you signed a promissory note, purporting to be signed also by Mr. Scott, for five lakhs to the Bank of Bombay ?

Mr. Premchund Roychund.

Answer.—Yes. Perhaps Mr. Hannay or Mr. Tracey signed Mr. Scott's name, but I do not know which. Mr. Hannay was a friend of Mr. Scott.

President.—Do you believe that Mr. Hannay signed it ?

Answer.—It might be Mr. Tracey, for he had Mr. Scott's powers of attorney.

President.—Are you quite sure that you did not put Mr. Scott's name to it ?

Answer.—I am quite sure that I did not. I think Mr. Scott subsequently repudiated that bill altogether. He resigned his seat at the Board, but I do not know whether he did so on account of that transaction.

President.—You were very intimate with Mr. Scott; did he not tell you ?

Answer.—No. The money was borrowed to pay to Government on account of the land purchased by the Mazagon Land and Reclamation Company. Scott's name was attached to it, because he was a partner in the purchase of the property.

President.—You don't mean to say you don't know who it was who signed that name ?

Answer.—It might have been Tracey or some of those persons. He had a power of attorney. I cannot say it extended to such a transaction as this. I never read the power of attorney. I am not able to give any explanation of Mr. Scott's name being put to the note without his knowledge.

President.—Were you consulted at all about the opening of the Kalbadevi Branch ?

Answer.—Mr. Blair told me that a Branch would be opened at Kalbadevi, and I said that I thought it would be a very good thing, and that there would be plenty of deposits there. That was about the end of June 1864, I think. I became a Director in July 1864. It was opened to receive deposits and to buy hoondies. I do not know whether the original intention was to transact all Banking business there ; the real object was to receive deposits from the bazaar people and Marwarees.

President.—We have heard a great deal of the influence which you exercised at the Kalbadevi Branch : were you not consulted on almost all occasions by Mr. Bullock ?

Answer.—Not on all occasions ; but sometimes before and on some occasions after he had given advances he came and asked me if the parties were good or bad. He used sometimes to write a note to me and ask about a person's credit, and I used to write in reply what I thought about it.

President.—But did you not on some occasions take the initiative, and recommend persons to Mr. Bullock ?

Answer.—Yes ; I have done so on two or three occasions. I did so in the case of Dr. Bhau Dajee. I knew Bhau Dajee was a good man. I did not recommend Burjorjee Rustomjee. He made the arrangements himself with Bullock, and then asked me to go and see Bullock. I am aware that Mr. Bullock had pecuniary transactions with my father. My father used to lend him money. I cannot give particulars of these loans to-day. I will have them ready on Friday. My father was surety to the Asiatic Bank for Rs. 6,000 for Mr. Bullock. I never had any dealings with Mr. Bullock. I never lent him any money. He never asked me for any ; he used to go to my father. I do not know whether any other of the Agents of the Bank of Bombay borrowed money of my father, but I think not. None of them ever borrowed of me.

Mr. Premchund Roychund.

Examination resumed.

President.—There were several matters which stood over on Wednesday, in order that you might examine your books, and those of your father, and be able to give us full particulars as to the different transactions. First of all, an explanation as to the item, "balance of James Blair's loan Rs. 22,929," which appears in the books of the Asiatic Bank ; what have you to say as to that ?

Answer.—I bought five Back Bay shares from Mr. Blair at Rs. 28,000 each.

President.—It appears then that there was another transaction between you and Mr. Blair ?

Answer.—I did not remember the transaction. There are five Bombay Reclamation Company's shares which I bought from Mr. Blair at Rs. 28,000 premium, Rs. 5,000 being paid upon each share.*

President.—And this is the balance of profit ; you sold the shares for Rs. 1,85,000 ?

Answer.—Yes.

President.—There was a profit then of Rs. 20,000 ?

Answer.—Yes.

President.—A sum of Rs. 1,62,071 was passed to Mr. Blair's account in the reduction of his loan from the Asiatic Bank, and Rs. 22,929 to your account as the balance of James Blair's loan at that time ; the latter sum was written back the next day, but was subsequently paid to your clerk ?

President.—Why was that sum of Rs. 22,929 paid to your clerk ?

Answer.—Because Rs. 20,000 was profit, and the rest belonged to me for interest.

President.—But who paid the Rs. 2,929 interest ?

Answer.—Mr. Blair. It was for interest to the 1st July.

President.—There was another item of Rs. 297-8 paid on Mr. Blair's Back Bay shares account ; what is that item ?

Answer.—There was an item of Rs. 3,11,702-8-0 which was debited to Mr. Blair's account; he paid me Rs. 3,12,000, and the Rs. 297-8 over and above the Rs. 3,11,702-8 was credited separately.

President.—How do you explain the other item of Rs. 4,950 ?

Answer.—That is a cheque given by Mr. Barnes of the Agra Bank.

President.—What for ?

Answer.—I think for some share transaction between Mr. Blair and Mr. Barnes in which I acted as Broker ; but I don't recollect what share transaction it was.

President.—You said you would give us a list of the loans from Roychund Deepchund to Mr. Blair ?

Answer.—I have not got that yet, but I have sent for my father's books.

President.—You said you had got the books here, and would get the list ?

Answer.—I have sent to my father for the books, but they have not come yet; when they arrive I shall be able to explain.

President.—But I understood you to say that you would have the books this morning ?

Answer.—I have telegraphed and sent a man for them.

President.—You said you would show us the Banking account of Mr. Blair and Mr. Morrison, which you said stood in your name in the Asiatic Bank's Books.

Answer.—I am not able to point out the account. The loan given to Mr. Blair of Rs. 3,11,702-8 was on Morrison and Blair's joint account. I did not purchase shares for each of them. Mr. Morrison was interested in the ten Back Bay shares which I bought for Mr. Blair. There is another entry in my book of ten Back Bay shares purchased on the 15th of July 1864; they were not purchased for Mr. Morrison, but on account of Mr. Brodie, of the Chartered Bank. I cannot find the account of Mr. Blair and Mr. Morrison in the Asiatic Bank's Books.

* Exhibit R. 23.

Mr. Premchund Roychund.

President.—You volunteered the information that Mr. Blair and Mr. Morrison had an account in your name; there must be some foundation for that statement?

Answer.—It is the account of Back Bay shares, the loan of Rs. 3,11,702-8, and there is another account.

President.—But that account relating to the loan by the Asiatic Bank to Mr. Blair was not in your name?

Answer.—There is another account.

President.—What other account?

Answer.—The purchase of fifty Back Bay shares, the joint transaction.

President.—You mentioned that yesterday, but you also said that Messrs. Blair and Morrison had a separate account in your name, and we want you to substantiate that statement.

Answer.—I cannot find it in the Asiatic Bank's books, or in my books; I was looking through them all yesterday endeavouring to find it.

President.—What explanation have you to give for making such a statement? Is there no account of theirs in your name elsewhere?

Answer.—I cannot find any.

President.—Then how came you to suggest such a thing; you suggested it of your own accord, for we never heard of it?

Answer.—There is nothing in the books.

President.—Are you quite sure that Mr. Blair and Mr. Morrison never had any account in your name?

Answer.—No, they had not, Sir.

President.—Then you retract your statement?

Answer.—Yes.

President.—It is very unsatisfactory; I hope you will be a little more careful to-day.

President.—You said you would show us the list of loans from Roychund Deepchund to Mr. Robertson; will you first of all explain the sum of Rs. 11,750?

Answer.—I have it in my book: it is the purchase of one share in the Mazagon Land and Reclamation Company at Rs. 11,750 from Mr. Robertson, on the 25th of November 1864. Rs. 3,000 had been paid on the share, and it was sold at Rs. 8,750 premium; the total was Rs. 11,750. (Entry marked R 6 in Witness's book.)

I am referred to the allotments of the Mazagon Reclamation Company. I see that one share was allotted to Donald Robertson; he sold it immediately, and made a clear profit of Rs. 8,750 on that transaction.

I have not found any account of joint transactions between Mr. Robertson and Mr. Tracey. I said I would endeavour to find out, but I have not been able to do so up to this time. I wish to correct a statement which I made on my former examination: Cowasjee Jehangheer was not a Director of the Bank of Bombay when the shares of the Port Canning Company were allotted.

President.—We were speaking to you the other day about the allotments you made in the different Companies in which you were concerned. First of all, we will go through the names of some of the shareholders in the Mazagon Land and Reclamation Company. Mr. C. F. Kelly, Solicitor of the Bank of Bombay, did you allot him any shares?

Answer.—Yes, he had two shares; he was, I think, the Solicitor of the Company, as well as of the Bank of Bombay; Mr. Ryland, of the Bank of Bombay, had one share; D. Robertson, of the Bank of Bombay one, and that share was to him a clear gain of Rs. 8,750; G. Inverarity had three shares; S. D. Birch two; Mr. M. H. Scott one hundred; I had one hundred; R. Hannay fifty; R. L. Tracey first two, and afterwards twenty-five; James Blair two.

President.—These shares were at a premium at the time of the allotment, and could be sold directly at considerable profit?

Premchund.—Yes. The shares of every Company in those days were at a premium.

Of the Asiatic Trading Company's shares I allotted Mr. Blair one share, Mr. D. Robertson one share, M. H. Scott six shares, R. L. Tracey six, and A. Morrison one share.

I am referred to the Frere Land Reclamation Company's books. I had the allotment of some of the shares in this Company, but the Company was in the hands of Bayley and others. I procured an allotment of two of these shares for James Blair.

President.—Did you get the allotments from the Directors?

Answer.—Yes.

President.—That those you allotted to might get the premium?

Answer.—Yes. C. F. Kelly had one share, and Donald Robertson one share. I did not allot two shares to G. Inverarity in the name of Atmaram Balcrustna. I think it was Cursondass Madhowdass who gave them to Inverarity, and they were entered in the name of Atmaram Balcrustna. I see (looking at the list) that Atmaram Balcrustna had also thirteen shares.

I allotted two shares of the Bombay Shipping Company to Mr. James Blair; the shares were at a premium when they were allotted.

I am referred to the Books of the Port Canning Company. I received numerous written applications for shares in that Company. I think the applications will be found with Messrs. Ritchie, Steuart, & Co.

President.—Did you allot any shares to S. D. Birch?

Answer.—Yes, five.

President.—What premium were these shares at the time?

Answer.—Rs. 8,000 premium.

President.—Did you allot Mr. James Blair two shares?

Answer.—Yes, Sir.

President.—G. Inverarity five?

Answer.—Yes.

President.—H. E. Jacomb one?

Answer.—Yes.

President.—C. F. Kelly two?

Answer.—Yes.

President.—Lidderdale one?

Answer.—Yes.

President.—Ravenscroft one?

Answer.—Yes.

President.—He was a Government Director, was he not?

Answer.—Yes, Sir.

President.—A. D. Robertson twenty shares?

Answer.—Yes.

President.—Donald Robertson two?

Answer.—Yes.

President.—Tracey, how many?

Answer.—Fifty.

President.—Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy?

Answer.—Twenty.

President.—McIlwraith (he was a Director, was he not), how many?

Answer.—Fifteen.

President.—You stated during your examination the day before yesterday that you thought that ten Back Bay shares which were given to Mr. Robertson in the second allotment were not his?

Answer.—They were not his, Sir.

President.—The effect of that evidence is very serious as regards Mr. Robertson, because, unless it is shown that they were not his, he received a present of about two lakhs. We want an explanation from you about it. You say that Mr. Robertson never told you who was the real owner of the shares; do you know who was the real owner of the shares?

Premchund.—I do not remember. I have been thinking about it for the last two days.

President.—Have you never heard?

Answer.—I must have heard the name, but I forget.

President.—You could not forget so important a thing as that: who was the real owner?

Premchund.—Mr. Robertson told me himself that he had two shares in the original allotment. He had ten shares of the new issue in his name, but I believe they were not his, not one of them.

President.—Why do you think they could not have been his?

Answer.—Because I think he could not have had in all twelve shares when Mr. Blair only had five.

President.—Have you any idea who was the owner? just consider, for what you may say in your evidence before the Commission may be a very serious matter for Mr. Robertson.

Premchund.—It may have been Hannay or Tracey, or Scott, to whom they belonged, but I do not know.

President.—Was it usual to distribute and have shares in the name of other people?

Answer.—Yes, very usual.

President.—Has your memory failed in all other cases; can you tell us any cases where people had shares in other people's names?

Premchund.—I had shares in the name of my clerks and dependents.

President.—Have you any recollection of any Directors of the Bank of Bombay having shares in some other persons' names for them.

Premchund.—Will you tell me the names?

President.—Not to appear invidious, I will mention the names of all the Government Directors of 1863, 1864, 1865; Mr. Birch, had he any?

Premchund.—He had eight shares; I never heard of his having any more.

President.—A. D. Robertson?

Premchund.—He had four first, and I heard that he had five more in some other person's name.

President.—Inverarity?

Answer.—No.

President.—Mangles?

Answer.—No.

President.—F. S. Chapman?

Answer.—I don't think he had any at all.

President.—Lushington?

Answer.—He had none.

President.—Jacomb?

Answer.—None.

President.—Can you tell us anybody except Mr. D. Robertson (who we shall not see for some time to come) who can state to whom those ten shares belonged?

Answer.—I think Mr. Hannay or Mr. Tracey will be able to tell you.

President.—Nobody in Bombay?

Answer.—No.

President.—Cowasjee Jehangheer, think you?

Answer.—No, Sir.

President.—He was one of the promoters?

Premchund.—But it was a secret transaction.

President.—Did any of the Government Directors who were in office after the 1st of August 1863 or in 1864 or 1865 traffic in shares?

Answer.—If you give me their names I will tell you.

President.—I will give you all the names; first of all Mr. Birch?

Answer.—He had shares in the Asiatic Bank.

President.—Did he buy them, or get them in the new issue?

Answer.—I don't know, but I know that he had shares in the Asiatic Bank. I do not know what shares he had in other Companies.

President.—Mr. Ravenscroft?

Answer.—I do not know.

President.—Mr. Inverarity?

Answer.—He was doing business in Bank of Bombay shares I think.

President.—Do you mean buying and selling?

Answer.—Yes; he might have bought and sold Back Bay shares also, but I do not remember.

President.—Mr. Mangles?

Answer.—No.

President.—Mr. Chapman?

Answer.—No.

President.—Mr. Lushington?

Answer.—No.

President.—Mr. Jacomb?

Answer.—No.

President.—Are you aware of any of these gentlemen having bought or sold shares in other persons' names?

Answer.—If Mr. Inverarity had any business he did it with Cursondass Madhowdass.

President.—That is not an answer to my question. I asked if you knew if any of these Directors had been trafficking in shares in the names of other persons?

Answer.—Mr. A. D. Robertson and Mr. Inverarity bought and sold shares.

President.—Had you or your father any joint transactions or speculations with any of these gentlemen I have mentioned, who were Government Directors?

Answer.—If you will repeat their names I will tell you. (The President mentions the names again.)

Witness.—No, not with those gentlemen.

President.—You particularly guarded yourself in your answer. Were there any other Government Directors with whom you or your father had joint transactions in shares?

Witness.—If you mention names I will tell you.

President.—Have you had any joint transaction with any Government Director?

Answer.—No, Sir, no joint transactions.

President.—Then why did you fence about it, and say "with none of those gentlemen?"

Answer.—Because there might be some other Directors.

President.—We know you have had joint transactions with Commercial Directors; but I am asking you about Government Directors. I think I have named all of them for the three years?

Premchund.—No; I have never had any joint transactions with any of them.

President.—From your extensive business and acquaintance with everything in Bombay you have the means of knowing; I therefore ask you whether any of those gentlemen ever did enter into any joint speculations with natives or others in Bombay during 1863, 1864, and 1865?

Answer.—I think A. D. Robertson and Cassels must have had joint transactions.

President.—Why do you say so?

Answer.—Because they were staying together, and did business together.

President.—You have no other means of knowledge than that?

Answer.—No, Sir.

President.—Are you aware of any of these gentlemen having received allotments of shares in the names of other persons? You have named one person, do you know anybody else?

Answer.—No, not one that I know of. I was a Director of the Bank of Bombay, and present at the Board when the resolution of the 12th of April 1865 was passed. I thought at the time that the resolution was a good one. It originated, I think, with three of us—Mr. Hannay, Mr. Tracey, and myself. I observe that the resolution rescinds the former resolution of the 6th of August 1863, which forbad the Secretary to advance on shares unless the matter was brought before the full Board. I was not at the time aware of the existence of that rule. I first became aware of it at the meeting of the 12th April 1865. No doubt the resolution of that date was carefully drawn up and must have been considered some time before. I told either Blair or Robertson that I thought that advancing upon shares would bring confidence to the market, but I did not know of the resolution of August 1863, and I first saw it at the Board meeting of the

7 Aug. 1868.

Mr. Premchund Roychund.

12th April 1865. I was not very much surprised to find that there was such a rule in existence. When I saw it at the meeting I did not trouble myself much about it.

President.—But it surely must have struck you with no common surprise, for it was a rule you had violated with the Secretary for the past year?

Premchund.—I thought that the Secretary had power to advance on shares. It did not strike me as singular that such a rule should be in existence, and that it had to be rescinded.

President.—Is it not a fact that you and the Secretary had been allowing money to be drawn from the Bank and advanced upon shares?

Answer.—The money was advanced upon promissory notes, and shares were taken as collateral security. It did not occur to me to tell my brother Directors that the resolution of August 1863 was already a dead letter. I felt sure they all knew it. I approved of advancing on shares which were liable to further calls, and of advancing upon the premia of shares, and of the advances being left entirely to the discretion of the Secretary. I should have approved of anything which gave confidence in the bazaar.

President.—What were the reasons which induced the Directors to pass that rule to advance on shares?

Premchund.—If people found that the Bank of Bombay would advance upon shares, it would give confidence in the bazaar.

President.—Did it not enter into your consideration that there was a good deal of money lying idle at the Bank?

Answer.—No.

President.—It was not that you wanted further credit, but you thought it would give confidence to the market?

Answer.—Yes, that was the reason.

I was not at the Board meeting at which the resolution of the 4th of May 1865 was discussed and adopted. I am quite sure that I did not take any part in the discussion of that resolution. I was at the following meeting, and approved of the resolution come to at the previous one. I would have approved of any resolution which did not tend to restrict the powers of the Secretary. In my opinion the best plan of doing business was to give the Secretary as much power as possible.

President.—We will turn from these general considerations to the particular items in the outstanding debts due to the Bank of Bombay, and your dealings with respect to them. First of all, there is the Alliance Financial Association; were you consulted as to the getting up of that Company?

Answer.—No. The Directors sent me one thousand shares, and I took them. I had no other interest in the Company. I was going to sell my shares next morning, and did sell; but the Directors would not allow me to sell, and so I bought them back again. Dr. Diver and the Directors would not allow me to sell. He said, I must keep them for some time. I and others bought the Mazagon land and Powder Mill from Government, and re-sold to the Alliance Financial Directors. There was no agreement in writing, although it was a sale for sixty lakhs. We never took any writing. I think the re-sale was made a month after. We bought from Government in September, and sold to the Alliance Financial Directors in October 1864. I think about a month after the re-sale we received the earnest money. The Financial Association paid ten lakhs to Government, and twenty lakhs profit to us.

I turn to an entry in my book of the 29th of October 1864 to the credit of Cowasjee Jehangheer, Ritchie, Steuart, Peel, Cassels & Co., Gray & Co., and myself, of five lakhs of earnest money for the sale of the Powder Mills property at Mazagon for sixty lakhs. (Marked R 8.)

I find another entry of the 15th of November of another five lakhs on the same account. (Marked R 9.)

President.—The whole paid up capital of the Alliance Financial was twenty-five lakhs, and a good deal of it was, of course, employed in the business. They would have some difficulty, therefore, in laying their hands immediately on the purchase money for this large property. Did you not undertake to find the purchase money for them?

Answer.—I may have got them the money.

President.—I ask you whether there was not a bill for five lakhs discounted for them at the Bank of Bombay on the 21st of October 1864, and another on the 8th of November for five lakhs.

President.—Did you not interest yourself, and get these ten lakhs for the Alliance Financial Corporation Directors?

Answer.—They told me at first that they wanted five lakhs, and I said I would get it from the Bank of Bombay, for I thought they were perfectly safe, and I recommended them to the Bank of Bombay. I again recommended them for the second loan of five lakhs on the 8th of November. That was a cash credit for one month. I may afterwards have asked the Bank to extend that cash credit to the Alliance Financial from one month to three. I have not any doubt about it. This letter shown to me of the 26th November 1864 is a letter which I wrote to Mr. Blair, asking for the extension of the loan for three months (marked A 50). I negociated the two loans of five lakhs with the Secretary. I never saw the Chairman on such occasions as this. I used to go to the Secretary at once. When I wanted ten lakhs I went to Mr. Blair for it, although the Chairman was at the Bank for an hour or more nearly every day. I did not communicate with any Director as to these loans. I knew all the Directors. I communicated with Mr. Blair only. Mr. Blair did not ask for any security, and no security was given. The second loan was first of all for a month, and then for three months more. I do not remember that there was any understanding come to as to any renewals.

President.—Were not these two sums of five lakhs paid to you and the other sellers of the Mazagon land and Powder Works? On the 29th of October you got five lakhs, and on the 15th of November another five lakhs?

Answer.—Yes, they may have got it.

President.—Is it not a fact that one of these sums of five lakhs was paid to your account in the Asiatic Bank on the 12th of November 1864? The note was not in the name of the Alliance Financial Association, but in the names of Dr. Diver and others.

Answer.—Yes, the five lakhs came to me.

President.—Have you any doubt but that it was a transaction of yours for the purpose of putting the Alliance Financial in funds?

Answer.—The Alliance Financial wanted money, and I got it for them.

President.—Do you know anything about the bill of the 7th of July 1865 for Rs. 1,06,000?

Answer.—I do not remember it. I knew Ghellabhoy Puddumsey and Hurbhum Nursey, two of the Directors of this Company; they were cotton merchants.

President.—At the time when you were getting the loan extended for the Alliance Financial Association, you were also endeavouring to get loans for these two men from the Bank of Bombay, were you not?

Answer.—I think not; they never asked me to do so.

President.—Look at this letter of the 26th November 1864. Did you not recommend Ghellabhoy Puddumsey to Mr. Blair? Is not that your handwriting?

Answer.—Yes. [Premchund then read the letter as follows :—

"My dear Blair,—Ghellabhoy Puddumsey wants a loan on ten Elphinstone shares for three months, at ten per cent., for twelve lacs; he is quite safe from five lakhs to ten lakhs. For Hurbhum Nursey the same kind of loan is required. Will you give them? They are both quite safe, and owners and partners of the firms of Sewjee Nursey and Verjee Nursey.

"Yours sincerely,

"PREMCHUND ROYCHUND." (Marked A 100.)]

Premchund.—At that time the men and their firms were quite safe. I am aware that Ghellabhoy Puddumsey, besides being concerned as a Director in the loans to the Alliance Financial Association, also borrowed from the Bank individually, and that there is a large loss owing to his failure.

President.—Did you write this letter, too, on the same day, the 26th of November? (Letter handed to witness.)

Premchund.—Yes.

President.—Read it.

[Premchund then read as follows:—

"MY DEAR BLAIR,—Cassumbhoy Nathabhoy is quite safe for this amount (two and half lakhs), will you discount for him at ten per cent. for three months.

"Yours sincerely,

"PREMCHUND ROYCHUND. (Marked A 101.)

"26*th November* 1864."]

President.—You must have had some heavy operations that day, for you recommended borrowers to the Bank for twenty-six and a half lakhs, besides an extension of a loan of five lakhs for three months?

Premchund.—Yes; but I considered that I was recommending first-class people to the Bank; Cassumbhoy held a vast deal of valuable property at that time.

President.—We have seen the object of part of the transaction; what was your object in recommending Ghellabhoy Puddumsey, who had already such a large sum outstanding as ten lakhs?

Answer.—He wanted to borrow the money on shares.

President.—What did he and Hurbhum Nursey want to borrow the money for? Are you quite sure that they did not want the money to buy shares from you?

Answer.—I don't know; I can tell from my books.

President.—You have no recollection of any transaction with them on the 26th of November 1864?

Answer.—No; I can see from my books.

President.—We will turn to another set of debts which are connected with the Alliance Financial Association; some of the Directors had loans in their own names, George Taylor, Dr. Diver, and Atmaram Madhowjee?

Answer.—Yes, Sir.

President.—Now, can you tell us what was the market price of Back Bay shares on the 11th of October 1864?

Premchund.—(After referring to his books.) Rs. 22,750 premium. I sold twenty Back Bay shares on that day to Taylor, Diver, and Atmaram Madhowjee. To enable them to buy the shares I arranged a loan of Rs. 5,50,000 with the Bank of Bombay for them. I negotiated the loan with Mr. Blair. I did not go to the Chairman. I never went to him or the Directors. I had retired from the Direction a month before. It was my understanding of the way business was conducted, that such large amounts should be granted entirely by the Secretary. Security was asked for the Rs. 5,50,000, and twenty Back Bay shares were deposited. It was arranged that they should be delivered at the time. It was to be a loan upon the twenty Back Bay shares.

President.—Are you not aware that the Secretary had no authority whatever then to advance on shares?

Answer.—He was doing in this way: advancing upon promissory notes and taking shares as collateral security.

President.—But he had no authority to do that, had he, till he got the order of the 12th of April 1865?

Answer.—No; he was not advancing actually upon shares, but he was taking the shares as collateral security.

President.—But you had been a Director of the Bank, and surely ought to have known he was doing wrong?

7 Aug. 1868.

Mr. Premchund Roychund.

Answer.—I thought at that time that they were people of means; the shares went up afterwards to Rs. 47,000 and Rs. 50,000. I recommended these persons as wealthy. I thought that they were. They were all engaged in speculations after that time. Diver was a Doctor in this place. I thought Atmaram Madhowjee was a man of wealth. He told me himself that he was worth fifty lakhs. I thought he was worth about fifteen lakhs or twenty lakhs. He told me that he was worth fifty lakhs about December 1864, I think.

President.—I find by the private opinion book, kept by the Secretary for the information of the Directors, that Atmaram is put down with two or three others on January 25th, 1863, as good for about Rs. 20,000; and you on the 21st of October 1864, a month or two before Atmaram Madhowjee and the others got the large loan, stated that he might be trusted to the extent of Rs. 25,000. The entry is as follows: "Premchund thinks Rs. 25,000 enough to advance him." Had you not given that information to Mr. Blair?

Answer.—Yes, I may have given that information to him.

President.—That Atmaram's bills might be discounted up to Rs. 25,000?

Answer.—Yes.

President.—And yet you talk about him as a very wealthy person?

Answer.—That was two months afterwards, when I thought he was worth about fifteen or twenty lakhs; he made a great deal of money in Mazagon and Alliance Financial shares.

President.—Do you mean to say that he made fifteen or twenty lakhs in two months?

Answer.—He might have made that amount of money in one day; people then made fortunes in a day.

President.—Did you consider Mr. Taylor a wealthy person?

Answer.—I always thought he was worth four or five lacs.

President.—We find the following entry against Mr. Taylor's name in the private opinion book: "George Taylor—Premchund considers him safe for a lac." That was your opinion on the 2nd of April 1864?

Answer.—Yes.

President.—And yet you considered him worth four or five lacs?

Premchund.—If a man is worth four or five lacs, and you give him one lac, there is no fear at all.

President.—Was not that book meant for Mr. Blair's guidance?

Answer.—Yes.

President.—Then how came you to recommend persons for a loan of five and a half lakhs whom you had represented in the Bank books as being safe, the one for Rs. 25,000 and the other for one lakh?

Answer.—Because there were twenty Back Bay shares as security. I sold these shares to them for Rs. 5,52,500. On the 12th of October 1864 I received from the Bank of Bombay the five and a half lakhs which they borrowed from the Bank. The certificates of the twenty Back Bay shares were not lodged till afterwards. I promised Blair that I would send them to him, and I sent him ten first and ten afterwards. That was my and Mr. Blair's way of doing business; if I gave him my word he was satisfied. In this case the security was not lodged with the Bank until some time after the loan had been granted.

President.—You gave him the certificates of ten shares in January. When did you get those shares into your possession?

Answer.—I bought ten shares of Ritchie, Steuart & Co., before I made the sale to Mr. Taylor and the other buyers, and I had the whole of the shares all the time in my box.

President.—Why did you not send them at once if you had them in your possession?

Answer.—I forgot the transaction altogether.

President.—Do you not remember receiving a letter from Mr. Blair, remonstrating with you for not sending them over before?

Answer.—Yes. The Bank of Bombay never realised the twenty shares, because they were attached by the Sheriff for Atmaram's debt to the General Credit Financial Company; it was not on account of a transaction of mine that they were attached.

I know Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff. He became a Director of the Eastern Financial Association, Limited. He was formerly a clerk to Cursetjee Cama, then a partner with M. and M. C. Cama and Co., and afterwards he did business of his own. He was doing a large business about October 1864. He is now in the Guicowar's territory hiding from his creditors. The other Directors of this Company were Kessowjee Naique, Aladinbhoy Hubbibhoy, and Cassumbhoy Dhurrumsey. I was not consulted as to the getting up of this Company. It was got up before I was consulted. I was first consulted as to this Company about a month or two after it had been formed. I was asked to take shares and get more Directors. I took one thousand shares in the Company. There was a second issue of shares in the Company. I took five hundred shares of the second issue. I sold sixty-five Back Bay shares in October 1864 to the Company. Some were mine and some belonged to others. The prices were as follows:—There were fifteen shares at Rs. 18,000, thirty-five at Rs. 22,000, five at Rs. 21,500, and ten at Rs. 21,000, making a total of Rs.16,82,500. I do not know how much money the Eastern Financial Association had available at that time. I undertook to find part of the money for the Association. I saw Mr. Blair at the Bank of Bombay, and negotiated with him a loan for ten lakhs for the Association. I told Mr. Blair that he might safely advance these ten lakhs. I may have told Mr. Ryan, the Manager of the Association, to go to Mr. Blair. I am not prepared to contradict Mr. Ryan about it. A promissory note was given for the loan, no security was taken. I received those ten lacs in part payment of the price of the shares. I turn to my cash book for October 1864: there is an entry of eight lacs received. It was a portion of the loan. I paid the cheque to Mr. Scott's account in the Asiatic Bank. I received the other two lacs; I do not remember when I received them. The shares were resold by the Eastern Financial Association, not to me, but to Cursetjee Furdonjee for future delivery. I told them he was the buyer at the time. Pestonjee admitted it, but the Eastern Financial Association tried to hold me responsible for the purchase; I had never guaranteed the sale. I received no brokerage from either party.

The loan of ten lakhs was renewed in January 1865, and it fell due again on the 24th of April 1865. A difficulty was made when it fell due the second time about getting it renewed. The Bank of Bombay insisted upon two lakhs being paid in part payment. I was consulted on behalf of the Eastern Financial Association, and I interposed on their behalf. I told Pestonjee that, if he paid two lakhs, the loan would be renewed. I believe that the Association did not pay anything.

President.—They sent Rs. 1,25,000 to the Bank of Bombay, and instead of that sum being credited to this loan, it was credited to the current deposit account of the Association, which was then in funds; do you know anything about that?

Answer.—I do not remember it, and am not able to explain the matter. I became indebted to the Eastern Financial Association; they made me liable for five lakhs.

President.—Did not you get an advance from the Eastern Financial Association upon the 18th November 1864 of five lakhs?

Answer.—That was not an advance.

President.—It is entered as money paid to you, and it also appears that on the 1st of August 1866 you gave a promissory note for that sum of five lakhs and interest.

Answer.—It was earnest-money on account of the price of land which I sold to the Eastern Financial Association for thirty-five lakhs. This property was then sold to the Frere Land Company for one hundred and four lakhs. I got all my money (the thirty-five lakhs) from the Frere Land Company, the five lakhs still remained in my hands, and I intended to give credit for that amount to Pestonjee Cursetjee, who was indebted to me largely; when the Eastern Financial Association found I had got the whole of my thirty-five lakhs, they said they would debit the five lakhs to my account, and that I must give a promissory note, which I did. The liquidators of the Eastern Financial sent in a claim against me for about twenty-two lakhs, but it was not admitted, and was reduced considerably.

I remember that the Bank of Bombay granted a loan to Messrs. Brown and Best of Rs. 2,50,000. Brown applied to the Bank, and I told Blair to give him two and a half lakhs upon Port Canning shares. I cannot recollect whether that sum was employed by Tracey, Best, and Brown in a speculation in Port Canning shares; there is no entry about it in my books. I had no interest in the speculation. Mr. Tracey did not ask me to recommend them. I did it myself; Brown or Best asked me to recommend them, and I did so. The letter shown to me, dated the 24th February 1865, purporting to be an application by Mr. Brown to Mr. Robertson for a loan of two lakhs and a half, is in Brown's handwriting.

I know Mr. De Quadros. He is an Assistant in the office of Messrs. Ritchie, Steuart and Company. I find on looking at my book that he paid me Rs. 62,340 on the 20th July 1864 for two Back Bay shares which I bought for him at the auction. I recommended him to the Bank of Bombay for a loan of Rs. 50,000 by this letter to Mr. Blair now shown to me (marked A 102). The loan was to enable him to pay me for the shares. It has been repaid

I sold fifty Back Bay shares in December 1864 to Cursetjee Furdoonjee at a premium of Rs. 47,500 each. It was the highest price Back Bay shares ever fetched. The whole purchase was Rs. 26,25,000 for fifty shares, which, divided by fifty, gives Rs. 52,500 for each share with the Rs. 5,000 paid up. He borrowed from the Commercial Bank ten lakhs, from the Royal Bank ten lakhs, and from the Bank of Bombay Rs. 6,25,000, in all Rs. 26,25,000. I arranged for the loan with the Bank of Bombay. I saw Mr. Blair about it. The advance was to be made upon personal security; a promissory note was to be given. I do not remember whether the certificates of ten Back Bay shares were to be deposited. (After referring to his books.) Yes, twenty shares were deposited in the Royal Bank, twenty shares in the Commercial Bank, and ten shares in the Bank of Bombay. The Secretary took a promissory note, and these shares as collateral security. I was a Director of the Bank at that time. I do not know whether this transaction was inserted in the Application Book, or whether it was inserted in the Agenda, for discussion before the full board.

President.—Was anyone consulted but Mr. Blair?

Answer.—At that time Cursetjee Furdoonjee was immensely rich, and could have got any amount of money.

President.—What was the time fixed for the repayment of this loan?

Answer.—I do not remember. The promissory note was signed. The money must have been paid to me by a cheque upon the Bank of Bombay. The letter shown to me is in my handwriting (marked A 103, written to Mr. Blair about the 4th January 1865, and promising to send the ten share certificates).

President.—You observe that the cost of these shares was only Rs. 5,25,000 while you borrowed Rs. 6,25,000 upon them. Do you consider that a proper course for a Director of the Bank of Bombay to pursue?

Answer.—Cursetjee Furdoonjee might have got the money without security.

President.—But this was a transaction on the deposit of shares, and it is an undoubted fact that these shares cost Rs. 5,25,000, whilst you got

Rs. 6,25,000 upon these ten shares. Mr. Blair advanced upon these ten shares one lakh more than the highest price ever paid for ten shares in the Back Bay Company.

Answer.—He did not think about the price of the shares; he thought only of Cursetjee Furdoonjee.

President.—When did you deposit the ten Back Bay shares?

Answer.—I do not know.

President.—Your letter of 4th January 1865 says—"You shall have the shares to-day." Did you deposit the shares that day?

Answer.—I do not remember.

President.—Mr. Blair wrote to you about them on the 4th January, and you said in reply that you would give them to him that day; how was it that you did not deposit them until the 5th April following?

President.—What was the price of the shares in April 1865?

Answer.—About Rs. 32,000.

President.—When did you buy the shares you actually deposited?

Answer.—I do not know. I dealt largely in cotton with Byramjee Hormusjee Cama; we had joint transactions together during 1863 and 1864. I think I obtained money for him when he wanted it. Amongst other loans I procured some from the Bank of Bombay for him. He was allowed to overdraw his account at the Bank of Bombay. I do not remember that it was through my influence.

President.—He said so in his evidence: are you prepared to deny it?

Answer.—No. I do not remember the loan or cash credit on the 30th June 1864 for three lakhs, or the loan in October 1864 of seven lakhs, or that of the 16th May 1865 for Rs. 1,25,000. I do not know whether that money was used for our joint transactions.

President.—Are you sure that the seven lakhs which was obtained on the 14th October 1864 did not come to you?

Premchund.—(Referring to his books.) There is no such sum in my accounts. I find an entry of Rs. 1,25,000 credited to the account of Byramjee Hormusjee Cama; but it is in June 1864. In 1864 I sold thirty Back Bay shares to Byramjee Hormusjee Cama. I have sold him many. I find in my book an entry on the 20th July 1864. Byramjee Hormusjee Cama is credited on that day with Rs. 3,50,000. (Entry marked R 12.) I am not prepared to say that the sums obtained by me from the Bank for Byramjee were not paid, either on account of our joint transactions, or for the payment of shares sold to him by me. I am not able to say; he may have used the money to pay me.

I advised Sorabjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy to apply for an allotment of Back Bay shares about July 1864. He sent for me and I went to his house; he said everybody had got shares but himself; and I replied, "You must apply for some." He tried Scott and Cowasjee Jehangheer, but could not get any from them. I afterwards sold him forty-three Back Bay shares. Twenty-six shares at Rs. 20,000 premium, and seventeen at Rs. 19,500. He had not the money to pay for the purchase of the whole of these shares, and I undertook to find the money for him. I obtained five lakhs from the Asiatic Bank and five lakhs from the Bank of Bombay. For the loan at the Bank of Bombay I went to the Manager, Mr. Blair. Sorabjee never went to the Bank at all. He paid the money to me on account of the shares; all the shares did not belong to me. He got the loan of ten lakhs from the two Banks on his promissory note; he also promised that when he sold the shares he would pay the money for the two loans; he sold the shares in April 1865 for Rs. 32,000 premium each, but I do not think the money borrowed was ever paid to the Bank. (Points out an entry in his book marked R 13.)

I was shareholder in the Imperial and Banking Trading Company. Merwanjee Framjee Panday and Veerchund Deepchund, two of the Directors of the Company, were great friends of mine, and they consulted me. Veerchund was the Manager for Premabhoy Hemabhoy, and they were connected with me in business. It was a company with unlimited liability. Its paid-up capital was from twelve to fourteen lakhs. I am referred to a report of the Directors of the Company which contains the following paragraph:—"The Directors here beg to express their sense of "grateful acknowledgment to Premchund Roychund, "Esq., for the very valuable assistance invariably "rendered by that gentleman, so as to afford great "facilities in the management of the Company's affairs, "and thus ensure great benefit to the shareholders." I never saw this until I read Mr. Merwanjee's evidence. The Company sent me a copy of the report, but I did not look into it. I gave the Directors advice about buying and selling shares, and whenever they wanted money I got loans for them. I entered into a joint speculation with the Company for the purchase of sixty-five Back Bay shares. The Company had an interest of one-third in the purchase, and I took two-thirds with Mayabhoy the son of Premabhoy Hemabhoy. I was to supply the shares for this joint transaction. I charged brokerage to the seller, not to the Imperial Banking and Trading Company. The Company wanted money to carry out this transaction. Eleven lakhs were required to pay for their one-third share in the speculation. They borrowed five lakhs from the Bank of Bombay, and six lakhs from the Asiatic Bank; but it will not appear in my books. I negotiated the loan of five lakhs from the Bank of Bombay with the Secretary, as I did always. I did not see the Chairman or any of the Directors; there was no difficulty in obtaining the money. It was paid to me. This letter (A 63) is my letter to Mr. Blair about that loan. No security was asked for by Mr. Blair for the five lakhs. The Imperial Banking and Trading Company would not give security; it was a Company with unlimited liability.

President.—Did you not recommend the Company for the previous loan of six lakhs which they obtained from the Bank of Bombay?

Answer.—I do not remember. (A letter was here passed to the witness in which the Company was described as being "quite safe for ten lakhs.") This is my handwriting (marked A 104). I do not think there has been any loss upon the five lakhs.

President.—The amount was reduced to Rs. 2,60,000, and then the Bank had to take eight annas in the rupee for the balance. Did you not apply upon behalf of this Company for another loan of eight lakhs from the Bank of Bombay?

Answer.—I do not remember ever applying to the Bank of Bombay for a loan of eight lakhs for them. The document shown to me (marked A 62) is in my handwriting, and bears the initials of Mr. Blair. I do not remember applying for the eight lakhs.

President.—The Directors say they never heard of it; can you not explain it? You would surely remember having applied for eight lakhs.

Answer.—I do not remember.

I recollect taking upon myself two debts, one a debt incurred by Doongersay Gopajee, the Muccadum of Merwanjee Framjee, for Rs. 2,50,000, and the other by Dhunjeebhoy Pestonjee for two lakhs. I think the Bank of Bombay pressed for payment of these two loans. The Imperial Banking and Trading Company, whose debts they were then, asked me to arrange the matter by transferring them to my account. I went to the Secretary of the Bank of Bombay, and he consented at once. I paid one lakh in part payment.

President.—But was not this the way it was effected? You owed the Imperial Banking and Trading Company a large sum of money, and the Company pressed you for payment?

Answer.—Yes, they told me to pay the money.

President.—And you undertook to take these two debts to the Bank of Bombay off their hands, and thus relieve the Imperial Bank of the liability.

Answer.—Yes, Sir.

President.—By that means you reduced your debt to the Imperial Banking and Trading Company by four and a half lakhs, and became so much the more indebted to the Bank of Bombay?

7 Aug. 1868.
Mr. Premchund Roychund.

Answer.—The amount I owed the Bank was Rs. 3,50,000, because I paid off one lakh.

President.—But what did the Bank of Bombay say to the transfer?

Answer.—They preferred my name to the others.

President.—They preferred your name with that of Mayabhoy Premabhoy with no security, to the names of these people with the security of Back Bay shares?

Answer.—Yes. I gave my promissory note with Mayabhoy Premabhoy to the Bank of Bombay for Rs. 4,50,000. We gave no security. The Bank of Bombay released these parties and their securities (twenty Back Bay shares), and took a promissory note from me and Mayabhoy Premabhoy instead. I paid off one lakh which reduced the debt to Rs. 3,50,000, and the sum of Rs. 2,80,000 is still due. Mayabhoy Premabhoy did not pay anything. I negotiated this transaction with the Secretary, Mr. Robertson. I do not know whether the transaction was entered in the Register of Bills discounted.

I remember calling upon Cursondass Madhowdass in August 1864. Cursondass said he wanted a loan of four lakhs, and I said I would get it from the Bank of Bombay at once. The money was obtained on a promissory note. I remember entering into a joint transaction with Cursondass Madhowdass and his partners. His firm consisted of himself, Mayabhoy Premabhoy, Muggonbhoy Huttonsing, and Veerchund Deepchund. One hundred Back Bay shares were bought at about Rs. 21,000 premium each. I borrowed Rs. 21,00,000 for this speculation from the Bank of Bombay about the 24th August 1864. Eight lakhs were obtained in the names of Mayabhoy Premabhoy, eight lakhs in the name of Muggonbhoy Huttising, and five lakhs in the name of Cursondass Madhowdass, which, with four lakhs he had previously obtained, made a total of twenty-five lakhs. There were eighty Back Bay shares deposited to secure the twenty-one lakhs; they were deposited afterwards. The whole of the twenty-five lakhs was obtained upon promissory notes. Those loans I negotiated with Mr. Blair. I did not see the Chairman or the Directors. I was a Director myself at that time. I did not mention to any of my brother Directors the fact that I was obtaining twenty-one lakhs for a joint speculation with those parties. No secrecy was observed. The loans were to be paid off on or before the 1st July 1865. It was not a time-bargain. Cursondass Madhowdass said he would not take the loan unless he took it for a long period. I thought the parties might be trusted at that time to that amount. There were three parties liable, and I was liable also, and the Bank of Bombay did not have to look to the parties so much as to the security they had for the loan. It was not understood in the Bank that I was liable.

President.—The Bank did not have security for a long time afterwards?

Premchund.—The share certificates were deposited. I thought the parties entitled to credit for twenty-one lakhs upon the security of shares.

President.—That is to say if the share certificates were delivered?

Answer.—They were delivered.

President.—What did you consider Cursondass Madhowdass was worth; he was the most important man amongst the three borrowers, was he not?

Answer.—I do not know what he was worth.

President.—In the private opinion book there is this entry about him upon the 28th March 1864—"Considered by Premchund as good for one lakh;" and upon the 24th August following Cursondass and the other borrowers, his partners, are entered in the same book on your recommendation, as good for four or five lakhs; yet within a month or so you recommended them for twenty-one lakhs?

Premchund.—But the Bank had eighty Back Bay shares.

President.—Why was your name kept secret?

Answer.—There was no secrecy observed. My name did not appear. I never gave my name anywhere, as I was a broker.

President.—Was it not because you were a Director of the Bank at the time?

Answer.—I never thought of that at the time.

President.—Have you no other reason to give?

Answer.—No.

President.—Premabhoy Hemabhoy was not a broker, why was his name concealed?

Answer.—There was no concealment.

President.—Was his name divulged?

Answer.—It came out afterwards.

President.—I know that; but why did it not come out at first?

Answer.—I don't know: I think he was a Member of the Legislative Council, and that he may not have liked to have had his name mixed up with speculations.

President.—And perhaps you thought that being a Director it was wrong that you should be borrowing money for speculations?

Answer.—I never thought of that at all.

President.—On the 8th December 1865 there was a transfer made, the loans were transferred to the names of the real parties; Premabhoy Hemabhoy took five lakhs out of the twenty-five upon himself, you became liable for nine lakhs, and Cursondass for eleven lakhs; the loss upon the latter's share of the transaction has been Rs. 7,81,000, and, whatever the amount of the security you may have lodged, the loss on your share must be very large, but it is mixed up with your other losses. Were securities lodged upon that occasion, or were they deposited in February 1866?

Answer.—The securities were certainly given before that. Cursondass proposed to the Bank that we should give our names instead of the others.

President.—And did the Bank accept that offer?

Answer.—They thought my name and that of Premabhoy Hemabhoy better than those of the other parties. These transfers of liability were resorted to at the instance of Cursondass Madhowdass. I gave as security to the Bank a lien on my claim for fourteen lakhs against Cursetjee Furdonjee's estate, and Cursondass deposited twenty-three Back Bay share certificates. I do not know the amount of the loss to the Bank. I was well acquainted with Premabhoy Hemabhoy. I had joint transactions with him in trade and in Back Bay shares. I may have recommended him to the Bank of Bombay for a loan of three lakhs in May 1865.

President.—Did you not write a letter to the Manager of the Bank to obtain a loan for him of three lakhs?

Answer.—Yes.

President.—Is that your handwriting (passing a letter to the witness)?

Premchund.—Yes. (Letter marked A 105.)

President.—Had you not some difficulty in getting that loan?

Answer.—I do not know. I asked Mr. Robertson. I don't remember now. I look at another letter shown to me (marked A 106). I received this from Mr. Robertson. It is as follows:—

"Premabhoy Hemabhoy has bills and hoondies fall"ing due in May and June to the amount of
"Rs. 5,20,000. Do you think we ought to advance
"him other three lakhs? The Directors to-day
"appear to think five lakhs to be too much for any "one man. Premabhoy is of course undoubted.
"Please give me your opinion.

"Yours sincerely,
(Signed) "D. Robertson."

I look at another letter shown to me (marked A 107). This is my reply to Mr. Robertson's letter of the 27th April 1865, which has just been read:—

"Hoondies will be paid off at due date; he has no
"discounts with any other Banks, and I do not think
"you can find a safer man in Bombay.

"Premchund Roychund."

7 Aug. 1868.

Mr. Premchund Roychund.

Premchund.—So he was at that time. I may have recommended him for another discount upon the 24th June 1855 for two lakhs. This is my handwriting (letter handed to the witness marked A 108). It is as follows:—"The Honourable Premabhoy Hemabhoy "has got bills due to the Bank of Bombay for five "lakhs, and wants you to advance more; he will give "you as many shares as you require." Mr. Robertson had a doubt about that, and I requested him to ask the Directors about making that advance. The first loan obtained upon the 15th May 1865 was not for the purpose of buying shares. Neither of these loans was for purchasing shares with. He sent for me, and told me to try and get the loan. He did not get money to pay me with. He did not owe me any money. I never charged any commission. I never considered it as a sort of brokerage transaction. I never received a commission for loans obtained by me from the Bank. I do not remember whether these sums were obtained for joint transactions between me and Premabhoy Hemabhoy. I look at my books for May and June 1865. I did not receive any money from him at that date. I will not swear that I was not then engaged in a joint transaction with Premabhoy. In May 1865 he owed me about a lakh. I have not been paid yet.

Burjorjee Rustomjee obtained a loan of five lakhs from the Bank of Bombay. He gave a promissory note on the 1st February 1865 with Davidass Luckmidass. I had previously sold him two Elphinstone shares, one of my own, and one of another party. He paid Rs. 40,000 in cash I think, and I obtained for him five lakhs from the Kalbadevi Branch of the Bank of Bombay. Burjorjee told me that he had spoken to Mr. Bullock. I went to Mr. Bullock and told him that if he advanced the money upon shares he would be safe. I went to the Branch instead of to the Head Office, because Burjorjee went there. I did not have any difficulty with Bullock about the matter. I never considered whether he had authority to make such a loan. I am informed that there has been a great loss upon that transaction, almost an entire loss, but the Bank had the security of the shares. I received Rs. 3,65,000, and delivered the shares to the Bank; the shares in the Elphinstone Company were then worth more than Rs. 2,000 premium each.

Candass Narrondass and I traded together jointly for fourteen or fifteen years, down to his failure in 1866. We had one-half share each in those transactions. I always negotiated his loans for him. I may have applied to the Bank of Bombay for an advance of three lakhs to him upon the 8th May 1865. This is my handwriting (letter marked A 68). I think the loan was granted but I do not know whether the money was taken; nothing appears in my books about it.

President.—The money was not drawn out of the Bank, and Candass Narrondass says he never authorized you to apply for it; what is your explanation of the matter?

Answer—I do not think he knows what he is talking about; I certainly should not have applied to the Bank unless he had asked me to do so. I had a power of attorney from him, but I was not using it then. It was a general power, but I did not act on it except once or twice in selling shares while he was away from Bombay. I negotiated another loan for him from the Bank of Bombay for two lakhs in September 1865, upon the security of shares and goods which were deposited. He was in want of money at that time I think. He was indebted to me, but this money was borrowed to pay for hoondies coming from up-country, which had been drawn on account of purchases of cotton in which we were jointly interested; the loss upon that is thirty-three thousand Rupees. Candass Narrondass was jointly bound with me for the loan to me of twenty-five lakhs.

Veerchund Deepchund was Premabhoy's Moonim. He obtained a loan from the Bank of Bombay upon the 1st of May 1865. I may have recommended him for that loan. I do not remember. These two letters shown to me are in my handwriting (marked A 109 and A 110). It is clear that I did recommend him for this one lakh. I do not remember entering into joint speculation at that time with him and Jaiverlall Umiashunker in Back Bay shares. I am not prepared to contradict Jaiverlall. There was a purchase of twenty Back Bay shares, of which five belonged to each of them and ten to me. We obtained five lakhs from the Asiatic Bank. The one lakh obtained by Veerchund from the Bank of Bombay may have been used for this transaction. Veerchund Deepchund was a Director of the Kattiawar Trading Company also, and as such obtained a loan from the Bank of Bombay on 6th March 1865 for Rs. 75,000 for the Company. I recommended him upon two different occasions. I do not know for what purpose that loan was obtained. Jaiverlall Umiashunker obtained a loan of Rs. 2,25,000 from the Bank of Bombay. I am not prepared to contradict Jaiverlall's statement that the money was borrowed for a joint speculation with me and Veerchund Deepchund. This letter shown to me is in my handwriting; it is to Mr. Blair and contains the words "give Jaiverlall one lakh." (Marked A 111.)

EXAMINATION CONTINUED.

President.—There are several matters which stood over from the first day, among other things a list of loans and transactions between Roychund Deepchund and James Blair; do you produce them?

Answer.—No, they have not come. I have not received them yet on account of the heavy rains; the trains were stopped yesterday. I cannot produce an account of the loans and transactions between Roychund Deepchund and Mr. D. Robertson, or between Roychund Deepchund and Mr. Bullock. I have not any list of transactions between Mr. D. Robertson and Mr. Tracey. I have been searching my books for them. I do not remember whether there were any transactions between Mr. Robertson and Mr. Tracey. I do not remember any at all.

President.—Were you not on most intimate terms with Mr. Tracey?

Answer.—Yes.

President.—Do you mean to say that he never told you that he had had transactions with Mr. Robertson?

Answer.—I don't remember at all. If I can only trace anything I will tell the Commissioners at once.

President.—But you did not express any such doubts when we examined you the day before yesterday; you said there were such transactions, and that you would be happy to give us a list of them?

Answer.—I said that if there were any transactions I would let you know.

President.—Do you mean to say positively that there were no transactions between Mr. Robertson and Mr. Tracey?

Answer.—I do not remember; if I find any information about any such transactions I will give it to the Commissioners at once.

The three letters now shown to me are in Mr. Robertson's handwriting.

These letters marked respectively R 14, R 15, and R 16, were then read as follows:—

"MY DEAR TRACEY,—The Board had under con- "sideration to-day the different advances made to "Premchund, and with reference to the overdraft of "three lakhs which is guaranteed by you, I have been "instructed to inform you that it is the wish of the "Board that it should be paid up, or covered by satis-

"factory convertible security, and as Premchund has "done neither, I am requested to ask you for payment "or good collateral security. As Premchund has not "furnished the security he promised when it was "arranged that a loan of twenty-five lakhs would be "given him, I regret the three lakhs cannot be "included in that loan.

"Yours, &c.

"Bombay, May 22nd, 1866. D. ROBERTSON."

"MY DEAR TRACEY,—Among the securities given by Premchund against that annoying three lakhs, were fifty-eight Coast and River Steam Navigation shares. We sent them over the other day just to see if they would be transferred, and were told they were absolutely forfeited on the 19th June, as he had not paid the last three calls; aggregating Rs. 500 per share. I asked Shepherd if he could not take the money, and the enclosed is his reply. It is a beastly nuisance, as Rs. 2,000 per share have been paid on them. Security against the overdraft is thus diminished by over one lakh of rupees. Do you think he can give anything else instead? Please try him.

"Yours sincerely,

"D. ROBERTSON.

"Bombay, September 3rd, 1866."

"MY DEAR TRACEY, — There is another lot of Premchund's securities likely to slip out of our hands for nonpayment of calls of Rs. 150 per share. Is there any chance of his raising the money, Rs. 1,500, before the 7th instant? The security against the three lakhs is gradually disappearing.

"Yours sincerely,

"D. ROBERTSON.

"Bombay, September 4th, 1866."

I received from Mr. Tracey the letter now shown to me (marked R 17), which is as follows :—

"MY DEAR PREMCHUND, — I have been disappointed at not hearing from you for the last few mails. Can it be press of work that prevents your writing? I hope not, for all who have been doing any business lately must have suffered from it. Poor Bombay is indeed paying dearly for its short dream of prosperity. One would not have imagined it possible that things would go so completely to the bad. I hope by this time you will have arranged something with Best for me, and I am most anxious to hear something on the subject. I have to write this mail to Robertson about that overdraft of yours which I guaranteed. I fear I may yet get into trouble with the Board about that, as the responsibility rests with me. That matter ought really to have been settled. What balance still remains unpaid? I fancy it cannot be large, as I know you put in certain securities against it. Please let me know about this.

"What are you doing now, and what do you think about future business? Next year there ought to be money made both in Cotton and Goods, as both must have reached almost their lowest now. Remember me to your father and Dossabhoy.

"Believe me, &c.,

"London, December 3rd, 1867."

President.—Have you any letters from Mr. Blair or Mr. Robertson relating to the Bank of Bombay or to their speculations in your possession?

Answer.—No. When they wrote to me I generally wrote the answer across the letter I received and sent it back to them. I have searched amongst some of my letters, but not through all yet.

President.—We shall have to examine you at some future time. You say you have searched for letters but cannot find any?

Answer.—I may have received answers to my recommendations on behalf of various parties, and will continue to look for them.

Mazagon Land Reclamation shares were at a premium of from Rs. 5,000 to Rs. 8,000 per share, when the applications were sent to the Promoters of the Company. When the Port Canning shares were allotted the premium was from Rs. 7,000 to Rs. 8,000 per share. The price of Back Bay shares on the 1st of June 1864 was, I think, about Rs. 10,000 premium per share. The Bombay Times used to give a correct list of the prices of shares every day. When I want to know the price of shares I look in my books, and then if I don't see any transactions there, I look in the newspaper price list. When other brokers want to know the price of shares they refer to their sale and purchase books.

President.—Now you were speaking the other day of a cheque for eight lakhs from the Eastern Financial Association which was paid into Mr. Scott's account; some of the sixty-five shares sold belonged to his family, did they not?

Answer.—Yes, Sir.

President.—There was a great intimacy between you and him?

Answer.—Yes.

President.—I suppose you were anxious to sell these shares and get a profit?

Answer.—He told me to sell them, and I did so. I did not charge brokerage on the sale. I treated it as a friendly transaction. My brokerage upon eight lakhs would have been Rs. 4,000. I never charged him anything for that. There were many persons at that time to whom I did not charge brokerage on business done for them.

The book containing blank forms of promissory notes (marked R 2) is shown to me. Mr. Blair sent it to me, a letter accompanied it, but I have not got the letter. Mr. Blair said that if anybody wanted a discount, if I thought he was a good party, I might fill a form up and send it to him.

President.—What used you to do; was that your mode of proceeding when you wanted a party to get a loan, used you to fill up one of these forms?

Answer.—That is what he told me to do.

President.—Did you follow his advice?

Answer.—I sent one or two; I never sent many of them.

President.—Did the Directors know that you had received this book, and had been instructed to procure parties to get loans from the Bank?

Answer.—I do not think the Directors knew it.

Mr. Melvill.—Had you a book before that, or is that the first?

Answer.—That is the only book I had.

To the President.—I kept current deposit Banking accounts with almost all the Banks. I had accounts with the Agra, the Oriental, the Chartered Mercantile, the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China, the Commercial Bank, the Bank of Hindustan, the Royal Bank, the Central Bank, the Asiatic Bank, and the Bank of Bombay. I had no Native Banker. I had dealings with many Native Shroffs. If I wanted money of them I used to get it, and if they wanted money from me I used to give it them. I had no current deposit accounts with them. I had an Agent at Surat, and an account with him; it is in my books. The Bank of Surat did a small business, not much. It opened in August 1865. I had not a current deposit account there. I had only hoondie transactions with that Bank. I know Cumulsee Premjee. He is an Exchange and Share Broker. He is not a connection of my brother-in-law Navulchund Nanchund, but they did business together. There were joint transactions between them.

President.—I think you had transactions with him too?

Answer.—I may have had, I do not remember; if I had, it will be in my books.

President.—Do you remember recommending him to the Bank of Bombay for a loan of three lakhs in April 1865?

Answer.—I do not remember that I recommended him at all; he used to go to the Bank himself. He was doing a large brokerage business. He did not pay me any money in April 1865. There are two small receipts entered in my book in October and November 1865 of Rs. 419-7-0 and Rs. 411 from Cumulsee Premjee. Cumulsee Premjee and Navulchund Nanchund, my brother-in-law, entered into large speculations in Elphinstone Land and Press Company shares. I did not recommend Cumulsee for the loans to the Bank of Bombay. I do not remember doing so.

I am referred to the account of my own liabilities to the Bank of Bombay. I obtained a fixed loan on the 9th of December 1865 of nine lakhs. I signed a promissory note with Myabhoy Premabhoy on the 8th December 1865 for Rs. 4,50,000; on the 20th April 1866 I had overdrawn my current account to the amount of five lakhs. In April and September 1865 the Bank discounted two bills for Khuttow Khemjee for Rs. 2,40,000, and I took upon myself that liability to the extent of two lakhs. My total debt to the Bank on the 26th April 1866 amounted to twenty and a half lakhs.

The fixed loan of nine lakhs was made repayable on the 1st of July 1866. It was a portion of the loan made in August 1864 to Cursondass Madhowdass and his partners. No time-bargains were made for the 1st July 1866.

President.—I remark that a great number of these loans which took place at the end of 1864, run to the 1st of July 1865; was not that with reference to some time-bargains? I refer to three loans—that of Cursondass Madhowdass in August 1864, for twenty-one lakhs, another to Dr. Diver of five and a half lakhs, and one to Cursetjee Furdoonjee for six and a half lakhs.

Answer.—Cursondass took a loan of twenty-one lakhs for a long time, so that in case shares did not go up we had plenty of time to sell; there was no time-bargain. Time-bargains commenced in October 1864. I was not asked to pay the fixed loan of nine lakhs, the Bank had security on my claim to the value of fourteen lakhs on Cursetjee Furdoonjee's estate. Neither Mr. Robertson nor any of the Directors asked me to discharge the fixed loan because it was secured. Cursetjee Furdoonjee's estate was, at the time he failed, expected to pay ten annas in the rupee. On the 28th March 1866 I paid one lakh upon account of the joint liability with Myabhoy Premabhoy for Rs. 4,50,000.

The overdrawn account to which reference has been made is the one Mr. Tracey guaranteed to the extent of three lakhs.

I recommended Khuttow Khemjee to the Bank for a loan; he was very wealthy; he was a cotton merchant, and had plenty of money at that time. I look at his letter of the 25th April 1865 to Mr. Robertson (marked A 73) which is shown to me. The words "Premchund thinks he is safe enough on personal security" are in Mr. Robertson's handwriting. I was a Director at that time. I did not tell my brother Directors that it was a joint transaction between me and Khuttow. I do not remember whether I was present at the Board when the loan was granted. I never told any of the Directors that that was a transaction in which I was interested. I never obtained any other advances from the Bank of Bombay in the names of other parties. Khuttow Khemjee's was the only one.

Dossabhoy Dhunjeebhoy had no connection at all with my transactions. He was only my Mehta.

I did not tell the Directors or any of them on April 27th, 1866, when we met at Mr. Lidderdale's bungalow how much I owed to the Bank; nobody asked me. I thought they must know it; none of them asked what I owed the Bank at that time. Mr. Robertson did not speak to me on the subject. I do not remember any reference being made to my large debt on that day.

President.—How did your accounts stand with the different Banks you have mentioned on the 26th of April 1866; were you not very largely in debt to almost all of them?

Answer.—I had bills of exchange running.

President.—That is not an answer to my question.

Answer.—I was indebted to two or three, not more: the Asiatic, the Chartered Mercantile, and the Bank of Hindustan. I think not to the Chartered Bank or to the Commercial or Central Banks. I was indebted to the Bank of Bombay, the Asiatic, and Mercantile Banks, and to the Bank of Hindustan. I was also in debt to the Oriental Bank on that day. I owed them about a lakh secured by ninety-six Back Bay shares. I owed the Mercantile Bank about one and a half lakhs. I owed the Hindustan Bank three lakhs and upwards. I owed the Asiatic Bank twenty lakhs. There was no balance to my favour at any Bank. I had drawn as much as I could from the Banks at that time. I had bills falling due between the 26th of April and the 13th of May amounting to twenty-two lakhs, and I had eight lakhs to pay to the Asiatic and Hindustan Banks and Eastern Financial Association. Altogether about thirty lakhs. It was on the 15th April 1866 that Mr. Robertson asked me for a guarantee for my current deposit account, and it was on the 19th April that Mr. Tracey gave his letter of guarantee.

On the 10th of April 1866 a forged hoondie for Rs. 10,000, drawn on Ahmedabad, was purchased by the Bank of Bombay, the Bank never bought a Native hoondie without a Broker's note attached to it, and on this occasion the forged hoondie had my memorandum or Broker's note with it. Mr. Robertson required an explanation from me about it. I said that I had not bought the forged hoondie, and that the clerk of the Bank of Bombay must have attached one of my notes to it. That man was tried in the High Court. I do not remember whether I was called as a witness at the trial.

President.—You know that you were not.

Answer.—Yes, I was not; but if I had been summoned I should have gone.

President.—You were alleged to be the Broker who recommended the bill?

Answer.—Not the forged bill, Sir.

President.—But you were alleged to have recommended it; I do not mean to say that you did recommend it.

Answer.—Yes.

President.—Did you arrange with Mr. Roberston that you should not be called at the trial?

Answer.—If I had been called I should have gone.

President.—Are you not aware that your absence was very much criticised by the counsel for the defence, and commented upon?

Answer.—If they had summoned me I would have gone there at once. The man when first apprehended offered to give Rs. 4,000 in cash, but the Bank refused to take it. Mr. Robertson was satisfied that somebody had forged the hoondie. I had done nothing wrong, the fault lay with his own clerk. The explanation I gave to Mr. Robertson was that I gave a Broker's note to the proper party, and not with this forged bill at all. I said I thought that the Broker's note was an old one, picked up, and used for this bill, that it was a note got from an old hoondie.

President.—Do you think this transaction had any effect with Mr. Robertson at the time, and induced him to call upon you for a guarantee?

Answer.—He was alarmed at the loss of Rs. 10,000.

President.—That is not an answer to my question; I asked you whether that fact did not affect his opinion of your way of doing business?

Answer.—I do not know that it did, Sir.

President.—You know on the 15th of April he asked you to get a guarantee for your account; about five days afterwards?

Answer.—Yes. I had hoondies coming in on account of cotton. Mr. Robertson knew this; I told him I wanted money to meet some hoondies for cotton. I had dealings at Dhollera, Belgaum, Surat, and Broach; my agents up-country had been drawing upon me freely. I told him I wanted money to meet my hoondies. I told him that I wanted three lakhs. If Mr. Robertson would not have given me the money I could have got it outside. I had not a difficulty in meeting my bills everywhere at that time. I was pressed to pay money in Bombay, that was all. I was not pressed to pay any of the twenty-two lakhs which I have mentioned, not at that time.

President.—Mr. Bullock told us that your credit was shaken in Bombay before the 26th April 1866; he had great opportunities of knowing, as he was seeing Shroffs every day.

Answer.—I can show from my books that on one day, the 15th April, I sold my bills on Calcutta to the amount of five lakhs in the bazaar in half an hour, and I could have sold for twenty lakhs if I had wanted the money.

President.—Am I to understand from what you are now saying that this pressure which you felt so much on the 26th April came suddenly upon you?

Answer.—It did come upon me very suddenly. My agents up-country telegraphed that bills were coming in largely from Dhollera. I could not have foreseen that on the 15th. When cotton after leaving Dhollera is stopped on the way we are in a difficulty; whenever the cotton arrives we can get money at once.

President.—Had there been any particular stoppage of cotton at that time?

Answer.—Every year at that time there is; cotton generally gets down in a fortnight from Dhollera, on that occasion it was delayed for a month.

President.—What was the particular pressure upon you on the 26th of April 1866, and what occasioned it?

Answer.—I had to remit money to Broach, Ahmedabad, and Surat, and other places to meet bills. The bills were drawn by my own firm; they telegraphed beforehand that they wanted funds. I did not select the Bank of Bombay as the Bank which I would come upon for twenty-five lakhs. I thought no other Bank but the Bank of Bombay had got twenty-five lakhs. I did not try any other Bank. It is not true that I tried three other Banks to see if they would help me. I did not try any other because I did not think that they had twenty-five lakhs to lend at that time; they were all preparing for themselves. It did not occur to me to divide the sum between different Banks. I was advised by Mr. Macculloch to go to the Bank of Bombay and apply for a loan. He was formerly agent to the Agra Bank, at that time he was a member of the firm of Macculloch, John, & Co., merchants. I had known him when he was Manager of the Agra Bank. He was a great friend of mine. I told him I wanted money. I do not remember having recommended him to the Bank of Bombay for the loan of a lakh in December 1864. He went to the Bank of Bombay for me. I had no account with Mr. Robertson at all. I have no account with him in my books. I looked on Saturday and could find nothing. I do not think Mr. Robertson owed me any money, on that day. Mr. Tracey had always an account with me. Before I went on my pilgrimage in December 1865 I settled with Tracey, and I have no account after that. He could not pay, and so I let him off. There was a balance of Rs. 33,836, which was written off on the 18th November 1865.

That was the balance of a running account, but there was another account relating to the joint transactions with Schiller, Hannay, Tracey, and Scott in Port Canning shares, amounting altogether to Rs. 14,15,496, of which one quarter went to the account of Tracey. That came to Rs. 3,53,000. We were each interested in the transaction to the extent of one-fifth, but Mr. Scott declined to take part in it, and the remaining four engaged in the transaction had to take a one-fourth share each.

President.—Did you owe money to any Director of the Bank of Bombay, or did any Director besides Mr. Tracey owe you any money on the 26th April 1866?

Answer.—Will you give me their names?

President.—You met them all at Mr. Lidderdale's, and you should recollect very well, but I will name them all; first, there was Mr. Lidderdale, he owed you no money, and you owed him none?

Answer.—No.

President.—Mr. Brown?

Answer.—No.

President.—Mr. A. Stewart?

Answer.—No. There was nothing owing to me by them or owing by me.

President.—Mr. Chapman?

Answer.—No.

President.—Mr. Norman?

Answer.—No.

President.—Now, I ask you whether one of the inducements you had in going to the Bank of Bombay was not the fact that you had a very good friend on the Direction in Mr. Tracey, and a good friend in the Secretary, Mr. Robertson.

Answer.—I was a friend of both Mr. Tracey and Mr. Robertson.

President.—And was not that one of the inducements for your going to the Bank of Bombay for the twenty-five lakhs?

Premchund.—My only reason was that no other Bank could lend me twenty-five lakhs. I sent Mr. Macculloch to the Bank. He was jointly engaged with me in speculations, in cotton and in shares. I assisted him whenever I could. I do not remember having assisted him to get two lakhs, one in the name of himself and one in that of his firm, from the Bank of Bombay in December 1864. He knew the Manager as well as I did. I did not go myself to the Bank of Bombay, because I was so confused that I did not know what to do. I certainly should not have had more difficulty in speaking to Mr. Robertson or Mr. Tracey than to Mr. Macculloch. I consulted Mr. Macculloch as to what I should do, and he said, that he thought the Bank of Bombay would assist me. I will swear that I did not communicate with Mr. Robertson or Mr. Tracey before I consulted Mr. Macculloch. Mr. Macculloch told me to apply to the Bank for the twenty-five lakhs, for there was no other chance at all of my getting the money I never consulted with Mr. Tracey or Mr. Robertson about getting the money before that. It never occurred to my mind to get the twenty-five lakhs from the Bank of Bombay until Mr. Macculloch told me to try. Mr. Tracey knew the position of my affairs before that day; he knew that I wanted the money to pay the pressing bills with, I told him. I am quite sure that I never told Mr. Robertson before I sent Mr. Macculloch to the Bank. When Mr. Macculloch returned from the Bank he said he had seen Robertson, and if I applied to the Bank I might get the money. He was only absent a few minutes; the Bank was just opposite. Mr. Robertson's answer encouraged me to apply at once. Neither Mr. Tracey nor Mr. Robertson came to me during the day. I went to the Bank and told Mr. Robertson I wanted twenty-five lakhs if I could get it. Mr. Robertson said twenty-five lakhs was a very large amount. He did not appear surprised, or express any surprise. He asked me what I wanted the money for, and I said for the payment of bills that were falling due. He did not ask me for any particulars; he asked me what security I was going to give, and I said I would give him the security of jewels and landed property. I heard the result of the subsequent meeting of the Directors on that day from Dossabhoy, my clerk; he told me the Directors were going to meet at Lidderdale's bungalow early the next morning, and that I was to attend there. I attended the meeting of the 27th April. I stayed in the verandah of the bungalow. I did not hear what passed. Mr. Robertson came out and spoke to me several times, and sometimes Mr. Tracey came.

President.—Mr. Tracey interested himself for you very much, no doubt he was your friend?

Answer.—Yes, he was working for me. I was informed of the result of the meeting. The first conclusion they came to was, that it was important to prevent my stopping payment; it was more important to prevent my stopping payment then than when I eventually did suspend payment, because almost all the Banks were interested in preventing my failure; they held my bills which were then running. I cannot state the amount of my acceptances held by particular Banks, but they all had some; they held more then than when I subsequently failed. I think my stoppage in April 1866 would have been worse for Bombay generally than when it did occur. No attempt was made to ascertain the state of my affairs then. My pressing liabilities were asked about, and I gave the Directors a rough memorandum of them. I sent it into the room by Mr. Robertson or Mr. Tracey, but I gave no statement of my affairs generally, no one asked me about them.

President.—Without ascertaining the general state of your affairs, how could they make you any advance with safety?

Answer.—I do not know.

President.—How could they be sure that it would answer, and that you would not fail the next day?

Answer.—I do not know.

President.—Did they ascertain the value of the securities you offered?

Answer.—They asked me the value of the securities, and I put it down. They asked me what the value of the land was, and I put it down upon a piece of paper. I put down the price I had paid for the land. They did not ask me whether the land was unencumbered. I do not remember whether I had the deeds then with me to hand over. I did not estimate the value of the jewels at twenty lakhs, I estimated them at from fifteen to twenty lakhs.

President.—Every witness who has been examined on the point says you put the value at twenty lakhs.

Answer.—No. I always said between fifteen and twenty lakhs.

President.—The jewels were not produced at the time. I was not asked for the entries in my books respecting them to verify my estimate of their value. I bought the jewels in 1862, 1863, and 1864.

President.—Point out the entries in your books showing the cost of these jewels?

Premchund.—Just now?

President.—Yes, now; we will wait whilst you find them.

Premchund.—Some jewels I gave to the Bank of Bombay were my own, and some were my father's.

President.—Show us first of all the entries in your books relating to the jewels which you bought. (The books having been referred to by Premchund and his Mehta without effect, the President added, We will adjourn for a short time presently, and give you an opportunity of finding the entries.) Can you now just point out any large item?

Premchund.—I bought one jewel from Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff for Rs. 86,000, which came from England. The entry about it is not in my book. The jewel belonged to my father, and I got it from him, and gave to the Bank of Bombay. I bought it on account of my father, and he gave it to me to send to the Bank of Bombay. My father sold his jewels and gave the money to me to assist me. I and my father were not joint in property. My father gave up everything he had to assist me. I help him now. I never told anyone until to-day that any of the jewels were my father's. It is not an attempt on my part to account for the absence of entries in my books. There are the proper entries in my books.

President.—Should we ever have heard of their being your father's jewels if we had not asked you to point out the particular entries in the books?

Answer.—I never considered my father's jewels as separate from my own; I held them as part of mine. I never told anyone until within the last few minutes, that any portion of these jewels belonged to my father; I told nobody; everybody knew that my father sold his jewels, and paid the proceeds to me. My father's books contain entries relating to these jewels.

The Directors of the Bank of Bombay did not give me a good deal of trouble at the meeting at Mr. Lidderdale's by asking a great number of questions. I did not tell Mr. Tracey that I would rather stop payment than be so much troubled by them about the matter. I told Mr. Tracey that if it was not for the interest of all I would rather stop payment.

President.—It is not true then, if Mr. Tracey went in and told the Directors that you said you would rather stop payment than be troubled in such a way?

Answer.—I said to Mr. Tracey that if I did not get the twenty-five lakhs I must stop payment that morning; and that if they wanted to make a bother I would rather stop payment, and that if they made any difficulty about the securities I would give them the names of three other parties as guarantees. I mentioned the names of the three parties at the meeting. The names were those of Candass Narrondass, Roychund Deepchund, and Cursondass Madhowdass; I said that if there was any deficiency in the security those three would guarantee it. I was not called upon by Mr. Kelly, the Bank's Solicitor, or anyone else, to sign any paper upon that day. I gave the names of these parties. I said that if there was any doubt, and it was thought there would be a deficiency on the securities, I would give these three names. The whole of the three have failed. I did not have any conversation with any of the Directors or with Mr. Robertson when the meeting broke up. I went to the house of Candass Narrondass before the close of the meeting, leaving Dossabhoy there. He brought the news of the result. I did not have any conversation with any of the Directors that day. I deposited the title deeds of the landed property the same day I think; not all, some were given afterwards. The jewels were deposited on two different days; first of all I gave them one lot, and then another lot afterwards,—the first lot on the 28th or 29th April. I think on the 29th April, and the second lot about ten days afterwards. I have no memorandum showing the particulars of the jewels deposited, or their value. When I brought the first parcel of jewels I did not say to Mr. Robertson that they were worth Rs. 20,00,000. It was my opinion on the day of this meeting that the advance of twenty-five lakhs would prevent my stopping payment altogether. I expected twelve lakhs on a time-bargain upon contracts for Dhollera cotton. I did not look upon it as a mere postponement of the time when I should fail. The Bank of Bombay offered to give me six months' time for payment, but I said I only wanted the loan for three months. My difficulties came upon me suddenly. I was in constant correspondence with my up-country agents; letters came every morning. There was no pressure on me on the 15th April. In April the time-bargain in Dhollera cotton was falling due, on which I expected to get twelve lakhs, but that failed altogether.

I see from my books that on the 15th April I had to meet Rs. 1,60,000, on the next day Rs. 1,90,000, on the day following Rs. 47,000, on the 19th April Rs. 65,000, and on the 20th April Rs. 87,000. I had to meet eight lakhs in Bombay, not in bills alone, but eight lakhs one way or another; I had some money from Mr. Tracey, which he borrowed from the Asiatic Bank for me, which I only got for a week or ten days, and I had to pay that off. He borrowed four and a half lakhs, and gave the money to me. He obtained the money in Ritchie, Steuart, and Company's name. As soon as the Bank of Bombay had granted me the loan of twenty-five lakhs they telegraphed to the branches up-country to open credits in my favour up to eight lakhs. The first draft which I made upon the loan was upon the 27th April, the day that the loan was granted. I drew out two lakhs to pay the Eastern Financial, and I eventually received the whole twenty-five lakhs. The jewels were valued by Hurryvullubdass Calliandass; he is a pucka jeweller. Mr. Crawford valued them. He is not a valuer or jeweller; he knows nothing about jewels. He got a native jeweller to examine them. Rosselet also examined them, he did not know their value: he knew nothing about jewels at all. Mr. Crawford valued them at about three lakhs I think. I do not know what Rosselet valued them at. They were sold for 24,000*l.* about a fortnight ago, and a telegram was sent to England ten days ago offering 30,000*l.*

Mr. Premchund Roychund.

Hurryvullubdass did not value them upon my behalf, he valued them for the Bank. I did not pay him for doing so. He valued them at fifteen or sixteen lakhs. He had sold me one for Rs. 65,000, and I afterwards refused to sell it back to him for one lakh and a half. I am quite sure I never paid him for that valuation. I swear that I did not pay him one pie, and that I did not give him any present. If the Commissioners have received information that I paid him Rs. 15,000 it is incorrect. I paid him nothing. I failed on the 19th September 1866. Mr. Ranken, Mr. Cartwright, and Mr. J. L. Scott were appointed Trustees for my creditors. Mr. Ranken is an Assistant to Messrs. Ritchie, Steuart, and Co. Mr. Cartwright was a Public Accountant; he has gone to England. He used to be in the firm of Leckie and Co. Mr. J. L. Scott was formerly in Finlay, Clark, and Co.'s firm, and afterwards he was a Trustee of Cursetjee Furdoonjee. They were elected by my creditors. I have not paid any dividend yet. My estate is likely to pay a very small one. My Trustees have not brought me before the High Court to make me show where all my money has gone to; they can see by my books where the money has gone to. I have not got my discharge yet. I have not any property in the Guicowar's territory. I gave up all my property. My father lives upon what I send him every month. I am doing business as a Broker. I do not account to my Trustees for my earnings. I was bound to give them an account for the first year, and I gave them that. I paid them Rs. 13,000. I am living at Withulwaddy. I am not living in a large house in Love Lane. I had a house there, but it does not belong to me now. The Trustees have not possession of it; it was held by my father in trust for my mother, but subsequently we sold it to Kessowjee Naique. I turn to the account in my book showing the purchase of jewels in the year 1863–64. A balance is brought forward from the previous year of Rs. 95,367 paid for jewels, and in the course of the year 1864 the value of the jewels bought amounts to Rs. 1,43,611–15–0, making a total of Rs. 2,38,979–6–9, which has been carried to the profit and loss account (account marked R 21). In the year 1864–65 there are only two items amounting to Rs. 2,327–8 (account marked R 22). In the year 1865–66 I did not buy any jewels. There are other entries in my books relating to the purchase of jewels in the profit and loss account.

(Examination resumed after a short adjournment.)

I find in the profit and loss account of 1864-65 four entries amounting to Rs. 1,74,492,—these entries are not in the jewel account of that year. There are four other items in the same year, amounting to Rs. 31,822. These entries do not relate to jewels bought to give as presents to friends. I was in the habit of giving presents sometimes. None of these jewels were given as presents. These entries relate to jewels that I gave to the Bank of Bombay. My Mehta says there are other entries amounting to Rs. 36,999; we have not found all yet.

President.— You had considerable experience; what was your opinion of the management of the Bank of Bombay during Mr. Blair's incumbency as Secretary?

Answer.—Mr. Blair was constantly telling me that he wanted to pay a large dividend on the capital of the Bank, he was doing his best; and of course he had to give out a few large loans.

President.—That is not an answer to my question. What is your opinion as to his management?

Answer.—It was rather loose, I think.

President.—What is your opinion of Mr. Robertson's management?

Answer.—He was working during the whole of the crisis, and I think he was acting under the advice of the Directors; the crisis commenced in March or April 1865, when the American war ceased.

President.—Is it not clear, looking at your own evidence, that you used the Bank of Bombay as an instrumedt for the payment of your debts, for keeping up the prices of shares, and obliging your friends?

Answer.—When I got these loans for these people I was buying at a very cheap rate, and afterwards rates went up double and treble; the Bank of Bombay lent money to good people at that time; neither Mr. Robertson or Mr. Blair or anyone else ever had any bad intention.

President.—Is there anything else you have to say? If you have any desire to explain anything in your evidence you had better do so. We are about to close your examination for the present; but we shall probably re-examine you.

Answer.—Mr. Blair himself during the time he was working was working for the good of the Bank and for the shareholders; he wanted to make a large dividend. Mr. Robertson was working during the whole crisis, and for my part I never saw that they were doing wrong. They were both working for the benefit of the Bank of Bombay; they never had the least intention of misusng the money of the Bank at all. I will say one thing about Mr. Hannay: he had a joint account with me in Back Bay and Port Canning Company's shares, but he paid for them all. Mr. Scott had an interest offered him, but he was in England at the time, and he refused to take any interest at all in the transaction.

President.—Is there anything else you wish to say? We wish you to have every opportunity of explaining any part of your evidence that has been taken.

Premchund.—My own opinion is that all these gentlemen never thought of ruining the Bank or doing anything wrong at all, but were working for the benefit of the Bank, and we were all ruined together. I was a very large shareholder in the Bank at one time. I and my father held one thousand shares. At the time when it failed I had more than two hundred shares, my father had sold his shares.

Mr. Melvill.—Regarding the loans on the security of Back Bay shares, what was the object of making them repayable on the 1st July? There was the loan of twenty-one lakhs to Cursondass Madhowdass and his partners; another of Rs. 5,50,000 to Dr. Diver and others, and one of Rs. 6,25,000 to Cursetjee Furdoonjee?

Answer.—The reason was that the borrowers required time.

Question.—But why was the 1st July the date fixed, and not the 1st August or 1st September? Was it not the case that the shares were resold under time-bargains for the 1st July?

Answer.—Yes.

Question.—And when Mr. Blair fixed the 1st July for repayment was he not aware of that?

Answer.—No. It had no reference to time-bargains.

Question.—Then why was the 1st July the date fixed?

Answer.—Because it was the practice to pay interest at the end of the half-year, that is, on the 30th June and 31st December.

To the President.—I had two accounts with the Branch of the Asiatic Bank at Mombadevi; one was a charity account, the other was my private account. I had only one account at the Kalbadevi Branch of the Bank of Bombay.

By Major Innes.—Had not you two separate discounts in the Asiatic Bank?

Answer.—I had one at Kalbadevi.

President.—Not at the Head Office?

Answer.—I don't know, Sir. If you mention the amount I will tell you at once.

Major Innes.—In December 1864 there were seventeen lakhs on one account, on which fourteen lakhs are still due; and you had also another discount going on at the same time. Why should you have had two at one Bank? There are two discount accounts, a current deposit account, and a cash credit, all at the same time. Had you any particular object in having so many ?

Answer.—No reason, Sir.

Question.—These separate accounts could not, by any means, have had any connexion with the remark suggested by you on the first day of your examination, that Messrs. Morrison and Blair had an account with the Asiatic Bank in your name ?

Answer.—No.

Question.—The remark you made on the first day had no foundation whatever? Do you assert that your remark that Messrs. Morrison and Blair were able to operate by slips on an account in your name has no foundation whatever ?

Answer.—It has no foundation that I can see from my books or the Asiatic Bank's books.

Question.—There was no such account ?

Answer.—No.

Question.—You are quite certain ?

Answer.—It is not in my books.

To the President.—I know Pestonjee Nowrojee Khras; he was Shroff to Ritchie, Steuart, and Co. The letter now shown to me is in Mr. Robertson's handwriting (marked A 112). I believe there is a large claim still outstanding against him. I recommended him for his first loan. I do not remember recommending him afterwards for the second loan; but he was a very good man, a man of property, with money in the Commercial Bank.

President.—What does Mr. Robertson mean when he writes—"I have been asked to give this man a loan of one lakh;" and then at the end of his letter, "Premchund does not want his name mentioned." Why did you not want your name mentioned ?

Answer.—Because this man was the Shroff of Ritchie, Steuart, and Company. I said to Mr. Robertson, "You can ask Mr. Tracey or somebody else."

10 Aug. 1868.

Mr. Premchund Roychund.

President.—Mr. Tracey could still less give him a character than yourself. Mr. Tracey was a partner in Ritchie, Steuart, and Co.'s firm ?

Answer.—Yes, he was a partner.

President.—But why did you not want your name mentioned ?

Answer.—I had no transactions with him.

President.—Were you afraid to recommend him ?

Answer.—I was not afraid to recommend him for a loan on security; I recommended him for a loan of Rs. 25,000.

President.—You appear to have recommended him twice for Rs. 25,000. Are these your letters ?

Answer.—Yes. (Letters marked A 113 and A 114.)

President.—And you cannot recollect that you had any reason for objecting to your name being mentioned other than what you state, namely, that he was a Shroff in the firm of Ritchie, Steuart, and Company, of which firm Mr. Tracey was a partner ?

Answer.—No.

President.—But you had before recommended Pestonjee to Mr. Blair for a loan of Rs. 25,000; you wrote in your letter of the 12th April 1865 (A 114), "the bearer Pestonjee Nowrojee Khras wants a loan of "Rs. 25,000, he is quite safe for the amount; if he "has no former discount, then give it him."

Answer.—That must have been on the security of shares.

For the further evidence of this witness vide page 99 infra.

Mr. Shapoorjee Dhunjeebhoy sworn, examined by the President.

Mr. Shapoorjee Dhunjeebhoy.

I am the late Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy's son-in-law. I obtained from the Bank of Bombay a loan in my own name upon the 20th April 1864 of one lakh, and another of three lakhs in December 1864 jointly with Byramjee Manockjee; the loss on those transactions to the Bank may amount to Rs. 3,20,000. I applied for the advance of three lakhs to Mr. Blair. I was recommended to him by Premchund Roychund. I obtained the loan of three lakhs in order to purchase shares in the bazaar. I bought Back Bay shares, Financial shares, and Port Canning shares. I bought them from persons in the bazaar. I asked Premchund Roychund to procure me the loan. I knew him before I obtained the money; I spoke to him and he said he would speak to Mr. Blair, who told me that if I would get the signature of Mr. Byramjee he would grant me the loan. I personally obtained the loan of one lakh on the 14th April 1864. I negotiated that loan with Mr. Blair himself. I did not get anybody to recommend me for that loan. I was dealing in piece goods, and with that money I paid for some piece goods and some shares in the Financial Association of India and China. I bought those shares from brokers. I do not remember their names. The reason why such a heavy loss has fallen upon the Bank on these advances is, that the crisis came suddenly upon us, and I suffered a great deal. It is true that the crisis did not come till April or May 1865, a year after, but I renewed the loan several times. In January 1865 I paid the Bank Rs. 15,000, and I afterwards gave the Bank seven or eight jewels which I had, and some shares. I do not know whether those shares were sold by the Bank. There was no security taken for either of the loans originally, I have obtained my discharge through the Insolvent Court. I think my estate has not paid any dividend yet; my property was attached by the Asiatic Bank.

Cummulsey Premjee, affirmed.

Mr. Cummulsey Premjee.

I obtained a loan from the Bank of Bombay upon the 4th April 1865 of three lakhs for the purpose of buying shares in the bazaar. I owed money at that time for shares which I had bought. At this distance of time I do not remember the names of the brokers who sold me shares. I negotiated the loan, but I cannot remember whether it was with Mr. Blair or Mr. Robertson. I do not know whether I was recommended by anyone for the loan; they knew me very well. I was a broker. There has been a great loss on the transaction, although the loan was secured. It was not originally secured, but subsequently, about May 1865, I gave security to the Bank. I gave my property at Tardeo, which was sold recently for Rs. 24,000. I do not think I obtained that loan through anyone's recommendation. I obtained it on a promissory note. I afterwards went to the Bank and volunteered to give security before the note was due; I think it was not renewed. I failed before it fell due.

Dadabhoy Byramjee, sworn.

Mr. Dadabhoy Byramjee.

I borrowed money from the Bank of Bombay; a cash credit was granted to me on the 17th October 1863 for one lakh; on the 6th June 1864 another cash credit for one lakh; and the last transaction was a bill discounted for one lakh on the 18th March 1865. The total loss on these advances has been Rs. 2,21,793. No security was given for the first or second advance, but a deposit of share certificates was given for the third. I was informed by my friends in 1863 that they were obtaining money from the Bank upon personal security. I cannot recollect who told me. I went to Cowasjee Jehangeer Readymoney, and told him I wanted money, and he went with me to Mr. Blair. I was a general merchant, and wanted the money for my business. Cowasjee recommended me for the second loan; perhaps I used part of the money for buying shares. I obtained a third loan from Mr. Blair and offered security. I required money to pay for Elphinstone Land and Press Company's shares which I purchased at auction. There has been a heavy loss to the Bank on the transactions, owing to the fall in the value of shares and to my failure.

The Bank did not press me much for payment before I failed, but they requested me to pay off the amount. I have taken the benefit of Act XXVIII. of 1865. I have not yet received my discharge.

28 Aug. 1868.

28th August 1868.

Mr. Dhunjeebhoy Framjee.

DHUNJEEBHOY FRAMJEE, sworn, examined by the President.

I am a merchant in Bombay. I obtained a fixed loan from the Bombay Bank of Rs. 2,50,000 on the 28th of March 1865. There has been a loss to the Bank on that transaction of Rs. 1,10,000. I did not give any security to the Bank for that loan. I took a fixed loan rather than a cash credit, because I wanted the whole sum at once. I required the money to pay to the credit of my account current with the Indian Peninsula, London, and China Bank. I did not want it in order to pay for shares. I used to buy shares. I wanted to pay money to different parties. They were Dorabjee Framjee Colah, Messrs. Sorabjee and Nowrojee Nanabhoy, and the Commercial Bank. I negociated the loan with Mr. Robertson. I did not speak to any of the Directors of the Bank of Bombay about it. I was not recommended by anybody to the Bank for the loan. I gave no security. I applied to Mr. Robertson, and he told me that he would give me two and a half lakhs on my promissory note. He did not ask me for any security.

The loan was not renewed. At the due date I paid Rs. 40,000, with the understanding that in a few days I would pay the remainder, but there was a serious panic in the Bombay market. I paid three sums on account, and afterwards compromised for the balance. The Bank of Bombay pressed me for payment; they did not sue me. I negociated the loan with Mr. Robertson, the Deputy Secretary, because Mr. Blair was not in the Bank, and Mr. Robertson was. I do not know whether Mr. Blair was absent opening a Branch at the time.

28 Aug. 1868.

Mr. Veerchund Deepchund.

VEERCHUND DEEPCHUND, affirmed, examined by the President.

I was a Director of the Imperial Banking and Trading Company, and also a Director of the Kattiawar Trading Company. I was also Premabhoy Hemabhoy's Moonim. I was a debtor to the Bank of Bombay. I obtained an advance from the Bank of Bombay of one lakh on the 1st of May 1865 upon my promissory note.

President.—There has been a loss to the Bank on that transaction of about Rs. 15,000.

Answer.—I have paid Rs. 85,000 on account of the principal, and Rs. 7,000 for interest. I had a joint transaction with Premchund Roychund and Jaiverilall Umiashunker. This money was borrowed to pay for shares purchased by Premchund on our joint account. Premchund recommended me to the Bank of Bombay for the loan. The two letters now shown to me (marked A 109 and A 110) are in his handwriting. The loan was renewed several times upon my paying something on account upon every renewal. I have not paid the whole, on account of the crisis in Bombay; other creditors came upon me and I could not pay the whole amount. I have not executed any trust deed or gone through the Court.

President.—We will not examine you about the transactions between the Bank of Bombay and the Imperial Banking and Trading Company, as we have already taken evidence about them. You were a Director of the Kattiawar Trading Company, which obtained an advance from the Bank upon a bill or promissory note, dated the 6th of March 1865, for Rs. 75,000, and there has been a loss upon that transaction of Rs. 25,513. Was any security given to the Bank when that loan was granted?

Witness.—I do not remember, but I think security was given. The Kattiawar Trading Company was registered, I think, some time in 1864, but I do not remember exactly. I think the Secretary of the Company has an agreement, in which the signatures of all the allottees of shares appear. The allottees were, I think, almost all of them natives of Kattiawar. The loan was negociated for the Company by Premchund and Jaiverilall, the Secretary of the Company. The letter now shown to me (marked A 65) has Premchund's handwriting upon it. The Company was dealing in cotton, and purchased some Back Bay shares, but I cannot state from memory for what particular purpose the money was borrowed. I can find out by looking at the Company's books. Mr. Roonan is now the Liquidator of the Company, and has its books, I believe. The Company was buying and selling shares at the time the money was borrowed. The Secretary was buying for the Company, but I do not know from whom he purchased the shares. The Company was dealing in cotton in connexion with Messrs. Ritchie, Steuart, and Co., and also with Bharmull Purbhut; it was shipping cotton largely. I think the original loan was one lakh, and that it was subsequently reduced on renewal to Rs. 75,000. The Company was a Company with limited liability. It lost a great deal of money in cotton and upon Back Bay shares; there were two or three Back Bay shares purchased by the Company at Rs. 42,000 premium. The Bank of Bombay sued the Company, and obtained a decree against it for Rs. 55,000, I think. The Bank must have recovered something under the decree to reduce the debt to Rs. 25,000. The certificates of five shares in the Asiatic Trading Company were deposited, I believe, by the Company with the Bank as security.

President.—As Premabhoy Hemabhoy's Moonim, you are of course able to speak to his transactions with the Bank of Bombay?

Answer.—Yes.

President.—He obtained a discount on the 15th of May 1865 of three lakhs, on the 24th of June 1865 another discount of two lakhs, and in December 1865 a fixed loan of five lakhs; he had also a bill discounted at the Kalbadevi Branch of the Bank on the 21st of March 1866 for Rs. 45,000; the loss to the Bank upon those transactions was Rs. 3,89,000, and he has recently effected a compromise with the Bank. Was any security originally given for the advance on the 15th of May 1865 for three lakhs?

Answer.—On the 22nd of June 1865 he deposited with the Bank the certificates of ninety-nine shares in the Bombay and Bengal Steam Ship Company, Limited.

President.—I asked you whether any security was given for the loan at the time when it was obtained?

Answer.—I do not know. I think Premchund recommended Premabhoy Hemabhoy for that loan, which was obtained, I believe, partly in order to take up some bills that were falling due, and partly to pay for cotton and for general trade purposes. Premabhoy was doing business at that time with many persons. I do not think he was engaged in joint transactions with other persons. About the 15th of May 1865 he was shipping cotton for Sorabjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy and sometimes buying with Messrs. Stearns, Hobart, and Co., and Cursondass Madhowdass. I think in 1864 or 1865 he was consigning cotton to England through Ritchie, Steuart, & Co., and through some other people. I do not know that the loan of three lakhs was obtained for any particular purpose, or that Premabhoy had joint transactions with anybody.

President.—We have been told that he had joint transactions with Premchund Roychund.

Answer.—Yes, but not with that money. That money was not required for those joint transactions. Security was given to the Bank for the loan of two lakhs on the 24th of June 1865. I do not remember that anybody recommended Premabhoy for that loan to the Bank of Bombay. Whenever we wanted money we asked Premchund to obtain it. I do not remember whether he obtained this loan, but he may have done so. A letter from Mr. Robertson to Mr. Hannay is shown to me, and a reply from Mr. Hannay to Mr. Robertson (letters marked A 115 and A 116). These letters relate to the first loan of three lakhs in May 1865. I do not recollect how these two lakhs were obtained. I did not negociate the advance with Mr. Robertson. I think the money was wanted to take up bills due to the Bank of Bombay. Bills on Premabhoy had been bought in the interior by the Bank of Bombay, and had to be met; we paid the money to the Bank for those hoondies. I am not able to explain after reading these letters what interest Premchund took in these transactions.

President.—We have taken evidence about the fixed loan of December 1865 for five lakhs; and I shall not ask you about that. Do you recollect the advance at the Kalbadevi Branch in March 1866 of Rs. 45,000?

28 Aug. 1868.

Mr. Veerchund Deepchund.

Answer.—I do not remember what that advance was required for; I believe it was for trade purposes. We went to the Kalbadevi Branch instead of to the Head Office, because it was nearer to our firm's place of business; it was not much further to the Head Office, not above a mile, but there was no other reason than the one I have stated. I admit that the loans were outstanding at the Head Office for ten lakhs, and another bill for four and a half lakhs in the name of Premabhoy's son, Mayabhoy; but Premabhoy had no business relations with his son at that time, and although Premabhoy had ten lakhs outstanding at the Head Office at that time, that was not the reason why he went to the Branch Office. He could raise money at the Branch; we used to raise money on securities. I do not think he ever received money upon personal security there. I applied to Mr. Bullock at the Kalbadevi Branch. I believe I used sometimes to go in person to him. I do not think that anybody recommended me to Mr. Bullock. I do not remember whether he inquired if there was any money outstanding by Premabhoy at the Head Office. A compromise was lately entered into between Premabhoy Hemabhoy and the Liquidator of the Bank. Premabhoy Hemabhoy did not disappear from Bombay; he went to Bhownuggur, in Kattiawar. He compromised the debt of Rs. 3,89,215 by paying Rs. 50,000, and giving up property which was worth Rs. 50,000 more. The loss on the bill of Rs. 45,000 at the Kalbadevi Branch was included in the compromise. Premabhoy Hemabhoy did not execute an assignment of his property for the benefit of his creditors; there was a private settlement. He did not disappear from Bombay: he could always be found; he was generally living at Ahmedabad; that was his principal place of residence.

28th August 1868.

28 Aug. 1868.

Mr. Cowasjee Manockjee.

COWASJEE MANOCKJEE, sworn.

I was a member of the firm of Manockjee Limjee and Company. I was also a Director of the Bank of Bombay at two different periods. I was first elected a Director on the 22nd September 1864. I resigned in the month of December following. I was elected a Director the second time on the 25th of May 1865, and ceased to act as a Director in the month of April 1866. I resigned at that time on account of ill health, and because I went up to Mahabuleshwur, and could not attend regularly. Many large loans were granted by the Bank about September 1864 on mere promissory notes.

President.—I will refer to some of these large loans, and ascertain what you recollect about them. There was a loan of Rs. 5,50,000 on the 11th of October 1864 in the names of Taylor, Diver, and Atmaram Madhowjee. Had you anything to do with procuring that loan or recommending them for it?

Answer.—No, that loan was granted before I joined the Board.

President.—No, this loan was granted in October 1864, and you were elected in September 1864; do you recollect anything about that transaction?

Answer.—I think they applied for a loan to the Board, and that the Directors granted it.

President.—Where does that appear on the minutes?

Answer.—I think it is in the Minute Book.

President.—No, there is nothing of the kind.

Witness.—Generally the applications came before the Board.

President.—What, at that time? did applications for such loans come before the Board in October 1864?

Witness.—Yes; sometimes they came before the Board and sometimes before the Weekly Committee. I only speak from recollection.

President.—I think your recollection fails you there; at a subsequent period after May 1865 the applications did come before the Board; If you look through the Board minutes prior to that time you will see that applications for loans are not mentioned.

Witness.—They may have gone before the Weekly Committee; it was a general rule of the Board to appoint weekly a Committee consisting of several Directors; the applications were sent round to them, and they always gave their individual opinions.

President.—Do you mean to tell us that the application for this loan of Rs. 5,50,000 ever came before the Directors?

Answer.—I do not recollect. I cannot account for Rs. 5,50,000 being lent without any security whatever to Taylor, Diver, and Atmaram Madhowjee. I do not consider that it was a prudent advance for a Bank to make.

President.—Do you recollect another transaction in October 1864, the advance of ten lakhs to the Eastern Financial Association upon a promissory note?

Answer.—I knew that the loan was granted. I was not aware of it at first; but a few days after the advance had been made, I became aware that a large loan had been granted to the Eastern Financial Association, and I asked Mr. Robertson about it; he told me that some of the Directors had agreed to the advance being made, and that the loan was granted. I first heard about this loan to the Eastern Financial Association, I think, from Mr. Robertson. When I went into the Bank, I asked what transactions had taken place, and he told me that this loan had been granted. I do not remember whether he told me the names of the Directors who had sanctioned the loan, but I think he always consulted the President and one or two other Directors. I do not recollect who was President at that time.

President.—Mr. Birch, was he not?

Answer.—I think so. I was dissatisfied about this loan of ten lakhs to the Eastern Financial Association. I did not object to it; the loan was already granted, and I could not object; my colleagues had granted it. I spoke to the Secretary, and said that it was a very large loan, and that I did not think it ought to have been granted; he said that the Eastern Financial Association had sufficient funds to warrant the Bank in granting the loan. I did not think it necessary to make any further remonstrance in the matter. I knew something of an advance of five lakhs by the Bank of Bombay on the 21st of October 1864 to the Alliance Financial Corporation on a promissory note. I knew of that advance at the time it was granted. The loan was granted to the Directors of the Alliance Financial Corporation. I think that loan was negociated between the Secretary of the Bank of Bombay and the Directors of the Alliance Financial Corporation. The Secretary granted that loan, I believe, on his own authority. I came to know that in the same way in which I became acquainted with the advance to the Eastern Financial Association before. I went to the Bank and inquired either of Mr. Blair or Mr. Robertson as to the transactions which were taking place, and he told me of this loan. I did not say anything about that transaction, for, before I could make any objection, the Secretary told me that the Directors were sufficient, and that the Bank was guaranteed by the seal of the Corporation. I do not recollect a loan of five lakhs being granted to the Alliance Financial Corporation on the 8th November 1864. I think I was absent from Bombay at that time. I remember an application to renew that advance for another three months. They applied to have their first loan extended, and their second also. I do not know who interested himself in that matter. I did not approve of these two loans of five lakhs to the Alliance Financial Corporation being granted on mere promissory notes without securities. I objected to the first loan, and the answer I got from the Secretary was, that the parties were sufficient, and that the Directors had agreed to grant the loan. I did not object to the second loan. To my inquiries as to the second loan I received a similar answer. I asked him how he had granted such a large loan after the one they had already granted, and he said that it was only a temporary loan. I knew Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff. I knew of loans being granted to him on his mere promissory notes. I did not take my objection to them; the loans were granted by the other Directors. My approval was never asked for before these loans were granted. The Secretary had gigantic powers; he sometimes asked the Native Directors for their opinion, and sometimes he did not. Sometimes he spoke to me previously to granting loans, and sometimes afterwards. I remember that a loan of five lakhs without security was made by the Bank of Bombay to the Imperial Banking and Trading Company on the 8th of December 1864. I think that loan was granted by the Secretary of the Bank.

President.—Was it granted on his own responsibility under the gigantic powers which you refer to?

Answer.—I think so. I cannot name the exact date when I first knew of that loan being granted to the Imperial Bank. I became aware of it whilst I was a Director of the Bank; I do not remember how I became aware of it. I did not object to it, but the information I got from the Secretary was that Merwanjee Framjee Pandy was one of the promoters, and was Chairman of the Company, and that the loan was required for some share transactions. I heard that from the Secretary, either from Mr. Blair or Mr. Robertson, I do not recollect which. Mr. Blair was the Secretary in April 1864, but he was often absent from the Bank. I perhaps objected to the loan, but the Secretary satisfied me about it. I recollect that a loan of three lakhs was granted on the 14th December 1864 to Shapoorjee Dhunjeebhoy and Byramjee Manockjee. It was granted by Premchund; I heard of it shortly afterwards. I was a Director at the time. I did not approve of that transaction. The loan was originally granted to Shapoorjee Dhunjeebhoy, who was afterwards pressed by the Bank, and then Premchund obtained the signature of Byramjee Manockjee as a surety. I was still dissatisfied after the joint signatures had been given, but the Secretary told me that Premchund had said that Byramjee was worth several lakhs of Rupees, and that he was a relation of Cursetjee Furdoonjee. I do not remember an advance of Rs. 6,25,000 being made to Cursetjee Furdoonjee on the 28th of December 1864. I did not hear of that at the time. I afterwards looked into the books of the Bank, and in that way became aware that such a loan had been granted to Cursetjee Furdoonjee. I had nothing to do with the granting of any of these large loans. When I objected to certain loans I always wrote to the Secretary, or spoke to him about them. I have no copies of any letters with respect to these particular loans, but I have copies of many other letters. I do not think I wrote to the Secretary between September and December 1864. There were some smaller loans recommended by me during the time I was a Director; I recommended a man named Muncherjee Framjee. On the 20th of October 1864 he obtained a cash credit from the Bank of Rs. 50,000. There has been a loss on that of Rs. 33,000. No security was taken from him for the loan, because it was the rule of the Bank to grant loans on personal security. Sometimes I objected to that practice. I thought Muncherjee Framjee was sufficient, but at the same time I think I may have written to the Secretary recommending him to take the opinion of other Directors. I always did that whenever I recommended any person. I wrote to inform the Secretary that he should consult another Director. This cash credit of Muncherjee was renewed repeatedly. I was present at a Board Meeting at which it was referred to me to make inquiries about his means of payment. I inquired in several quarters, and at the same time the Honourable Rustomjee Jamsetjee told me that his circumstances were very bad. The letter now shown to me is my letter reporting on the matter to Mr. Robertson (letter marked 117 A). Muncherjee offered to give the Bank some shares to compromise the debt. I do not remember whether he offered to pay Rs. 5,000. His relatives, I think, did. I did not take any efficient means to make this man pay. The bank did not press him for payment. That was the business of the Secretary of the Bank. The Bank did not sue him. I was only to inquire and report on the subject. He did not become insolvent, or execute a trust deed. The Bank has never taken any steps against him to recover the Rs. 33,000 still due by him. I cannot account for that. There was another loan which I recommended, when out of office, an advance of Rs. 60,000 to Hormusjee Pestonjee and Mr. Cooper on the 12th of February 1865. There has been a large loss upon that, I understand, rather more than one-third. At the time I recommended Mr. Cooper he was doing a good business, and was a partner in the firm of Fulcher, Cooper, and Company, and Hormusjee was his broker. I recommended them to the Bank, but I could not grant a loan, as I was not a Director; it was entirely in the hands of the Secretary. I cannot account for the total loss on the loan of one lakh, recommended by me, and granted by the Bank, to Homejee Cursetjee Dady. He was a first-class merchant in Bombay, and one of my relatives. I recommended him to Mr. Robertson for this loan, which the Directors must have sanctioned, unless Mr. Robertson granted it on his own responsibility. I am not able to give you any explanation about that loan. On the 6th December 1864 I recommended the Bank to make an advance of one lakh to Ruggonath Vittoba; I was not Director at the time. Ruggonath Vittoba was formerly Head Clerk to Leckie and Co., and afterwards took a pension, and was carrying on business on his own account. I do not think that he was speculating in Back Bay shares. He did not deposit any security for that loan. He did not deposit five Back Bay share certificates. I think that loan was paid off.

To Major Innes.—He was not Cashier to Manockjee Limjee and Company, but he had an interest with us in some dealings in shares as well as cotton.

President.—Shortly after you left the direction a cash credit of five lakhs was obtained from the Bank by your firm of Manockjee Limjee and Company; it was granted on the 14th of January 1865.

Witness.—Yes. I am referred to the Application Book; I see that on the same day there is this entry in the Application Book—"Manockjee Limjee and Company, a cash credit Rs. 1,20,900," secured by deposit of Government notes. I do not recollect whether that is in addition to the cash credit of five lakhs or not. These transactions were for the most part managed by my senior partner. The books of our firm were certainly accessible to me. I think it must have been part of the five lakhs. I cannot say why the whole sum of five lakhs was not mentioned in the Application Book. I do not know in what way the Bank people kept their books. This is the first time I ever saw this book.

President.—Was it not laid on the table at all your meetings?

Answer.—No, I do not think so.

President.—Not at the Board meetings?

Witness.—There were several books lying on the table.

President.—Was not that one of them?

Answer.—It may have been.

President.—You never looked at it?

Witness.—No.

President.—What am I to understand from your answer? was the sum of Rs. 1,20,900 a part of the five lakhs or not?

Witness.—I think it was a part of the five lakhs.

President.—Then why is it represented in the Application Book that you were only applying for Rs. 1,20,900?

Witness.—I think my firm kept two or three kinds of accounts with the Bank.

President.—But these are both cash credits?

Witness.—Yes.

President.—You will find that there are two other items, one on the 11th of January of Rs. 89,000, and another on the 2nd of February?

Witness.—These relate to Limjee Manockjee individually and not to our firm. He was the senior partner in my firm; he used to obtain loans on his own account. I cannot say why the whole sum is not mentioned in the Application Book, but only that sum for which security was given. I do not recollect when I got back that Government paper. We could not have it back unless the loan had been paid off. We never paid off the five lakhs, but we must have paid that sum of Rs. 1,20,900. I cannot give any further explanation about the matter.

President.—For what purpose was that sum of five lakhs obtained in January 1865?

Witness.—My firm used to do a large business with several English houses as brokers.

President.—Am I to understand from that answer that it was merely obtained for your general business, and not for any particular speculation of that time?

Witness.—My firm used to do a general business, and as brokers for other houses, and I think this loan was taken for our general business purposes. I negociated that loan with the Secretary, Mr. Blair. No one recommended us.

28 Aug. 1868.

Mr. Cowasjee Manockjee.

President.—I suppose you were able to recommend yourself, having been a Director a few days before?

Witness.—No; previous to my going into the Directorship my firm used to transact a large business with the Bank. I did not recommend them. It was well known to Mr. Blair that I was partner in the firm of Manockjee Limjee and Company.

President.—You said that you were re-elected a Director on the 26th of May 1865?

Answer.—Yes, Sir.

President.—Did you not attend the first Board meeting after that, on the 1st of June 1865?

Witness.—Yes.

President.—Was not the failure of Messrs. Leckie and Company announced at that meeting?

Answer.—Yes.

President.—And was it not announced at the same meeting that you had endorsed one of their bills for Rs. 90,000?

Answer.—I think so, but I cannot tell exactly.

President.—You can look at the Board minutes?

Witness.—Before looking at the Board minutes I must explain that my firm had applied for a second loan, and the President requested me to retire from the room before the application was considered.

President.—I am glad to find that you retired; you are mentioned as having been present at the meeting. I believe that an application came on that day for an advance of four lakhs to your firm; and you offered as security Government paper and shares in the United Victoria and Colaba Company: could not your firm have paid the bill of Rs. 90,000 if they had not obtained a loan?

Witness.—My firm could have paid the Bill. I asked Mr. Robertson, after the meeting, about the discussion, and why the President had asked me to retire from the room, and he said that there was a discussion as to granting the loan to my firm. I said that the loan had been already granted, when my brother, who was my partner, applied for it four days previously to this meeting. I recollect Robertson saying that the application had been brought before the Board, and the Board had granted it. I suggested that I should take up Leckie's bill, and that he should allow some rebate.

President.—Did you deposit the Government notes for Rs. 60,000?

Witness.—I do not recollect. These transactions were entirely negociated by my brother; after I became a Director I did not like to interfere in such matters, so I told my brother to do so.

President.—Do you not think it was your duty as a Director to see that the Bank obtained all the security that was promised?

Witness.—Yes, but I kept myself back because I was a Director.

President.—Did the Bank ever get the Rs. 60,000 worth of Government paper?

Witness.—I do not recollect.

President.—Some share certificates were deposited, were they not?

Witness.—Yes; the certificates of one hundred shares in the United Victoria and Colaba Company.

President.—How did you manage to get rid of the promise to deposit Rs. 60,000 worth of Government paper?

Answer.—I do not recollect.

President.—It could not have happened without your knowledge; how was it you were never called upon to deposit that paper?

Answer.—I do not know; the management of the matter was entirely in the hands of my partner, and I did not interfere at all.

President.—Was anything ever said at the Board about the Government notes never having been deposited?

Witness.—No, nothing at all.

President.—For what purpose was that sum of four lakhs obtained?

Witness.—At that time we were in want of money; the English houses for whom we acted as Brokers had bought a large amount of cotton, and we wanted to pay for it. The English houses bought cotton, and we used to pay the money to the cotton merchants, and as soon as the English firms drew bills the money was paid back to us. I cannot say that it was only as agents for English houses that we wanted the money. We used to transact business in cotton on our own account also, sometimes jointly with English houses, and sometimes with some of our English friends, and also with natives. I do not recollect any particular transaction for which this four lakhs was wanted. I am referred to the minutes of a Board meeting held on the 29th of June 1865; the following minute appears amongst others:—

28 Aug. 1868.

Mr. Cowasjee Manockjee.

"Read letter from Premchund Roychund tendering "his resignation as a Director of the Bank. Resolved "that his resignation be accepted on condition that he "will still continue to do his utmost to recover payment "of Bills discounted and Loans granted by the Bank; "and that he will attend the first Annual General "Meeting of the Proprietors, and that he will in writing "agree to these conditions." There were very discreditable rumours in the bazaar about Premchund and the Bank, and I think Premchund was compelled by some of the Directors to resign his seat at the Board. I do not remember the names of the Directors who compelled him to resign. Some of the Directors were opposed to his leaving the Board; I was one of them; he had granted such large loans to many parties, and I thought that if he retired there would be more difficulty in recovering the money. Most of the Native Directors were in favour of Premchund. I do not know who proposed the terms which were imposed on him; there was a discussion, and it was resolved that his resignation should be accepted on those conditions. I believe that we afterwards received a letter from him agreeing to those conditions. I am referred to the Board Minute of 6th July 1865,* by which the Secretary was authorized to attend meetings of the creditors of parties indebted to the Bank. I think that resolution was proposed by Mr. Hannay, the President, and that the other Directors unanimously agreed to it. It was not opposed by anybody, but some words were altered by Mr. Lidderdale, or some English Director. There was no discussion at all about it, but a few words were exchanged. I do not think that it was a prudent course to grant the Secretary power at his discretion to agree to any resolution proposed and agreed to by the representatives of other Banks. I understood that before signing any deed he must report to the Directors.

Mr. Melvill.—I understood you to say that in 1864 the Secretary generally consulted the Directors about advances and discounts?

Answer.—I think so.

Mr. Melvill.—When you were on the Weekly Committee yourself, as you were twice, were they ever referred to you?

Answer.—Yes.

To the President.—I produce a number of copies of my letters to Mr. Blair and Mr. Robertson, and some letters which I received from them.

Witness recalled.

This is a copy of a letter which I wrote to Mr. Robertson on the 28th August 1865 (marked A 120). I produce his reply to it, dated the same day (marked A 121). I received the letter shown to me dated the 6th March 1865, from Mr. Robertson; it is in his handwriting (marked A 122).

Mr. Gungadass Toolseydass.

28th August 1868.

GUNGADASS TOOLSEYDASS, affirmed.

I am a Clerk in the service of Madhowdass Ghella. My name is on three promissory notes discounted at the Kalbadevi Branch of the Bank of Bombay. The first is dated the 25th of May 1865, and was given by me jointly with Dadabhoy Jewanjee and Vizbhoocundass Luckmeedass for Rs. 15,000; the loss on that transaction has been Rs. 10,673. On the 26th May 1865 I signed another note jointly with Dadabhoy Jewanjee and Cursetjee Framjee for Rs. 35,000; the loss on which has been Rs. 34,183. On the 26th May 1865 I signed a third note jointly with Nusserwanjee Nowrojee for one lakh. The loss on that has been Rs. 77,265. The Bank has paid calls upon the shares deposited with it as security to the amount of Rs. 6,800. Shares were deposited for the first loan of Rs. 15,000. In May 1865 I deposited nine shares of the Land Investment Company, and on the 7th of December 1866 lodged further security. We gave further security when the value of shares began to decline. No one recommended me for these large loans. At that time I was a broker. Mr. Bullock, without any recommendation, made the loans on the security of shares. I was not known to Mr. Bullock. I heard that the Bank of Bombay was making advances on the security of shares, and I applied. I was not recommended by anyone. Vizbhoocundass Luckmeedass and the other parties to the loans were my customers, and the money was required for their use. I was only taken as the surety. In all cases I gave my signature as security. I was not possessed of any property. Mr. Bullock did not make any inquiries as to whether I had property, or about my affairs. Vizbhoocundass Luckmeedass was a trader in pearls. He was no relation of Davidass Luckmeedass. He was no relation of the Shroff at the Kalbadevi Branch of the Bank of Bombay, not even his caste fellow. I was not recommended to Mr. Bullock for the next loan of Rs. 35,000 with Dadabhoy Jewanjee and Cursetjee Framjee. Dadabhoy and Cursetjee dealt in shares at that time. They were speculators. I do not know whether they were known as such to Mr. Bullock. As I was their broker I became security for them. I wish to explain that I originally obtained all the money in my own name in 1864. I borrowed one and a half lakhs, and when it fell due Mr. Bullock said that I was merely a broker, and asked me to whom the shares which had been deposited as security for the loan belonged. I gave him the names of all the persons to whom they belonged, and Mr. Bullock required me to bring them to his office. The loan was then apportioned according to the shares of the respective parties, and the three promissory notes were given. I obtained the original loan of one lakh and a half from Mr. Bullock, because the security which was deposited on account of the loan was worth at the time two lakhs. I was not recommended to Mr. Bullock in 1864, but he sent for his Shroff, Balkissondass, and he acted as interpreter between me and Mr. Bullock. There was also a Purvoe present. I knew Balkissondass before that, but he did not recommend me for the loan. He and the Purvoe merely acted as interpreters. Sometimes one interpreted, and sometimes the other. They did not vouch for me. Mr. Bullock had the power to grant the loan or not, just as he chose. I did not know the Purvoe previously. I had no property at all.

Mr. Thomas Crawford.

Mr. Thomas Crawford, sworn.

I am an Auctioneer. I was employed by the Bank of Bombay to value jewels said to have been deposited by Premchund Roychund with the Bank. I was employed and paid by the Bank. The jewels were examined by me on different occasions. I examined some of them on the 3rd and 4th May 1866; my valuation of those jewels was sent to the Bank on the 8th May 1866. The jewels were shown to me at the Bank; there was no list of them; I made a list of them myself. I produce a copy of it with my valuation of the various articles (marked S 1). Mr. Fraser was present at the time when I inspected the jewels, sometimes Mr. Rodgie, and sometimes both, and I believe Mr. Lidderdale came up once or twice. I examined a second batch of jewels afterwards. I also made a list of them. I produce a copy of it with the valuation upon it (marked S 2). I sent the second valuation to the Bank on the 23rd May 1866. The amount of my first valuation is Rs. 2,74,292, and of the second Rs. 61,255, making a total of Rs, 3,35,547. I did not see Premchund Roychund about the matter. I did not see Hurryvullubdass Calliandass, or Rosselet's man; no other valuer was present; my valuations were entirely independent reports of my own. I think the jewels would have sold better in India than elsewhere,—they were better suited to Indian tastes. I do not know how much they realised. I am not surprised at being told that they realised less than my valuation. I think they would fetch the price I put upon them even now.

Mr. Hurryvullubdass Calliandass.

Hurryvullubdass Calliandass, affirmed.

I am a jeweller in Bombay, and doing a large business. I was not employed to value the jewels deposited by Premchund with the Bank of Bombay, but on one occasion Premchund took me to the Bank. He told me that he wanted me to declare the fact of my having sold him a necklace for Rs. 65,000, and that I had offered to buy it from him again for one lakh. I went to the Bank with Premchund. I saw there two European gentlemen whom I did not know, and whose names I do not know now. Two tin boxes were produced, and one of them was opened, and the first thing that was taken out of that box and shown to me was the diamond necklace. Premchund asked me "Is this the diamond necklace "you sold to me for Rs. 65,000? and did you not "afterwards offer to buy it of me again for one lakh? "and did I not decline to sell it to you at that "price?" and I said "Yes." At that time I had a rich customer, the Guicowar. I was in the habit of getting large prices from the Guicowar, and therefore I wanted to buy the necklace back from Premchund. I did not offer to buy it there and then; I had only been anxious to buy it at a previous time. I did not make any valuation of the jewels there. I only valued four wristlets; they were diamond wristlets. I was asked as to the quality of the diamonds, and I said that they were second class diamonds; and I was asked as to the rough weight of each of them, and I said that each of them would weigh about a carat. I did not make a valuation of the whole of the jewels. I am not able to tell you what they are all worth. If Mr. Robertson, the Secretary of the Bank of Bombay, has said in the deposition given by him in the suit pending between the Bank of Bombay and the Oriental Bank that I valued them at between fifteen and sixteen lakhs, it is untrue. [The President reads from a copy of Mr. Robertson's de bene esse examination in suit No. 317 of 1868 in H.M.'s High Court, Bombay, between the Bank of Bombay, plaintiff, and the Oriental Bank Corporation, defendant, the following passage: "I also got "Hurryvullubdass Calliandass, a well-known jewel "merchant in Bombay, to look at them, and give me "an idea of the value. He valued them at between "fifteen and sixteen lakhs of rupees."]

Witness.—I did not give any such value.

[The President also reads from the same deposition the following passage: "He seemed to know the "jewels very well."]

Witness.—I could only identify the necklace which I had sold.

President.—Mr. Robertson also states in his deposition as follows: "I do not remember when Hurry-"vullubdass saw the jewels; I think it was in the "month of May 1866."

Witness.—I do not remember the date. I wish to add that I have not received any money from Premchund.

I am in the employ of Messrs. Rosselet and Co. of this place, and have some knowledge of the value of jewels. I was employed to value the jewels stated to have been deposited by Premchund Roychund with the Bank of Bombay. A gentleman came from the Bank of Bombay and asked me to go with him and value some jewels, and I went with him. I was paid by the Bank of Bombay. I examined all the jewels which the gentleman showed me. I do not recollect the date. It may have been the 28th April 1866. The gentleman I have mentioned was the only person present. I began to examine the jewels, and the gentleman took down the prices as I mentioned them. After I had given the value of a few of the jewels he sent a note down to a gentleman in the Bank.

Question.—Did he leave the room?

Witness.—Yes, he shut up the boxes of jewels and left the room. I do not know where he went to. He was absent some minutes; when he returned, as well as I can remember, he said it was all right, and I went away. I do not remember whether I resumed the examination of the jewels after he returned. I made a valuation of the whole of the jewels. I was engaged about half an hour in valuing the jewels. The valuation was only a cursory one. I do not remember the exact value of the jewels, but I think the value was about two or three lakhs. I did not take any note of it. The gentleman wrote down the prices. It was between two and three lakhs. I think they ought to have fetched a good price in Europe. Some of them had been set in India, and some in London and Paris. In valuing the jewels I did not put selling prices upon them, but the prices which I would have been willing to give for them.

I obtained an advance by way of discount from the Bank of Bombay on the 1st of May 1865 of one lakh. I do not remember whether the loss on that bill has been Rs. 18,000 and odd. I have not got a statement of the loss on each transaction. I know the aggregate loss on all the transactions. I had had many former dealings with the Bank. I believe my Head Clerk negociated the loan with the Manager of the Bank. The letter now shown to me is my letter applying for the advance (marked A 118). No one recommended me for that advance at that time, but subsequently, in 1866, there was some hesitation on the part of the Manager of the Bank of Bombay to make advances to me, or to renew. I wished for a renewal, and got Mr. Hannay to recommend me. This letter is in Mr. Hannay's handwriting (marked A 119). The loans which I obtained from the Bank in 1865 amounted to about Rs. 6,10,000, and I have paid off the whole amount, except about Rs. 20,000. I observe written across my letter (A 118) applying for an advance of one lakh the words "with great "pleasure : give him. P.R." I do not know the handwriting. I am not a great friend of Premchund Roychund. The Manager may have consulted him. The Bank never took any security from me. The reason why the Bank did not take security was, that my firm had extensive transactions with the Bank, and very good credit.

Mr. Dossabhoy Dhunjeebhoy.

DOSSABHOY DHUNJEEBHOY, recalled.

I was Premchund Roychund's Manager. There are three accounts in my name in the books of the Asiatic Bank. Only one of these accounts was my own. I look at the cash credit account opened in my name in the Asiatic Bank's books on the 4th of April 1865 (marked T 1). That was not my own account. Premchund Roychund was interested in it, but was not solely interested in it. It relates to transactions in Back Bay shares. That account, so far as it was kept in my name relates to the purchase of twenty-five Back Bay shares. The entire account relates to fifty Back Bay shares, but twenty-five of them were bought after the account had been transferred from my name. The parties interested in the account were Premchund Roychund himself, Mr. Blair, Mr. Tracey, Mr. Morrison, and Mr. Hannay. The account was opened on the 4th April 1865, as I said, and shows that the first cheque was drawn against the account upon the 4th April 1865. The account so far as it stood in my name was closed on the 30th June 1865. I have not the exact date, but I see, on looking at the account, that it was closed on that date. I was a debtor on that account, on the 30th June 1865, to the amount of Rs. 7,52,260–1–9. Upon the 30th June 1865, the account was transferred from my name to that of Premchund Roychund. The account increased until in June 1866 there was a debit against the account of Rs. 11,32,538–2–3. I do not know when the Back Bay shares were disposed of. I see by the account that the fifty Bombay Reclamation Company's shares were taken over by the Asiatic Bank at Rs. 2,700 each, upon the 24th January 1867, and a balance remained due upon the account of upwards of ten lakhs. I do not know whether that money was all lost.

I am referred to another account in my name in the Asiatic Bank's books (marked T 2). It relates to Bank of Bombay shares. I have not in my possession any letters or papers relating to either of these two accounts. I had a letter in the shape of a guarantee, holding me harmless in respect of the first account relating to the Back Bay shares. That letter was returned to Tracey by order of Premchund, when the account was transferred from my name to that of Premchund. I remember that the guarantee was signed by all the five persons who were interested in the account. I was debited with Rs. 4,05,900 in the account which relates to one hundred and eighty Bank of Bombay shares on the 9th November 1864. That was the price of the shares, I think, and that money must have been paid to Premchund. Had no letter of guarantee with respect to this account relating to the Bank of Bombay shares; the persons interested in the account were, I think, the same, Mr. Premchund himself, Mr. Tracey, Mr. Blair, Mr. Hannay, and Mr. Morrison.

I remember Mr. Lawrence, the Liquidator of the Asiatic Bank, coming out to Bombay. He made a claim on me in respect of this account. He called me in, and told me that there was a large balance due by me to the Asiatic Bank. The matter was afterwards compromised by Premchund paying Rs. 5,000 in cash and handing over one Back Bay share. The last instalment of the Rs. 5,000 was paid on the 27th March 1868, leaving a balance due upon the account of Rs. 2,85,743–5–1, which was transferred to the account of Bad and Doubtful Debts.

I am referred to another account in the Asiatic Bank's books in the name of Nusserwanjee Ruttonjee & Co. I do not know who were interested in that account, but Nusserwanjee Ruttonjee & Co. were not. Candass Narrondass was a partner in that firm. I do not know whether my master had any interest in Candass' share in that firm. The account was transferred from the name of Nusserwanjee Ruttonjee & Co., into that of Custoorchund Roychund, who is the brother of Premchund Roychund. When Mr. Premchund's credit became shaken in the bazaar I think Nusserwanjee Ruttonjee & Co. required either to have the account settled, or to have it taken out of their name. They did not acknowledge it to be their account. I heard that Mr. Morrison, Mr. Tracey, Mr. Premchund, and others were interested in it. Premchund Roychund will be able to state who was interested in that account. I think Custoorchund will not be able to say who were the parties interested, because he only signed the promissory note at the bidding of his brother. I took Custoorchund with me, at the desire of Premchund, to Mr. Morrison at the Asiatic Bank, and the account was transferred from the name of Nusserwanjee Ruttonjee & Co., to that of Custoorchund Roychund. I think a bond or promissory note was also signed by Custoorchund for the balance. I did not learn who were the real parties interested in the account. Custoorchund said, I think, that he was not at all interested in the matter. Premchund was not present. Although I was so confidentially employed by Premchund I am unable to state from my own knowledge who were the real parties interested in the transaction. I had no access to his books, which were all kept at his house. I was managing his business in the Fort. I think Custoorchund Roychund is in Bombay, but I have not seen him for the last two or three days. There is a decree out against him in the High Court.

I look at a paper which is shown to me : this is a list of Premchund's jewels delivered to the Bank of Bombay; it is in my handwriting. (List marked A 123.)

Mr. Hormusjee Nowrojee.

HORMUSJEE NOWROJEE SAKLATWALLA, sworn.

I am a partner in the firm of Nusserwanjee Ruttonjee & Co. I joined the firm in April 1864. Candass Narrondass was a partner in the firm. I do not know whether Premchund Roychund had any interest in the share which Candass had in the firm. There was an account standing in the name of my firm, in the books of the Asiatic Bank, besides our current deposit account. It was a loan account. I did not know anything of it when it was originally opened. I became aware towards the end of August, or the beginning of September 1865, of that account having been opened in our name in the books of the Asiatic Bank: I look at the account in the Cash Credit Ledger of the Asiatic Bank. It appears to have commenced on the 26th August 1865—(account marked T 3). When I became aware of the existence of that account I repudiated it altogether. I had occasion to go to the Asiatic Bank, when Mr. Baker told me of the transaction. He said he had completed the purchase. I asked him what the transaction was, and he said thirty-seven shares in the Back Bay Company had been bought for us. I said "I have nothing "to do with it and know nothing of it." He told me that Mr. Morrison had given him orders to make the purchase. Mr. Morrison had gone to Poona at the time; and I said "Upon the arrival of "Mr. Morrison you can ask him, but we never gave "him any order to purchase those shares upon "our account." On receiving information from Mr. Baker I went to Premchund and asked him about the transaction: he said that we need not be afraid; that it was not our account, but that of other persons. I went over to the Asiatic Bank and expressed the greatest anxiety to have our firm relieved from liability about the transaction, for I did not like it to stand in the name of my firm; the account was then transferred to the name of Custoorchund Roychund. I do not know who were the persons really interested in that account.

Custoorchund Roychund, called, does not appear. Premchund admits having received a summons from him, and adds that he only comes to the house on Sundays.

Mr. Premchund Roychund.

PREMCHUND ROYCHUND recalled.

President.—We shall go through the different matters on which you promised to give us more information. First of all we will go into the account of your purchases of jewels. I have made a summary of the purchases as they appear in your books. In the Hindoo year 1918 (1861–62) I find that you expended on jewels a sum of Rs. 23,155–1–6; in the Hindoo year 1919 (1862–63) a sum of Rs. 95,367–7–9; in the Hindoo year 1920 (1863–64) a sum of Rs. 1,43,641–15–0; in the year 1921 (1864–65) two sums of Rs. 2,327–8–0, and Rs. 54,459–9–0; and in 1922 (1865–66) a sum of Rs. 13,879–7–0, making a total value of Rs. 3,32,801. You also credit your father with jewels to the amount of Rs. 1,47,000, making the sum total Rs. 4,79,801. Are not these the correct figures taken from your books?

Answer.—These are the amounts of the entries of jewels purchased, which I found in my books and showed to the Translator.*

President.—Did you not give away a great number of these jewels?

Answer.—I do not know at all; there are many items not found in my books.

Question repeated.

Answer.—I gave away some of them.

President.—I find in the jewel account of 1920 (1863–64) the following credit entry:—"Credited to "Jewels Account Rs. 2,38,979–6–9, being the amount "due on Jewels Account; but as the jewels were "presented to different persons, it became a part of "the Expenditure Account, and the amount has been "debited to Profit and Loss Account." Now does it not appear by this that you had given away a number of these jewels?

Answer.—I have included in those given away those given to my wife and children, but I took all the jewels back from them, and gave them to the Bank of Bombay. I gave very few jewels to other persons. I did not give away a valuable pair of earrings entered in the account for the year 1921; the entry is "Earrings given to a European Rs. 16,000," and there is a debit to Profit and Loss, on the 22nd November 1864, as follows:—"Purchased jewels from Parsee "Dossabhoy Hormusjee a pair of diamond earrings for "presentation to a European Rs. 16,000." The earrings were intended to be presented, but were not presented, and were delivered to the Bank. I only gave away jewels of small amounts, just Rs. 100, Rs. 200, Rs. 500, or Rs. 1,000. I gave away a diamond necklace to a European of the value of about Rs. 30,000.

President.—What was the name of the European to whom you gave the diamond necklace?

Answer.—Mr. Scott.

Witness.—My father assisted me liberally, and gave me very handsome jewels to deposit with the Bank of Bombay. His houses and lands were at my disposal: he assisted me as much as he could. I have been through my books with the Translator, and pointed out the entries relating to twelve different properties purchased by me, and the prices which I gave for them. I made over to the Bank the property called Dhackjee's Chawl. I gave five lakhs for it, sold it for ten lakhs, and repurchased it for ten lakhs. I made over to the Bank all the properties purchased by me. The Tardeo property was made over to the Bank. In the list of the properties which have been sold, furnished by the Liquidator of the Bank, now shown to me, it is entered as No. 6. The entry in my book relating to it is as follows: "Debited to the account of landed property at Tardeo, "Rs. 71,710." I gave the title deeds to the Bank: but they do not know where they put them. The property comprises 64,000 square yards. The Bank has not sold it. They could not sell it without the title deeds.

My book contains an entry of a purchase of land near Mahim, for Rs. 26,191. I did not deliver that to the Bank of Bombay; it went to my trustees.

I am referred to the entry in my book of property at Parell: "Paid through Mr. Crawford on a joint "account with Premabhoy Rs. 54,970 for 27,485 "square yards." The Bank obtained possession of that land. Two or three of these properties have been entered together in the list under item No. 8—Foras lands measuring 126,000 square yards. Some of the properties stood in my name, and Premabhoy Hemabhoy had a share in them. Others stood in his name and I had an interest in them. I gave up whatever properties were standing in my name to the Bank of Bombay, and Premabhoy released his interest in them.

The house at Malabar Hill, which cost me Rs. 1,43,000, was sold for Rs. 60,000. The other property at Malabar Hill, for which my father is credited with Rs. 80,000 in my book, sold for Rs. 35,000.

The properties, altogether, have realized only Rs. 5,22,200. There was a very great depreciation of property between the time when these properties were purchased, in 1864 and 1865, and the time when they were sold by the Bank of Bombay. There has been a very great depreciation in the value of landed property in Bombay.

The jewels which were sent to England sold for Rs. 2,40,000. Some others were sold in Bombay for Rs. 10,000, and those sold in Calcutta realized Rs. 3,309, making a total of Rs. 2,53,309. The whole amount realized by the Bank for jewels and land together is Rs. 7,75,509.

I am referred to the loan account opened in the books of the Asiatic Bank in the name of Nusserwanjee Ruttonjee and Co. Mr. Morrison opened that account. Candass Narrondass was a partner in the firm of Nusserwanjee Ruttonjee and Co. I had a share of one-half in the interest of Candass Narrondass in the business. I think that the other partners knew that. I think Hormusjee Nowrojee knew it. Mr. Morrison opened that account with my consent. I see that debits only are entered in the account, there are no credit entries in it. The debits relate to the purchase of Back Bay shares. The shares were purchased in the bazaar from different parties. I did not furnish the shares. Mr. Morrison purchased them and debited the cost of them to this account; Mr. Morrison and Mr. Tracey were the persons really interested in that account, no one else that I remember.

President.—Then with what view did you point out that account to Nowrojee Furdoonjee, the Interpreter, if those two persons only were interested in the account? Be careful as to what you say; did you not tell Nowrojee Furdoonjee that Mr. Blair had an interest in the account?

Witness.—Yes; I said that he had an interest with Mr. Morrison.

Question.—I ask you whether Mr. Blair had an interest in that account?

Answer.—Yes, he had an interest with Mr. Morrison. Mr. Morrison and Blair were speculating together in Back Bay shares. I say that from my own knowledge of it. I pointed out that Morrison and Blair were partners in the other account relating to fifty Back Bay shares. The loan account in the name of Nusserwanjee Ruttonjee and Co. was commenced in August 1865. Mr. Blair was interested in it though he had left the country then. He left Bombay a few days after the other account relating to the fifty Back Bay shares was commenced. At the time when the fifty shares were bought Blair was not in Bombay; but he was interested in them. The account was opened in the name of Nusserwanjee Ruttonjee and Co., because Mr. Morrison could not give his own name to the Bank. The account was never operated on upon the credit side, because shares were always going down every day. That account was afterwards transferred from the name of Nusserwanjee Ruttonjee and Co., to my brother's name.

About December 1865 or January 1866, Mr. Morrison asked me to get the acknowledgment of Nusserwanjee Ruttonjee and Co. to the account, and they refused to have anything to do with it. I heard the evidence given by Hormusjee Nowrojee, the partner in that firm: his evidence is correct. I got my brother to sign a promissory note to the Asiatic Bank for the amount due at the foot of the account. My brother Custoorchund is not in business; he is under my control, and dependent upon me. I sent him with Dossabhoy to the Asiatic Bank to settle the account.

When Mr. Lawrence, the Liquidator of the Asiatic Bank, came here, he wrote to my brother for payment of the note; my brother was going to Mr. Lawrence to tell him that he had no interest at all in the account, and that it belonged to Morrison and Tracey, but I told him not to go. I went to Mr. Morrison, and Mr. Morrison himself told me to get my brother not to say anything about it. I told Mr. Lawrence that my brother had no money: he was satisfied that my brother had nothing to pay with. I deposited some securities with the Asiatic Bank. Mr. Morrison asked me to give some security, and I did so. Reads from the Loan Register of the Asiatic Bank the following list of securities—"Three hundred and "twenty-five shares in the Financial Association of "India and China, forty-eight shares of the Bombay "Press Company, seven shares of the Framjee "Cowasjee Spinning and Weaving Company, eight "shares of the Bombay Royal Spinning Company, "sixty-five shares of the Broach Cotton Mill Com-"pany, five hundred shares in the Carnatic Coffee "Company, a promissory note from Rustomjee "Jehangir to Premchund Roychund for Rs. 58,000, "seventy-five shares in the Viegas Patent Slip "Company, seven shares in the Iron Ship Company, "and five shares in the Union Ship Company." I deposited these securities only to oblige Mr. Morrison and my friends. I had no interest in the account. They asked me to give some security and I did so; they said it was to give the account some appearance, to show that the Bank had some security.

President.—Do you mean in order to make it seem a bonâ fide account?

Witness.—Yes. I have no further explanation to give. I just tell you what I remember, Sir. I have no letters or anything at all from them. I am referred to the following entry in pencil, which appears at page 32 of the Loan Register of the Asiatic Bank against the thirty-seven Bombay Reclamation Company's shares:—"31 name A. M., 6 name A. B. C." I believe that it is in Mr. Morrison's handwriting.

I turn to the account in the name of Dossabhoy Dhunjeebhoy, in the Cash Credit Ledger of the Asiatic Bank, commencing on the 4th April 1865. The persons interested in that account were Mr. Morrison, Mr. Tracey, Mr. Hannay, Mr. Blair, and myself, and also Mr. Scott, but he refused to take an interest in it. It relates to the purchase mentioned in my former evidence of fifty Back Bay shares for Rs. 12,59,000. On the 30th June 1865 Dossabhoy was a debtor to the Bank on that account, to the amount of seven lakhs and upwards. That balance was transferred from Dossabhoy's account to a new account which was opened in my name. That account increased to upwards of eleven lakhs by June 1866. On the 24th January 1867 the Back Bay shares were taken over by the Asiatic Bank, and the debt was reduced to about ten lakhs, which was eventually lost.

I am referred to the account of Dossabhoy Dhunjeebhoy, in the Current Account Ledger of the Asiatic Bank for November 1864. It relates to a purchase of one hundred and eighty Bank of Bombay shares. Dossabhoy is debited in that account with the sum of Rs. 4,05,900; that was the cost of the shares, and was paid to me. The persons interested in that account were Morrison, Tracey, and myself, I think. I do not remember that anybody else was. As far as I can remember there were only three, but Dossabhoy tells me Blair was also interested in it. I do not remember whether he was interested in it or not. Mr. Lawrence, the Liquidator of the Asiatic Bank, made a claim on Dossabhoy for payment of the amount due on the account. The matter was settled by the payment of Rs. 5,000 in cash, and the delivery of a Back Bay share. I furnished Dossabhoy with that share, and the Rs. 5,000 in cash. I was under trust at the time, but I was trading at the time and afterwards. The compromise was effected in January 1867. I became insolvent in September 1866. My Trustees were not acquainted with this transaction on my part.

President.—Your books do not appear to contain any charge for brokerage against Mr. Blair for buying or selling shares for him; did he pay you any brokerage?

Witness.—No; I never asked him for any, and he never paid me any. My usual charge for brokerage is one half per cent. upon share transactions. At that time I was doing a large business, and had not time to make out bills: persons sent the money to me, or put it down to the credit of my account. Mr. Blair never paid me any brokerage, neither did Mr. Robertson, but he only did a small business with me.

I am unable to give any further information about the item of Rs. 4,950 which was paid by Mr. Blair to me. It relates to some transactions between Mr. Blair and Mr. Barnes, who is now in England. He is Inspector of Branches of the Agra Bank. The other item of Rs. 2,929, paid by Mr. Blair to me in connexion with the sale of Back Bay shares to Jaiverilal Umiashunker, was paid for interest up to 1st July 1865; it was a time-bargain. Mr. Blair entered into one or two time-bargains. He was not in the habit of entering into time-bargains.

I stated the other day, when I was examined with regard to my position on the 26th of April 1866, that I only owed the Bank of Hindostan about Rs. 3,00,000. I am informed that it appears from the books of the Bank that I owed them Rs. 5,00,006 on the general account, and Rs. 1,06,783 on a loan account, making a total of Rs. 6,06,789; I may have owed the Bank of Hindostan that amount: there were redrafts which they have since debited me with. I mentioned what was in my books.

I am referred to my father's books. I turn to his account with Mr. Blair: it shows that many sums were advanced by my father, Roychund Deepchund, to Mr. Blair during the years 1919, 1920, and 1921 (1863 to 1865). It appears from the account with Mr. Blair for the year 1919 in my father's ledger, that Mr. Blair received on the 26th November 1863 from my father Rs. 4,000, and on the 8th of August 1864 a cheque on the Asiatic Bank for Rs. 20,000, and another small item of Rs. 19. At the end of the year a balance of Rs. 20,000 was carried over to the next account: that balance was due at the end of the year 1919 from Mr. Blair to my father. It appears that there were shares purchased by my father for Mr. Blair and sums paid for calls on shares in the year 1920, and that Mr. Blair was debited with sums amounting to Rs. 1,68,000: the sum of Rs. 1,15,500 was received on the other side, and the balance at the end of the year 1920 due from Mr. Blair to my father was Rs. 52,792.

The next account for the year 1921 shows that Roychund Deepchund advanced Mr. Blair for calls on shares, and in the purchase of shares, and in cash, a very large sum of money: the account was balanced on the 24th of April 1865, just before Mr. Blair left Bombay, by the payment by Mr. Blair to my father of Rs. 1,51,875, the amount due from him. I do not know whether that money was raised by Mr. Blair by the mortgage of his Bank of Bombay shares.

I am referred to the account of Mr. Robertson of the Bank of Bombay in my father's ledger, for the years 1920–21 (1864 to 1866). It appears from that account, that in the year 1920 my father advanced several sums to Mr. Robertson, amounting in the whole to Rs. 46,529, that my father received in the same year about Rs. 34,000, leaving a balance at the end of the year of Rs. 12,529 due from Mr. Robertson to my father, Roychund Deepchund. It also appears from that account that in the year 1921 my father, Roychund Deepchund, lent Mr. Robertson several further sums of money, that he received on the other side only Rs. 800, and that there was a balance due at the end of that year from Mr. Robertson to my father of Rs. 75,240. My father's books for the next year are not produced, but that account was finally squared by my father taking over from Mr. Robertson his shares in the Bank of Bombay.

I am next referred to Mr. Bullock's account in my father's ledger, for the years 1920 and 1921; it appears from that account that in the year 1920 Roychund Deepchund lent several sums of money for payment for shares and for calls on shares to Mr. Bullock, and a balance appears at the end of the year against him of Rs. 18,600. It appears that my father continued to make advances to Mr. Bullock in 1921, and that the account was made up with interest and paid by a cheque for Rs. 19,970 upon the Kalbadevi Branch of the Bank of Bombay. It also appears from my father's book that after that account was finally settled my father paid Mr. Bullock another sum of Rs. 2,000, and that part of that sum is still due from Mr. Bullock to my father.

I do not know that my father had any other account with any other officer of the Bank of Bombay. I am referred to his book. I see that he had an account with Mr. Smith of the Bank of Bombay. There appears to have been due by him to my father a sum of Rs. 2,202–0–8. I think that he was an Accountant in the Bank, and afterwards went to the Financial Association of India and China. I do not know of any other account between my father and any officer of the Bank of Bombay.

My books do not contain any account of shares bought and sold by me for Mr. Robertson; I referred to his account with my father. I am referred to an account in the Ledger of the Asiatic Bank. It is an account with Mr. Robertson. It is headed "Special, "against his liability on A. B. C. shares." (Account marked T 4.)

President.—The period during which most of the loans were made by the Bank of Bombay, which have ended disastrously, was from the 1st of July 1864 to the 1st of May 1865, about ten months; during the greater part of that time you were a Director of the Bank, and when you were not a Director you were, as a broker, constantly in the Bank, doing business with Mr. Blair?

Witness.—Yes.

President.—I suppose there is no man in Bombay that we could select better qualified to tell us how the business of the Bank was transacted, is there?

Witness.—There are plenty of other men in Bombay who were Directors of the Bank. I know something of the way in which the business was conducted. During the time when Mr. Blair was Secretary, Mr. Birch was Chairman. I think he attended at the Bank every day, or at all events almost every day, just to talk to Mr. Blair and consult about the business of the Bank. He used to come every morning from his house. Sometimes he would stay for one or two hours. Mr. Blair attended regularly at the Bank. I had many opportunities of observing how he conducted the business of the Bank. He was doing business very freely, with a free hand.

President.—Whom did he consult in carrying on the business?

Witness.—I think that he most probably consulted Mr. Birch.

President.—Do you not know? We do not want probabilities. We do not know that we could select anybody in Bombay who could give us more correct information than you about the matter.

Answer.—He always consulted Mr. Birch. When I used to go to Mr. Blair I used to find him talking to Mr. Birch, and I have asked him sometimes when large loans were granted if he had consulted any Directors, and he said that he had had full authority and that he had consulted some of them.

President.—Did he tell you whom he consulted?

Witness.—He said that he had consulted Mr. Birch; he always told Mr. Birch what business he had done. He used to consult me sometimes upon some points; he used to ask me about the credit of parties, whether they were good or bad, even if I was not a Director. He chiefly consulted me with respect to Native constituents. Mr. Birch was not well acquainted with the credit of parties generally; he knew some of them. Mr. Blair left Bombay, I think, by the first steamer for England in May 1865. Mr. Hannay was Chairman during part of Mr. Robertson's time, and afterwards Mr. Lidderdale. Mr. Robertson used to consult Mr. Hannay about everything; they were constantly writing to each other. Mr. Hannay attended regularly at the Bank, he used to attend almost every day; the Bank was very near his office. Neither Mr. Birch nor Mr. Hannay ever consulted me directly as to the conduct of the business of the Bank, but they asked me about the credit of parties sometimes. I am referred to Mr. Tracey's letter* to me of the 3rd December last, in which he says: "I "hope by this time you have arranged something with "Best for me." It refers to Mr. Tracey's account with the Asiatic Bank, and it is settled. He wrote to Best, I think, and asked him to settle his account. It had nothing to do with the Bank of Bombay. I know Merwanjee Nusserwanjee Bhownuggur. The letter now shown to me is in my handwriting (marked A 124). (The President quotes from the letter as follows:—"Merwanjee is worth fifteen lakhs, but "he is a large speculator, and may lose the whole in "three days; still give him one lakh and risk it. "Yours truly, P. R.") That was my advice. I thought the Bank might lend him one lakh.

President.—The Bank seems to have acted upon this advice; this note was written about the 23rd December 1864, and on the 21st January 1865 the Bank lent him Rs. 1,50,000, and has lost of that Rs. 1,25,000.

Witness.—The Bank ought to have considered what I wrote.

I have looked into my books to ascertain the prices of shares. The shares of the Asiatic Bank were at one hundred and fifty-one per cent. premium when the second issue came out. I cannot find any entry about the shares of the Mazagon Reclamation Company. I said before that they were at a premium, but that I could not give the exact price. I remember that Mr. Robertson's share was sold at Rs. 8,750 premium. The shares of the Frere Land Reclamation Company were at Rs. 6,200 premium before the time of allotment. The Bombay Shipping Company's shares at the time of the allotment in 1863 were at Rs. 1,500 premium. The shares of the Port Canning Company were at Rs. 7,000 premium on the 1st of February 1865. The shares of the United Victoria and Colaba Company were at Rs. 8,500 premium on the 28th of January 1865, the date of the allotment. The new shares of the Elphinstone Land and Press Company were all sold by auction; there was no allotment made of them.

I remember the loan to Cursetjee Furdoonjee of Rs. 6,25,000 from the Bank of Bombay to pay for ten Back Bay shares. The shares only cost Rs. 5,25,000, although the Bank advanced him Rs. 6,25,000. He purchased altogether fifty Back Bay shares; he borrowed ten lakhs from the Royal Bank, ten lakhs from the Commercial Bank, and Rs. 6,25,000 from the Bank of Bombay: that was the total cost of the fifty shares. Mr. Blair lent one lakh more than the value of the shares on the day on which they reached their highest price in the market, but he thought that Cursetjee Furdoonjee was a very rich man.

Mr. Melvill.—You know, when Mr. Blair wrote to you for the share certificates, he asked you to deposit them for "safe custody." What did he mean? Was it to prevent your selling them?

Witness.—It was for safety to the Bank.

President.—Was it not merely a subterfuge of the Secretary, a pretence that the Bank was not lending upon shares?

Witness.—Yes, Sir, that is it.

Mr. W. Steel.

WILLIAM STEEL, recalled.

I produce a promissory note by Custoorchund Roychund to the Asiatic Banking Corporation, dated the 28th May 1866, for Rs. 4,97,150, payable on demand, with interest at twelve per cent. from 31st August 1865, collaterally secured by the deposit of shares (Note marked T 5, memorandum attached marked T 6). I believe that the signature to the note is in Custoorchund's handwriting: it is written in a Native character. I did not see him sign it.

I produce a Ledger of the Asiatic Bank containing an account, headed "Bad and Doubtful Debts Account:" the balance of Rs. 2,85,743–5–1 due on the promissory note after realization of the securities has been transferred to this account (marked T 7).

Mr. R. H. Baker.

Mr. R. H. BAKER, recalled.

I was Deputy Manager of the Asiatic Bank. I know an account in the books of that Bank in the name of Nusserwanjee Ruttonjee and Co., distinct from their general current account. I remember receiving a memorandum from Mr. Morrison, and being told by him that he had arranged to give them five lakhs upon fifty Back Bay shares through Premchund Roychund; and that bill which Mr. Steel handed in just now has the memorandum attached to it, signed with Mr. Morrison's initials (memorandum marked T 6). I was told that the shares would be sent in by Premchund, and that we (the Asiatic Bank) were to pay for them, and that any balance exceeding five lakhs would be refunded by Nusserwanjee Ruttonjee and Co., or that if they did not send in the fifty shares they would make up the difference in cash. The transaction was so far completed, that we received thirty-seven shares, with a note requesting that five lakhs should be paid to the broker; I told Mr. Morrison that five lakhs had been paid, but only thirty-seven shares received, and we sent the broker a form of loan bond, requesting him to get it signed by Nusserwanjee Ruttonjee and Co., and return it to us, with thirteen shares to make up the fifty, but that was not done; and I remember seeing Hormusjee Nowrojee Saklatwalla and asking him about it. He did not acknowledge that the account belonged to his firm. He told me to see Premchund; he did not admit the account. That excited my suspicions about the account. The only inquiry I made about it was of Mr. Morrison; he told me that he would see Premchund and get it arranged. He did not disclose anything about the account to me. I believed that Premchund had an interest in the account, and I thought that there must be some dispute between Nusserwanjee Ruttonjee and Co. and him. The account was eventually put into Custoorchund Roychund's name, and a number of other securities deposited in lieu of the thirteen Back Bay shares. I am aware that Dossabhoy Dhunjeebhoy had two accounts with the Asiatic Bank. I was not aware that these were not his own accouuts. One of the accounts I believed was not altogether his own, at any rate the account upon the security of the Bank of Bombay shares. My knowledge was derived from a letter from him enclosing a dividend warrant upon the shares standing in his name. He obtained the warrant from the Bank of Bombay, and sent it to the Asiatic Bank with a letter, saying that it was to be placed to the account standing in his name belonging to Mr. Tracey and Mr. Morrison.

President.—Then there was the other account of fifty Back Bay shares: did you think that was his own account?

Witness.—The one in Dossabhoy's name?

President.—Yes; and which was afterwards transferred on the 30th June 1865 to Premchund Roychund.

* Vide supra, page 86.

31 Aug. 1868.

Mr. R. H. Baker.

Witness.—I do not think that it was his own.

President.—You never did think so, did you?

Witness.—No.

President.—Then you must have been aware that there were accounts opened in the Asiatic Bank in the names of certain persons, and that the names of all the parties interested were not disclosed?

Answer.—Yes.

President.—Had you any reason to believe that Mr. Blair was interested in any of those accounts?

Witness.—No, no reason at all; that account of Nusserwanjee Ruttonjee and Co.'s was not opened till four months after Mr. Blair went home. I had no reason to suppose that Mr. Morrison was interested in that account. I had no reason to suppose that Mr. Blair speculated in the name of Mr. Morrison.

President.—How was it that debits were entered in that account of Nusserwanjee Ruttonjee and Co. without the knowledge of the partners in that firm?

Witness.—When the loan was granted the shares were more than ample security, and at the time I received the memorandum I did not see that there could be anything wrong, because in a very few days it must be brought to their notice, and if they did repudiate it, we had sufficient security for the amount we paid away. It was merely a temporary account; a bond was to be signed. It was opened on the authority of the Agent, who said that Premchund would send in the shares and would pay for them. I made the debit entries upon the verbal authority given me by Mr. Morrison, and there was that memorandum of his. The memorandum was not given long afterwards, when the account was transferred. It was given at the time when the account was opened.

President.—I think I saw a letter of yours in the "Times of India" in which you seemed to be quite indignant at the idea of any accounts being kept in this way in the Asiatic Bank?

Witness.—I did not go into the general question, but as far as Premchund's statement went it was incorrect. I did not go into general particulars, for it was not necessary; if I had done so I should have required to write a history of the Asiatic Bank.

President.—Was it a common practice in the Bank to open an account in the name of one person when it really belonged to another?

Witness.—It would be impossible for me to tell what transactions there were. I certainly do not deny that I knew there were such cases, and that Hormusjee Nowrojee objected in his particular case.

President.—But if you did not really know the parties interested in that account, was it not a bold step for you to take? The account was in the name of Nusserwanjee Ruttonjee and Co., and it is proved that Premchund had an interest in Candass Narrondass's share in that firm; you knew what strange transactions were going on; was it not therefore rather bold for you to make that statement?

Witness.—The statement I made was a fact, that neither Blair nor Morrison were in the habit of operating by debit slips.

President.—But Mr. Morrison gave you verbal instructions, telling you to put the debits to the name of a firm while the firm knew nothing of it?

Witness.—Premchund said that they were in the habit of operating by means of debit slips.

I am referred to an account of Mr. Robertson's in the Ledger of the Asiatic Bank. This account (marked T 4) is headed "Special, against his liability "on A. B. C. shares:" it relates to the time of the liquidation. It is an account relating to the compromise of his calls on Asiatic Bank shares. There is an amount received apparently by the Liquidators upon five Back Bay shares belonging, I suppose, to Robertson. They received Rs. 8,750, which has evidently been held over by the Bank on account of liabilities which Robertson had, for Asiatic Banking Corporation's shares. It does not refer to any speculations in Asiatic Bank shares; the calls had not actually been made, and he wanted to compromise, I suppose, before he went home. It has no reference to either Mr. Blair or Mr. Morrison.

Major Innes.—The language of your letter was very strong. You knew the whole of the transaction, but indignantly denied that any such transaction had taken place, or that there was an account of that nature.

President.—I have no doubt that your letter was verbally correct, but upon reading it the impression left upon our minds was, that you indignantly denied that any such transactions had taken place in the Asiatic Bank, and yet we have found three different accounts which did not belong to persons in whose names they stood?

Witness.—I did not deny that, but I denied that any account was operated upon by means of debit slips.

President.—Your letter was no doubt verbally correct, but it left the impression on our minds, that the whole system of fraudulent entries which it seems was pursued in the Asiatic Bank was entirely unfounded.

Witness.—The securities given were such as any Bank in Bombay would have advanced upon. They would have advanced one hundred per cent. premium upon Bank of Bombay shares.

President.—We have the distinct testimony of Premchund, as to one of the accounts, that he was asked to give the security, to give colour to the transaction.

Witness.—It may be so.

September 2nd, 1868.

2 Sept. 1868.

Mr. G. Norman.

GERARD NORMAN, SWORN.

I am in the Bombay Civil Service. I am Acting Collector of Bombay. I have been acting in that appointment with slight intervals since August 1865. I became a Government Director of the Bank of Bombay at the end of February 1866. I ceased to act when the Bank went into liquidation. I received no instructions upon my appointment, either verbal or written. During the time that I was a Government Director I never received any communication from Government in connexion with Bank matters, and I never wrote any letter to Government. Either Mr. Chapman or Mr. Lushington wrote all the letters which were written. I was never employed in a Bank before. I am aware that certain charges have been made against the Government Directors. I was not engaged in any speculations, and I was not in Bombay at the time of the speculations. Since my appointment I have held shares in the Railway Companies, and two shares in the Bank of Bombay, and that is all. I have not been under any obligation during that period to any Native of Bombay, pecuniary or otherwise.

I heard the evidence of Mr. Chapman as to the twenty-five lakhs loan to Premchund Roychund. I have no addition to make to that evidence. It is my recollection of what took place, with one slight exception, which is not, however, of importance. I did not stay to breakfast with Mr. Lidderdale: Mr. Chapman was mistaken when he said that, but we discussed the matter of the loan after the meeting broke up, and I then went away; with that exception I think Mr. Chapman's evidence is quite correct.

I concur with Mr. Chapman in thinking that the Commercial Directors were not always fully explicit with the Government Directors, as far as the business of the Bank went. I think it was only in one case, that of Premchund's overdraft. I mean the one Mr. Tracey guaranteed, that is the only occasion that I can call to mind in which we (the Government Directors) were not kept fully informed by our Commercial colleagues, and that only referred to one of the Directors. I think we always worked well together.

President.—You are referred to by almost everyone, as the person who can give us valuable information as to the value of the land given to the Bank as security; what are your means of knowledge on the subject?

Witness.—I am largely employed by the Government to purchase land in Bombay. During the last three years I must have spent fifty lakhs for Government, upon the purchase of land in Bombay. Land is required for railways and other public purposes, and we purchased a large quantity of land for the Back Bay Reclamation Company, but my chief means of information would be from the deeds which are brought to my office, under Regulation 19 of 1827. When a piece of land is sold in Bombay it is necessary that the vendor and purchaser should give notice at the Collector's office, in order that the Collector may know to whom to apply for the land rent due to Government; and it often happens that, instead of merely giving a written notice at the Collector's office, copies of deeds are sent, and notice of the transfer of land is given in that way. I think I know the value of most of the land in Bombay. My principal means of judging is knowing the rent derived from the land; my knowledge is more derived from that, and plans deposited in my office, than anything else. There were a great many parcels of land which Premchund offered in security for that loan; for instance there was land on the flats, which was broken up into many different parcels. There was Dhackjee Chawl, Locksley Hall, Byculla, the Byculla Stables, the large house on Malabar Hill in which Mr. McCulloch lives now, a small house on Malabar Hill, and there was the Coorla property, which I do not know much about, and that is all, I think. I have a copy of the list of the properties furnished by the Bank.

(The President reading from his list.) There was the Matherpacady property, the Coorla, Locksley Hall, Dhackjee Chawl, the bungalows at Malabar Hill, and the property on the flats. The Dhackjee Chawl was not mentioned at the meeting?

Witness.—I have a sort of idea that Dhackjee Chawl was mentioned at the meeting, but I cannot recollect.

President.—At any rate possession of it was afterwards given to the Bank. There was one-fifth share of the Coorla property, the houses, the Veterinary Livery Stables, seven large Chawls in the Native Town of Bombay, and the Foras Land, Byculla, 1,26,000 square yards; now which of these properties do you know personally?

Witness.—I do not know the Coorla property, but that consists of a share in a mill and the land adjoining, and, I believe, shares in a Spinning Company. I did know all the other properties, and I believe all the Directors knew them. Premchund valued Dhackjee Chawl at ten lakhs: that is what he gave for it I am told. He purchased the property first for five lakhs, sold it for ten lakhs, and repurchased it for ten lakhs. I think in his evidence the day before yesterday he stated that. He said that the two bungalows at Malabar Hill were worth three lakhs, and that was what he thought he could get for them. I have my valuation here. I cannot say that I made out the valuation at the time, but it is a valuation which I should wish to put in.

I think the large house at Malabar Hill was worth Rupees ninety thousand five hundred at that time. I have arrived at that by taking Rupees six hundred per month as the rent. I have made a deduction of one-eighth from the gross rental, and taken the value at fifteen years' purchase; that house, I believe, was at that time occupied by Premchund, but before that time, if I am not very much mistaken, the last tenant was paying Rupees one thousand per month. The present rent is Rupees five hundred per month. Five hundred a month I know has been paid for it ever since 1866; in fact, I believe Rupees twelve hundred was asked for it. I know it was sold for Rs. 60,000. Rs. 94,500 is my valuation. The small house purchased by Graham & Co. I have put down at Rupees three hundred and fifty per month, and I believe at that time it was nearly Rupees four hundred a month, and I make the value of that Rupees fifty-five thousand one hundred and twenty-five. These are calculations which I have worked out since. I cannot say that I worked them out in this way at the time that the loan was made to Premchund. I did not make any calculations at all upon paper then. What I have got down here as a valuation is a very fair one. I think Premchund's valuation was, as far as I remember, twenty-three lakhs. That is what he said it was worth, but I did not think it was worth more than about fourteen lakhs, and I did not at the time make any calculations upon paper.

I did not make any estimate of the two small houses at Mazagon. They realised Rs. 17,530. I know all the properties except the Coorla property. I estimated that at one-half of what he said it was worth: he valued it at four lakhs, and I put it down at two lakhs, I believe; but I have kept no notes: that sold for Rupees seventy-five thousand, but I believe there are some peculiar circumstances connected with that property; it is not only a large property, but a share in a mill as well; I do not, however, know much about that.

I put down the bungalow with the large compound at Byculla, known as Locksley Hall, as worth Rupees sixty-three thousand, reckoning the rent at Rupees four hundred a month. They were asking Rupees one thousand then. It realised Rs. 46,000; it was sold very cheap. When I came to Bombay in 1865 I wanted a house near the Club at Byculla, and I tried to get a small house there; there was a little house which they asked Rupees two hundred and fifty rent for, but I did not take it, and it was taken the next day by some other person: therefore I do not think that a high valuation at all. The houses, chawl, and compound, with the Veterinary and Livery Stables, were bringing in Rs. 1,000 a month at the time we took it, and I have put that down at Rupees one lakh fifty-seven thousand five hundred. It fetched Rs. 45,000.

I estimated the large chawl in the Native Town as worth Rupees one hundred per yard, and it contains five thousand seven hundred and fifty square yards. I may mention that last year the Municipal Commissioner sold a piece of land within two hundred yards of this, to the Honourable Munguldass Nathoobhoy, for Rupees seventy-five per square yard, and the sale was not at all approved of by many of the Native Justices in Bombay. There was a great deal of writing about it in the newspapers, and at a meeting of the Justices it was said that it was worth Rupees one hundred per yard, and that there were people in Bombay willing to give that for it. Dhackjee Chawl was purchased for Rupees thirty per yard, and upon it a cloth and goods market was erected, which was the very purpose for which this land was sold; at the time we took it over, Rupees one hundred per square yard was a very moderate estimate for that land, and I think any professional valuer in Bombay will say the same.

The Foras land contains 1,26,000 square yards, and I thought one Rupee per square yard was a fair valuation for it; that land was sold for about Rs. 43,470; but 40,000 square yards have since been resold for Rs 1–2–0 per yard. In 1864–65 the land on the flats was selling at from one Rupee to Rupees three per yard. Fourteen lakhs, I think, was the rough calculation. I estimate that the whole was worth Rs. 12,71,125, taking the Coorla property at two lakhs, but about which I do not pretend to know much.

The great depreciation in the value of land is accounted for by over-speculation, I think; there were two classes of purchasers of land in Bombay in 1865: there was one class who purchased land simply as a speculation, in the same way as shares, in the hope that the value would go up; and there was another class who purchased land without any reference to its intrinsic value, but gave a fancy price for it, if they saw a piece that they thought a good site for a bungalow; in fact, they bought land just as they would buy expensive horses and carriages. There is a piece of land next to the Victoria Museum which belonged to Cursetjee Furdoonjee I believe: I do not know exactly what he gave for it, but I believe Rs. 12 or Rs. 14 per square yard, and he built a large house upon it.

President.—But did not the value rise just as suddenly as it went down? My recollection is that you could get a large house on Malabar Hill in the year 1853 for Rs. 175 per month?

Answer.—They will never be at that again.

President.—But it is evident that land must have run up very suddenly?

Answer.—The rent depends so much upon the value of labour; you cannot build a house in Bombay now.

President.—But was it wise or prudent to expect that the prices would continue that were in existence at that time?

Answer.—Well, it has turned out that we were mistaken; that is all I can say. In 1866 the eyes of most people had been opened to the fact that there had been a great deal of over-speculation, and that the prices of everything had been run up in consequence, and it could have been foreseen that these prices were not likely to be maintained, but I do not know so much with respect to land. There was very little land in the market in 1866; everybody was holding it. I have looked through my records to try to find out, and I find that there were very few sales in 1866. The price certainly fell when all the estates and Banks went into liquidation, and now it is, I think, recovering again.

President.—The summary of your evidence is that you think Rs. 12,71,000 a very fair value at that time; what would be the value of the property now?

Answer.—I am not prepared to say at once.

President.—It was sold for Rs. 5,22,000.

Answer.—That is very far below its value, and I am sure every professional valuer in Bombay would say the same, and that it was sold at a price much below its value is shown by the property which has been since sold having realized higher prices.

President.—Yes, in one instance, the Dhackjee Chawl.

Answer.—Yes.

President.—You have heard the evidence of Mr. Brown as to the securities deposited by the Asiatic Bank and with the Bank of Bombay for that large overdraft. Mr. Brown promised us a full explanation of the circumstances attending the withdrawal of certain securities, and an explanation why the securities ultimately realised were not those which were apparently deposited; but we have not yet been furnished with that explanation. We have a list of the securities realised presented to us, and also an account, and we wish to ask you a few questions upon that subject. Now we will begin with the Board minutes. The first Board minute is dated the 14th of May 1866: you do not appear to have been present that day, but you were at some of the other meetings and must have heard of the transaction. [The President here read the minute as follows:—"Read letter from Mr. "Morrison, Agent of the Asiatic Bank, requesting a "loan of fifteen lakhs for that Corporation. Read "also a list of securities he is prepared to deposit. "Resolved that the credit be granted upon his giving "up all the securities stated in the list, and a written "guarantee to deposit, immediately on receipt, the "bills and Government paper now on the way from "Calcutta and China."]

Witness.—I do not remember what the securities were, or where the list itself is, unless it is at the Bank.

President.—I have a copy, but I do not know whether it is a correct list or not.

Answer.—I am afraid that I cannot swear to it. I cannot call to mind having seen it. No written guarantee was given by the Asiatic Bank on that occasion that I can recollect. I do not know, and cannot say, whether the written guarantee was given or not. Cassinath will be able to speak to that, I think, and the officials of the Bank perhaps; I cannot. I do not remember any order being given for a written agreement to be drawn up at once. I know securities were subsequently deposited, but I do not know what they were. I do not recollect anything as to the disappearance of the original securities at first given, and I cannot give you any information upon that point. I do not know, and cannot remember, what bills there were, or what Government paper.

President.—The 25th of May 1866 is the date of the next Board minute.

Answer.—I am afraid that I cannot tell you anything about that, except what you will ascertain from the officials of the Bank.

[The President here read from the minute as follows: "Read letter from Agent of the Asiatic Bank "requesting the credit of fifteen lakhs already granted "extended to twenty lakhs, and offering as additional "security a lien on ten lakhs of Rupees, advised by "telegram from London, as having been sent by the "mail leaving on 18th May."]

President.—Do you remember seeing that telegram?

Answer.—No. I do not know of my own knowledge whether Mr. Morrison was asked to produce it or not.

President.—Do you know of your own knowledge whether the Asiatic Bank received that sum of ten lakhs?

Answer.—It did not, I think.

President.—I believe it did; at least Mr. Lidderdale says so in his evidence. He says that they received the remittance of that item of ten lakhs. The money was assigned to the Bank of Bombay. If you did not receive it, can you state why you did not?

Answer.—No, I cannot state why we did not receive it.

President.—There was an actual advance made on the security of these ten lakhs which were coming to the Asiatic Bank; why were they not paid over to the Bank of Bombay?

Answer.—I cannot say.

President.—Then the ten lakhs were most probably retained by the Asiatic Bank?

Answer.—I do not know whether the Asiatic Bank received the money or not.

President.—But who can give us any explanation of it? What a different position you would have been in had you secured the ten lakhs: there ought to be an explanation how these ten lakhs escaped the Bank of Bombay.

Answer.—I am afraid I cannot afford you any explanation. I cannot say I remember any inquiries being made subsequently as to these ten lakhs coming from London, though I think I remember a discussion about it. I cannot call to mind any particular discussion about it. I do not think Mr. Lidderdale knows; I have talked with him about it, and I do not know that he will be able to afford you any explanation about it. Mr. Robertson will be able to tell you.

[The President here read from the Minute Book as follows:—"Resolved that the credit (to the Asiatic "Bank) be increased to twenty lakhs upon the terms "mentioned in the letter above quoted, provided that "the Bank's Solicitors consider the lien good."]

President.—Now there is no doubt whatever but that the terms of the agreement which assigned that property to you were never carried out?

Witness.—I am sorry that I cannot afford you any information.

President.—I must in justice to you state that you were not present at the meeting; this was a special meeting at which Mr. Lushington, Mr. Brown, and Mr. Tracey were present.

2 Sept. 1868.
Mr. G. Norman.

Witness.—I do not remember it.

President.—We will go to the next transaction of the 12th of June 1866. The minute in this book says:—"Read letter from the Agent of the Asiatic "Bank stating that his Calcutta Agent was un- "expectedly drawn upon, at short sight from China, "and requesting that a credit of four lakhs might be "opened for him, with Bank of Bengal, by telegram "as formerly. Resolved that the credit be opened "on condition that, besides the securities at present "deposited with the Bank, the Agent here will give "a lien on all remittances which may be received "from England, China, and other Branches of the "Bank."

President.—Do you recollect that transaction?

Witness.—Yes, I think I recollect that there was a long letter from Mr. Morrison, if I remember rightly. I do not remember what were the remittances to be received from India and China without referring to the letter. I think there was a list at the end of the letter.

President.—You see the Board minute does not say besides the securities given by former letters, but "besides the securities already deposited:" and the question is how much security had already been withdrawn; do you happen to know anything about that?

Witness.—I am afraid I do not know anything about the withdrawal of these securities. I think there was a letter.

President.—Yes, evidently there was another letter; the minute says: "Read letter from the Agent of the "Asiatic Bank;" we cannot find that letter; you are not able to give us any information regarding it, or what were the securities then deposited with the Bank?

Witness.—I am afraid I cannot tell you anything more than can be found by referring to the books of the Bank of Bombay.

President.—At the next meeting of the 3rd of July, the minute states: "Reported that the Weekly Com- "mittee had authorised the Secretary to telegraph to "the Bank of Bengal to advance the Asiatic Bank "three lakhs of Rupees if necessary. (This amount "will be paid back on the arrival of the China Mail "at Calcutta; as the Agent gets five and a half lakhs "of Rupees by it.)" Now what authority was there for that last statement?

Witness.—A telegram, I think.

President.—Who informed the Board that on the arrival of the China Mail at Calcutta the Agent would get five and a half lakhs? What evidence had you of that?

Answer.—I cannot say. I did not see the telegram.

President.—It is only fair to tell you that you were not present at that meeting; but you must have inquired into these matters?

Answer.—I did not see the telegram, and cannot say on whose information it was; probably Mr. Morrison himself will be able to tell you, but I do not know of my own knowledge.

President.—I want you to explain the most singular thing I have met with in this matter; I do not find a single entry in the Register of Securities of any securities being deposited until the 14th of July, the day after the next meeting. Notwithstanding all these communications about the deposit of securities, I do not find a single entry in the book. Do you know why these securities were not entered?

Witness.—No, I cannot explain it in any way.

President.—Was it not a most irregular proceeding if there were any securities deposited, that they should not have been entered in the books?

Witness.—It is apparently so, without any explanation it seems so.

President.—Mr. Robertson was the Secretary of the Bank at that time?

Answer.—Yes, I believe so.

President.—We will now turn to the minutes of the meeting of the 13th July 1866; you were present at that meeting. The minute states: "Submitted "application from the Asiatic Bank for an extension "till 1st September next of the credit of twenty lakhs "lately granted, and that the dividend of nearly three "lakhs due to the Bank from Byramjee Hormusjee "Cama's estate be not drawn until a sum of five "lakhs expected from China by the Trustees be "received." Do you know what is meant by this, "that the dividend of nearly three lakhs due to the "Bank from Byramjee Hormusjee Cama's estate be "not drawn?"

Witness.—Mr. Brown explained that better than I can. I cannot explain it better, but I understand the meaning to be this—that the Asiatic Bank were the Trustees of Byramjee Hormusjee Cama's estate, that there was a very large dividend due to us from it, and that they did not wish it to be drawn out until the large sum expected from China (five lakhs) was received, and that in addition to extending the loan, the Bank of Bombay also undertook not to draw out the dividend to which they were entitled.

President.—The minute proceeds to set out the securities offered. We will take them seriatim:— "Draft on Chartered Bank, due 16th July, one lakh." Was that security ever realised by the Bank of Bombay?

Witness.—It would appear from the books.

President.—This is not entered in the Securities Book.

Witness.—I cannot say anything about it, except from what I learn at the Bank, and from what the officials inform me. I have no personal knowledge of the matter. All the details would be managed by the officers of the Bank.

President.—The next item is "Macindoe, Rogers, "and Co.'s promissory note secured by property, eight "lakhs." The promissory note was realised by the Bank, was it not? and the Bank has received on that account Rs. 63,852?

Answer.—That is, no doubt, the amount.

President.—The next on the list is the "Bombay "Coast and River Steam Navigation Company's "promissory note, three lakhs." In that case the whole sum was realised with interest. The next is the "lien on funds now on the way from Calcutta, "two lakhs." Then, "lien on Java Guilders at "Calcutta, to be remitted to Bombay, three lakhs." Have you any explanation to give as to these two items, because, as far as I can see, the money never was realised by the Bank?

Witness.—I can give no explanation.

President.—Can you point out particular sums in the account which include these particular items?

Witness.—I could only do so by asking the officials of the Bank. I have no personal knowledge myself.

President.—"M. and M. Heerjee and Co.'s promissory note to Premchund Roychund, Rs. 2,56,000," realised Rs. 208. The other securities consisted of 102½ Apollo Press Company's shares, on which Rs. 2,200 were paid up, valued at Rs. 2,25,000; eighty-four Iron Ship Company's shares, on which Rs. 3,000 were paid up, and valued at Rs. 1,68,000. I do not know whether the eighty-four Iron Ship Company's shares, and whether the bill for Rs. 50,000 on Byramjee Cama and Co., due on the 28th July were ever realised by the Bank?

Witness.—I can give you no explanation of my own knowledge. I do not know whether the credit entry of the 29th July of Rs. 40,000, represents a sum paid in respect of that bill.

President.—But of the nine properties mentioned in this minute, only four, as far as I can see, were ever realised by the Bank of Bombay. When the Bank insisted upon the additional terms, it was resolved by the Board: "That the credit of twenty "lakhs be continued till 1st September, and that the "three lakhs due to the Bank from Byramjee "Hormusjee Cama's estate, be not drawn until the "arrival of the five lakhs expected by the Trustees "from China, on the following conditions: that the "agent here give the Bank a lien on all remittances "from Head Office and Branches, and that the "Trustees of Byramjee Hormusjee Cama give the "Bank a lien on their expected remittance from "China; and that any further securities which the "Trustees may hand the Asiatic Bank, are to be "handed to the Bank of Bombay." Was any instrument or agreement in writing ever given to the Bank of Bombay, securing the remittances from the Head Office or the Branches?

Witness.—I do not remember ever seeing any such instrument or deed in writing.

President.—Did the Trustees of Byramjee Hormusjee Cama ever give the Bank of Bombay any instrument or deed in writing with respect to the five lakhs coming from China?

Witness.—I never saw any such instrument or deed.

President.—But money continued to be advanced by the Bank of Bombay, for there appears to have been an account running on all the time?

Answer.—Yes, I believe so.

President.—No security appears to have been taken at all till the very day of the meeting on the 13th July, when for the first time security was deposited. Have you any knowledge of what really took place?

Witness.—I have no knowledge of what took place beyond what appears on the minutes. I thought of course that the Secretary would carry out the orders on the minutes, and that if he had any difficulty, he would report the matter to us.

President.—We will now turn to the minutes of the 23rd August 1866. As far as I can see, the Bank undertook to let the Asiatic Bank overdraw its account upon certain terms, which terms were never insisted upon.

Witness.—We took a great deal of trouble about that Asiatic Bank loan, I know.

President.—At a special meeting held at the Bank of Bombay, at which you were not present, Messrs. Lidderdale, Lushington, Brown, Stuart, and Macdonald were present. Mr. Macdonald must have become a Director about that time. Does he know anything about this transaction? I think he is in Bombay, is he not?

Witness.—He was in the room just now, but I think he has gone. I do not think he will know anything about it, or that any of the Directors will know more than what appears on the minutes, or than can be ascertained from the books.

President.—I think it is one of the most remarkable transactions that has been disclosed in connexion with the Bank of Bombay.

Witness.—Mr. Brown is more likely to be able to give you information on the subject than any one else. I should think he will probably be back from Poona for the next mail.

President.—Quoting from the minutes of the 23d August: "The position of the advance to the "Asiatic Bank and the securities held against it were "taken into consideration, and the Agent's letter of "the 13th July requesting an extension of the credit "to the Bank till the 1st September. Amongst the "securities to be given to the Bank (of Bombay) "was a lien on five lakhs in Calcutta, and six lakhs "on their way to Calcutta from China. Of these "eleven lakhs only three lakhs have been paid to the "Bank of Bombay, and Mr. Morrison, the Agent, "was requested to attend the meeting (of the Bank "of Bombay Directors) to explain why the whole "amount liened to the Bank had not been paid in." Can you explain (Mr. Brown could not the other day) what was meant by the lien on five lakhs in Calcutta? Did it mean the lien on the two lakhs referred to by Mr. Morrison as "in course of remittance from "Calcutta," and the lien on "Java Guilders at "'Calcutta, and to be remitted here' three lakhs?" And what is meant by "six lakhs on their way to Calcutta from China?" Does that mean the five and a half lakhs which Byramjee Hormusjee Cama's Trustees expected from China?

Witness.—It seems to be so; I cannot say for certain.

President.—Now, of the eleven lakhs, only three have been paid to the Bank of Bombay. (Reading) "Mr. Morrison explained that he had been misled by "telegrams received from Calcutta in cipher, by the "words used denoting the amounts stated in his "letter of the 13th July, and that he had only lately "been informed of the mistake that had been made." How did Mr. Morrison verify that statement?

Witness.—I was not present at that meeting. I do not recollect seeing Morrison at any of our meetings, and I am not able to explain. I have no personal knowledge of the matter; I heard of it afterwards most likely.

President.—[Reads from minutes: "To save the "Bank of Bombay he offered to give additional security "to that already given; cash on Mail day the 23d, "two lakhs; in Calcutta, the proceeds of Government "paper and Bank of Bengal shares sent there for sale, "one and a half lakhs; stock in trade and good will "of the business of Rogers and Co., Chemists, &c., "three and a half lakhs; to be received from Shapoor-"jee Dhunjeebhoy and Jewanjee Manockjee, fully "secured by property, over two lakhs; claims on "Cursetjee Furdoonjee, eight lakhs, estimated divi-"dend four annas in the rupee, two lakhs; and "claim against Rustomjee and Sorabjee Jamsetjee "Jejeebhoy, two lakhs,—making a total of thirteen "lakhs."]

I find no entry of the payment of two lakhs upon the mail day, can you account for that? Was the money ever received by the Bank?

Witness.—I suppose not, if it is not to be found in the books.

President.—There is a sum of Rs. 1,85,347 credited to the Asiatic Bank's account upon the 23d August.

Witness.—I cannot say now, whether that represents the two lakhs. I do not know anything about it.

President.—But surely if Mr. Morrison failed in such a promise as that, to pay two lakhs, upon the next mail day, it must have come to your ears.

Witness.—No doubt. It would have been told us. It was the Secretary's duty to tell us. We are supposed to be informed of everything that happens by the Secretary; we are not supposed to make ourselves acquainted with all matters of detail. I do not know anything about the Bank of Bengal shares sent to Calcutta for sale. I am afraid I cannot state whether the proceeds were received by the Bank. The stock-in-trade and good-will of Messrs. Rogers and Co. may have been over-estimated at three and a half lakhs; it was the estimate of the Asiatic Bank, I think.

President.—The property was valued at three and a half lakhs, and the sum of Rs. 25,000 is all that has yet been realised from it. Mr. Morrison also deposited the bills of Shapoorjee Dhunjeebhoy and Jewajee Manockjee fully secured by property for over two lakhs, and that security was realised with interest. There was also the "claim upon Cursetjee Furdonjee "eight lakhs, estimated dividend four annas in the "rupee, two lakhs," part of that has been realised, a sum of Rs. 55,621. There was also the lien upon the twenty-five lakhs of uncalled-up capital. It may be a question how far the Asiatic Bank had power to charge that by way of security, but was there any assignment of it taken?

Witness.—If it cannot be found, I suppose not.

President.—[Reading from minutes] "The Com-"mittee expressed themselves satisfied with Mr. Mor-"rison's explanation and the additional securities "offered by him, and instructed the Secretary to "have them legally assigned to the Bank without "delay, but in as private a manner as possible, so as "not to prejudice the standing of the Asiatic Bank;" some of them were undoubtedly assigned.

Witness.—At that time our Solicitors were very much overworked. Mr. Kelly was very ill and had gone home, and only had one partner out here.

President.—On the 28th August 1866, two further securities were sent in, a promissory note, viz., of

2 Sept. 1868.
Mr. G. Norman.

Dady Nusserwanjee Dady and Jejeebhoy Jehangeer, and a promissory note of Homejee Cursetjee Dady and Nusserwanjee Cursetjee Cama, and they have realised Rs. 5,555. Of all irregular things this is, however, the most extraordinary, that we find security realised, which has never been sent in as far as we can see; it is a claim on Muggonlal Huttonsing for two lakhs, upon which the sum of Rs. 5,000 has been realised by the Bank. Do you know how that security came into the custody of the Bank?

Witness.—No, I do not. I think the Secretary had an order to get as much security as he possibly could, and this claim for two lakhs may have been handed over to him.

President.—Were you aware that the Bank of Bombay allowed its debtors to sell Bank of Bombay shares and to speculate in Bombay Reclamation Company's shares?

Witness.—I think I remember that Roychund Deepchund was allowed to sell some shares.

President.—We went into that case with Mr. Brown, but I find another case, that of Dossabhoy Dhunjeebhoy, Premchund Roychund's Manager. He appears to have been allowed to do the same thing.

Witness.—I do not remember that it came under the notice of the Directors. I knew that was done in Roychund Deepchund's case, and I agreed to it. I think we allowed him to sell the shares, because we thought he would probably get more for them than we should.

President.—No, that was not the reason. He wrote a letter to the Board which I will read to you.

President.—[Reads letter and Resolution thereon as follows: "I also beg to request that you will allow "me to sell my forty Bank of Bombay shares, and "invest the proceeds in the purchase of Bombay "Reclamation Company's shares in lieu of the forty "shares I have deposited, which will rise I expect to "Rs. 4,000, and the debt will then be paid in full, or "reduced to a very considerable extent. Under the "circumstances I hope my prayer will be acceded to." "Resolved that the same answer be granted, and that "he be allowed to sell the Bank of Bombay shares, "and that he be allowed to purchase Back Bay "shares."] It is quite clear that the Bank was a party to the transaction. Do you remember Dossabhoy Dhunjeebhoy being allowed to do the same thing with respect to twenty-five Bank of Bombay shares, and to invest the proceeds in eleven Bombay Reclamation Company's shares?

Witness.—I do not remember that, but I do recollect the first transaction perfectly well.

President.—It is not on the Board minutes; perhaps it was never brought to your attention?

Witness.—I remember the case of Roychund Deepchund, although I have not seen the minute.

President.—There was no loss upon either of these transactions, but you can hardly defend them as legitimate banking transactions?

Witness.—The shares in the Reclamation Company were as good as the shares in the Bank of Bombay.

Mr. Cassinath Babajee.

CASSINATH BABAJEE, recalled.

I had charge of the Securities Ledger in the Bank of Bombay. I remember securities being deposited at the time of the overdraft of the Asiatic Bank upon the 14th May 1866.

President.—Why were they not entered in the Securities Ledger?

Witness.—Some securities in the shape of bills upon different banks were given to the Chief Officer of the Securities Department, Mr. Critchett, who did not give me any instructions to enter them in the Ledger in the way such securities for advances were usually entered. I do not know what orders he had from Mr. Robertson.

President.—But were not all securities deposited with the Bank entered in that book?

Witness.—I had no instructions from my superior officer to enter these securities. I had no orders to enter them in the way securities taken for advances were usually entered. Mr. Critchett never told me that there was to be no entry of them. He never spoke to me about them. I cannot give any reason why these securities were not entered. I was only acting on the instructions given by my superior.

President.—But you have had some experience; when bills were deposited as security, in the ordinary course of business, were they entered in that book?

Witness.—As securities they should have been entered. The securities that were deposited by the Asiatic Bank on the 14th May 1866 were good securities; they were bills upon different Banks. Some of the bills were in the charge of Mr. Critchett, and some Mr. Robertson used to give to me, and I used to hand them to Mr. Critchett, my superior, to keep in his possession. I am not able to tell you anything as to the amount of these securities; there is no proper record of them, and I cannot recollect them. Mr. Critchett used to make out the list himself. I do not remember that any other securities were deposited at any other time by the Asiatic Bank, prior to the 14th July 1866. I only recollect the Bank bills being received. Upon a bill deposited by the Asiatic Bank falling due, the Agent or some Assistant of the Asiatic Bank used to come to the Bank of Bombay and take it for realisation; the bills were given by Mr. Critchett, through verbal instructions either from Mr. Robertson or Mr. Maclean, the Chief Accountant. The instructions to me were "give up the bill."

President.—Might it not have been that these bills were handed to the officer of the Asiatic Bank for the purpose of realisation, and that the proceeds of the bills were paid to the Bank of Bombay?

Witness.—That may have been the understanding between Mr. Robertson and the Agent of the Asiatic Bank. I do not know that there was such an understanding. I do not know anything beyond what I have explained to you, that they were given in charge of Critchett, and kept without any entries being made, and that they were given out upon the due date, upon instructions either from Mr. Robertson or Mr. Maclean. They were always given out at the due date. In the case of the City Bank I recollect that they were allowed some overdraft, and that they handed in certificates of shares in the Elphinstone Land and Press Company, and Back Bay Company. Those share certificates were kept in the same way, without being entered in this book. I am not able to give any further explanation about the bills deposited by the Asiatic Bank. I do not know anybody here who can. Mr. Critchett has gone home. I cannot state whether the proceeds of the bills really came to the Bank. It was not my duty to ascertain that.

Major Innes.—What is that book called (pointing to the "Securities Ledger")?

Witness.—This is the book in which all the securities taken by the Bank against advances are entered.

Major Innes.—Is it not the book in which the shares taken in security were entered?

Answer.—This shows all the shares.

Major Innes.—Does it show any securities except shares?

Answer.—There are some title deeds also entered in it. There is a book subsequent to this one in which title deeds were entered.

Major Innes.—Were bills ever entered in that book?

Answer.—No.

Major Innes.—Were such bills as you refer to ever entered in that book?

Answer.—No.

Major Innes.—Then why do you say these bills should have been entered?

Answer.—As securities they should have been entered. There were bills taken in the case of the Bank of Hindostan. They were kept in the same way. It is my opinion that all the securities taken by the Bank should have been entered in this Ledger. I do not know in what book bills taken as securities were entered. Mr. Critchett, who had charge of the department, will know; so will Mr. Robertson and Mr. Rodgie.

2 Sept. 1868.

Mr. Cassinath Babajee.

Major Innes.—But you distinctly say that bills taken as security were never entered in this book, and that therefore it was not a departure from the rules of the Bank that these bills were not entered in it?

Answer.—Yes.

CHARLES ANTHONY BEYTS, sworn.

Mr C. A. Beyts.

I am a Share Broker in Bombay. I commenced business first as an Exchange Broker on the 1st July 1864. I began to buy and sell Back Bay shares on the 15th September 1864. I do not know when the second allotment of Back Bay shares was made. The price of Frere Land and Reclamation Company's shares on the 8th December 1864, the day of their allotment, was about Rs. 8,500 premium per share. The shares of the Bank of Surat were allotted about December 1864, at which time they stood at about sixty per cent. premium on their nominal value. Rs. 250 was the nominal amount of the shares; Rs. 100 per share were paid up. The percentage is always reckoned upon the nominal value of the shares.

I cannot speak to the price of Asiatic Bank old shares upon the day of the allotment of the second issue, in March 1865. The price of the shares of the second issue when they were allotted was about one hundred and twenty-five per cent. The allotment of the Bombay Shipping Company's shares was made before I began business; they were allotted in 1863. The allotment of the Mazagon Reclamation Company's shares took place in October 1864, at which time they were at a premium of from Rs. 9,500 to Rs. 10,000 per share.

The United Victoria and Colaba Company's shares were allotted on the 28th January 1865. The shares of that Company were sold in the market long before the allotments were out, at a premium of Rs. 9,500 per share. They were at about the same premium at the date of the allotment. The Port Canning Company's shares on the 1st February 1865 were at a premium of Rs. 9,000 per share, and a few days after that they went up to Rs. 12,000. The Asiatic Trading Company's shares were not in the market; they were not transferable.

I cannot state anything about the Iron Shipping Company, or as to the date when the Bombay Coast and River Steam Navigation Company was started. The shares of the Bombay Gas Company were not in the market here. I know nothing about the Bombay Bonded Warehouse Company, or about the Western India Hotel Company. I never sold any of the shares of the Veterinary and Livery Stable Company. I cannot speak to the price of the Goa Coffee Company's shares. My transactions were confined to Land Companies' shares and Bank shares.

I can state the price of shares of the Commercial Bank, by referring to the "Times of India." I supplied the share lists published in that paper. All shares gradually rose in value after the panic of May 1865. I see, on looking at the share list for 1865 in the "Times of India," that Commercial Bank shares reached the following prices:—On the 1st September 1865, twenty-eight per cent. premium; on the 1st October 1865, thirty-three per cent. premium; on the 1st November, thirty-two per cent. premium; and on the 1st December, twenty-five per cent. premium. I turn back to the list of the 1st August 1865. There is no quotation on that date, but on the 7th August Commercial Bank shares were at five per cent. discount.

It would have been a prudent thing for persons holding securities at the end of September or the beginning of October 1865 to realise; things did not improve after that; they gradually got worse; all shares rose in price about the end of September or beginning of October 1865, and fell off afterwards.

I can answer for the share list of the "Times of India" as being correct. I furnished the lists, and can say that they are generally accurate; persons in Bombay are in the habit of referring to those lists for their guidance. I report from day to day from actual transactions with which I am acquainted, and from inquiries.

2nd September 1868.

2 Sept. 1869.

MERWANJEE RUTTONJEE, sworn.

Mr. Merwanjee Ruttonjee.

I am a Share Broker. I commenced business about 1862. I cannot state what the price of Back Bay shares was on the day of allotment, the 1st of July 1864. I have no entry of them in my books before the 20th July 1864. From memory, I should say that they were at about Rs. 10,000 premium. I do not remember whether they were quoted before the 1st July. I have no record of the price of the shares on the 2nd September 1864; the price of Frere Land Reclamation Company's shares on the 8th December 1864 was Rs. 8,000 premium per share. I have no record of any transaction in Surat Bank shares in December 1864. Upon the 17th March 1865 I sold Asiatic Bank shares at 136 per cent. premium. They must have been shares of the old issue. Upon the 21st March 1865 I sold 25 shares at 125½ per cent. premium. These must have been shares of the old issue also. I find that upon the 17th February 1865 the price of Surat Bank shares was 31¼ per cent. premium. I cannot state the price of the Bombay Shipping Company's shares at the time of allotment, as I have not brought my books for 1863. I have no entry of the price of Mazagon Land Reclamation Company's shares before the 16th November 1864, when the price was Rs. 6,750 premium per share. With regard to United Victoria and Colaba Reclamation Company's shares, I can only state that on the 2nd March 1865 they were at Rs. 3,900 premium each. I do not know what the price was at the time of allotment, the 28th January 1865. Upon the 21st February they were at Rs. 44,000 premium. The Port Canning Company's shares upon the 1st February 1865, the day of the allotment, were at Rs. 9,500 premium per share. The Iron Ship Company was established some time in 1864, but I cannot give the date with certainty. It was considered, when it was established, a very substantial Company. It has since gone into liquidation, but that was on account of the competition against which it had to contend. At the time of the allotment, the shares were at Rs. 2,000 or Rs. 3,000 premium each; I can speak from memory. I do not know when the Bombay Coast and River Steam Navigation Company was established. The Bombay Gas Company's shares were not allotted here; I have sold shares in it at Rs. 40 per share. It is a London concern. I do not think the allotment list of that Company could be obtained here. The Bombay Bonded Warehouse Company was started by Messrs. Brice and Company. It was considered a substantial undertaking at the time; the shares were at a premium of Rs. 2,000 each, but the Company is not in existence now. The allotments were made in 1864. The list of allotments might be obtained from Brice and Company. The Western India Hotel Company was established about the end of 1864. The allotment papers might, I should think, be obtained from Messrs. Nicol and Company. The Veterinary and Livery Stable Company was started under very good direction in November 1864; the allotment lists of the Company might be obtained, I think, from Messrs. Ritchie, Steuart, and Company. On the 11th of May 1864 I sold four shares in the Goa Coffee Company for Rs. 375. I do not know how much was paid up on the shares.

2 Sept. 1868.

Mr. Merwanjee Ruttonjee.

Mr. Melvill.—What were Port Canning Company's shares at in the beginning of October 1865?

2nd September 1868.

Mr. Heerjeebhoy Merwanjee Wadia.

HEERJEEBHOY MERWANJEE WADIA, sworn.

I was a member of the firm of Dossabhoy Merwanjee and Co. My firm obtaining a discount from the Bank of Bombay on the 24th of February 1865 of one lakh, and another on the 23rd of May 1865 for three lakhs, of which one lakh was afterwards repaid. We obtained another loan, on the 9th of June 1865, of one lakh, which was renewed on the 17th March 1866. We obtained all the loans in 1865. No security was given for the first loan. My brother Dossabhoy, the senior member of the firm, negotiated that loan on our behalf. I believe he generally used to write a note to the Secretary when we required a loan, and receive a reply as to whether the application was granted or not. The firm had been very good customers of the Bank of Bombay, and I do not think that there was any recommendation given on our behalf for the loan of one lakh. We obtained that loan for the general business of the firm, not in order to buy shares or to pay any particular debt. The other loan, of the 23rd of May 1865, for three lakhs, was obtained to enable us to pay Rs. 1,45,000, which was due to the Bank of Bombay, and the rest was used for the general purposes of the firm. Security of landed property was given on that occasion. The firm wrote to the Bank that they were in difficulties, and were indebted to them in the sum of Rs. 1,45,000, and had other pressing liabilities as well, and requested a loan of four lakhs. This application, I believe, was laid before the Directors, and we received a reply that the Bank would only give us three lakhs. Out of these three lakhs we paid off the preceding loan of one lakh. We had no loan then preceding that of the 23rd of May 1865; we had paid off the previous one.

The landed property which was given as security for the loan of three lakhs on the 23d of May was sold by the Bank. Security of landed property at Parell was given for the other loan of the 9th of June 1865 for one lakh. The loss of Rs. 2,10,685 was on account of the great depreciation of landed property in Bombay. The property was sold about three or four months after that; and landed property has very greatly depreciated. I think in some instances it has depreciated to a point below what it was at a year or two before 1864. Houses on Malabar Hill are letting now at a higher rent than in 1854–55, only on account of the locality being a healthy one; but there are bungalows in many parts of the island which do not fetch half as much, and which are not of half the value they were before. These loans were obtained on the understanding that they were to be renewed for twelve months; that was mentioned in the application to the Bank. The minute makes no mention of twelve months; it says—"The Bank's solicitor being satisfied with the security offered, and the former loan being paid up, the loan may be granted for three months, with renewal at the end of that time if urgently required." But it was mentioned in our application, and that was the understanding upon which the loan was obtained, because we could not have sold the property in so short a time to recoup the Bank. It may not have been the usual practice of the Bank to grant loans for twelve months, but it was done in this case for the purpose, I think, of supporting an old-established firm. We had no connection in business with Mr. Robertson or with any of the Directors.

2nd September 1868.

Mr. J. G. Tyndall.

JOSEPH G. TYNDALL, sworn.

I am a partner in the firm of Nicol and Co. I was one of the Auditors of the Bank of Bombay for the two half-years of 1865. I examined the accounts very carefully. I did not ascertain the value of the shares deposited as security with the Bank; that was not considered part of the duty of the Auditor. Attention was drawn to the fact of the Auditors not making a valuation of the shares, and I believe the matter was discussed afterwards by the Board meeting of the Directors, and the result was that an independent Committee was appointed, which valued the shares. I don't know in which half of the year 1865 it occurred; but attention was drawn to the matter at the time I was an Auditor. We said we were willing to value the securities, but it did not seem to be considered one of the Auditors' duties. There was no objection made. I think it was mentioned by us to the officials of the Bank, while we were going through the audit. There were several who attended us while we were going through our audit—Mr. Robertson, Mr. Rodgie, and others. The Chairman was in and out continually during the time the audit was going on—Mr. Hannay, and afterwards Mr. Lidderdale. They did not object. There was no objection made; it was given rather as a suggestion by us; and I believe that suggestion led to the appointment of the independent Committee afterwards. We did not ascertain the value of the promissory notes with respect to the responsibility of the persons giving them. We only said that such and such promissory notes were laid before us; and you will find it so stated in our report. It is not in the published statement, but you will find the past-due bills separated from bills discounted in the report sent to the Directors by us. We did not send one report to the Directors and another for circulation among the shareholders. It is the same statement, except that these items are separately stated. We did not ascertain the value of the shares deposited, or what was the value of the promissory notes; the Profit and Loss account was independent of that. There was only one item of loss written off during the time I was Auditor. On one occasion about four lakhs were carried to the Profit and Loss account from past-due bills. On the first occasion no list of past-due bills was presented to us, and I do not think anything was past-due, so far as my memory serves me. We merely certified to having had the different documents lodged as security with the Bank laid before us, and having seen that they were in order. That was in fact the only certificate we granted. With reference to the wording of our certificate of the 1st February 1866 with regard to the Government securities and share certificates held against advances, I may say that it was more in consequence of a judgment given some time previously with respect to some Back Bay shares which had not been transferred. There had been a good deal of talk, and much writing in the newspapers, in consequence of a judgment delivered by Mr. Anstey, and the result was that, when we came, at the end of the half-year, to examine the securities held by the Bank, we were more than usually particular to see that all the securities were properly transferred to an officer of the Bank.

President.—You also say, "We have also minutely "examined the Balance Sheet and Profit and Loss "account, and are satisfied that the statement of "affairs laid before us represents the true position of "the Bank." You assumed, in fact, that all the sums stated as lent upon certain securities were recoverable?

Answer.—Yes, certainly. We made no valuation of the securities held by the Bank. All the outstanding bills we saw the dates of, and in the case of those in which money had been received on account, the amounts so received had been marked on the back of the bills. We were aware that there were bills which had been repeatedly renewed.

President.—Are you aware of a charge that has been made against the Directors of the Bank, that they paid the dividend for the half-year ending 31st December 1865 out of capital?

Witness.—I have the Balance Sheet as published. I have not read that charge, but have merely heard it spoken of. The balance of profit for the first half of 1865 was Rs. 19,82,085. There was no dividend declared for that half-year. Of the Reserved Fund there was a balance of Rs. 7,53,084 from the previous year, and profit on sale of old premises of Rs. 3,03,899; total Rs. 10,56,983, making, together with the balance of Profit and Loss account, a total Reserve Fund of Rs. 30,39,068, which was carried forward to the second half-year of 1865. The total profit for the year 1865 was Rs. 30,67,967, and the balance of the Reserve Fund and profit at the end of the year was Rs. 41,24,950. The dividend declared at the end of 1865 was, I think, Rs. 8,26,000. Then there was written off at the same time to Profit and Loss account the sum of Rs. 4,83,000. This, added to the dividend, makes Rs. 13,19,000. Take this from the Rs. 41,24,950, and the balance will be Rs. 28,05,950 as the surplus of profit. According to the published statement it was about 32 lakhs. The difference may have been written off in January of the following year.

President.—It was written off in February. It was written off at the very meeting in which the manner in which you had discharged your duties was approved of. That is the way the account then stood. There was a balance of 28 lakhs of Reserve Fund, and besides that there was the capital. However clear it may be that that dividend was not paid out of capital, there is another very grave question still remaining, whether it was a wise or prudent thing to pay a dividend, considering the manner in which the capital was invested.

Witness.—I should say that it was quite prudent under the circumstances, taking the Directors' valuation of the previous August, and looking to the state of affairs in Bombay in May and June 1865. At that time the price of cotton in Liverpool was down to 11*d.* per lb., while the December following it was from 17½*d.* to 18*d.* per lb. That would have made the greatest possible difference in the valuation of the large estates that were then in liquidation. All that was taken into consideration at the time. As far as we could see in those days, I should say it was prudent, but we must not look at it as we should now, but with the light we had in those days. With regard to the mode in which our audit was conducted, our certificates, I think, speak for themselves. We acted very much upon precedent, and all we certified to we were very careful to see was perfectly correct. When I was first elected an Auditor of the Bank of Bombay I was associated with Mr. Ranken, who had occupied the post of Auditor on several previous occasions, and he showed me what had been the course hitherto pursued.

President.—In your report of the 14th July 1865, you say,—"The Local Bills were examined and found "correctly recorded. Those which were overdue "were not all submitted to us, as a few were in the "hands of the Solicitor to the Bank for recovery, "but they have been included in the statement under "the head of Past-due Bills, which sufficiently serves "to bring them into notice." Now I think that was an unfortunate expression on your part.

Witness.—That was a matter for the Officials of the Bank. When we sent the report, we expected that our statement would be laid before the shareholders.

President.—Then you go on to say, "many share "certificates of considerable value, instead of having "formed the basis of fresh loans were merely acquired "by the Bank as further collateral security for pre-"vious advances." Now how came you to make that statement? Did you go into the matter? We find that loans were advanced upon the mere promissory notes of parties, and that shares were taken afterwards as collateral security.

Witness.—Precisely so.

President.—Do you think that your certificate exactly conveyed that idea?

Witness.—The report was in the hands of the shareholders, and they were at liberty to make any inquiry about it at the Annual Meeting. I may mention that I was very much surprised that the amount of past-due bills was never asked for by any shareholder. You will find by the reports of the meeting that no shareholder asked any such question.

President.—No, because there was nothing to excite their alarm.

Answer.—All these statements were in the hands of the shareholders.

Major Innes.—Did you not say you thought the declaration of the dividend a prudent measure?

Answer.—Yes, I said I considered it quite justifiable.

Question.—From what source ought dividends to be paid?

Answer.—The dividends are paid out of the profits of the year.

Question.—Is it usual to trench on the Reserve Fund?

Answer.—No, but there are occasions on which it may be done.

Question.—If there were no profits would you pay a dividend out of the Reserve Fund?

Answer.—As in this case that is entirely a matter of opinion. But in this case it was out of the profits that the dividends were declared.

Major Innes.—No. The profits amounted to a fraction over 30 lakhs, and the losses of the year were set down at 30 lakhs, so the profits were absorbed in the losses, and the dividends were paid out of reserve and not out of the profits.

Witness.—The losses were not then known to be 30 lakhs.

Major Innes.—Yes, to the Directors at least. That is the sum stated in the Directors' letter reporting the dividend to Government.

Witness.—Still I think the declaration of a dividend quite justifiable under the circumstances.

Major Innes.—With respect to overdrafts on current deposits, under what head would you allow it to stand? Would you allow it to remain as lessening the deposits or as increasing the outstandings?

Answer.—As increasing the outstandings.

Major Innes.—Yes, but that has not been so shown in this case.

Answer.—Of course there are different ways of keeping books, but I should say put it to increasing the outstandings.

2 Sept. 1868.

Mr. C. E. Benn.

2nd September 1868.

C. E. Benn, sworn.

I am Manager of the London, Asiatic, and American Company. I was an Auditor of the Bank of Bombay for the half-year ending 1865, and subsequently to that time. I examined the accounts of the Bank as carefully as I could. I am aware of the charge that has been made that the dividend for the second half of 1865 was paid out of the capital of the Bank. I heard so just now. It is not true.

[Witness here gives similar evidence to that given by the last witness, as to the profits earned by the Bank in 1865.]

President.—Now, although there was such a large balance of profit at the end of 1865, namely, Rs. 28,05,000, and the dividend was really paid out of the profits, yet considering the manner in which the Bank's capital was invested at that time, do you think it was a prudent thing to declare a dividend?

Witness.—I think it was perfectly justifiable; I do not say prudent. I consider that I was in a position to judge. I certainly did not ascertain the value of the shares deposited with the Bank as security for the loans, but I read the report made, I think in August 1865, when things were at the worst; and the Directors then told the shareholders that the probable losses would amount to thirty lakhs; but between that date and the end of the year there was so much improvement in Bombay in the value of the different securities and the dividends to come from the various insolvent estates, that I considered that at the end of the year the probable loss would be diminished by three-quarters. That was certainly so, as far as I could judge, for I made no official valuation, but only a rough estimate for myself. I did not endeavour to make any estimate as to the value of the shares at the end of the year. I did not make any estimate of the value of the promissory notes. I should not have considered myself so well able to do so as the Directors themselves.

President.—Then you could scarcely form an opinion as to how the capital of the concern stood?

Witness.—Looking at the matter in that light, perhaps that is so. I did not make any inquiries as to the renewal of promissory notes. It may perhaps have struck me that they had been constantly renewed, and frequently for very long periods, but it was not any part of my business to make any remarks about it. As far as I could judge from precedents, I considered that it was an auditor's duty to make an examination of the accounts, and certify whether the securities lodged in the Bank were in proper order and agreed with the books in which they were recorded, and whether the cash balance was correct.

2 Sept. 1868.

Mr. Homejee Cursetjee Dady.

2nd September 1868.

Homejee Cursetjee Dady, sworn.

I obtained a discount from the Bank of Bombay on the 30th March 1865 for one lakh, and I also borrowed on the 19th September 1865 Rs. 75,000. The loss on those two transactions may have been Rs. 1,03,000. I do not remember. Shares were deposited by me as security for the first loan. I was recommended to the Bank for that loan either by Cowasjee Manockjee or Mr. Hannay. The letter now shown to me, recommending me to Mr. Robertson for a loan of two lakhs, dated the 8th March 1865, is in the handwriting of Cowasjee Manockjee (marked A 125). I obtained that loan of one lakh to buy shares with. I do not recollect from whom I purchased them. I bought them in the bazaar. The money obtained by the second loan I paid into my account with the Old Financial Association. I account for there having been such a loss on these transactions by the depreciation in the value of shares. The shares deposited were four of the Back Bay Company and nine of the Victoria and Colaba Company. I was not pressed by the Bank to pay. The Bank never sued me. Mr. Hannay did not interfere to prevent proceedings being taken against me. The letter shown to me is a letter by Mr. Hannay to Mr. Robertson, recommending him to renew my loan (marked A 126). I paid Rs. 10,000 on renewal of my bill.

4 Sept. 1868.

Mr. F. F. Lidderdale.

4th September 1868.

Francis Frederick Lidderdale recalled.

President.—When Mr. Brown was examined, I asked him about several securities deposited by the Asiatic Bank which seemed to have disappeared, and we were unable to trace them; he said that he would do so if we gave him time, and he subsequently sent us in an account, but the information to be collected from it is very meagre, and he also sent us another note showing the realisation of some of the property eventually given as security. I wish now to go through the different Board Minutes with you, and see how many more we can extract. On the 14th May 1866 we find the following entry on the Minutes: "Read letter from Mr. Morrison, the Agent of the "Asiatic Bank, requesting a loan of 15 lakhs for that "Corporation. Read also a list of securities he is pre-"pared to deposit." "Resolved that the credit be "granted upon his giving up all the securities stated "in the list, and a written guarantee to deposit imme-"diately on receipt the bills and Government paper "now on their way from Calcutta and China." Do you remember that transaction?

Witness.—Yes. I was present at the Board, and assented to the granting of that credit. I objected to it at first, but eventually assented from the desire to assist a large banking institution, and to avoid a great many failures, and a great deal of complication in Bombay. To the best of my recollection I considered that, by that resolution, we granted the Asiatic Bank a cash credit of fifteen lakhs, and not liberty to overdraw their account for a certain period, whenever they liked, for any amount up to fifteen lakhs. I remember seeing the list of securities mentioned in the resolution. I cannot positively state that the list now shown me is a correct copy of it; but to the best of my recollection it is, for I see certain Bank bills here which I believe were included in the list shown us. (List marked A 127.) I cannot say whether any Government paper was ever deposited with the Bank. Government paper, if deposited with the Bank as security, should be entered in the Securities Ledger, which was produced here at the last examination, in the ordinary course of circumstances, but in this case it might not have been entered, in order to carry out the desire of the Bank of Bombay not to injure the credit of the Asiatic Bank by showing that the latter gave securities to the Bank of Bombay. Undoubtedly some record ought to have been kept of the securities received. The deposit of the Government paper by the Asiatic Bank was not dispensed with to my knowledge.

4 Sept. 1868.

Mr. F. F. Liddердale.

I was not present at the special Board meeting on the 25th of May, when the credit of fifteen lakhs already granted was extended to twenty lakhs, upon the additional security of a lien on ten lakhs advised by telegram from London as having been sent by the Mail of the 18th of May. I remember hearing of it, more particularly with reference to the security of the ten lakhs. In all probability the payment credited on the 11th of June in the account, in the books of the Bank of Bombay, of Rs. 10,59,000 represents that sum of ten lakhs. I remember well that the Asiatic Bank was selling bills at that time, and I have since had reason to know that many bills were sold. I have no doubt that is the amount received from England; it tallies as to the date. My idea of the way in which this credit should have been worked is, that as the securities were realised the credit ought to have been reduced. I can only speak as to what was done up to the 9th of August 1866, when I went to England.

I am referred to the following Board minute of the 12th of June:—"Read letter from the Agent of the "Asiatic Bank, stating that his Calcutta Agent had "been unexpectedly drawn upon from China, and "requesting that the credit of four lakhs might be "opened for him with the Bank of Bengal by tele-"gram as formerly." "Resolved that the credit be "opened on condition that, besides the securities "already deposited with the Bank, the Agent here "will give a lien on all remittances which may be "received from England, China, and other Branches "of the Bank."

That was done on Mr. Morrison's representation that certain remittances were coming. I do not think that any list of those remittances was given; it was a mere statement taken from the letters from the Head Office and Agencies, that he had funds coming in. I cannot state from recollection what securities were already deposited at that time, or whether the bill on the National Bank for Rs. 50,526, and that of the Chartered Bank for one lakh, were the only securities we had remaining at that time. That could only be answered by the Bank officials. I have no doubt that we ascertained what balance was actually due by the Asiatic Bank on the 12th of June, for the Directors made most careful inquiries in this case before granting these loans, and I did most especially, as being an unwilling lender, or rather participator in the loan. I have no doubt that the Directors satisfied themselves as to the meaning of the words "all "remittances which may be received from England, "China, and other Branches of the Bank," although I cannot recollect what was stated.

I am referred to the Board minutes of the 3rd July 1866. I was present at that meeting as President, and the minute of the meeting held on that date states as follows: "Reported that the Weekly Com-"mittee had authorized the Secretary to telegraph "to the Bank of Bengal to advance the Asiatic Bank "three lakhs of rupees if necessary. This amount "will be paid back on the arrival of the China Mail "at Calcutta, as the Agent gets five and a half lakhs "by it."

That last statement was made and entered in the minute, upon the authority of either a letter or telegram from China, stating that the bullion was shipped. I cannot say whether that was the telegram in cipher that Morrison afterwards said he had misunderstood. I have no doubt that we ascertained what balance was due at that time by the Asiatic Bank. We had the accounts taken at each meeting. I cannot positively say that we ascertained what securities remained in our hands at that time, but I think that we did. It was a loan most carefully looked into on each occasion. I cannot say whether the five and a half lakhs ever arrived from China. Mr. Rodgie could probably ascertain from the Bank of Bengal accounts with the Bank if that sum was paid in Calcutta.

I am referred to the minute of the 13th July 1866, which commences as follows: "Submitted applica-"tion from the Asiatic Bank for an extension till 1st "September next, of the cash credit of twenty lakhs "lately granted, and that the dividend of nearly three "lakhs due to the Bank from Byramjee Hormusjee "Cama's estate, be not drawn until a sum of five "lakhs expected from China by the Trustees be "received;" and a list of securities offered against this credit follows. I think that the original cash credit was granted for a short period only. I believe that the dividend of nearly three lakhs received from B. H. Cama's estate was not lost to the Bank. I cannot explain whether the list of securities appearing in the minute comprised the old and fresh securities, or whether the securities mentioned in it were in addition to any securities previously deposited. I observe the words "this credit" in the minute. It may be only the inaccurate wording of the minutes, they are very badly worded,—there is no question about that (after looking at the minute). One hundred and two and a half Apollo Press Company shares I see are entered in the list, they formed part of the previous securities; there were originally twenty-eight shares. Each share was divided into five when the Company was registered under the Joint Stock Companies Act. The Bill of the Chartered Bank was I believe realised by the Bank of Bombay. The promissory note of Macindoe, Rogers, and Co. for eight lakhs secured by the title deeds of property, has been partially realised by the Bank, but in consequence of an informal deed having been drawn up, the Bank lost their full right to recover. That mistake was not made by the Bank's solicitor, but by Mr. Crawford, who was employed to draw up the deed, which was a very informal one. The promissory note of the Bombay Coast and River Steam Navigation Company was realised. The next items in the list are "a lien on funds now on their "way from Calcutta, two lakhs; and lien on Java "Guilders at Calcutta to be remitted to Bombay, "three lakhs." I do not know whether those two sums were ever received. I believe that scarcely anything has been realised from M. and M. Heerjee and Co.'s promissory note to Premchund Roychund for Rs. 2,56,000 as they became bankrupt. The bill on B. H. Cama, Sons, and Co., due on the 28th of July for Rs. 50,000, I should think was paid. It was difficult in those days to get even a merchant's bill paid; it is quite possible a day or two's grace might have been given.

President.—The result is that of these securities there are five lakhs unaccounted for, and we have no explanation whether the sum of five and a half lakhs that was to come by the China Mail to Calcutta ever arrived. Do you observe from the minute of the 13th July that the Bank seem to have insisted upon additional terms, "a lien on all remittances from the "Head Office and Branches," they ought to have had that at the time, it was part of the arrangement made on the 12th of June, and you ask again for it as if it had never been given.

Witness.—I cannot explain that. I observe that we also stipulated "that the Trustees of B. H. Cama "should give the Bank a lien on their expected re-"mittance from China." I can only explain that in this way—Mr. Robertson, the Secretary of the Bank, was also a Trustee of B. H. Cama's estate, and probably it was thought that it would save disputes thereafter if we had an assignment from the Trustees. I cannot say whether the assignment was given, but the money I believe was paid in. I may say with regard to the two lakhs expected from Calcutta and the three lakhs of Java Guilders that they could hardly have reached Bombay before I left, and that is one reason why I cannot speak to them. I had nothing to do with arrangements made on the 23rd of August 1866 between the two Banks. I retired on the 8th of August, and I attended my last Board meeting on that day. I should say that it was our intention that a cash credit of twenty lakhs should be granted, and that as the securities were realised, the proceeds should go to the reduction of the cash credit, and that it never was the intention of the Directors to permit the Asiatic Bank to have an overdrawn account to that amount perpetually running, without regard to what might have been realised by sale of the securities. My impression of all the loans at that time to the Asiatic Bank is, that they were loans covered by special securities, and that as the securities were realised, the proceeds were taken in reduction of the loans. The original security was amply sufficient to cover the first loan, and there was sufficient security for the credit of twenty lakhs. I know nothing of any transactions between the Banks on the 28th of August 1866, or how the claim on Muggabhoy Huttising came into the possession of the Bank.

4 Sept. 1868.

Mr. F. F. Lidderdale.

I have only lately become aware that the Bank of Bombay allowed some of their debtors to sell Bank of Bombay shares and buy Back Bay shares with the view of bettering the condition of the Bank. I have only learnt it from what I have read. I was not here at the time; certainly nothing of the kind happened to my knowledge.

My attention is called to the addition made to the minute of the Board meeting of the 27th of April 1866. I recollect perfectly well that Mr. Fraser, who was then, I think, acting as Deputy Secretary or Accountant, came to me the night before I left for England and requested my signature to it. I should think the minute had been left unsigned from the fact of two having been signed at the same Meeting, and that it was probably turned over by the Secretary by accident without having been seen. I observe the first entry in the next minute "read minutes of last "meeting of the 26th and 27th (two);" the word "two" probably remained in my recollection, and I signed two without remembering the third. These minutes were brought forward at the meeting by the Secretary who read them over and brought them to the President for signature. The minute of the meeting of the 27th April 1866 was not left open with the view of amending that statement. Certainly not. I have refreshed my memory as to that, by referring to my partner Mr. Fogo, who was living with me, and he quite convinces me that I asked Mr. Fraser why the minute was left unsigned, and he said that he did not know, but supposed that it was an accident. I have not refreshed my recollection since I was last examined, as to my visit to Parell on the 27th of April 1866. I am not able to give any further information about it; unfortunately my private papers have been lost during the removal of my office, and I have no memoranda to refer to. I cannot account in any way for having forgotten such a very important thing as that, except that it was more directly the duty of the Government Directors to go to Sir Bartle Frere, and I must have been satisfied then that he had acquired the knowledge that I wanted to give him.

It was towards the end of May 1866, I should imagine, that I discovered that the jewels deposited by Premchund with the Bank of Bombay, were not worth twenty lakhs. I had not done so on the 11th of May, because more were promised at that time, that is my recollection of it. I am referred to the following passage in my letter to Sir Bartle Frere (L 1)—"as you already know to what extent the Bank "offered to assist Premchund, you will not be alarmed "I am sure, at the absurd rumours that are flying "about, that the bank has given him 80 lakhs. He "has not had twenty yet, and we have as security, "over twenty in landed property, and three or four "in jewels (he says ten), and of this advance, about "three-fifths has to be borne, and is guaranteed by "other sound Banks."

I was present at the valuation by Mr. Crawford, and from him I should say I took the idea that the jewels were not worth more than the sum stated in that letter. Mr. Crawford's statement in valuing was, that this was the value he placed upon them for immediate sale, but that probably they would fetch more. He valued them upon two occasions; the Bank had only a part of the jewels at his first valuation, but subsequently acquired the rest. I think that the second batch of jewels, which was a very small one, came in on the 8th May, but I have no memorandum of the date. His second valuation was dated the 24th of May. It is quite possible that that was long after, and that they came in on the 8th May. Mr. Crawford's was a very stringent valuation, and the jewels might have brought more, if sold by auction. They were valued at Calcutta at a very much higher sum. It is my belief that I was only writing of one portion of the jewels when I wrote to Sir Bartle Frere. It is true that I did not say that there were some more jewels yet to come. There was great difficulty in getting the second batch out of Premchund, and it may have been on my mind at the time that there was a probability of the Bank's not getting it.

President.—You see that at this time he had not had twenty lakhs, you said—"we have his security of over twenty lakhs in landed property, and three or four lakhs of jewels—he says ten lakhs." Upon what grounds did you advance the rest of the twenty-five lakhs; did you really believe that the landed property was worth twenty lakhs?

Witness.—I believed that it was worth nearly that amount. I cannot say that Mr. Norman told me that it was worth twenty lakhs. Although Mr. Norman states that at that time it was only worth fourteen lakhs, I think he did not make so explicit a valuation then, as he has done since. From what now appears it would have been prudent to have stopped advancing at that time, but I cannot fully recall all the circumstances that occurred. At the time that the loan was made, Premchund was largely indebted to the Bank, and that part of his indebtedness was taken credit for in the twenty-five lakhs loan, to the extent of seven or eight lakhs as I understand.

Mr. Melvill.—Do you not think you should have asked Premchund to explain, after he had deceived you about the value of the jewels?

Witness.—We did ask him many times.

Mr. Melvill.—He seems to have drawn seven lakhs after that.

President.—He spoke of depositing more jewels, but he never did so. Did he promise to deposit more jewels after the 8th May?

Witness.—To the best of my recollection he constantly promised to deposit more jewels which were never forthcoming.

Mr. Melvill.—There is one point on which I should like to ask you a question, and that is with regard to the omission to realise the securities when the shares went up in 1865. Do you know if that letter from Cowasjee Manockjee (A 120) was ever laid before the Board?

Witness.—No. I do not recollect that letter ever being laid before the Board.

Mr. Melvill.—You see he asks that the opinion of the full Board may be taken upon it?

Witness.—I remember that at the full Board meeting, Cowasjee Manockjee gave them such advice, and it was fully discussed. Some Directors were very much against it, and thought we should wait, and eventually it was agreed to wait.

Mr. Melvill.—Even as to securities that were sufficient to cover the debt if they were sold?

Witness.—There might have been cause for that, probably the securities consisted of so many shares, that to throw them into the market would have been unduly to depress it.

Mr. Melvill.—Jaivirilall Umiashunker says in his evidence "after September 1865 Asiatic Bank shares "went up to sixty per cent. premium. I urged the "Secretary to sell and pay off the debt, and he would "not do so."

Witness.—At that time there was a difficulty in selling shares, many shares were practically unsaleable, and the quotations in the market were really confined to a few. It is not at all improbable that owing to calls at that date, many of the shares held by the Bank were not saleable.

President.—But if Mr. Robertson was deeply interested in those shares, is it not probable he would be reluctant to throw them on the market?

Witness.—That would be his bias probably.

Mr. Melvill.—Can you explain how you came to declare a dividend at the end of 1865?

Witness.—Because the profits of the Bank during the previous twelve months had been of much greater amount than was necessary to cover the anticipated losses.

Mr. Melvill.—Still, after declaring a dividend you appointed a Committee to ascertain the losses.

Witness.—No; the Committee was appointed to decide what debts were irrecoverable, and write them off.

Mr. Melvill.—Do you think it was wise to declare a dividend under the circumstances?

Witness.—Yes. Every member of the Board went through the different items, and very great pains were taken to ascertain what losses might be expected. I forget the exact amount of the profit.

4 Sept. 1868.

Mr. F. F. Lidderdale.

President.—It is stated very clearly. It was stated that there were still nineteen lakhs when the amount written off as irrecoverable, four lakhs and upwards, had been deducted.

Major Innes.—Was it the full Board that came to the conclusion that thirty lakhs should be set down as the probable amount of the losses in 1865?

Witness.—I have no doubt it was at a full Board: the matter was most carefully discussed.

Major Innes.—But do you recollect whether you were aware that the thirty lakhs was the amount of the probable loss before you decided to declare the dividend?

Witness.—No; I cannot recollect without inspecting the minutes made at the time.

I wish to remove any doubt which may exist as to the correctness of my statement before the Commission on the 6th July last, that with the exception of shares in the Bank of Bombay, I had not held a share in any Company, except one in the Port Canning Company. Five shares in the Bombay Reclamation Company, forming half of an allotment made to my firm, were placed in my name, as the registration of the allotment in the name of my firm was not allowed.

4 Sept. 1868.

Mr. J. Stuart.

JOHN STUART, recalled.

President.—I will call your attention to your letter dated the 1st February 1867, written as Secretary and Treasurer of the Bank of Bombay, to the Chief Secretary to the Government of Bombay. The seventh paragraph of that letter ends in this way: "earnestly desirous, however, of meeting the desire of "Government, in this respect, and, above all, of not "misleading them by any mere hasty guesses, the "Directors have with long and laborious care "examined the state of every outstanding debt, and "although, for the reasons already given, they submit "that it is impossible to give any closely reliable esti-"mate, they at least feel able to express their belief "after rigorous valuation, that one half of the Bank's "capital remains intact." Will you tell us the ground upon which you proceeded in making that statement?

Witness.—The letter was written a few days after I had arrived in India, and taken over charge of the business of the Bank. I arrived on the 12th January 1867. I found that previous to my arrival a statement had been carefully prepared of all the outstanding debts due to the Bank at the Head Office, as well as a similar one of all outstandings at the Branches. Before the letter was written a special meeting of the Directors was held on the 30th January at four o'clock in the afternoon, and it sat until late in the evening, and adjourned till ten o'clock the following morning. This list was submitted to the meeting on the 30th January. I sat near the President, Mr. Lushington, a Government Director, on the one side, and Mr. C. E. Chapman on the other, and each account was carefully examined, and the value of the securities held by the Bank for advances was taken. This list was very carefully prepared beforehand. After deducting from the total amount of each advance, the valuation of the shares deposited as security (the valuation of the shares being made on the best information that the Directors could obtain), we estimated the probable dividend from the estate of each debtor whose debt was considered bad, and each account was considered in that way, and the good and bad were separated. The result of the inspection showed seventy-one lakhs of the town business to be bad. The next day the Directors met again at ten o'clock in the morning, and having received from the Agents of all the Branches similar statements to that which I have now shown you of all the advances, each Agent reported every outstanding at his own Branch. The accounts presented were examined by the Inspector of Branches, who attended at the meeting on the morning of the 31st, and each account was analysed in the same manner as the town accounts. The result was that it was estimated that there were thirty-two lakhs of bad debts at the Branches. That would give a total bad business of one hundred and three lakhs. That amount was deducted from all the outstandings, and upon that, the Directors framed the letter in which they said they were justified in stating that one-half of the capital of the Bank was still intact.

To show that the securities were not over-valued at the time, I will, if you think proper, put in a certified copy of the valuation made of the shares held by the Bank (marked A 128). There has been so much said about the view taken by the Directors of the value of Back Bay shares, I think it right to state that they did not take too sanguine a view of the matter when they valued them at Rs. 3,000 per share. Mr. Scott, who was then one of the Directors of the Bank, rather objected to that valuation, and he afterwards wrote me a letter and sent in a statement as to the position of the Back Bay scheme, showing that at that time (the 2nd February 1867) Back Bay shares were worth Rs. 5,000 each. We sold them subsequently for Rs. 1,800 per share.

I know that the Directors were particularly anxious to avoid over-estimating the value, there having been so much doubt expressed as to the former valuation. I believe it was as conscientious a valuation as could have been made at the time. I may say that personally I knew nothing of the correctness of the estimates; many of the shares I had never even heard of until a day or two before, but I think that the Directors gave what to the best of their belief was the best estimate they could of the real state of the Bank's assets at the time; that is the estimate they proceeded upon. Of course I had no returns then of the out-turns of some of the insolvent estates, and some of them have turned out very different from the estimates made at the time. I was very explicit in what I wrote upon that point; I said: "the difficulty of revising the last estimate must be ap-"parent to Government, when I state that at the time "when the revising Committee's valuation was made, "no less than two hundred and forty-five accounts, "aggregating 2,16,80,000, were claims against estates "being wound up under trust. The claims of this "nature still outstanding amount to Rs. 2,11,30,000, "and regarding these the Directors have not yet "been able to obtain further reliable information;" and in paragraph 4 I wrote: "the Directors have

4 Sept. 1868.

Mr. J. Stuart.

" every desire to afford Government all the information in their power with regard to the actual state " of the Bank, but from the fact that a very large " proportion of the outstanding claims is against " estates now being wound up under Trustees, they " find it almost impossible to give an absolutely " reliable valuation of probable recoveries." The statement of the Directors that the capital was intact to the extent of one-half, was founded upon those estimates. There were four or five Directors present, each of them had taken down the good business of each account, and we afterwards compared the figures together.

I am not in possession of the estimates made by the previous Committees. I saw the rough copy of one of the estimates, but I could make nothing out of it, for there were no details showing the principle upon which it was made. It was not an estimate which I could check at all; I had not previously investigated it. The Directors had no object in concealing anything from me. They knew that in a very short time I must find it out, and I believe that every Director at the table believed it to be an honest valuation. I can explain how it is that things have turned out so much worse than was anticipated. In Premchund's account I think the Directors' estimate was that there would be a loss of five lakhs. On estimating it again when I had been in the Bank six months, and when I had a better knowledge of the securities held, I calculated that there would be a further loss of fifteen lakhs, and I believe now that it will be still greater. There was one thing, for instance,—the estimate of the jewels he deposited; they were valued at four and a half lakhs of rupees, and I have sold them for two lakhs and a half. Then there were ten lakhs and a half estimated as the contribution from the Banks on Premchund's account, and in my last estimate I struck out eight lakhs of these, for they were disputed claims. And afterwards, as Liquidator of the Bank, I struck out the whole of these disputed accounts. If anything is recovered on them, of course it will go to the credit of the Bank.

There is another account on which there has been a considerable loss in the realisation. That is Premabhoy Hemabhoy's account. His debt was seven lakhs. His firm had been established in Bombay as Shroffs for a hundred years. He was formerly a member of the Legislative Council of Bombay. He was always considered to be a man of great wealth, and it was thought his account was quite safe. The only security for the debt that we held from him was a house in Love Lane, valued at one lakh and a half, which I am now trying to sell for half a lakh but cannot get it. Premabhoy went off upon a pilgrimage; he is absent from Bombay still, and I cannot get hold of him.

Then Mr. Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy's estate has turned out much worse than the estimate of it in February 1867. It was then estimated at 50 per cent., but the result will be that only 12 per cent. will be obtained from it.

In February 1867, the debt of the Eastern Financial Association was valued at eight annas in the rupee, or fifty per cent. It was compromised for five annas in the rupee, and there was a loss upon that of Rs. 10,95,264. The case of the Alliance Financial Corporation is a similar one. The debt was Rs. 8,59,763, and it was considered good for six lakhs, but of that one half is now estimated as bad. The total loss on that is Rs. 3,87,375.

Then there was the Imperial Banking and Trading Company, the debt of which was considered quite good.

President.—Why did it not turn out good? It was a Company with unlimited liability, was it not? How was it you could not get hold of the shareholders?

Witness.—The shareholders were not to be found. Most of them thought a change of climate was necessary for them, or something of that kind, for we could not get hold of them, and the debt was compromised at eight annas in the rupee.

Then there was the Kattyawar Trading Company, which was considered quite good; that debt has been compromised for six annas in the rupee.

The Asiatic Banking Corporation, which was very heavily indebted to us, was considered, in February 1867, quite good, but now there will probably be a loss on that debt, of three lakhs of rupees.

Roychund Deepchund was also considered good, but there has been a loss of Rs. 75,000 on his private account, independently of his liability on the loan to Pemchund Roychund of twenty-five lakhs. He failed before the time when the estimate was made, but he never went into trust, and has not gone through the Insolvent Court. He has disappeared.

Act XXVIII. of 1865 of the Legislative Council of India has been most detrimental to the Bank. Upon arriving out here, I found that most of the principal debtors to it were reposing under Act XXVIII. of 1865; we could get nothing from them except through the Trustees. To go to the High Court we had to go through the Trustees. We went to the Court in one or two cases, but did not succeed in getting anything. The working of that Act depends in a great measure on the choice made of a Chairman at the meeting of creditors, and the character of the persons appointed Trustees at the meeting. The Chairman is appointed by the creditors present at the meeting. I believe there is no provision for ascertaining who are creditors. Before the Chairman is elected, anybody can go into the room; and after the Chairman is elected, he decides who is, and who is not, to vote. The persons who elected him may not be bonâ fide, but fictitious creditors. I cannot state from my experience that it has been the practice to elect a friendly Chairman, because I never was present at a meeting, but I have heard many complaints of it upon all sides. I think the fatal mistake in the Act was the enactment that any person whose liabilities exceeded five lakhs should go under the Act. It should have been provided that no one whose assets did not exceed five lakhs should pass under the Act, because then very few of those who obtained the privileges of Act XXVIII. would have got them. If debtors contrived to elect a friendly Chairman, and had friendly Trustees appointed, things became very smooth for them, and they worked amicably together. I cannot say that the appointment of three Trustees under the Act was a wise measure. I do not think it was material, because a man who could get two, could easily get three friendly Trustees. If the Trustees have grounds of suspicion, they can bring the debtor before the Court, but there is no proceeding by which a man can be brought before the High Court if the Trustees sheltered him.

We have a register in the Bank of all the estates in trust under the Act, and of the amount of the dividends declared. The average dividend paid by estates under the Act is, I think, about five per cent. I do not think that there is one estate in which the Bank is interested, which has been finally wound up yet under the Act which was meant to be an improvement on the old Insolvency Act, and to facilitate the winding up of estates expeditiously. My view of the working of the Act was expressed in the Report which I made to Government since I undertook the duty of Liquidator of the Bank. In the eighth paragraph I say:—" The claims on insolvent and other " estates amount to Rs. 2,22,85,436, and it is esti- " mated from the Reports of the Trustees and the " Official Assignee, that the ultimate recoveries may " amount to Rs. 19,79,680, but this result is contin- " gent on so many doubtful and disputed claims, that " it is difficult to arrive at any really satisfactory " estimate of this large outstanding, which consists " of 244 separate and distinct accounts on Insolvent " estates, classified as under, namely, claims on " Insolvent estates under Act XXVIII. of 1865, " Rs. 1,07,61,879; ditto private trust or otherwise " insolvent Rs. 81,11,985; of insolvent estates under " Official Assignee Rs. 6,31,600; ditto Companies " winding up under the supervision of the High " Court Rs. 27,79,972; total Rs. 2,22,85,436. It is " almost impossible to offer any opinion as to the " period within which the dividends may be received; " the final winding up of many of the estates being " delayed in consequence of causes still pending in " the High Court; and until these are settled, the " Trust accounts cannot be closed." The Act is no longer in force.

Messrs. Brown and Best deposited with the Bank the certificates of forty-six Port Canning Company's shares as security for the loan to them of Rs. 2,50,000. They were sold at Rs. 125 each, and realised Rs. 5,541 only. In October 1866 they were entered in the Securities Book at Rs. 46,000. That was the par value. I believe the reason for their being sold when they were, was that a call was about to be made. If we had not sold the shares, the Bank would have had to pay the call, or the shares would have been forfeited; and the Bank preferred selling them. If they had been sold in good time, they might have realized a large amount.

I have heard the evidence given here about the cash credit granted to the Asiatic Bank. According to my experience, when a cash credit has been opened for twenty lakhs, and twenty lakhs of securities lodged at the same time, the realisation of the securities should extinguish the debt. There could be no further drawing after twenty lakhs had been drawn out.

To Major Innes.—The papers that I saw, bearing on the former estimate of the position of the Bank, were incomplete, and I could make nothing of them. The Committee, consisting of Messrs. A. J. Hunter, E. F. Harrison, and Dinshaw Manockjee, described, if I remember rightly, in their Report, the way in which they arrived at their estimate, but I do not think that any of the former estimates were based on regular papers, as mine of June 1867 was.

4 Sept. 1868.

Mr. J. Stuart.

In preparing that estimate I took the current valuation of the shares which we held as security, and I got from the trustees of the various estates reports of the probable returns on the admitted claims; these reports are all in the Bank; I do not know whether any similar reports were given on the former occasions. The Directors occasionally refer to information received from them, but I rather think that it had been given verbally.

[Mr. Rodgie mentions that on two former occasions Trustees of estates had been consulted, but that no formal reports had been received from them—only brief notes.]

Mr. Stuart.—The calculations in my estimate of June 1867 were based on formal reports from them.

I do not think that there is much difference between the dividends which are now expected and what were then reported to be expected; the alteration in the recoveries is owing chiefly to the depreciation in value of shares.

Some debts then believed to be good have since turned out bad, and some of the insolvent estates have not turned out so well as we expected. There is the case of Manockjee Limjee and Company. The High Court has ordered that the joint creditors shall be paid out of the joint assets, and the separate creditors out of the separate estates of the partners. This will reduce our dividend from the estate ten per cent., and there will thus be a further loss of one lakh, as we are creditors upon the joint estate.

Mr. W. Bullock.

WILLIAM BULLOCK, recalled.

Roychund Deepchund, Premchund Roychund's father, did not, I believe, advance or lend money to me in the year 1920 (1863–64). To the best of my belief he did not. I have no recollection whatever of his having paid on the 24th November 1863, on my account, for the second call on twenty shares of the Royal Bank the sum of Rs. 1,000. I have referred to Roychund's books here this morning. I cannot speak positively about what took place in 1863. I believe that he did not advance that sum of Rs. 1,000 to me. I will not swear that he did not. I have no recollection of his having advanced me the sum of Rs. 1,500 by a cheque on the Bank of Bombay upon the 29th January 1864. I never kept a book of my own private transactions in my life, or any memoranda. I had an account with the Bank of Bombay. I think I had an account there in 1864. I will not swear that these entries in Roychund's book have not had their origin in the purchase of shares of the Royal Bank for me. I will not undertake to deny that he advanced me the Rs. 1,500; but in a matter of which I have no recollection it is difficult even to deny it. I think my circumstances were such at that time that it is likely I would not remember an advance of Rs. 1,500 four years afterwards. There was nothing special about my circumstances. I cannot particularise them. I was Agent of the Kalbadevi Branch of the Bank of Bombay in 1864, and before that I was in the Bank of Bombay. I cannot undertake to say that my circumstances were such that I find a difficulty now in saying whether I did or did not receive Rs. 1,500 upon a certain day. I am unable to contradict the books of Roychund Deepchund.

The transaction may have had its origin in several ways; to the best of my recollection I never borrowed money from him, except as I admitted when I was here before. I might have sold him shares or stock, or I might have bought shares. I believe that I have sold stock to him. I cannot say when I did so. I have repeatedly had transactions with Roychund as a broker; he was in the habit of coming to the Bank frequently. I have bought shares from him, and I have no doubt I have sold to him. I do not recollect whether I received this Rs. 1,500 or not. I will not undertake to deny that I had it. I have no knowledge of the item debited to me on the 7th April 1864, in Roychund's book, as "amount of interest " up to date Rs. 232." I am referred to the following entry in his book on the 13th April 1864: " debited " to the account of Mr. Bullock, of the Bank of " Bombay, in full payment of account Rs. 123–10–0." I have no knowledge of any of these entries, and the only explanation which I can suggest with reference to them is, that he bought shares, and that not unfrequently I bought shares from him for friends upcountry, and upon several occasions on my own account. That is the only suggestion that I can give, that he bought and sold shares, and debited me with the interest, as you see there, and that the balance was paid. That is my own belief as to the origin of these items, and I can give no other explanation. I am referred to an entry of the 22nd June 1864: " debited to the account of Mr. Bullock, of the Bank " of Bombay, Rs. 1,058–11–0, paid for fourth call on " twenty Royal Bank shares with interest."

I believe I had shares in the Royal Bank. I cannot now say who paid the calls on them. It not unfrequently happened that when new stock was issued, the certificates were not delivered for some time afterwards; and in that case the seller would have to pay the calls, and hand over the shares to the purchaser, and in that way Roychund might have debited me with the cost of the calls. I am quite unable to remember who paid the calls upon Royal Bank shares for me. I do not remember that Roychund Deepchund paid these calls for me, but it appears so from his account.

If Roychund Deepchund had sold me shares in the Royal Bank of the old issue, the new shares would have been allotted to me in his name, unless he had transferred the old shares to my name, and he would have been compelled to pay the calls in his own name, handing the receipts to me. I admit having had transactions with Roychund Deepchund as a broker. I repeatedly bought and sold shares through him. I remember having stated in my examination on the 24th July last that I had only had one transaction with Roychund Deepchund in which I owed him money. All these transactions to which reference is now made were simply with regard to the purchase and sale of shares, and I did not know in giving my evidence the other day,—in fact I did not remember,—that I had bought particular shares from Roychund Deepchund, or any one else. Three or four years after an event it is a matter of extreme difficulty to remember what transactions one has been engaged in. I think that the amount of my salary in the Bank of Bombay, before I was appointed Agent at the Kalbadevi Branch, was Rs. 450 a month.

I am referred to the following entry in Roychund's book, under the date of 18th October 1864 :—"Debited to the account of Mr. Bullock, Bank of Bombay, the value of five old shares in the Bank of Bombay, and five new shares, Rs. 18,600." I believe that he did not buy those shares for me. I believe I never held shares in the Bank of Bombay from first to last, but I repeatedly bought shares for my friends up-country. I bought shares of the Bank of Bombay on one occasion for the Agent of the Bank at Indore, Mr. Johnson, I remember that distinctly. I do not remember whether I employed Roychund Deepchund to buy them for me. I do not remember, at this distance of time, whom I employed. I cannot undertake to swear that that was not a payment made upon my behalf. I cannot speak from memory upon a matter which took place at that date.

To the best of my recollection I never held a Bank of Bombay share in my life, either in my own or in any other name. I bought shares in the Bank of Bombay half a score of times, I have no doubt, for different persons, my own friends. I paid for them, I believe, at the time. I cannot say whether I employed Roychund Deepchund to buy them. I cannot give any explanation of these items ; they have taken me by surprise. I was not aware, when I bought and sold shares, that the transactions were being recorded in a book which would be produced before a Commission in the Town Hall, or of course I should have made careful entries. I am referred to another item, as follows:—"1st March 1864 credited to the account "of Mr. Bullock, of the Bank of Bombay, cash "Rs. 15,000."

That must have been on account of these Bank of Bombay shares which were purchased. I am referred to another entry, on the 6th April 1864 : "cash to the "credit of the account of Mr. Bullock, Rs. 4,062, by "cheque upon the Royal Bank." I do not recollect paying him that sum. I never had an account with the Royal Bank, I think. I am referred to the next item : "Credited to the account of Mr. Bullock "Rs. 1,059 by cheque upon the Bank of Bombay." I do not remember those payments. I never knew that there was an account of this kind, I have no recollection of the transactions.

I am referred to another entry on the debit side of the account : "9th November 1864, debited to "Mr. Bullock, for payment of second call on five "Bank of Bombay shares, Rs. 1,500." That must have been a call upon the new shares, which were allotted me for the old ones. If I had bought five shares the money must have been paid. If the shares were bought from me, he would have had to make the payments.

I am referred to another entry : "Debited to the "account of Mr. Bullock, of the Bank of Bombay, "Rs. 2,000, by cheque upon the Kalbadevi Branch of "the Bank of Bombay, 13th June 1865." I believe that to be correct ; that I distinctly remember. It was the balance due upon the purchase of shares of the Commercial Bank, ten shares, I think. I am referred to the last entry in the account on the 8th February 1865 : "Rs. 19,970-1-7 received in full "payment of account by a cheque upon the Kalba-"devi Branch of the Bank of Bombay." I have no recollection whatever of giving a cheque for that amount. I have no recollection whatever of settling that account.

President.—Do you mean to say that Roychund has made an entry in his own books against his own interest, and that it is a fictitious item?

Witness.—I do not believe that it is fictitious, but my explanation is that he bought certain shares for me and received the money, and that the one side balanced the other.

President.—Eventually, upon the 8th February 1865, one side balanced the other, but till then you were in debt to Roychund. At the end of 1864 you owed him Rs. 18,600, and in fact every year up till then.

Witness.—I do not believe that it was the case. The entries are fictitious as regards the form in which the payments were made. When I received a request to buy shares, the cheque which I received with it would probably go to my credit, and as the shares purchased came in, I probably gave a cheque for them against my account with the Bank of Bombay. I believe I did not pay him that sum, it is easily ascertainable from my account with the Bank of Bombay. I never had any other account with any other Bank. My account was kept at the Kalbadevi Branch. On the 13th June 1865 I owed a sum of Rs. 2,000 to Roychund Deepchund. It was the balance due by me for the purchase of shares in the Commercial Bank. I have paid it, except a small balance which remains due—I think, about Rs. 500. That is the single transaction of which I spoke in my former evidence. I believe that was very shortly before the Commercial Bank stopped payment, which was in May 1866. I speak at random as to dates. I am not speaking at random about this transaction with Roychund Deepchund. I have not the least wish to conceal anything in the matter. I did not mention these share transactions, because I was not aware, until I had it brought to my knowledge, that I had bought these particular shares of Roychund Deepchund. Whilst I was Agent of the Kalbadevi Branch of the Bank of Bombay I bought and sold shares to a very small extent.

President.—Just now you admitted that it was to a very considerable extent, and that you had a difficulty in remembering any particular transaction.

Witness.—Those transactions were not on my own account. I bought and sold shares for others. I seem to have employed Roychund more than any one else, judging from the entries which have been read to me from his books. I believe that I did not leave the shares unpaid for, and the account unsettled till February 1865.

President.—[After conferring with the other Commissioners.] I must tell you, Mr. Bullock, that your evidence has given us more pain than that of any other witness who has been examined before this Commission.

Witness.—I am very sorry for it, but I am unable to give it in any other way. The inference to be drawn from what you have said is, that the interest of the Bank was prejudiced by my own private transactions. To my certain knowledge I am quite sure that nothing I have done in the buying and selling of shares will carry such a large inference as that. It is a matter of some concern to me that the Commission doubt a portion of my evidence, but I can say with perfect honesty that I have given it with as much fairness as I possibly could. As regards the Bank, it never suffered from any private dealings of my own in this way.

President.—Do you mean to say, Mr. Bullock, that it was right or proper for a person in your position in the Bank, to enter into transactions with Premchund Roychund's father in this way?

Witness.—Allow me to explain. Roychund Deepchund never had any transactions except on security of Government paper, either at the Head Office or the Branch, until he became involved for Premchund Roychund. He certainly had no transactions with the Kalbadevi Branch down to May 1866. Premchund Roychund was my adviser from the first, the person to whom I was told to refer for advice always. Although I bought Premchund's hoondies to a very large extent, he was not, when he failed, indebted to the Kalbadevi Branch in a single Rupee.

I do not remember having allowed Roychund Deepchund to have two advances from the Kalbadevi Branch in 1864. I do not remember having advanced Rs. 5,000 on his promissory note upon the 1st August 1864; my impression was that he never had transactions with the Branch before April 1866. [The President reads the following translation of an entry in Roychund's book: "Cash—at Kalbadevi Branch of the "Bank of Bombay upon a draft or promissory note "interest at four per cent., paid the amount into the "Asiatic Bank Rs. 50,000."]

Question.—How came you to allow Roychund Deepchund an advance at four per cent. in 1864?

Witness.—That depends entirely upon what the rates of interest were at the time.

Question.—Do you mean to say the rate was so low as four per cent. in 1864? 4 Sept. 1868. Mr. W. Bullock.

Answer.—No; but we were in the habit of taking short debts at a much lower rate than others. My impression is he could not have got the money at such interest, and my idea is that it is more likely to have been fourteen per cent. I can truly say that Roychund Deepchund never received any favour at my hands in his life.

President.—There is another entry on the 18th October 1864 of Rs. 60,000 lent on old and new shares of the Bank of Bombay. Do you mean to say you never advanced him that money?

Witness.—I think not. I have no recollection of it. My impression was that there were no such advances to him previous to 1866.

President.—The balance due is carried forward at the close of the year, the sum of Rs. 1,10,000 was brought over to the next year's account.

Witness.—I may have been mistaken about his having had advances before. I am not quite sure, for it is very difficult to speak of matters in this way a long time afterwards.

[After a short adjournment.] The cheque on the Kalbadevi Branch of the Bank of Bombay now shown to me, for Rs. 19,970–1–7, dated the 8th February 1865, is signed by me. (Marked A 130.) This cheque is, no doubt, in payment of the purchase of five shares in the Bank of Bombay.

President.—It is for the exact balance of Roychund Deepchund's account with you.

Witness.—I am unable to explain it.

4th September 1868.

4 Sept. 1868. Mr. Khuttow Khimjee.

KHUTTOW KHIMJEE, affirmed.

I obtained two discounts from the Bank of Bombay, one on the 26th April, and the other on the 12th September 1865: Rs. 40,000 on the first occasion and two lakhs on the second. I believe I negotiated the loan of Rs. 40,000 through Premchund Roychund;—I do not remember with whom. I do not know who was the Secretary of the Bank at the time. I did not negotiate the second loan for two lakhs on the 12th September 1865. I received a letter from the Bank of Bombay saying that the Bank was ready and willing to advance two lakhs to me on the security of Asiatic Bank shares. I took that note to Premchund Roychund, and he said that he had negotiated the loan. I will tell you what occurred. Premchund said: We will have some trade jointly, "you and I." I replied, "I have lost all my "money, what funds have I to trade with?" He said: "All the moneys I have got are at your "service;" and after we had had that conversation, I received the letter from the Bank of Bombay which I have mentioned to the Commission.

Premchund upon that occasion proposed that there should be a joint speculation by him and me in Asiatic Bank shares. I do not know that there was any one else engaged in that speculation. I never told any one in Bombay that somebody else had an interest in the transaction. There was a loss of one lakh and a half on the transaction. Rs. 50,000 were paid to the Bank by Premchund in part payment.

I was pressed by the Bank for payment; proceedings were taken against me in the High Court, and there was a decree given against me by the Court. I expressed my inability to pay the money, and my books were shown to the Officers of the Bank. After that there was a compromise, and I paid a thousand Rupees and the claim was settled.

The 26th April 1865 was the date when I got the first discount of Rs. 40,000; security for it was deposited either on the same day or a day or two afterwards. I did not buy shares with the money, and afterwards lodge them; they were purchased previously, and were in my possession. When Premchund proposed that I should buy Asiatic Bank shares, I asked him "where am I to get the money from to "pay for them?" I said that as far as I was acquainted with the practice of the Bank they would not advance money unless they got two signatures, and that they would require a deposit of shares before advancing the money. He then said "you may go to "the Bank, and the Bank will make an advance "without taking any shares as a deposit." The next day I went to the Bank, and got the two lakhs immediately. I then bought the shares, and paid for them; I did not lodge them as security, I gave them to Premchund, and my part in the transaction was then concluded.

To Mr. Melvill.—I have no papers to produce. My papers were in the possession of my son, who has gone to his native country. My books are with the Bank of Bombay.

4th September 1868.

4 Sept. 1868. Mr. R. H. Baker.

ROBERT HOSIER BAKER, recalled.

I was Sub-Agent of the Asiatic Bank during 1865, up to the time the Bank stopped payment, in September 1866. I am aware of the transactions between that Bank and the Bank of Bombay. I know what securities were lodged by the Asiatic Bank with the Bank of Bombay. I cannot speak about the realization of the securities, for most of them were realized after the Bank stopped.

4 Sept. 1868.
Mr. R. H. Baker.

President. — We want information about those realized before the Bank stopped payment; the rest is very clear. You obtained a cash credit about the 14th of May 1866 for fifteen lakhs, and it appears that you proposed to lodge certain securities mentioned in a list, and to deliver Bills and Government paper then on the way from Calcutta and China; it appears on the Board minutes of the Bank of Bombay. Do you know anything about that Government paper?

Witness.—Yes, I think so; I think I remember that we were getting four lakhs from Calcutta, but I think Mr. Morrison did not write any letter about that first loan; it must have been arranged at a personal interview, as I am not quite so clear as to what he would give as security. I do not think there is any letter in the Asiatic Bank books. I think the first letter was dated some few days after, when the Commercial Bank had failed, and I think then he wrote to the Bank. I know we did about that time get four lakhs of Government paper from Calcutta. We did not, I think, deposit any Government paper with the Bank of Bombay. I think we sold it, and paid the proceeds into the Bank of Bombay, for we used to pay in all the money we had, and draw it out as we required it.

President.—Have you any doubt that this list is a correct copy of the original list which was signed by you?

Witness.—I think this is probably quite correct. (A 127.)

President.—What is meant by "memo. of shares "standing in the name of Sorabjee Jamsetjee in the hands of the Bank of Bombay;" what shares are those?

Answer.—I can hardly recollect; they may have been Apollo Press Company's shares.

President.—No, they are mentioned below.

Witness.—I think that the shares that we held against Sorabjee's loan were 75 Mofussil Press and Ginning Company's shares.

[President reading—"Sixteen Colaba Press shares "with the power of Attorney in our favour."]

Question.—Can you state when those were withdrawn and realized?

Answer.—I do not think they would be withdrawn at all; perhaps temporarily that we might draw the dividends under the power, and then sent back; and in the case of the Apollo Press a number of them were sold by us, and we wrote to the Bank of Bombay to say that we had sold them. I think one hundred and two of these shares came into the possession of the Bank of Bombay; they were partly Cursetjee's and partly Sorabjee's. I think it very likely that the 75 Mofussil Press and Ginning Company's shares were never realised by the Bank of Bombay. I think there was a call due upon them, and we thought it desirable not to pay the call, as probably the shares were not of the value of the amount of the call. I know several shares became worthless in that way at that time.

President.—Then it is in your recollection that the Mofussil Press and Ginning Company shares were withdrawn on account of some call?

Answer.—No, I do not say that; I do not remember their being withdrawn, but they were not of much value at the time.

President.—Then we have the Bombay and Bengal Steam Ship Company's shares.

Witness.—I think they were much in the same position; I do not know for certain if that Company made another call, but I know many of the shares were forfeited at the time; if they have not been realised, that is the case. I have no information except from the letter book which I have brought over. Here is one letter of the 13th of August which refers to Apollo Press Company's shares, with respect to which we wrote to the Bank of Bombay to say that we had sold five, and asking for certificates. We may have sold twenty-two of them. That was only one day's sale. I expect one share was sold on the 3rd of July 1866, and ten shares were sold on the 14th of July 1866; four on the 16th of July, and one share on the 21st of July 1866. The account current with the Bank of Bombay does not give particulars of the payments.

President.—You gave additional security to get the loan extended; an additional security of ten lakhs advised by telegram from London; I suppose that is represented by the sum entered in the account on the 11th of June 1866 to the credit of the Asiatic Bank, Rs. 10,59,000?

Answer.—Yes.

President.—You also offered a lien on all remittances coming from England, China, and other branches of the Bank; did you give any such lien?

Witness.—I think we gave an assignment which will be found in one of Mr. Morrison's letters.

President.—What remittances did you expect at that time?

Answer.—Remittances from China, Calcutta, and England, and I think we were expecting funds from London, on account of the Calcutta Branch, whose account was overdrawn at the time.

President.—But cannot you give us any particular item, for the expression is very vague?

Witness.—No, I do not think I can, it is very vague; we could not tell what sort of remittances were coming; probably Mr. Morrison had written to London and the Branches for funds, as we were so pressed for money. We were disappointed of getting funds from China, for the Manager there instead of remitting funds to Bombay, remitted six or eight lakhs on the Commercial Bank in London, but these unfortunately arrived too late, for the Commercial Bank had stopped before the bills reached London.

President.—On the 3rd of July three lakhs more were granted to be repaid on the arrival of the China Mail.

Witness.—The Calcutta Agent received the expected remittance from China, but the China Agent instead of remitting Indian drafts, sent English bills on several houses and Banks, and when those bills reached Calcutta the state of things was so bad, that the Calcutta Agent could not sell them. Perhaps I had better not mention the names of the houses or the bills, for many of them, though not in very good credit then, are all right now. Bills for £53,000 were received in July, by the Calcutta Agent from China. Of the bills included in that credit he was only able to sell £11,000; the rest he put down as quite unsaleable. That sum of £11,000 was placed at our disposal, and we drew for some of it, and gave the draft to the Bank of Bombay. That was about the 10th or 13th of July. It is impossible for me to point out the payment from these mere figures in the account. There were various large sums paid in about that time, for instance on the 12th there is Rs. 1,16,000 and on the 13th Rs. 3,40,000. I think that the amount which we gave the Bank, was included in that payment of the 13th July.

President.—The Asiatic Bank undertook to hand over five and a half lakhs to the Bank of Bombay; and assuming what you say to be correct only Rs. 1,10,000 were paid in fulfilment of that agreement.

Witness.—When the bills were sent to us, we managed to sell Rs. 15,000 more, and the proceeds of those bills were paid in at about the same date, or a day or two afterwards. When the Agent at Calcutta found he could not sell the other bills he sent them to us to do as we liked with them, and we tried to sell them, but could only dispose of that amount.

President.—How much do you say of the five and a half lakhs eventually came into the hands of the Bank of Bombay?

Answer.—About £26,000.

President.—What became of the rest of the bills?

Answer.—They were sent to London.

President.—On behalf of the Bank of Bombay?

Answer.—No.

President.—Then it is quite clear that the Asiatic Bank did not fulfil its engagement.

4 Sept. 1868.

Mr. R. H. Baker.

Witness.—We gave them remittances, they would not have taken bills on England, they were not at liberty to transact business of that nature, they might have forwarded them for collection to some other Bank, but I think it was not done. Perhaps Mr. Morrison explained the circumstances to them how the remittances came forward, for he was in daily communication with the Bank of Bombay.

President.—You also promised to give a lien on funds coming from Calcutta, two lakhs, and on Java Guilders three lakhs; were those ever handed over to the Bank of Bombay?

Witness.—I cannot give any explanation about that. Java Guilders used to come to the Agent at Calcutta, and it is possible that the Manager at Singapore, where the Java Guilders came from, might have led Mr. Morrison to expect a remittance of them to Calcutta, but I cannot find any trace of that.

I cannot find any trace of Java Guilders having come to the Bank of Bombay.

President.—Then we have "a lien on funds now on their way from Calcutta," that was the sum mentioned in the cipher telegram, was it not?

Witness.—There was one telegram the cipher of which we read wrongly; the words meant £70,000, and the Agent there used it as meaning only 70,000 dollars, but we read it as Rs. 70,000 worth of dollars, that would be less than two lakhs, about Rs. 1,60,000.

President.—Did that sum ever come into the hands of the Bank of Bombay?

Witness.—I cannot say, I have never been able to trace it.

President.—The bill on B. H. Cama, Sons, and Co. for Rs. 50,000 fell due on the 28th of July, was that realised by the Bank?

Witness.—No, they failed just before the bill was due; they went under private trust, and it was never realised. I do not know whether a dividend has been paid on that estate; they had plenty of property, a house at Malabar Hill and one or two shops.

President.—With respect to a lien on remittances from the Head Office and all the Branches, did you give that, do you remember?

Witness.—I cannot say, if it is mentioned in Mr. Morrison's letter, he may have done so.

President.—Did the trustees of B. H. Cama's estate give a lien on the remittances expected by them from China?

Witness.—There were hardly sufficient funds to the credit of the Trustees' account to pay every one, and they expected these remittances from China to have arrived sooner than they did. The dividend had been declared when they arrived.

President.—I believe the Bank of Bombay did not lose anything by that.

Witness.—I believe not.

President.—On the 23rd of August additional securities were given, the first was, "cash on Mail day, the 23rd." Does that mean the 23rd of the following September, or that very day?

Witness.—I think that very day. We had sold bills on London, but could not get paid for them till that Mail day.

President.—There was a sum of Rs. 1,85,347 paid on that day; was that the sum?

Witness.—I cannot say, I should think it must have been. We had credit on the London and Joint Stock Bank, and it was the custom to pay for bills on the Mail day, and that sum I expect is the product of the bills which we sold. It does not come up to two lakhs. I suppose we did not sell much; and we lost so much upon the exchange.

President.—The next item is "proceeds of Government paper, &c., Rs. 1,50,000," what explanation have you to give of that item?

Witness.—I cannot give you much explanation about that, there was a balance paid to the credit of the Bank of Bombay at the time, but the fact was overlooked that Mr. Steel had some liabilities to meet in Calcutta, and so he had to use part of the funds for his own liabilities.

President.—That was a very loose way of doing business. Mr. Morrison ought to have ascertained that he had the power to make over those funds, and that Mr. Steel had no claims on them. It was treating the Bank of Bombay very unfairly, and I think Mr. Morrison should have known better.

Witness.—Mr. Steel will be able to tell you, and as he was Agent at Calcutta he will be able to explain about the five and a half lakhs.

President.—There is another very doubtful security —"first lien on twenty-five lakhs of capital."

Witness.—That was mentioned in the letter submitted for the approval of the Directors.

President.—I should doubt the power of any Director to give such a security as that.

Witness.—It was never done. In the letter it was stated distinctly that it was subject to the approval of the Directors in London; and when Mr. Morrison wrote to the Directors they repudiated the thing entirely.

President.—Can you explain how the claim on Muggonbhoy Huttising for two lakhs came into the possession of the Bank of Bombay?

Witness.—I think the only two creditors of Muggonbhoy were the Bank of Bombay and the Asiatic Bank, and there was some arrangement by which Mr. Morrison handed over all the securities he had to the Bank of Bombay, and he undertook to realise them and hand over the proceeds.

President.—What was your understanding of this transaction? Did you consider it a cash credit granted to the Asiatic Bank?

Witness.—I think it was called so at the beginning. As a cash credit it ought to have stopped as soon as the twenty lakhs had been drawn, and as the securities against it were realised the cash credit ought to have been reduced. I do not think it was ever drawn up to twenty lakhs.

The account was not always drawn upon up to twenty lakhs. I think when the different arrangements were made, that our debt was not so heavy, for instance, on July 14th our debt was Rs. 5,85,000; other securities were deposited and the account went on.

President.—The real working of that system is this—Credit was granted to the Asiatic Bank, and at first good securities were deposited, these securities are sold, and yet the Bank of Bombay remained involved, the Asiatic Bank owing them large balances, and then the Bank of Bombay had to put up with inferior securities, or put their large balances in peril?

Witness.—I think that every time a fresh arrangement was made they might have pulled us up, and the security would have almost, if not entirely covered the liability. I never heard what relations there were between Mr. Robertson and Mr. Morrison, or whether they were on friendly terms and carrying on joint speculations.

Mr. Vittul Narayen.

VITTUL NARAYEN, affirmed.

I was formerly a Clerk in the Bank of Bombay, in charge of the fixed loan department. I was in that department about eight or nine years. I left the Bank of Bombay in 1864, to take another situation in the Alliance Bank. All applications for fixed loans up to the 1st August 1863 were entered in the Application Book, so were all applications for fixed loans after that date. I refer to loans on Government securities, railway stock, or bullion; loans on deposit of shares, or on mere promissory notes were not granted in my time. Only two loans were granted on personal security in my time. I entered them in the Application Book. [After examining the Book.] I can show you loans granted on personal security entered in the Loan Register. [Turns to the Loan Register.] I find here an entry of the first loan on personal security, loan granted to Messrs. Nicol and Co., of four lakhs, on the 22nd of July 1864. I find a second entry of a loan to them in August 1864. I turn to the Application Book; the loan of four lakhs is entered in it, and has been struck out; the entry is cancelled, and almost illegible. There is no entry of the second loan in the Application Book. Mr. Blair gave me an order at that time that loans granted on personal security were not to be entered in the Application Book. There was a separate account kept of them in the Loan Register. [Points out the separate account in the Register.] I find loans to Cursondass Madhowdass, Mayabhoy Hemabhoy, and Muggonbhoy Huttising entered in the Loan Register, but not in the Application Book; they were entered by me in the Loan Register. I was succeeded in the Department by a Portuguese Clerk. I do not know his name.

4 Sept. 1868.

Mr. W. Steel.

4th September 1868.

I was the Agent of the Asiatic Bank at Calcutta in the year 1866. I remember expecting to receive about five lakhs (not five and a half lakhs) from China, about the 3rd of July 1866. I received the remittance, but in the shape of bills on London for £53,000, which were unsaleable at the time. I sold some of them. I sold bills for £33,000 out of the £53,000, and with the proceeds met drafts drawn on the Calcutta Branch by the Hong Kong Branch. I sent the remaining bills for £24,800 to Bombay.

President.—Mr. Baker has said that you realized £11,000 and sent the rest of the bills forward.

Witness.—They realized about £15,000, and sent the rest home. If the remittances had come in the form in which I ordered them, the Bank of Bombay Agent would have had the whole, but they came in a form which was unavailable. I had other drafts to meet. I cannot give any information about the two other sums which were assigned to the Bank of Bombay by the Asiatic Bank, on the 13th of July 1866, a sum of two lakhs then on its way from Calcutta, and Java Guilders three lakhs. On the 14th of July I authorized the Bombay Agent to draw on me for one and a half lakhs, which he did. We often had Java Guilders, but I see nothing in the telegrams or letters to lead me to suppose that there were Java Guilders ordered by Mr. Morrison which were not sent.

I am aware that on the 23rd of August the Asiatic Bank agreed to pay to the Bank of Bombay the proceeds of Government paper and Bank of Bengal shares sent to Calcutta for sale. I had Government paper, but it was all pledged; there was a margin on it of Rs. 75,000, which I may have placed at Mr. Morrison's disposal, and which I dare say I did. I am not sure; I cannot discover anything to lead me to suppose I did. I sold a number of Bank of Bengal shares at that time, the proceeds went to the Port Canning Company, who were very pressing. I should think that the Bank of Bombay had taken an assignment of those funds without being quite sure that we could give them. I can explain Mr. Morrison's statement that he had been misled by a telegram received from Calcutta in cipher as to funds which he expected, it was owing to our code of signals. There was no word in it to represent dollars, and I used the one for pounds instead, and advised £70,000 as coming by the French steamer. In this instance there should have been no mistake, as I told him in the last part of the telegram that he might draw for one and a half lakhs; even if he had been misled, the last part of it ought to have corrected him; he was only authorized to draw one and a half lakhs. I had used the same word on former occasions. I do not think that it had ever been misunderstood before.

To Major Innes.—I used in the telegram the word representing pounds sterling.

After the next witness had been examined, Mr. Steel returned, and said that he had ascertained that he was incorrect in stating that he had sold bills remitted from China to the extent of £33,000, and that he ought to have said £29,000.

4 Sept. 1868.

Mr. C. de Cunha.

4th September 1868.

CLEMENT DE CUNHA, sworn.

I am employed as a Clerk in the New Bank of Bombay, Limited. I was employed in the Bank of Bombay in the years 1864 and 1865. I was in charge of the Ledger of Fixed Loans. I took charge of that Department at the end of 1864, when Vittul Narayen left the Bank. I was not accustomed to enter the applications for advances upon personal security in the Application Book. Loans on personal security were managed upstairs by the Secretary and Treasurer, or by the Deputy Treasurer; I never entered them in the Application Book. I entered loans on Government securities, railway stock, and bullion in the Application Book. When I succeeded Vittul Narayen I found it the practice not to enter loans on personal security in the Application Book, and I pursued the course that had been adopted before.

To Mr. Melvill.—Mr. Blair did not give me any orders about it. I went on just as I found the book. I entered some transactions on personal security in the Register of Loans.

To the President.—I knew that it was the practice to carry on this sort of business upstairs, the Secretary used to send a memorandum to the Accountant and he used to send it to me; when he gave me the memorandum, I used to prepare the bond and promissory note for the party to sign, and I also entered it in the Register of Loans. I did not enter it in the Application Book, because it was not the practice to do so.

To Mr. Melvill.—Some borrowers signed both a bond and a promissory note.

Mr. Bomanjee Cursetjee Cama.

9th September 1868.

BOMANJEE CURSETJEE CAMA, appears and states as follows:—

I want to make a correction of the statement which I made in my examination on the 24th of July. It is with reference to the loan of two lakhs obtained in 1863. I was asked what was done with the money by Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff, and I said I did not know, but I now find, from inquiries which I have since made, that that money was appropriated to my own use, but that loan was repaid by Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff with interest. I do not think that this loan was mixed up with any other. I have not been able to ascertain anything more regarding the letter which you showed me.

Members.

MAJOR J. J. MCLEOD INNES, R.E.V.C. | MAXWELL MELVILL, ESQ.

Secretary.

F. D. CHAUNTRELL, ESQ.

9 Nov. 1868.

(Mr. Newmarch.) Mr. President and gentlemen, before the witnesses are called, I request to be allowed to address a few words to the Commissioners.

(President.) For whom do you appear?

(Mr. Newmarch.) I am instructed by Messrs. Graham and Lyde to appear as counsel on behalf of the Committee of English shareholders, and certain individual shareholders.

(President.) Will you kindly mention their names?

(Mr. Newmarch.) I have not the names of the individual shareholders.

(President.) I shall be obliged if you will get them for us. I have no doubt that the person who instructs you will let us know both their names, and their number.

(Mr. Lyde.) We say that their number is upwards of 20, but we are not prepared to hand in their names now.

(Mr. Newmarch.) We will do so in the course of the day.

(President.) I am quite satisfied with that.

(Mr. Newmarch.) I have seen the correspondence which has passed between the Commissioners and Messrs. Graham and Lyde, in which the Commissioners say that they cannot recognize the appearance of counsel before them, and I would wish, with deference to the Commissioners, to be allowed to say a few words, hoping to induce the Commissioners to change that view.

(President.) Will you kindly state first of all what your application is, and will you give us that application in writing?

(Mr. Newmarch.) My application at present is merely to be allowed to act as counsel before the Commissioners on behalf of those shareholders whom I represent, and to be permitted to cross-examine any witnesses.

(President.) You have not it in writing?

(Mr. Newmarch.) No, sir.

(President.) Then will you allow me to take down what you apply for?

(Mr. Newmarch.) I apply to be allowed to appear before the Commissioners as counsel.

(President.) As counsel generally?

(Mr. Newmarch.) Yes, sir; on behalf of the Committee of English shareholders and certain other shareholders whose names I will hand in to the Commissioners in the course of the day, and to be allowed to cross-examine the witnesses who may be produced before the Commissioners, and, if so instructed, to produce evidence before the Commissioners.

I may mention that at present I have been very imperfectly instructed, and have not been able to have a perfect perusal of what has taken place before the Commissioners. I observe what the Commissioners have allowed, but it appears to me that it would very much cripple counsel if he could only put his questions through the Commissioners themselves. I have jotted down very hurriedly a few points, which, with the permission of the Commissioners, I will mention to them now, upon which I think that the shareholders might wish to push the Inquiry, it not being the Inquiry which has been so very ably pushed by the Commissioners themselves in Bombay; but there being other points upon which the interests of the shareholders would wish them to push the Inquiry further, and with the permission of the Commissioners, I would mention some of those points, and they will see that the nature of the examination of witnesses upon those points will necessarily involve in a great measure a cross-examination, which could hardly be pushed with the vigour with which a cross-examination should be pushed, unless the counsel were allowed to put his questions directly, of course subject to the discretion of the Commissioners in over-ruling any particular questions which he might wish to put.

The points, sir, which I have noted down are the following:—"What were the circumstances under which the important modifications of the old charter of the Bank of Bombay, and which appear in the new charter, were introduced into the latter; more especially, by whom and with what object they were introduced, and what consideration did they receive while in progress from the Government of Bombay and its officers, the Government of India, and the Home Government respectively?

What steps, if any, were taken to inform the shareholders of the nature of those modifications, and to obtain their consent to such modifications before they were passed into law?

How the Bill containing such modifications was introduced into and passed by the Legislative Council of Bombay, and was the nature of those modifications then taken into consideration by the Council, and their expedience inquired into, and, if not, owing to what causes did those modifications escape consideration?

After the board has been obliged to apply to Government for ascertaining, and the attention of Government has been positively called to the modifications in the new charter, and the difference between the charter of the Bank of Bombay and those of the Banks of Bengal and Madras respectively, what steps were taken to amend this charter?

Why were those steps so long delayed, or why did they not go further in assimilating the business of the Bank of Bombay and that of the Banks of Bengal and Madras?

What were the circumstances under which so large and rapid an increase was made of the capital of the bank after the passing of this new charter?

Was the expedience of making such increase considered by the Government of Bombay, and, if so, on what representations, or for what reasons, did Government sanction the increase?

What was the part taken by the Government Directors at Bombay in the management of the affairs of the bank, and what system was adopted for keeping the Government of Bombay informed regarding the affairs and course of business of the bank, and for communicating the views of the Government of Bombay upon such affairs and course of business to the bank?

Was the system pursued the same before and after the passing of the new charter? Did the system in respect of the above matters adopted at Bombay differ from that pursued with respect to the same matters in the Bank of Bengal, and why should there have been such difference?

After the attention of the Government of Bombay had been specially called by the Government of India to the system pursued with respect to the above matters in the Bank of Bengal, and similar vigilance recommended at Bombay, was any and what alteration made in the system at Bombay?

What were the steps taken, after the difficulties of the Bank of Bombay had been brought to the notice of Government, to ascertain the true position of the bank's affairs; and owing to what causes was that information so long kept back, and owing to what causes was the information given on this point from time to time so erroneous? And what were the measures taken by Government to verify the information afforded, more especially on the occasion of the passing of the Act 1. of 1867 for reducing the bank's nominal capital?

What were the causes of the delay which took place in taking measures to improve the position of the bank after attention had been fully called to the objectionable nature of the business carried on previously to June 1865? Might the position of the bank have been relieved by more timely measures?

Those were a few of the points which occurred to me, and which I very hurriedly jotted down; and I think that the Commissioners will see that upon those points many of the witnesses should be rather strictly cross-examined.

(President.) Our own examination is a cross-examination.

(Mr. Newmarch.) Yes, sir, and most ably conducted; I only propose, after the Commissioners have completed their examination of each witness, that if I thought that upon any points the examination had not been pushed so fully as it might be, and as my instructions might be to push it, I should then take the witness in hand to cross-examine him myself, of course subject to the supervision of the Commissioners, and to their stopping me if I were wishing to push my examination beyond the bounds of propriety.

(President.) Have you concluded your statement?

(Mr. Newmarch.) I have, sir.

(President.) To avoid any misconception, the Commissioners will write their decision upon the point to which you have called their attention. I shall be obliged to you if you will hand in your paper of the points upon which you think that you would wish to cross-examine. I will only observe that every one of those points has been fully gone into by the Commissioners, and in fact they are satisfied that upon a great many of those points they have got to the bottom of the matter, but that may not appear in the evidence. However, we will give our opinion in writing to-morrow upon the application. In the meantime we cannot allow any interference with the Commissioners and their proceedings.

(Mr. Newmarch.) Of course if the Commissioners do not allow me to appear as counsel I shall avail myself of the less extended power.

(President.) Perhaps sufficient for the day is the evil thereof. We will consider your first application. Our offer to those whom you represent was not accepted. When we have decided upon the first application then it will be time enough to consider any other application which you may think fit to make.

(Mr. Newmarch.) The Commissioners will understand that what I have stated are not the whole of the points, but that they are only those points which occur to me at present, being imperfectly instructed.

Mr. Blair.

MR. JAMES BLAIR called:

(President.) I believe that the Secretary has received some letters from Mr. Blair; he will perhaps read them.

(Secretary.) By your directions sir I wrote to Mr. Blair, who was then in Edinburgh, requiring him to appear on the 2d instant, and received a letter from him stating that he would be present. In consequence of the postponement of the first sitting of the Commission from the 2d of November until to-day, I sent a telegram to Mr. Blair and another letter to him, informing him that his presence would not be required until to-day, and received an answer from him, stating that he would appear to-day, and after his arrival in town a summons was served upon him requiring him to attend to-day. I had no communication from him during the week, but have this morning received the following letter from him:—"To the Secretary, Bank of Bombay Commission, India Office. Sir, although still suffering much from the consequences of injury to the spine, caused by a fall from my horse in Poonah last year, I came up here to appear before the Commission, even against the advice of my wife, my friends, and relations; but having consulted my medical attendants, Dr. Alexander Wood, of Edinburgh, and Mr. Paget, of London, they are of opinion that I cannot appear before the Commission without serious risk to my health, and possibly to my life, as will be seen from the accompanying medical certificates of these gentlemen. As recommended by Dr. Wood, I have prepared from my notes and papers a statement explanatory of my action as late Secretary and Treasurer of the Bank of Bombay, which I enclose, and I have to submit that the same, as well as this letter and medical certificates, be entered in the proceedings of the Commission. I have to state that in the event of further information being required, I shall be ready to give a written reply to any questions that may be considered necessary, my desire being to afford full information to the Commission. I have further to state, that I am ready, if necessary, to appear before any medical man the Commissioners may appoint, should they desire to have the certificates of such eminent men as Dr. Alexander Wood and Mr. Paget confirmed. I have the honour to be, Sir, Your most obedient servant, JAMES BLAIR. No. 90, Richmond Road, Bayswater. 7th November 1868." Mr. Wood's certificate is as follows:—

(President.) What is the date of Mr. Wood's certificate?

(Secretary.) The 4th November 1868.

Mr. Blair.
9 Nov. 1868.

(Secretary.) "I hereby certify on honour and conscience that Mr. James Blair, late Secretary of the Bombay Bank, has been under my professional care. That Mr. Blair sustained a severe injury to his spine by a fall from his horse about a year ago, which has left his nervous system in a very impaired condition. That Mr. Blair is naturally of an excitable temperament. That under these circumstances it is my decided opinion that Mr. Blair cannot be subjected to an examination by counsel without serious risk to his health and even to his life. Under these circumstances I would suggest that Mr. Blair should be allowed to give in a written statement to the Commission, and that if further information is required, it should be obtained by written questions and answers, or by private interrogatories in the presence of a medical man, who should have power to stop the examination at any time should Mr. Blair appear to be suffering from its effects. Alexander Wood, M.D., F.R.C.P.E., late President of the Royal College of Physicians, Edinburgh, and Member of the General Council of Medical Education and Registration of the United Kingdom." Mr. Paget's certificate is dated 5th November, and is as follows: "Mr. Blair has twice consulted me respecting the consequences of a very severe injury of the spinal marrow sustained in India in October 1867. I certify that it is of very great importance for his recovery that he should have long continued rest of his whole nervous system, and that it will be dangerous to subject him to a prolonged oral examination on any difficult matters of business. James Paget."

(President.) I intended to examine Mr. Blair probably for some days. I think that the Secretary had better put himself in communication with Mr. Blair, and tell him that we have no power under the Act (quite different from the Indian Act) to take anything except in public; and that therefore we must trouble him to come here. As at present advised we do not intend to subject him to cross-examination by counsel, but it will be by the Commissioners, unless we change our opinion by to-morrow morning; and we must have him here. The Secretary had better tell him that it is necessary, for his own character, that he should be here, and we shall see what the effect of that is first, and perhaps the Secretary had better see him himself. We must call the next witness.

Mr. Birch.

Sylvester Douglas Birch sworn and examined.

1. (President.) I believe you are a retired member of the Madras Civil Service?—I am.

2. I believe you were employed in Bombay in the financial department under the Government of India?—I was.

3. In the years 1862, 1863, and 1864, and the early part of 1865?—I am not certain of the exact time I commenced.

4. But at all events in 1863, 1864, and the early part of 1865?—Yes; I beg your pardon; I was so employed in 1862.

5. What office did you hold in Bombay?—Deputy Accountant-General.

6. When were you appointed a Government director of the Bank of Bombay?—I have not the date, but it was shortly after my arrival in Bombay, which was at the commencement of July or the end of June 1859.

7. When were you appointed President of the bank?—I do not remember; I think that it was at the second meeting which I attended in Bombay.

8. You were appointed President at once, were you not?—No, I was not appointed; I declined to accept the office in the first instance, and Mr. H. B. Ellis was, I think, the President first.

9—10. When did you become President?—I think that it was at the second meeting of the board after I arrived in Bombay.

11. When did you resign the office of President?—On the 28th of February 1865.

12. I find that the last meeting which you attended was on the 23rd of February?—Yes.

13. I believe that you had had considerable previous experience as a Government Director of Banks?—I had been Government director of the Bank of Madras for very many years.

14. Then you were, unlike in that respect most of the Government Directors of the Bank of Bombay, namely, a person of considerable banking experience?—So I believe.

15. You, I suppose, have had full opportunities of observing the working of the old Act No. 3. of 1840, by which the Bank of Bombay was incorporated?—Yes.

16. You also, as chairman, no doubt carefully considered the proposed alterations which were afterwards engrafted into the Act No. 10. of 1863?—I did not.

17. Why not?—Because the Financial Secretary to the Government of Bombay had his seat at the board. The charter was referred to a committee.

18. Why did you, as chairman not take into consideration the alterations. It was simply, I understand, because the Financial Secretary was on the board?—It was referred to a special committee of the board, and I was not on that special committee.

19. Was not the draft of the bill afterwards brought before the whole board, and discussed there?—Yes; but I took no particular part in it as chairman.

20. Surely you ought to have taken a particular part in it?—I do not see that, when the Financial Secretary to the Government of Bombay was there. I was not in communication with them in that way.

21. But, as President, you were representing the bank interests as well as those of the Government. The Financial Secretary might represent the Government, but you, as President, were representing the whole bank. I shall have to take you through those alterations, and ask you whether you did or did not consider them. I will take you first of all through the proceedings. Was not it resolved by the board, on the 24th of October 1861, that a Draft Act should be prepared by the solicitors in consultation with two directors, Messrs. Scott and Foggo?—I thought that there were three directors.

22. No; there were two, namely, Messrs. Scott and Foggo; there was afterwards a change, and Mr. Baumbach came in when Mr. Scott retired. Do you doubt that?—No.

23. On the 7th of November 1861 it was presented to the board approved by the Committee, and the board resolved that it should be sent on to the Government. On the 20th of December 1861 there was a meeting of the proprietors with reference to the new Act; were you present at that meeting?—I do not remember it.

24. Your name does not appear as having been present at that meeting?—Very likely I was not present, for it was a rule with us in Madras, as Government Directors, not to attend meetings of shareholders.

25. But you did afterwards attend as President?—Yes.

26. Was this the resolution passed: "That the directors be authorized to enter into and make such arrangements with Government as may appear expedient and advantageous to the bank, for taking over the business of the general treasury of Bombay; and for the management of the currency here, and in the mofussil under Act 19. of 1861;" it then proceeds as follows: "That the Directors be authorized to take such steps for varying, altering, or annulling any or all of the provisions of the Acts under which the bank is at present constituted, and for obtaining the re-incorporation of the bank as to them may appear expedient for securing the efficient working of the bank?—I have no doubt that I saw that.

Mr. Birch.

9 Nov. 1868.

27. You have no doubt that that was the resolution come to?—If it is on the records, I have no doubt about it.

28. I suppose that that meeting was duly advertised under the provisions of the Act?—I should imagine so.

29. No objection has ever been taken to it?—Not that I am aware of.

30. Was not Mr. Baumbach substituted for Mr. Scott on his retirement as a member of that committee of the board?—I do not remember.

31. On the 3d of February 1863 there was a consultation of the Directors upon the draft bill, was there not, after the Committee had done with it?—I presume that it would be submitted to the Directors.

32. You do not seem to have been present on that occasion either, but you read the alterations, and saw what alterations were actually made?—No doubt I did.

33. Did you observe that the Act No. 3. of 1840 prohibited the discount of negotiable securities on which the responsibility of two persons did not appear?—Yes, I knew that.

34. Did you remark that the new Act contained no such provision?—I did not remark it at the time.

35. Did not you remark that the old Act contained a provision that no negotiable securities were to be discounted which had a longer time to run than three months?—I knew that.

36. Did not you remark that the new Act contained no such provision?—I believe that I knew that.

37. Did the old Act provide that money should not be lent in any way for a longer period than three months?—Yes.

38. And the new Act did not contain any such provision?—I believe that it did not.

39. The old Act provided that no money was to be lent on any bank share or certificate of shares?—It did.

40. What was the provision in the new Act? Did not the new Act provide that the bank might advance and lend on the security of shares in any of the public companies in India?—I forget what the exact words used were.

41. "Other public companies in India"?—Yes, I believe so.

42. Did not the old Act provide that no money was to be lent either by way of discount, loan, or cash credit, or in any way to any individual or partnership firm for a greater amount than three lacs?—It did.

43. Was there any such limitation in the new Act?—There was not.

44. The old Act provided that cash accounts might be kept and that deposits might be received, but the new Act contained besides a provision that cash accounts might be kept and money received by way of deposit, a provision that cash credits might be granted without any restriction as to how or in what way they were to be granted, or within what amount; did you remark that?—I believe that I did.

45. The old Act contained a provision that there should be no discount or loan granted unless the cash in the possession of the bank and immediately available should be equal to at least one-fourth of all the claims against the bank outstanding at the time, and payable on demand?—It did.

46. And that was omitted in the new Act?—I believe it was.

47. Probably that omission was in consequence of the power to issue notes being taken away?—I imagine that it was.

48. Did not the old Act provide that no person keeping an account with the bank should be allowed to overdraw it?—It did.

49. Did the new Act provide that?—I do not know whether it provided it or not.

50. It did provide for it originally in one of the clauses of Schedule B., but that schedule was struck out by the Legislative Council. Were you aware of it?—No, I was not. I do not remember it.

51. Did not the old Act require that the consent of the Governor-General should be given to any increase of the capital?—I do not remember that.

52. It did. Do you remember whether the new Act required that?—I do not.

53. It did not. You must know that you never got the consent of the Governor-General to the increase of capital?—To which increase?

54. To either of them. By the old Act you could not increase the capital without going to the Governor-General for his consent. There is no such provision in the new Act?—I do not believe that we did get the consent of the Governor-General.

55. But that was one of the alterations in the new Act, that you did not require his consent?—Yes.

56. Another alteration of the old Act made in the new was, that whereas the capital of the concern was formerly limited to about half a crore, power was given to the shareholders to increase the capital to two crores and ten lacs without the consent of anybody?—Yes. Before you proceed may I call your attention to page 69 of the Blue Book, where it appears that I suggested "that it might save time were the bank required to submit to Government a copy of its present charter, modified in reference to the proposed alterations in the constitution of the bank, that the opinion of the law officers of the Government might be taken." It was referred to me, I imagine, as Accountant-General, and I sent back this answer.

57. It was no doubt so referred; we have examined the Advocate-General of the time upon it. Was it your opinion that these alterations in the new Act were advisable or proper or prudent?—It depends upon how they were worked out; in themselves I could see nothing wrong.

58. You think that this great body of alterations was a wise and prudent measure if properly carried out?—If properly carried out.

59. By whom do you mean?—By the board and the bank officers.

60. Do you think that it was a wise and prudent measure to allow the discount of a promissory note with a single name?—It would depend upon who the party was, and what the amount was.

61. But you think that it was a prudent measure to introduce into a bank charter a provision that that power should exist. No doubt occasionally there might be some persons to whom you might lend money without any promissory note at all, but do you think that it was a wise banking measure to allow the bank to lend money on a negotiable security with merely one name. Do you think that it was a wise enactment to authorize the authorities of the bank to do that?—I cannot see any harm in it.

62. Do you think that it was a wise enactment to put no limit upon the time for which bills and loans were to run?—No, I do not.

63. Do you not know that long loans in all banking experience are always considered to be bad banking?—I do.

64. Are not they always apt to become what are called dead loans?—Something very like it.

65. Do you think that it was advisable to enable the bank authorities to lend money upon the shares of the public companies in India?—It would depend upon what those public companies were.

66. But there was no restriction upon the nature or kind of public companies; the words are "other public companies in India"?—The first Act specified only the railway companies.

67. It was not the Act No. 3. of 1840, but it was an Act subsequently passed which was engrafted on that Act, and which enabled you to lend on railway shares; but this provision allowed you to lend money on the shares of public companies generally; do you think that that was a wise measure?—It is impossible to give a general answer to that question. I do not see how you were to restrict it, and how you were to pick out the companies. Were you to specify the whole of them or leave it to the directors.

68. Neither does there appear to have been any restriction upon your advancing money on shares, the calls upon which were not paid up, nor any restriction upon your advancing upon the premia of shares. Do you think that wise and prudent?—No.

69. Then there ought to have been that restriction to prevent the bank doing such things as that; that you must admit, do not you think so?—I think that it would have been advisable.

70. We shall go through a great number of these cases presently, when we take you through the changes in the practice. I therefore will not ask you further now about those changes. I think you have told me that you knew of the fact that Schedule B., which was originally in the Act No. 10. of 1863, was struck out by the Legislative Council?—Did I tell you so?

71. I understood you to say so.—I think not. I think that you told me.

72. Were you aware of that schedule being in the draft when it was sent up to the Legislative Council?—I never saw the draft that I remember.

73. Did you never see it before it was sent up to the Council? Surely as President, with the responsibility attached to that office, you would have seen so important a document before it went up to the Council?—I do not remember it.

74. Then you do not remember that Schedule B. at all?—The first two provisions were a part of the old Act.

75. They were, but a great number of those were provisions which were struck out, and which are not now in the new Act; you do not recollect that?—I do not remember.

76. When the Act was passed did not you then find out that the Schedule B. had been struck out?—I do not remember it.

77. Did Mr. Robertson call your attention to the fact that Schedule B. had been struck out of that Act?—I do not remember it.

78. Did any member of the direction suggest the necessity of passing some byelaws?—It was suggested.

79. Was not it suggested on the ground of Schedule B. being struck out?—I do not remember.

80. In point of fact, did you take any steps whatever to have any byelaws passed?—I think that steps were taken at one time.

81. Long after you left India?—No, I think before.

82. Can you tell me when?—I cannot.

83. Will you undertake to say that any byelaws were ever prepared from the passing of the Act No. 10. of 1863, down to the 31st of March 1866?—No, I cannot.

84. Then, in fact, we may assume that there were no byelaws; they would appear somewhere or other, I suppose, if there were any, and you could refer to them?—If they were passed, I could refer to them.

85. We find none.—Do you find no minutes about them at all?

86. No, nor has any one ever suggested that any byelaws were passed. I think that we must assume that there were no byelaws?—I suppose that you must.

87. Surely byelaws were necessary?—In what way do you mean?

88. Surely it was necessary to pass some byelaws to determine the powers of the secretary in granting discounts and cash credits, or open or fixed loans; surely his powers ought to have been defined in some manner?—I thought that they were defined.

89. We shall come to that presently; and I shall be very glad if you will point out how that was done. You do not recollect any such byelaws?—I do not.

90. Upon those words, "other public companies in "India," I shall not ask you any questions as to how they got into the Act, because the Commissioners have already thoroughly disposed of that point; but those words appear to have excited the observation of the board directly the Act passed, did they not, if they never attracted their attention before?—I believe that there was a resolution passed by the board not to act upon them, but I think that I was not in Bombay at that time. I was at Poonah upon three months' leave.

91. Then you had nothing to do with this most prudent resolution which was passed at that date?—Perhaps not, but I heard of it after I came back.

The President reads from the board minutes as follows:—

"Resolved, that for the present, and until further orders, any application for advances on any bank shares, or of any other public company other than Government banks, be submitted to the board and not granted by the secretary."

92. You had nothing to do with that resolution of the 6th August 1863; you were at Poonah?—I was at Poonah.

93. But I suppose that you were aware shortly afterwards of the passing of that resolution?—I was.

94. And I suppose that you approved of it?—I did.

95. I believe that you were a very industrious chairman of the Bank of Bombay?—May I ask what you mean by "industrious"?

96. That you were at the bank almost every day?—I believe that I was not.

97. The evidence which we had before us in India was that you were there almost every day?—May I ask whose evidence that was?

98. I think that Premchund Roychund said so?—I think that you yourself said that I was there for an hour every day, and you referred to Mr. Premchund Roychund, and he said "yes," but I deny it.

99. How often were you at the bank?—I was at Poonah in July, August, and September 1864, and when I returned from Poonah I looked in occasionally, but very seldom, for I was very ill. I do not suppose that I was once a week at the bank.

100. Other than the board day?—Other than the board day. I was at my office at 11 o'clock every day, and I never left my own house till a quarter past 10, and I think that your secretary will bear me out that I could not have driven from my own house to the bank under half an hour. Perhaps you will allow me to show you a note which I received directly I saw that statement. This note is from my assistant, Mr. J. L. Hynes, now of 27, Burton Crescent.

101. (President.) This is the question which I put to Premchund Roychund on the 31st August, "I suppose there is no man in Bombay that we could select better qualified to tell us how the business of the bank was transacted, is there?" And this is his reply, "There are plenty of other men in Bombay who were directors of the bank. I know something of the way in which the business was conducted. During the time when Mr. Blair was secretary, Mr. Birch was chairman. I think he attended at the bank every day, or at all events almost every day, just to talk to Mr. Blair and consult about the business of the bank. He used to come every morning from his house. Sometimes he would stay for one or two hours." That was the evidence of Premchund Roychund, and I think that we had also a statement of Sir Bartle Frere's very much to the same effect. If I understand you aright, it is that you were not an industrious chairman, but the very contrary?—I do not say that at all.

102. Then what do you say?—I do not see that it was the chairman's business to go to the bank every day.

103. I was suggesting something in your praise when I said that you went there every day, but you indignantly repudiate that, and you now say that you attended there once a week. Do you think that you did properly attend to your duties as president of the bank if you attended there only once a week?—I think that I did. I do not define the days on which I did go. The evidence shows that I went there for an hour and a half to two hours every day. I say that I did not, but that I went occasionally there, but certainly not more than twice a week besides the board day.

104. What do you consider that your duties as president were?—I do not see that I had any greater duties than the rest of the directors, except at the boards, and the conduct of the proceedings of the boards.

Mr. Birch.
9 Nov. 1868.

105. You did not consider that you were in a more responsible position than any other director?—I did not.

106. What is there a president for?—For the conduct of the proceedings, and for the secretary to refer to in cases of emergency.

107. Then there is something which he has to do; in cases of emergency the secretary has to consult the president?—The secretary has to refer to the president; he may consult him.

108. Those are some of his duties?—They are.

109. Are there any others?—I hardly know what you refer to.

110. I may be ignorant, but it strikes me that the position of the president of the Bank of Bombay is a very responsible position. I should have thought so. I should have thought that it was his duty more especially to look after the conduct of the secretary and the manner of conducting the business. I should have thought that he was more especially responsible. I want to know what your views of his duties are?—I do not consider that that was my special duty.

111. Then I understand that all you consider your duty to have been was to answer any questions which the secretary might put to you in an emergency?—I suppose that I exercised a general control over the bank, but not a special one.

112. You think that you exercised that general control over the bank by going there once a week besides board days?—Twice a week. Previously to 1864 I was there very often when the bank's capital was very small.

113. How is it that you were there previously to 1864 when there was very little business doing, and were not there in 1864 when a great deal of business was doing?—Because I was in good health before, and I was very ill in the greater part of 1864.

114. You did not resign your position as president?—I would very gladly have done it. I declined to be elected in the first instance, and we had refused in Madras to serve as president, that is to say, any of the Government directors, and it was only on the representation from the board and the secretary that the accountant-general had always held that office in Bombay that I was induced to take it.

115. I ask you particularly whether you were consulted as to the different alterations after the introduction of the new Act?—I have no doubt I was.

116. Were you consulted with respect to each particular discount, cash account, or fixed loan or open loan, which was granted?—I was not.

117. Were you consulted with respect to the large transactions?—No; I was away for three months in July, August, and September 1864 at Poonah.

118. The first period in which all the great mischief was done in the bank is between the 1st of June 1864 (we may almost say the first of July) and the 1st of May 1865. You say that you were not there n July, August, and September 1864?—I was not.

119. Do you mean to say that you were never consulted when a large loan, say of ten lakhs, was granted upon a promissory note?—When do you mean?

120. The Eastern Financial Association, for instance?—No, I was not. May I refer to the statement in the Blue Book?

121. The statement in the Blue Book is extremely incorrect, and we shall have to examine by-and-bye those who prepared it. I am merely taking this as a specimen. On the 18th of October 1864 ten lakhs were passed across the counter of the Bank of Bombay upon a promissory note?—The promissory note of whom?

122. The promissory note of the Eastern Financial Association?—No; if I had anything to do with it it was in the name of all the directors.

123. It was simply signed by Mr. Ryan, the Secretary. In a large loan of this kind were you consulted?—Will you take another case. Will you take the loan on the 8th of November 1864 to the Alliance Financial Corporation?

124. There are two, one on the 21st October 1864 for five lakhs, and another on the 8th November for five lakhs?—I remember a note which they wished to discount, and I remember Mr. Blair bringing it to the notice of the board.

125. Which was that?—I cannot tax my memory as to which it was; it was a discount; the transaction on the 21st of October 1864 was a discount; the bill had the names of the individual directors to it. I think it was so. I remember Mr. Blair asking one day at the board whether he might discount it, and I am not certain who was there, but the answer by some native director was "certainly not, do not take the name of the corporation, but mind that you get the name of each of the directors upon it, and their individual responsibility."

126. As you have referred to that case we will pursue it. Did you know of a cash credit granted to them a few days afterwards (the 8th November 1864) for exactly the same amount, five lakhs?—I do not remember that.

127. Then am I to understand that you were not even consulted as to the granting of this very large amount?—I prove that I was.

128. Yes, on one occasion, but I refer to another?—I do not remember it at all.

129. Were you constantly referred to, or can you give another instance in which you were referred to?—Yes; in this one instance that I have referred to.

130. Was it the habit to refer to you in very large amounts?—No, it was not, so far as I remember.

131. What was your view of the duties of the secretary?—How do you mean?

132. For instance, what were the limits of his power of advancing?—By himself?

133. Yes?—His power was very small, I should say, about two to three lakhs.

134. You thought that he had the power of advancing to the extent of from two to three lakhs upon his own responsibility?—No, I do not think that he had it upon his own responsibility. I think that he was obliged to consult a director.

135. What limit do you think there was upon the power of the secretary?—I think that his power was very small.

136. What amount could he, in your opinion, advance without consulting anybody?—I think that he always had the power of advancing to a small amount, but I cannot say exactly what.

137. But surely as chairman of that bank for years you ought to know what his powers were?—If I could refer to the old charter you would see what his powers were; his powers were restricted there.

138. We are asking now about the new charter. During the time when you were president of the bank what check did you put upon the secretary? What were the limits to the power of the secretary?—I cannot tell you what the amount was, but I think that it was very small.

139. You say that there were no byelaws. Will you point out any resolution limiting his power during the time that you were president?—Was there any resolution giving him the power?

140. No, not that I am aware of, but I ask you whether there was any resolution limiting his power?—I do not believe that there was.

141. Do you remember certain propositions of Cowasjee Jehangeer with the view of increasing the power of the secretary?—I do. I remember one.

142. He says (I am reading from the Minute), "From what I saw to-day in the charter the manager in the above bank has no choice, and the management of the bank is altogether left in the hands of the board of directors. I propose that the director should memorialize the Government to add a clause authorizing the manager to vote on every matter which comes before the board, or ask for his views only on finance arrangements. Please put this note before my colleagues, and I will bring forward before the next board a motion to the above effect." Then he says in another letter, "Sir, the directors of the above bank this day rejected my proposition (reading the same); but in doing so I must express my opinion as to the effects of trusting the whole management to the directors without the manager having a voice, and explain to you as a proprietor my reason for doing so; I must explain in detail (reading the same), as such I consider most vicious to maintain in a public institution such as the Bank of Bombay." His object was to give very great power to the secretary, was it not?—His object was, I believe, to give the secretary a veto over the board.

143. You very properly put a stop to this proposition of Cowasjee Jehangeer, and you were supported by most of the directors, and you made the observations which are recorded upon that minute which I would ask you to read, but I think that what you wrote requires some little explanation. You say this: "In the course of the discussion which has arisen out of Mr. Cowasjee Jehangeer's notices it has been shown that the power which he wishes to confer on the secretary and treasurer of the bank is practically conceded to that officer, and I am of opinion that it is consistent with the proper and effective management of the institution." Will you kindly explain what you meant by that?—He says that the management of the bank is altogether left in the hands of the board of directors. I do not think that it is. I think that the secretary has a voice in everything. I was secretary of the bank of Madras for two years, and therefore I rather felt that the secretary should have some such power as I myself had. I opened the Bank of Madras.

144. As I understood it, Cowasjee Jehangeer proposed to give absolute power to the secretary, and a veto over the directors, and then I find that you write these words,—"In the course of the discussion it has "been shown that the power which he wishes to "confer on the secretary and treasurer of the bank is "practically conceded to that officer." What are we to conclude from that?—His voice in the management.

145. Does not that lead us to the conclusion that you were of opinion that he had very great and exceptional powers?—I do not see that.

146. What other conclusion do you draw?—What I have stated, namely, that he had a voice in the matters which came before the board.

147. "And I am of opinion that it is consistent "with the proper and effective management of the "Institution." Do you think that there is anything in that minute to lead us, or to lead anybody, to suppose that the secretary's powers are in any material degree restricted?—His powers of what?

148. His powers of advancing money?—Certainly I do.

149. How?—Because he never had the power.

150. How do you show that?—I was writing for those who knew the whole.

151. And not for those who did not. Those gentlemen whom we have examined have been unable to show us any resolution or any byelaw restricting the authority of the secretary, and we wish you to show us how that authority is restricted?—That may be.

152. We wish you to give us a more satisfactory explanation of your minute?—I have given you what I believe to have been the case.

153. I do not dispute that. I suppose that there was no very great difference in the management of the bank between Mr. Robertson's time and afterwards, and the time of Mr. Blair?—What was Mr. Robertson's time?

154. Mr. Robertson, in writing a letter to the board on the 7th of March 1866, states these to be the powers of the secretary: "Bank of Bombay, Bombay, 7th March 1866. My dear Hannay, I consider that according to the practice in the bank for some years past, I, as officiating secretary, am empowered to act as follows: 1. To have the entire control of the establishment, head office, and branches (of course under the directors). 2. To discount bank bills and bills on good houses of a currency not exceeding 60 days. There is no limit, but I have hitherto seldom taken over three lakhs of the paper of one house. 3. To grant temporary advances to banks, houses, and other constituents of the bank. 4. To discount bills, and to grant loans and credits on personal security to well-known men. N.B.—Since I have been acting the times have been so exceptional that I granted very few advances without consulting at least one director. 5. The renewal of bills, loans, and credits I consider is left to my own discretion, of course bearing in mind the order of the board not to renew for the full amount if possible, but to get 25 per cent. in cash. Some bills, &c. for special reasons have been renewed in full. 6. To purchase Hoondees for the purpose of providing branches with funds. 7. To purchase and sell bills on Calcutta and Madras. 8. To purchase and sell gold and silver bullion. 9. Power given in July last to attend meetings of creditors of parties indebted to the bank, to agree to propositions made at such meetings, to sign trust deeds, &c. at my discretion. I think these headings include everything. I may say that I consider the order of the president in every case sufficient authority for me to act under, should he not request me to refer any matter to some of the other members of the board." That is signed "D. Robertson." You, of course, are not responsible for Mr. Robertson's proceedings, as he was the secretary after you left India; but he says, "I consider that, according to the practice of the bank for some years past, I, as officiating secretary, am empowered to act as follows." Do you agree with that?—I do not.

155. You do not think that he had those powers?—I do not.

156. Can you point out to us anything which limited them?—No, I cannot; nor can I point out anything which gave them that I am aware of.

157. There is a resolution of the 4th of May 1865, shortly after you left, which shows that the board did then think that the secretary had very large powers, because they put a limit upon them of a most minute kind; but I will not now trouble you with that. Before I leave this point I will ask you again, Will you point out to us what check you had upon the secretary or his proceedings; because it is important for yourself, as holding the situation which you held, that you should be able to satisfy us that you had a check upon him?—The books were laid upon the table every board day, and everything which the secretary had done was in them, according to my belief.

158. You thought so?—I did.

159. The "Application Book" was put before you?—What do you mean by the "Application Book?" There were, I think, no books when I first went into it, excepting a small book. I am not certain, but I think not.

160. What was the practice as to discounts under the old Act?—They were sent round with short minutes.

161. I do not refer to that, but were two names of independent firms required to bills which were to be discounted?—They were.

162. The old practice required that a bill should be limited to three months?—Yes.

163. The old practice was to have a discount list?—An "Opinion Book."

164. There was that too, but I mean a "Discount List." Mr. Stuart's evidence distinctly is that the old practice was to have a "Discount List," which was revised from time to time?—That was the "Opinion Book."

165. There was no other than the "Opinion Book?"—There was no other than the "Opinion Book" that I am aware of. Does Mr. Stuart go on to say that it was prepared by the commercial directors, and was revised by the Government directors?

Mr. Birch.

9 Nov. 1868.

166. I think so?—That is what was called the "Opinion Book."

167. The old practice limited the advances to three lacs?—It did.

168. Under the new Act, after a short time, a practice sprang up of discounting promissory notes with only one name, did it not?—I believe that it did.

169. As a matter of fact, was it not the case that very often bills were discounted which had a longer period to run than three months?—I am not aware of it.

170. Are you not aware of any bill which had as much as nine months to run?—I am not.

171. Did not a practice spring up of referring bills for discount to a native director?—I do not know that they were referred to a native director, but the secretary, I think, had power to refer to one.

172. Did not the practice in your time spring up of referring those cases to Cowasjee Jehangeer or to Premchund Roychund?—Those were always small bills.

173. Cowasjee Jehangeer, I think, retired from the board early in June 1864?—In July, I think.

174. To whom were those bills referred after that time?—To Premchund, as long as he was a director. He had no power when he was not a director, but I dare say that his opinion was asked over and over again.

175. When he was a director his opinion was always taken as to those native bills?—It was.

176. Will you undertake to say that his opinion was not taken when he was not a director?—I will not say that it was not taken, but no one had any right to act upon it.

177. Under the old Act what was the practice as to cash credits?—There were no cash credits except upon Government securities.

178. And all cash credits granted were entered in the "Application Book"?—I believe so.

179. And that "Application Book" was laid upon the table of the board at every board meeting during all the time that you were president?—I do not believe that there were any books brought before the board during the first part of the time that I was there.

180. We do not go further back than the 1st of August 1863, but from that time the "Application Book" was always laid upon the table of the board, was it not?—It was.

181. That "Application Book" should contain every application for a cash credit?—Every cash credit granted.

182. What was the practice under the new Act as to cash credits?—In what way do you mean?

183. At first no cash credit could be granted except upon Government paper or guaranteed railway shares or bullion; what were the cash credits granted upon under the new Act?—I do not remember.

184. Almost immediately after the passing of that Act were not cash credits granted upon promissory notes?—Not that I am aware of.

185. Be very careful, because it is an important matter?—I cannot recal any to my recollection.

186. Are you not aware that cash credits were granted on promissory notes during the year 1863, after the passing of the Act?—I cannot recal any to memory.

187. You were not aware of that fact?—I do not think that I was, so far as my recollection serves me.

188. Do you mean to say that so very great an alteration in the practice of the bank as granting cash credits on promissory notes could take place without your knowledge as president?—I do not remember it.

189. If I were to show you a list of them in this book (referring to A 33) would you be surprised?—I think that I should.

190. Here is one on "October 2nd, Roychund Deepchund, one lac," and another of the same date, "Premchund Roychund, one lac." Those and many others entered in the book were simply on personal security; the entries were made by Mr. De Ga?—I do not remember that.

191. These should all have been entered in the "Application Book," should they not?—Certainly; I should say so.

192. There is not one of them entered in the "Application Book." You will see that it was the continued practice, if you look at this book, to grant those cash credits down to June 1864; we will take that period first?—Yes.

193. I think that it was in June 1864 that the great share mania set in?—Or before.

194. It may have been gradual, but that was the time when it first broke upon Bombay; the shares in the Back Bay and the Financial Association of India and China and all the other speculations then started?—Yes.

195. I find contemporaneously with that, a resolution of the 2nd of June 1864. I see that you were president, and were present on the occasion of the passing of this resolution, to which I wish to call your particular attention?—I remember it.

The same was read by the Secretary as follows:—

"2nd of June 1864.—It is respectfully suggested that the number of credit accounts might be greatly increased if the system practised in Scotland was introduced, viz., on a bond for a certain amount being signed by the party requiring the accommodation with one good name as security, according to the credit of the party. At present, no person, with however good credit, can have a credit account with the bank unless he can lodge Government paper as security, besides his having a bond which has to be renewed every three months; whereas if the above system was adopted the account might run on from year to year, interest being charged at the current rates on the daily balance of the account, and added at the end of every six months when the books of the bank are balanced. There should be a clause in the bond empowering the bank to call up the credit at any time. The bond should also provide for three years' interest at current rates. Agreed to."

196. I see that you were president, and were present on that day?—I was.

197. Were you at that time, viz., the 2nd of June 1864, aware that it had been the constant habit of the bank from the October previous to do the very thing for which authority was asked?—I was not.

198. You were not aware of the falsity of this statement: "At present, no person, in however good credit, can have a credit account with the bank unless he can lodge Government Paper as security, besides signing a bond which has to be renewed every three months." You were not aware that that was untrue?—No, I was not; not to my recollection certainly. The system practised in Scotland is one which I have always advocated.

199. Is there any such Scotch system as granting cash credits with one name?—So I believe.

200. All the authorities say just the reverse, and that they always require in the case of cash credits two names?—I had always understood that it was upon one name.

201. Who was the person that suggested this?—I dare say that I was. I am not certain, but I think that it is very likely that I was the person, because I suggested the same in Madras.

202. Then you were the person under whose instructions this scroll minute was drawn up?—I am not aware that I was.

203. It so happens that this scroll minute is drawn up correctly, and really does state the Scotch practice; originally it stood as follows:—"It is respectfully suggested that the number of credit accounts might be greatly increased if the system practised in Scotland was introduced, viz., on a bond for a certain amount being signed by the party requiring the accommodation, together with two good names as security." That was the original proposition; who was it that altered it? That you say was your proposition?—I proposed it in Madras, I believe, and I should certainly have proposed it in Bombay.

204. Then it was your proposition and it was your understanding that the Scotch system to have two names for a cash credit?—I do not know that I drew it out.

205. But you say that you proposed it in Madras, and that you believe that you proposed it in Bombay?—On one name, I think. I do not know that I proposed it; I know that it was discussed.

206. I thought you said that you had proposed it?—Not to put it in a resolution.

207. Who did propose this; somebody must have proposed such an alteration as this?—Perhaps you know.

208. I know something about it; but I wish to know who was the person that proposed it?—That I do not remember.

209. Can you tell me in whose handwriting that alteration is?—Mr. Blair's, I should say.

210. Who authorized him to change the statement from what was the fact, viz., that a Scotch cash credit required two names and not one name?—I cannot tell you.

211. You were president at that time, and that is the scroll minute of that board meeting?—I cannot say who proposed it. I do not think that I did.

212. There must have been some discussion; an alteration of that kind could not have taken place without some discussion?—I suppose that it could not.

213. Do you mean to say that Mr. Blair took upon himself the responsibility of making that alteration in a minute which you believe to have been suggested by yourself?—I do not know; it was done at the board I presume.

214. Then I suppose it was done at the board with your knowledge?—I presume it was.

215. How came you, as president, to allow a correct statement as to the Scotch cash credit being upon two names to be altered into one name?—Because I believed that it was one name.

216. Can you show us any authority for that statement?—I cannot now.

217. We have had two or three statements made showing the contrary, namely, that the Scotch system always required two names. Mr. Blair was a Scotch banker, was he not?—He had been, I believe, an assistant in one of the Scotch banks before he came out to Bombay.

218. You cannot account for this extraordinary relaxation of the cash credit system?—I cannot.

219. And I am to understand that you were wholly ignorant of the fact that cash credits had for months previously been granted upon the very terms which this resolution was passed to authorize?—I have no recollection of that whatever.

220. You never before saw that little blue book which I have handed to you?—I do not remember to have seen it. I think that if I had seen it my initials would have been placed to it.

221. I do not think that you could have seen it. It was kept by Mr. De Ga, the head of the cash credit department, for his own protection. Did you ever see these interest books, which were the only other books in the bank upon which these cash credits appeared (handing Exhibits A. 28, A. 29, and A. 30 to the witness)?—I do not remember them if they were not laid before the board.

222. They were not laid before the board. Will you try to refresh your memory and tell us who it was that suggested this resolution? You believe that it was yourself; cannot you tell us positively who it was that suggested this resolution?—I cannot.

223. It is, I admit, very unfortunate that we have not had Mr. Blair to examine before calling you?—I wish that you had had him.

224. Do you believe that all the directors were equally ignorant with yourself of the existence of this practice?—If I did not know it, I do not suppose that they did.

225. Mr. Foggo told us that he had never heard of the practice?—That is very likely. Was Mr. Foggo present at that meeting?

226. No; he was not a director then; he retired in 1863. What was the practice under the old Act as to loans?—I believe that they were passed by the secretary.

227. Upon what security?—On Government promissory notes or on goods.

228. Or guaranteed railway stock?—No, I think not; at least I do not remember it; they may have been passed upon it.

229. They were only granted, I believe, for short terms?—Three months.

230. What was the practice under the new Act?—In what way?

231. Upon what security did you begin to grant loans?—Upon the same security.

232. Surely you are aware that the bank granted them upon the promissory notes of the parties?—All of them were upon promissory notes, so far as I remember; there were no bills of exchange.

233. You do not understand me; I am now asking you about fixed loans. Upon what security did you grant fixed loans after the passing of the Act?—I am not aware that they were granted upon anything else except upon Government securities (Government securities had died out altogether and in fact there were none) and on goods.

234. Do you mean to say that during the whole of the years 1864 and 1865, when you were president, you never heard of any loans being granted upon promissory notes and mere bonds?—I do not think that I did.

235. You never heard during the latter part of 1864 and 1865 of any loan being granted upon a mere promissory note and a mere bond?—I do not remember it.

236. Here is one by Brown and Best for two and a half lacs. (Exhibit A 131.) Did you never see this?—I do not remember seeing this.

237. You never saw this bond of Cursetjee Furdoonjee (Exhibit A 51) for 6,25,000 rupees for instance?—I do not remember it.

238. These are most extraordinary documents. Did you ever see any bonds of this kind?—I do not remember them.

239. You observe that the first states as follows: "We have deposited in the Bank of Bombay personal security to the amount of Rs. 2,50,000," the words "personal security" being expressed by the letters "P.S." However, we will speak to Mr. Blair about this; it is more in his department. Were you aware of loans being granted for long periods?—No, I was not.

240. You never heard of a loan of 21 lacs being granted upon personal security?—No; I do not remember it.

241. You never heard of its being granted in August 1864, and not being payable till nearly twelve months afterwards?—No; I do not remember it.

242. You do not recollect Byramjee Hormusjee Cama having a long loan?—No; I recollect his having a loan.

243. Do you remember Mr. Foggo making any objections to the system of referring bills to native directors for their opinion?—I do not.

244. Did you know of intimate relations subsisting between Premchund Roychund and Mr. Blair?—No.

245. Were you aware that they were on very intimate terms?—I know that Mr. Blair knew him, but I was not aware that they were on intimate terms.

246. Were you aware that he gave Premchund a book of blank forms of promissory notes to fill up with the names of any people that he liked?—No, I was not.

247. When did the bank, according to your knowledge, first commence lending actually on shares; I mean on shares virtually and substantially?—Not till the resolution was passed in April 1865.

248. You are not aware that money was lent to buy shares, and that the share certificates were to be deposited for safe custody in the bank?—They may have been deposited for safe custody, but money was not lent to buy shares with that I am aware of.

Mr. Birch.

9 Nov. 1868.

249. You are not aware that a practice had sprung up before you left, and long before that resolution of April 1865, of lending money on the security of shares, the share certificates being deposited in the bank for safe custody?—I do not think that the loans were made upon that security, but if Mr. Blair thought that he had not sufficient security in the man himself, he might have taken the shares as collateral security in that way.

250. You did not know that at the Kalbadevi branch loans were made openly in that way?—I thought that all the Kalbadevi cases were referred to Mr. Blair.

251. You were not aware that the agent there was openly advancing upon shares before April 1865?—I was not.

252. You were not aware that the resolution of the 6th of August 1863 was practically rescinded?—I do not think that it was rescinded.

253. I say practically rescinded?—If Mr. Blair was not perfectly satisfied that the man was good enough for the amount he took shares from him as collateral security.

254. Were those transactions brought before the board as they ought to have been under the resolution of the 6th of August 1863?—I am not aware that they were.

255. Would it not have been your duty as president to have seen that they were brought before the board?—I presume that the loans granted were entered in the application book, which was laid upon the table, or the promissory note, or whatever it might be.

256. It would not be so; negotiable securities were not entered in the "application book," they were entered in the "register of bills," which was not laid before the board. That was Mr. Stewart's evidence as to the old time?—There were no books I think in the old time, but I think that there were afterwards.

257. In point of fact was not it lending on shares?—No, I do not think that it was.

258. Would the money have been lent if those shares had not been deposited?—Perhaps the whole of it would not have been.

259. Then was not it to a certain extent lending on shares?—I do not want to fence the question, but I do not think that it was.

260. Then what do you think?—I think that if a man applied for a large loan, and Mr. Blair thought that he was not good for it, he would say, "I will "give it to you, but you must deposit so and so, for "safety."

261. Then Mr. Blair in fact took the security of these shares, did he not?—He did.

262. How came you to know this?—I heard of it afterwards, but not at the time.

263. When did you first come to the knowledge that Mr. Blair was lending money on shares?—I am not aware that he ever was lending on shares solely.

264. When did you first become aware that Mr. Blair was lending money, and getting share certificates deposited for safe custody?—I do not remember.

265. Did you know it long before you left India?—I do not think that I did long before I left India.

266. When did you first know it?—I do not remember, or I would tell you at once.

267. It appears that Mr. Blair did let you know as to some of his loans which he was making?—I heard that loans had been granted in this way.

268. And I suppose that when you heard it you inquired, and looked into those loans?—I told Mr. Blair that he had no right to do it.

269. Why had he no right to do it?—Under that rule.

270. You therefore thought that it was lending upon shares?—No; I did not think so at the time.

271. Then what wrong did he do?—He had them in safe custody.

272. Did you approve of the practice?—No.

273. If you did not approve of the practice what steps did you take to put a stop to it?—I do not think that I knew it until a very short time before I went away.

274. Can you remember the particular case which was brought under your attention?—I cannot.

275. Were you aware that Mr. Blair was in the habit of lending money for the purpose of buying shares, upon the promise of the certificates of those shares being brought into the bank?—I was not.

276. And having no other security than the shares which were bought with the money lent?—I was not aware of that.

277. Were you ever consulted as to renewals of these large loans?—I do not remember that I was.

278. You do not mean to say that you allowed large loans of ten lacs or five lacs to go on being renewed without looking into the matter?—I may have done so.

279. Surely it was your duty to look into the matter. Is it good banking to go on renewing loans time after time?—I do not think that it is. It is a system which prevailed very much in India.

280. Did you take any steps to put a stop to that system?—I did not.

281. Then I understand that you left the renewing of the loans to the secretary?—I do not remember their being brought before us.

282. In point of fact the renewals of the loans were left to the secretary, were they not?—I presume they were.

283. How was it that you, as president of the bank, even supposing that you only went there so seldom as you mention (which I have no doubt is correct), did not know that such enormous sums were going out in October, November, and December 1864, why did that not strike your attention?—I knew of the loan to the Alliance Financial Corporation, which I have mentioned, but I do not remember the others at all.

284. Were not you in the habit of looking at the "daily book"?—No.

285. That book was regularly laid on the board table?—I knew very little of the names of people in Bombay.

286. It does not give a single name, but it shows large sums of money as going out?—I dare say.

287. When you saw that ten lacs had gone out the day before, did not you inquire where they had gone?—I heard the other directors asking questions from the books lying on the table, and Mr. Blair answering.

288. You did not make yourself informed as to these large loans?—I do not remember it.

289. Did you know that Mr. Blair was receiving allotments?—I knew that he did receive an allotment.

290. What allotment?—Of Back Bay shares.

291. Did you not know that he was receiving allotments of the shares of many other companies?—I did not.

292. Did not Mr. Blair give you information from time to time as to what allotments were to be got?—No, not that I am aware of.

293. Did you know that Mr. Blair was speculating in shares?—I did not. Will you allow me to explain? I knew that Mr. Blair had two shares in the Elphinstone Land Company, they ran up to a premium of 1,86,000 rs. each. Mr. Blair, speaking to me one day, mentioned them, and I said, "Why do you not "sell them and get out of the country." His answer was, that he wanted them for an investment, and that he should keep them. Moreover, he said that he had been asked by one of the directors to vote upon the new scheme, and that he should not even vote. His Back Bay shares, I understood from him, he got as an investment.

294. Then you did know of his having an allotment of Back Bay shares, and of his having shares in the Elphinstone Land and Press Company?—He had shares in the Elphinstone Land Press Company I believe when I arrived in Bombay.

295. Are you prepared to say that you did not know that he held any other shares?—I do not remember. I do not think that I did.

296. He never told you that he was receiving allotments?—No.

297. Did he tell you that he was borrowing money?—Certainly not, I always thought that Mr. Blair was a man of money, and had no occasion to borrow, he gave his own security to the bank.

298. You never heard of his borrowing money from the Asiatic Bank?—No.

299. You never heard of his borrowing money from Premchund Roychund?—No.

300. Or from Roychund Deepchund the father of Premchund?—No.

301. Did you know that Mr. Robertson was receiving any allotments?—I knew that he had some shares in the Back Bay Company.

302. Did you know that he was receiving allotments in anything else?—No, I did not.

303. Are you quite sure?—I am almost positive.

304. Did you know that he was trafficking in shares, buying and selling?—No.

305. Or Mr. Blair?—No.

306. Did you know that Mr. Rodgie was receiving allotments?—I think that Mr. Rodgie had an allotment in the Back Bay Company. I am not certain.

307. Did you know that Mr. Maclean was receiving allotments?—No.

308. Did you know that either of those persons was buying and selling shares?—No.

309. Did you know that they were entering into speculations with other people?—No.

310. You never knew anything of it?—No.

311. But I think that Mr. Blair knew that you were receiving allotments?—I dare say he did.

312. I think that Mr. Blair was the medium of some of your investments in those shares?—How do you mean the medium?

313. I mean to say that you employed him, that you gave him cheques to pay for your shares?—I gave him a cheque to pay the allotment made to me in the Back Bay scheme.

314. He knew then that you were having allotments of the Back Bay shares?—Yes, and he knew that I had some shares in the Financial Association of India and China.

315. Did he know of any other of your allotments?—I am not aware of it.

316. Here is a power of attorney which I think you executed in Mr. Blair's favour (handing Exhibit U 1 to the witness), authorizing him to sign for you for your Back Bay shares?—Yes.

317. Then it is quite clear that he knew about that?—Quite.

318. How came you to give him that power of attorney?—I was at Poonah at the time, and I sent a cheque to Mr. Blair in a registered letter. That is not a general power, it is a special one.

319. The first four items in this account of yours with the Oriental Bank are cheques drawn in favour of Mr. Blair?—The first item is 40,000 rupees.

320. There are four items, two as secretary and treasurer, and two as James Blair personally. Does not that show that to a certain extent he was the medium through which you paid for some of those shares?—The first item does, the others do not.

321. My object now is to know what knowledge the officers of the bank had of your proceedings. There are those four items for which cheques are drawn in Mr. Blair's name?—No, excuse me, the first two are in the name of the secretary and treasurer of the Bank of Bombay.

322. And then there are two to "James Blair"?—Yes, one for 1,250 rupees and the other for another amount.

323. Were any of those for allotments?—Two were for calls to be paid into the Bank of Bombay.

324. What were the other two?—The other two were for Back Bay allotments.

325. Did Mr. Robertson know that you were receiving allotments?—He must have known that I was receiving these allotments, because they passed through the bank.

326. Did not the officers of the bank know, in point of fact, that you were receiving allotments?—I dare say they did.

327. Will you tell us what were the allotments which you did receive. Did you not on the 1st of June apply for six Back Bay shares?—I did.

328. That is your letter asking for them (handing Exhibit R 1 to the witness); that is your handwriting I think?—Yes.

The letter was read as follows:

"My dear Scott,

"If I am out of rule excuse me. The other day you kindly said you would make a note in your book and remember me at the proper time; Cowasjee also wrote me that you had agreed with him to take me into consideration when Back Bay shares were allotted. I would not trouble you, but nothing was said about the number; Güp has it that individual applications are for large lots. I am not very grasping, but if for this occasion only you will consider the President of the Bank of Bombay, the Accountant-General, and the trainer of Raby, that very fast horse, a swell, and allot him 6. six shares I shall not object, as I can take that number up.

"I have gone in for a few 'financial associations,' sufficient to qualify myself for that London board, and if I hear from you that I am likely to get a seat at the Asiatic board I shall qualify for that. These will give me quite employment enough.

I remain,

"June 1st 1864. Yours sincerely,

(Signed) S. D. Birch."

329. Can you explain how it was that when you only asked for six of these valuable shares you obtained eight?—When I asked for six it was supposed that the Government were going to have one-fifth of the shares, which were four hundred. Before they were allotted it was known that the Government would not take them up. When there was a large amount to distribute I asked Cowasjee Jehangeer and Mr. Scott to put me down for two more, making eight. The Back Bay scheme has been called a "bubble scheme" and "the notorious Back Bay scheme." I believe that a scheme for the reclamation of the Back Bay has been in existence for many years, and it was not until Mr. Scott and Cowasjee and these gentlemen came forward that it was taken into the serious consideration of the Government. It was supposed then that Government would be a large shareholder in it, they promised to take 400 shares, I think; they were reserved for them, and they were not allowed by the Home Government to take them up.

330. You are inaccurate there, the Governor-General stopped them.—But it was supposed at Bombay that they were taken up. I merely want to show that it was not a bubble scheme.

331. To whom did you apply for the two additional shares, to Cowasjee Jehangeer?—To Cowasjee Jehangeer and Mr. Scott.

332. You got these eight shares through the influence of Mr. Scott and Cowasjee Jehangeer?—I believe that I did.

333. Did you ask anybody else?—I did not.

334. Did you ask Premchund Roychund?—I did not.

335. Did you ask anybody else to interest himself in your behalf?—I did not.

336. At what premium were those shares on the day that they were allotted to you?—I do not remember.

337. Were not they at a premium of 10,000 rupees each?—They might have been.

338. Did you not sell three of those shares on the 25th of November 1864 at a premium of 25,000 rupees?—I did.

339. On the 28th of December you sold two at a premium of 45,000 rupees?—I did not sell them, the Oriental Bank did so.

Mr. Birch.
9 Nov. 1868.

340. On the 28th you also sold two shares at 45,500 rupees premium, on the 6th of January 1865 you sold one share at 45,000 rupees premium; the consequence was that you realized by those shares 3,41,000 rs.?—Yes.

341. And it was a clear profit to you of 30,000*l.*, that is to say, three lacs?—It might have been.

342. I strike off 1,000 rupees for stamps and charges and commission; that would leave you a clear profit of three lacs upon that transaction; is it not so?—It is so.

343. You told us that you sold on the 28th of December from Back Bay shares?—The Oriental Bank sold them for me.

344. Of course under your direction; there was 45,000 rupees premium on the 28th of December, and 45,500 premium on the same day?—May I make a remark with reference to my application to Mr. Scott?

345. Certainly.—I put down in my letter that I was "the trainer of Raby." It arose out of a joke when I was examined in Elliott's case as to the civil fund in Madras. I was secretary to the civil fund, and I was sub-treasurer, and a great many questions were put. I said, "I do not know So-and-So as sub-"treasurer, but I do know it as secretary to the civil "fund." Sir Christopher Rawlinson said, "You can "answer as secretary to the civil fund, or sub-"treasurer, or master of the Madras hounds, or cap-"tain of the volunteer cavalry, or secretary to the "turf fund; you will be good enough to answer the "question in either of those capacities." It was simply a joke between Mr. Scott and myself, and I put in the words "trainer of Raby" as well.

346. With respect to these shares sold for you on the 28th of December 1864, how did you get the information to enable you to sell on that day, which was the very day on which Back Bay shares were highest in Bombay?—I left them to the Oriental Bank to sell; they were deposited with the bank in a sealed packet in October for safe custody, and none of them were sold, I think, until the end of November, and then three were sold; and then when they went up in December I ordered the bank to sell the rest.

347. How was it that you gave instructions to the Oriental Bank to sell those shares on the very day that they were highest in the market?—I did not give instructions to the Oriental Bank to sell them on the very day. I gave them instructions to sell the remainder of the shares, and they exercised their own judgment.

348. Did you not receive any information that that was about the culminating point?—I did not.

349. Are you quite sure that Premchund Roychund did not tell you so?—No.

350. Or Cowasjee Jehangeer?—No; nobody, I believe, saw that at that time.

351. Are you aware that that was the day on which the shares were at the highest?—No, I am not.

352. I believe that you got an allotment in the same month of June 1864 of 150 shares in the Financial Association of India and China?—I did.

353. At what premium were they on that day?—I am not aware.

354. You got an allotment of 100 shares of the new issue in the Financial Association of India and China?—No, there was only one issue that I am aware of.

355. What were the numbers of your shares?—I do not remember; there were 150.

356. 150 of the original shares and 100 shares in the new issue?—No, I had no more than the 150.

357. Did you know that Mr. Blair had allotments in that same company?—I do not remember it.

358. You never happened to speak of it to each other?—I do not remember that we did.

359. You deny that you had any shares in the second issue?—Here are what I had; you have the account before you.

360. This has been given to us as the book of the second issue (handing a book to the witness)?—I had none of the second issue.

361. You did not take them up?—The original shareholders may have had them, but I sold my shares.

362. Then they may have been issued upon the original allotment, and some other person may have taken them up?—They stood in my name for a long time, but I have a letter here which shows when the transfers were effected; it is a letter from Mr. Gerrard, the deputy manager of the Oriental Bank, to whom I wrote to give me some information about my account.

363. When did you transfer those shares?—Not till very late in the year. I do not think that 50 were ever transferred.

364. They were transferred at the end of 1864?—Yes.

365. Will you point out the item in your account of the sale?—On the 28th of June and on the 29th of June 1864.

366. That is the allotment?—No, those are the sales; they were paid for on the 8th of June and on the 15th.

367. What did you pay for them?—15,000 rupees.

368. And you sold them for 62,750?—I did.

369. I think that in October 1864 you got an allotment of two shares in the Mazagon Land and Reclamation Company?—Yes; they were paid for on the 17th of November by a check for 6,000 rupees.

370. You sold those shares on the 31st of January and the 1st of February 1865, did you not?—The Oriental Bank did.

371. But of course under your orders?—Yes; but it is a different question whether I sold them myself or whether a public bank sold them.

372. What profit did you sell them at; what was the price?—12,000 rupees premium; I sold them for 18,000 rupees.

373. There was a clear profit of 12,000 rupees on that transaction?—I believe so.

374. What was the premium on those shares at the time when they were allotted to you?—I am not aware of that.

375. Was not that allotment a present to you of 12,000 rupees?—I do not know what you mean by a present.

376. It amounts to a present, does it not?—I cannot see it; there was no restriction upon Government servants having shares in these companies.

377. To whom did you apply for those Mazagon land shares?—To the promoters.

378. Who were they?—I do not remember. I sent the application in the usual way. I applied to no one in particular.

379. Those shares were allotted by Premchund Roychund, were they not?—I am not aware.

380. To whom did you apply for the allotment in the Financial Association of India and China?—To the directors.

381. Who were they?—Mr. Willis, I believe, and others. I forget how it was worded, but I think that it went in to them generally.

382. On the 1st of February 1865 I believe you got an allotment of five Port Canning shares?—I did.

383. At what premium did they stand at the time of the allotment?—I do not know, but I believe that they went up to 9,000 rupees.

384. We had it proved by two witnesses that on the day when they were allotted to you they were at 9,500 rupees premium?—I hold them still.

385. To whom did you apply for those shares?—I applied to Mr. Scott; to no one else that I am aware of.

386. You never applied to Premchund?—No.

387. You asked nobody else for those shares?—No, I do not believe that I did.

388. You did not ask anyone else to use his influence for you?—Not that I am aware of.

389. You paid for those shares on the 3d of February 1865?—I believe that I did.

390. You hold those shares now?—I do.

391. And you received a small dividend on those shares?—I believe that I did.

392. On the 28th of January 1865 I think you received another allotment?—In what?

393. Two United Victoria and Colaba shares?—They were paid for on the 8th of February; they were paid for through the Bombay Joint Stock Corporation.

394. At what premium were they?—I do not remember.

395. At what premium did you sell them?—They were sold for 18,000 rupees on the 28th of February, that is a premium of 4,000 rupees each, making a profit of 8,000 rupees.

396. Did you get allotments in the Asiatic Bank?—No, not in the first issue.

397. When did you become an owner of shares in the Asiatic Bank?—On the 14th of February 1865. That represents the item of 10,000 rupees in my account. Mr. Hannay allotted them to me, and I hold them now. It was not an allotment of original shares. I had no original shares, it was the second issue. I applied to Mr. Hannay, or to the bank for them.

398. The evidence before us is that the only persons entitled to shares in the new issue were those who had shares in the old?—I think that that is a mistake. I paid 15*l.* each for them besides what the share was. I got them at a premium.

399. Did you get an allotment letter?—I had them with me to bring here, but Mr. Turquand was summoned to produce them. I paid for them to qualify myself for the London Board. I placed my banking account at the disposal of the Commission immediately they went out, and when Mr. Prentiss found that I was to be examined in England, I think that he told Mr. Chauntrell that he thought that any explanations had better come from myself. I understood then that my account was not to be made public.

400. There is nothing which takes place before this Commission which will not be made public?—I mean to say that I never tried to conceal this account.

401. No one ever suggested that you did. I want to see these allotment papers, because we were not able to see them in India.

(The original letter of allotment was produced by Mr. Turquand, the official liquidator of the Asiatic Bank, and read by the Commissioners.)

(Witness.) I understood that the new shares were all issued at a premium. I paid a premium of 75 per cent. for my shares.

402. In what other companies did you receive allotments?—I had two shares, I believe, in the Victoria Land and Press Company; I am not certain, but I believe so.

403. They were at a premium too?—They were, I believe.

404. When were they allotted? what did you pay for them?—That I do not remember. They were sold for 16,000 rupees on the 13th of February.

405. What premium did they fetch?—That I do not know.

406. They were sold at a premium?—They were.

407. What other shares had you allotted to you?—I had two in the China Bank; I am not certain, but I think that that was one of the very first.

408. They were at a premium at the time of allotment, were they not?—I do not think that they were; the China Bank never came to anything; it was opposed in China. It was not started.

409. What else was there?—I had 50 shares in the Veterinary Stables allotted to me.

410. Were they at a premium?—I think not; I hold them still, and they are worth nothing.

411. Did you ever enter into any share transactions with any person?—None whatever with anybody.

412. You had no speculation in shares?—None whatever. I never bought a share in Bombay, or sold one either, excepting these which you have before you.

413. Are you aware of the Government orders against civilians dealing in shares?—No, I am not.

414. Are you not aware of the order issued by Sir George Clerk?—There is no order that I am aware of.

415. Are you not aware of its republication by Sir Bartle Frere?—No.

416. Have you never seen that order, and the minutes by Sir George Clerk, republished by Sir Bartle Frere?—I have seen it since I have been home.

417. Did you never see it in India?—I saw a part of it.

418. But surely it must have been a subject which interested you?—Why?

419. It rebuked very much the practice of civilians purchasing shares in the places where they resided?—I do not remember it.

420. And a very long minute by Sir George Clerk was republished by Sir Bartle Frere and his Government when you were at Bombay?—The result of it was what?

421. It does not appear to have had any value with some persons certainly?—It may not have had with some.

422. Do you mean to say that you did not know that it was against the orders of Government to receive allotments of shares?—I did not.

423. You knew of those orders you say?—I knew of that publication.

424. Did you consider your conduct a compliance with those orders?—I knew of no harm in it.

425. The circular of the Bombay Government sets forth an order of Sir George Clerk, and also another minute by Sir George Clerk, and a resolution of the Government of India; the Government circular was published in Bombay in November 1864. There is an order of Sir George Clerk, of the 15th of November 1861, and one of December 1861, set out?—It says, "in banks or other companies except as simple shareholders."

426. Yes; but that is in much older orders?—It does not say anything except that Government servants trading in shares should lose their promotion.

427. That is your interpretation of it?—Yes.

428. Putting the Government orders aside, do you think that it was right in a gentleman holding your position to put forward your office as a ground, and to apply for shares at a premium at the time?—I did not not put forward my office.

429. You say, "I am not very grasping, but if for this occasion only you will consider the President of the Bank of Bombay, the Accountant-General, and the trainer of 'Raby'"—that very fast horse, "a swell"?—I think that that shows that it was merely a quiz.

430. "And allot him six shares, I shall not object." Do you think that it was right in a person holding your position to put forward your office, whether it was connected with any other or not?—Will you take those words with the context?

431. Do you think that it was right to put forward your office when receiving what was at the time a present of 80,000 rupees?—I did not put forward my office.

432. Do you think that you would have got that money if you had not held your office?—I do.

433. Do you think that you put yourself in a position to protect the bank when you took all these allotments from these scheming parties who established these companies?—I think that I was quite in a position to do my duty there.

434. Do you think that you put yourself in a position to protect the bank against parties coming there for discounts, loans, and cash credits?—Yes.

435. Do you think that the acquisition of these shares was known to almost all the officials in the bank?—I dare say that some of them were aware of it.

Mr. Birch.
9 Nov. 1868.

436. Do you think that you put yourself in a position to protect the bank against its own servants in those transactions?—I should have protected the bank if I had been aware that these gentlemen were trafficking in shares.

437. Did you put yourself in a position to call Mr. Blair or any other servant of the bank to account and to dismiss him when they knew that you were doing the same thing?—Doing what?

438. Taking allotments of shares.—Perhaps not.

439. Did you put yourself in a position to protect the bank as against their customers?—Yes.

440. Were not many of those customers the donors of those allotments to you?—Some of them were. What do you mean by "donors"?

441. I mean that they allotted those shares to you, which were simply presents of money, on the day when you got them.—I do not admit them to be so.

442. You may not admit them to be so; but there is no question that it is a present of that premium to a man who gets those shares when they are at that premium in the market. I now wish to take you through the items of this account, and to see that I have every one of them quite accurately. Have you your Oriental Bank Account. I will take the credit side?—What is the first date?

443. 27th June 1864, by Bank of Bombay, 21,750 rupees?—That is correct.

444. Was not that money paid in by notes by yourself?—No; I think not.

445. According to the Shroff's account it was by notes paid in by yourself.—I do not think so. It is put "Bank of Bombay."

446. 21,750 rupees, and 41,400 rupees; those are what you realized by your shares in the Financial Association of India and China?—Yes.

447. The next item is "15th October 1864, by D. Robertson," "received from D. Robertson 5,925 rupees." What is that?—I am not aware what it is, but I think that it arose from the sale of 2 China bank shares. I have not seen Mr. Robertson.

448. The China Bank shares were sold at a premium?—I think that that is the China Bank shares, but I am not certain.

449. Then what can it be?—I do not know. I had no transactions with Mr. Robertson whatever. It may have been money which I took to him, and asked him to send, or anything of that sort, if I was at the bank.

450. He must have paid you the money?—No, he paid the money in to my credit at the bank.

451. Then you must have given him the cash?—I suppose that I did. I do not remember the transaction at all. I may have asked him to pay in the money for me, and if so they would have put it as paid in "by D. Robertson."

452. That would be so if he paid so many notes, but if you had given a cheque payable to D. Robertson it would have been in your name. Either D. Robertson paid in the money, or it was a cheque payable to D. Robertson.—I think that most likely I gave Mr. Robertson the money in notes, and asked him to pay it in.

453. It is a very unusual thing to give notes in India for a large payment, usually it would be a cheque?—It was no cheque of mine.

454. It would be a cheque paid in to your credit. It appears as if you employed Mr. Robertson to sell those shares, and that he got a cheque from the buyer in his own name.—I will leave Mr. Robertson to explain that, I had no transactions with Mr. Robertson whatever.

455. The next item is 90,000 rupees for shares of the Back Bay scheme, the next is 100,000 rupees, and the next is 101,000. The next is one share in the Back Bay Company, 50,000 rupees. The next is 9,000 rupees for one share in the Mazagon Land Reclamation Company?—Yes.

456. And on the 1st February 1865 I find one share in the Mazagon Land Reclamation Company, 9,000 rupees?—Yes.

457. The next item is "13th February, credit by self," Rs. 16,000. I find that you paid it into the Oriental Bank yourself in notes?—Yes.

458. The next item is "20th February 1865, by self, cheque on Bombay Presidency Bank," 4,697 rupees, what is that?—I believe that it was a cheque for the furniture and fittings of a house which I was then occupying.

459. The next item is "21st February, by cheque on Royal Bank," 5,500 rupees?—I think that that was a race lottery account, it was my account paid in by Mr. Crawford. I remember it because I was not at the dinner myself, but I took some tickets, and I was told the next morning that I had drawn a prize for 5,500 rupees.

460. The next item is 18,000, that is what you realized by the two shares of the United Victoria and Colaba Reclamation Company?—Yes.

461. "30th June deposit, Rs. 10,269," what is that?—It is a deposit note of the Asiatic Bank for 10,000 rupees and interest, less stamp; but you will see on the other side an item "by second call."

462. Upon the 30th December, "Deposit note and interest," Rs. 5,294?—On the opposite side you will see "3rd call on 100 shares, Asiatic Bank."

463. On 23d May 1866 you got your dividend on five Port Canning shares, 124 rupees?—Yes.

464. On the other side there is "8th June 1864, Bank of Bombay," 10,000 rupees, what was that?—That was for shares of the Financial Association of India and China.

465. What was the next item?—5,000 rupees for the same thing.

466. Those cheques were given to Mr. Blair to pay, were they not?—No, I think not. I think that you will find that the calls were made payable to the Bank of Bombay.

467. For the Financial Association?—Yes.

468. The next item is "James Blair, 40,000 rupees," that is the deposit on the Back Bay shares?—Yes.

469. The next item is "To James Blair, 1,250 rupees," what is that?—I believe that that was for the stamps on the issue of shares. The cheque is crossed to the Asiatic Bank.

470. The stamps could not be so much as that on those calls, could they?—I do not know; the cheque is payable to James Blair, and it is crossed "Asiatic Bank."

471. "To Financial Alliance Corporation, Limited, 6,000 rupees," that is your payment for the Mazagon land shares?—Yes.

472. The next item is "3d February 1865, to Asiatic Bank, 5,000 rupees"?—That was for the Port Canning shares.

473. "The Bombay Joint Stock Company, 8th February 1865, 10,000 rupees," that was for United Victoria and Colaba Company's shares. "February 1865, Asiatic Banking Corporation, 10,000 rupees," that was for your Asiatic Bank shares?—Yes.

474. You are sure that you never employed Mr. Donald Robertson, the secretary or deputy secretary, in your time in any of these payments for the Back Bay shares?—I did not.

475. I think that you stated in the course of the examination that you were aware that money was lent, shares being deposited for safe custody?—Yes, I believe that I was aware of it.

476. Then, in fact, you were aware that the secretary was doing that?—To a certain extent, but it was very late, I believe just before I went away.

477. Either you must have known that the secretary was doing it upon his own responsibility, or you must have sanctioned it yourself; which was it?—I did not sanction it myself.

478. Then you must have known that the secretary was doing it upon his own responsibility?—I knew that he had been taking some of these shares, but I did not know it at the time when the loans were granted.

479. But it so happens that these loans, when this thing was being done, were about the largest loans of the time. How is it that when you knew of those loans, you can tell us (I am sure that you will not tell us when you reflect) that the secretary's powers were limited?—I do not think that he had power of himself to grant them.

480. Then did you prevent him from making these loans upon these shares being deposited?—I did not consider that they were upon the shares which were deposited.

481. Upon what else were they. It is not necessary that there should be a regular transfer?—He might have made a loan, and have thought that it was not sufficiently covered by the man's credit.

482. You knew that he was lending money in this way?—I knew it just before I left, I believe, but I cannot call to my recollection when it was.

483. How is that so, because these large loans took place chiefly in 1864, and you did not leave till the end of February 1865?—I left at the end of February 1865.

484. It appears to me that it is impossible that you can say that you thought that the secretary's power was limited to a very small sum, when you knew that he was lending those large sums on shares?—I did not know that he was making these large loans on shares, according to the best of my recollection.

485. You must have known it before you went away; you have said so?—I did, but not at the time when they were made.

486. What steps did you take when you found it out?—I did not know what the amount of the loans was.

487. Why did not you inquire; surely it was your duty to inquire what these loans were, unless you were a mere cypher in the bank?—I was not a mere cypher, but I was very ill when I came back from Poonah, and went very little to the bank, and had very little to do with it.

488. The general impression left upon our minds from the whole evidence was that you were there continually?—I think that you will find that that was not the case.

489. I will now refer to the increase of capital. I believe that on the 27th of August 1863 it was resolved by the board to increase the capital one half, that is to say, another half million?—Yes.

490. And on the 3rd of September 1863 also there are two resolutions to that effect. I believe that you were not in Bombay then?—I was in Poonah in July, August, and September 1863.

491. I believe that there was a consultation about it in your house at Poonah; Mr. Foggo and one or two other directors happened to be up there?—Yes.

492. And you consented to make that increase in the capital?—Yes. I do not think that you can call it an increase to the capital; it was merely a substitution of paid up capital for banking capital. The bank had 60 lacs of rupees of banking capital; its circulation was withdrawn, which deprived it of the use of that; therefore it was merely a substitution of paid up capital for banking capital.

493. I am not finding fault with the first increase of half a million. There was a special general meeting called pursuant to a resolution of the 3rd September 1863, for the first increase; was not that so?—I do not know.

494. The general meeting of the shareholders was held on the 21st September 1863. The previous resolution of the board is as follows:—"Resolved, that the president of the bank, through the secretary, be requested to state his views of the expediency of doubling the bank's capital, the board being of opinion that if the capital is increased this season it should be done at once; and that the board be requested to obtain the views of the members not now present upon the subject." Afterwards it was resolved, on the 3rd of September 1863, "that a special meeting be called to consider the increase of capital." I believe that the usual advertisements were issued calling that meeting?—I presume so.

495. You never heard that they were not?—No.

496. What time did the Act require in the way of notice?—I do not remember.

497. On the 11th of February 1864 Cowasjee Jehangeer proposed to increase the capital by another half million?—Yes, I believe so.

498. "Cowasjee Jehangeer gives notice that at the next board he will bring forward a motion to increase the capital by one half." "Resolved that a special meeting be held on Monday, 7th March. A proposition will be laid before the meeting to consider the expediency of increasing the capital to 52,25,000 rupees." You were present at the meeting of the board on that occasion?—I was.

499. You approved of that second increase?—I did.

500. The usual advertisements, I suppose, were issued for it?—I presume that they were.

501. Then there was a special general meeting held on the 7th March 1864, at which there were 10 shareholders, not directors, present. You were not there?—I do not remember that.

502. Do you know that a meeting was called, and that a further increase of half a million was resolved upon?—Yes, I think so. I think that you will find that Mr. Steel was in the chair.

503. He was. Before the increased capital resolved upon at that meeting was called up was not another general meeting called by 16 proprietors?—Yes.

504. And they proposed a still further increase of capital of another half million?—Yes.

505. There was another special general meeting called for the 9th of June 1864, was there not?—Yes.

506. I believe you made a speech upon that occasion?—I believe that I did.

507. You said, "Before we proceed to business it may be as well that I should mention that this meeting has been called in no spirit of opposition to the directors, but had its origin in a suggestion made by myself. One of the members of the board brought under discussion the proposition which forms the subject-matter for consideration this morning. The majority of the board, whilst concurring generally with him in the necessity for a further increase to the capital, were not, however, prepared to bring the question forward at once. They did not think it expedient to recommend it to the shareholders until the call already made had been disposed of." It appears from that that you were the person who suggested this increase of the capital?—Does it?

508. Does it not?—No, certainly not. I suggested the course which was pursued by the shareholders to call a general meeting themselves.

509. You said, "It may be as well that I should mention that this meeting has been called in no spirit of opposition to the directors, but had its origin in a suggestion made by myself"?—That is the meeting.

510. Am I to understand that you approved of this increase of the capital or not?—I believe that I did, but not at the time. There was a discussion by the directors before; it is alluded to there.

511. Perhaps you will take the Minute Book yourself?—I merely wished to see whether there was anything as to how the directors voted; I cannot refer to the date, because I have not got it.

512. Did you or did you not approve of this increase of the capital?—I approved of the increase being made after the other had been paid up. I am not certain; I have an impression in my own mind that it came to my own vote, and that I gave a casting vote against it.

513. You said in your speech "one of the members of the board brought under discussion the proposition which forms the subject-matter for consideration this morning. The majority of the board, whilst concurring generally with him in the necessity for a further increase of capital, were not, however, prepared to bring the question forward at once." Therefore your casting vote could not have been given against it. You go on to say—"They did not think it expedient to recommend it to the shareholders until the call already made had been disposed of. It was urged by their colleague that the subject had been pressed upon his notice by several influential members of the proprietary body, and it was then pointed out to him that such being the case, the shareholders would relieve the directors of all responsibility, and strengthen their position with those resident in England, if the course of procedure which has been adopted were carried out"?—It was the shareholders calling a meeting themselves.

514. What am I to understand from that, did you, or did you not, approve of these two last increases of capital?—I did.

515. Do you think that they were wise increases of capital? I am not asking about the first. I think that that might have been allowable, but I ask you as to the last two increases?—I think that considering the trade of Bombay, and so on, we had a perfect right to bring up the capital of the Bank of Bombay to that of the Bank of Bengal, which was all that we did. At that time the Government had transferred their business to us. We had opened branches in the faith that what had been done to the Bank of Bengal would have been done to us, and that wherever we had opened a branch the Government would have transferred their business and the treasury balance to us, which was never done. On the 12th March 1864 the capital of the Bank of Bengal was one crore and nine lacs; they doubled it at once.

516. When you had this increased capital, did you not find that you could not lay it out. Was not there the greatest difficulty in investing it?—I think that it was intended at first to lock-up some of it in Government securities.

517. Is not that a condemnation at once of raising further capital?—A small part was proposed to be so locked-up, not a large part.

518. Is it not a fact that you had the greatest difficulty in investing this capital when you got it?—I had not very long experience of it.

519. The capital was raised in July 1864?—When was it paid up?

520. The whole of the capital was paid up in January 1866. Were you the person who suggested that a part of the capital should be locked-up in Government paper?—I was not.

521. What was your view about that?—I did not see that there would be any harm in it at the time, for a small part of it.

522. Can you explain this item in Mr. Hannay's speech. "That much for the benefit of the shareholders; the system of investing in Government paper was given up under the presidentship of Mr. Birch, one of the ablest financiers which it has been my good fortune to meet with in India?"—They had locked-up the whole of their capital then.

523. You had objected to it before?—Certainly.

524. Then you would have agreed to an increase of the capital; locking up a part of it?—Only a small part of it; but Mr. Hannay said that the whole of it was locked-up in Government securities.

525. Is it not a matter of fact that within your knowledge that in the latter part of 1864, and the beginning of 1865, the bank had the greatest difficulty in finding investments for this large capital?—It was not doubled then.

526. That seems to have been the date of the last payment?—But were the calls met?

527. I do not know. Here is the return (A. 25[1]). I do not see there when the calls were paid, or anything of that kind, but I ask you whether you had not more capital than you knew how to invest?—Just at that time I presume that we had.

528. What were your reasons for supposing that there were at that time any good grounds for the employment of so large a capital?—The general trade of the place.

529. Did you not know that a great number of new banks and Financial Associations were starting at the same time?—I do not think that that would have interfered with us.

530. Would not it have taken away a great deal of the banking business, did not that enter into your calculation?—It did not.

531. This return from the bank's books (A. 25[1]) shows that all the capital was taken up in all the issues, except forty-seven shares which were afterwards sold by the bank, do you happen to know that of your own knowledge?—I do not.

532. Was it not the fact that at the time when you were increasing this capital there were sixteen banks in Bombay with an aggregate capital of 12,768,000*l.* started?—I am not aware.

533. That did not at all enter into your calculations?—I did not consider those banks, they were most of them exchange banks, that is to say, those which held any amount; there was the Oriental Bank, they professed not to do any discount business.

534. I believe that the new shares were at a premium when they were issued?—I believe that they were.

535. In consequence of Mr. Blair's absence I must take you through these loans, which otherwise I should not have done. We will take the first, which is the Alliance Financial Association, 21st October 1864, a bill of five lacs?—Yes.

536. That bill was in the names of the directors. Then a cash credit was granted on the 8th of November 1864 of five lacs?—I do not remember that.

537. You do recollect the first transaction?—Yes.

538. What do you recollect about that?—I recollect Mr. Blair asking the board whether he might discount a bill for the Financial Corporation. I forget who the native director was, and he said that he was not to take the Financial Corporation, but that he might take the individual responsibility of the directors, and get them all to sign.

539. Do you know who those directors were?—No; but it was stated at the time that they were men of immense wealth.

540. The first was Mr. T. Diver, an uncovenanted medical man in a small business, the others were Atmaram Madhowjee, Ghellabhoy Pudumsey Sewjee Velljee, and Hurbhun Nursey, every one of those men was a speculator to the largest amount?—I understood that they were all men of great wealth, and it was so stated at the time.

541. Did you not know that their wealth consisted in shares?—I did not, I knew very few of the natives in Bombay. I was not a Bombay civilian.

542. Did you not inquire what bills were running at that time against those gentlemen?—No, I thought that it was the first which they had had.

543. It was not anything of the sort, because Mr. Diver and Atmaram Madhowjee were liable for enormous amounts to the Bank of Bombay when you granted that sum; they had only ten days before borrowed ten lacs from the bank. You did not inquire into the outstanding liabilities?—No. It was put in that way whether Mr. Blair might advance to the Alliance Financial Corporation so much, and it was said "No," but that he was to take the individual responsibility of the directors.

544. You never heard of the next sum of five lacs on the 8th November 1864?—I do not remember it.

545. Did not you require any security to be given for that sum?—No, not that I am aware of, their credit was considered as most good.

546. Did not you know that at that time speculation was raging throughout Bombay?—In what?

547. In everything; in shares and land?—I knew that there were speculations going on.

548. Did you not think that it was incumbent upon you at such a time as that to see what those who were borrowing large sums of money from you were doing ?—No; I did not think that it was my particular duty.

549. Did you not think that it was a duty to inculcate that upon all the officers of the bank ?—I do not think that I thought about it.

550. Do you not think that it was especially necessary at such a time as that, when, as I say, the whole place was teeming with speculation, to have had security ?—It is very well to talk now of all that went on then, those men were considered at that time to be wealthy men.

551. I believe that men sometimes got wealthy in a day at that time; you knew that?—Perhaps you refer to myself.

552. And you knew perhaps that they would lose it in a day. You must have known that these men were all speculating ?—All that I can say is that they were considered at that time as men of wealth, and good for the amount which was granted to them.

553. And you did not think it prudent even at that time to take any security ?—We took none at all that I am aware of.

554. Do you not think that that was a time at which it was your duty as president to have seen to almost every sum which went out of the bank?—No, I do not.

555. On the 8th of November 1865, about a fortnight afterwards, do you not think that it was your duty to have seen to another loan of five lacs going out to the same people ?—I do not know that I was aware of it.

556. Ought you not every day to have inquired into these large sums at such a time ?—You forget that I had a heavy office of my own to work at the time.

557. That may be an observation which affects all Government directors, but still you took the office of chairman ?—I did not take it; it was forced upon me, and I declined it. I wrote to Mr. Prentiss, and asked him to have Mr. Stuart examined at the time, and Mr. Stuart and Mr. Ellis could both have told you that I objected; it was the fact that we objected in Madras; no Government director held the chairmanship there for many years. I held it, I believe, for a fortnight once, but it was my idea that the chairman ought always to be a commercial director and an independent man.

558. The next item is an advance to Ardaseer Cursetjee Dady, on the 8th of December 1864, of one lac and a half; do you recollect anything of that transaction ?—I do not.

559. Were not you consulted?—I am not aware that I was.

560. This is an advance upon a single name of one lac and a half; who was this man to whom you lent that money ?—I do not know.

561. On the 11th of October 1864 there was the name of Atmaram Madhowjee, a director of the financial corporation, who is down for five lacs and a half, the loss upon that is five lacs. Do you recollect anything about that transaction ?—I do not.

562. You were not consulted at all about it?—I do not remember it.

563. It happens that at that time the bank had his name to bills and other documents to the amount of 20 lacs and upwards.—By himself, or with others?

564. With others; his name was out upon negotiable securities for 20 lacs and 70,000 rupees; how could that possibly have arisen in a well ordered bank ?—I cannot answer that question.

565. But surely you as president were responsible for that?—I do not think that I was. I was not aware of it at the time.

566. You ought to have had some means of knowing of these large outgoings?—They were laid upon the board table.

567. The "Daily Book" for the 12th October, the next day, would have shown you that the large sum of five and a half lacs had been paid out the day before upon a loan. Directly you saw that in the "Daily Book" why did not you inquire as to whom it was lent? If you had done that you would have asked "How much has that man outstanding against him?"—I might have done so.

568. It cannot reflect credit upon the administration of any bank.

On the 20th December 1864, there was an advance to Brown Heycock of 50,000 rupees?—I do not remember that.

569. On the 15th of July 1864, there was an advance to Brown and Macfarlane of Rs. 30,000, and on the 25th of February 1865 there was an advance to Brown and Best of 2 lacs and 50,000 Rs. ?—I do not remember.

570. Do you know anything of those advances?—I do not; not to the best of my recollection.

571. Did you ever make any inquiry as to any of them ?—I did not.

572. Did you know Mr. Brown ?—I did not. I knew him by sight. I knew Mr. Best because he had been in the Oriental Bank.

573. You must have seen these large sums of money going out as fixed loans, cash credit, and so on. If you yourself were not consulted as to them, who do you think was consulted; who do you think was responsible for their going out ?—I believe that Mr. Blair had authority to consult one of the directors, but who he was I do not know. Mr. Premchund's first election was on the 15th of July 1864. During the time that he sat I was at Poonah. He resigned, I believe, in September 1864, and was re-elected at the end of December 1864, so that I only sat with him at the board for three months.

574. I was not asking you any question with regard to Mr. Premchund.—I do not know whom Mr. Blair consulted.

575. Did not you consider yourself under the necessity, when you found these large sums going out, of inquiring under whose authority they were going out?—I did not do it.

576. Then, although you were President, these sums were allowed to go without check or control?—No; I do not think that. They were all entered in the books, and were discussed. Mr. Blair inquired over and over again with regard to different loans, and some answer was given to him; but I cannot call them individually to recollection.

577. You knew nothing of this large sum of two and a half lacs lent to Messrs. Brown and Best?—I do not know anything of it.

At this stage of the examination the Commissioners adjourned the sitting till the next day at 11 o'clock.

Tuesday, 10th November 1868.

PRESENT:

President.

SIR CHARLES JACKSON.

Members.

MAJOR MCLEOD INNES, R.E. | MAXWELL MELVILL, ESQ.

Secretary.

F. D. CHAUNTRELL, ESQ.

10 Nov. 1868.

(Mr. Newmarch.) Mr. President, will you allow me to say a few words?

(President.) We are about to give our decision upon your application first, and we shall be happy to hear you afterwards.

This is an application by several of the shareholders of the Bank of Bombay soliciting to be allowed to appear before the Commissioners by counsel, and to be allowed to examine the witnesses to be produced before the Commissioners, and if so advised to produce evidence before the Commission.

On the appointment of the President of the Commission in May last, he caused circulars to be issued to the shareholders and the directors. The material part of the circular to the shareholders was as follows:—"As in the memorial from certain shareholders of the Bank of Bombay, forwarded by you to the Secretary of State for India in Council on the 2nd ultimo, serious charges of corruption were made against the Government directors of the bank, I am directed to request that you will inform the shareholders of the appointment of the Commission, in order that they may take such steps as they may consider necessary for substantiating the charges above referred to." The circular to the directors ran thus:—"I am also directed to forward to you the accompanying copy of a memorial addressed to the Secretary of State by certain shareholders of the Bank of Bombay, and to draw your attention to paragraphs 29 and 69, in which serious charges are preferred against the Government directors. As the inquiry will relate to transactions of the bank for the period during which you were a Government director, I am directed to make this communication to you in order that you may take any steps which you may consider necessary with a view to your being personally present, or being represented at that inquiry."

Shortly after the Commission was formed in India they received the report of a Committee of the English shareholders, from which it appeared that at a public meeting held on the 1st of May last, it was resolved unanimously—"That this meeting, whilst regretting that the Secretary of State for India in Council, after, in the first instance, repudiating all liability, has now given the shareholders so little time to substantiate the statements made in their memorial, feels confident that it is unnecessary to take any further active steps to do so, as the Blue Book published subsequently to the presentation of the memorial not only confirms the same in every particular, but proves beyond doubt that the failure of the bank was caused by the misconduct of the directors, and that the Government directors could have prevented the same had they honestly discharged the duties imposed upon them by the trust which the Bombay Government had undertaken."

On the 10th of June last the Commission was formally opened in Bombay, and on that occasion the President remarked as follows:—"Notwithstanding these notices, if the public prints are to be credited, the shareholders who presented this memorial do not intend to be present at this investigation, and I have not yet received any assurance of any assistance from the directors. Under these circumstances, it is obvious the inquiry differs considerably from a legal proceeding in which the plaintiff and defendant each prepares his own evidence, and lays it before the judge. In this case it is the duty of the Commissioners themselves to search for the evidence, and to ascertain what witnesses are capable of giving evidence as to the several transactions," &c. &c.

Under these circumstances it is clear that the Commission not only wished but expected the several parties interested in this inquiry to be represented before them, and that, according to the resolution of the shareholders, their objection to that course was founded on the alleged shortness of the time allowed them for that purpose, and also on their entire satisfaction with the disclosures of the Blue Book, which in their opinion rendered such a step unnecessary. These objections have since been supplemented, in one of the applications which we have received, by the assertion that the shareholders had no means of ascertaining what latitude would be allowed them, or what means would be placed at their disposal. As to the first point, the Commission did not commence their examination of witnesses till a month after their arrival in Bombay, and the shareholders had as much, if not more, time than the Commission had to investigate the facts, for in addition to the time between the appointment of the Commission and the commencement of the inquiry, the shareholders had the benefit of all their previous investigations, and if they required more time, or if they did not know what latitude would be allowed them, or what means would be placed at their disposal, it is to be regretted that they did not apply for more time or inquire as to the latitude and means which would be allowed them. Their neglect to take this step is no reason why the Commission should now re-open a matter which has been finally settled by the action and proceedings of all parties to the inquiry.

But whatever the effect of the previous proceedings may have been, this application comes much too late, and the granting of it would operate most unjustly.

The whole evidence has been seen by the Commissioners alone, and can now be seen by no one else. Many of the books and papers put in evidence were, after careful examination and perusal by the Commissioners, returned to the Liquidators, Assignees, and others in whose custody they were, and others were left in India by the Commissioners, after carefully noting their contents. To bring home those books and papers would have been inconvenient and expensive, and a very harsh proceeding towards many of their owners in India; and the Commissioners, having received no notice of such an application as this, and not requiring them further for their own use, returned and left them, as before stated.

To allow this application would be most unjust to the directors and the Government, who are not represented before the Commissioners. It might also be objected to by the shareholders in India, who, judging from their conduct there, would properly dissent from the present application. The shareholders, the directors, and the Government, have hitherto been content to leave their respective cases to the fairness of the Commission, and have not sought to interfere in the management of the inquiry. A few of the shareholders, now that the inquiry is approaching completion, and when many of the chief points are established, seek to be allowed to cross-examine witnesses as to the failure of the bank generally, or as Messrs. Graham and Lyde put it in their letter of the 3d instant, "to interfere in the conduct of the inquiry so far as may appear necessary to get at the causes which the shareholders consider led to the failure of the bank," and thus re-open the whole case.

It is obvious that these inquiries would never end if such a course were allowed. If it were permitted, the large body of shareholders in India, and even some of the English shareholders, might wish to be separately represented, and might object to the course pursued by Messrs. Graham and Lyde. If it were allowed, the Commissioners would be obliged to stop further proceedings, and serve all the directors in England and India, as well as the Government, with notice, in order that they might be represented also, and the whole inquiry would practically begin de novo. The inquiry here is only a continuation of that which commenced in India, and must be conducted in the same manner.

For these reasons the Commissioners decline to allow the application.

(Mr. Newmarch.) Would you allow me, sir, to make a few remarks upon that?

(President.) No; I have given my judgment, and I cannot allow any remarks.

(Mr. Newmarch.) I wished to ask, in the first place, how far the Commissioners considered that the Blue Book was before them?

(President.) Of course it is before them. I cannot conceive how any doubt can arise on such a point.

(Mr. Newmarch.) Then, sir, with regard to the supposition that we wished to interfere with the Commission, I think that the Commissioners are under some little misapprehension. Our object was in no way to interfere with the Commission, but when the Commissioners had completed their examination, to take up the examination on any points which the shareholders thought had not been sufficiently pursued, and themselves to pursue them or to supplement them.

(President.) We need not enter into the question. I have read the very words of Messrs. Graham and Lyde's letter and your application, which would enable you to re-open the whole case. That is the case which we have decided.

(Mr. Newmarch.) My clients consider it to be of importance not to interfere in any way.

10 Nov. 1868.

(Mr. Le Messurier.) On behalf of myself and other shareholders I may say that we defer to the decision of the Court.

(President to Mr. Newmarch.) If you have no further application to make I shall be happy to tell you what I will concede. At the conclusion of the examination of any witness, if you think that there is any point or any question which you can suggest useful to the shareholders' case as against the Government, it being confined to that point, we will consider that question, and if we think that it can be usefully put we will put it for you.

(Mr. Newmarch.) Would the Commissioners allow me, before adopting that course, to see certain papers which they have before them?

(President.) We should very much object to let you see any papers except those which we read out.

(Mr. Newmarch.) The papers which I wish to see, sir, are those which I think the Commissioners would not object to my seeing, namely, the minutes of the directors. I am so very insufficiently instructed at present from not being able to see those documents that I am almost unable to suggest in the interest of my clients an examination which I think should be pursued.

(President.) I am sorry to say that we cannot part with those minutes, they are almost our vade mecum, we have to look at them every day ourselves.

(Mr. Newmarch.) I was going to confine my application to inspecting them on the days when the Commissioners do not sit.

(President.) I shall take most of them down to Brighton with me.

(Mr. Newmarch.) Would the Commissioners have any objection so far to modify what they concede to me as to do this, that I should suggest questions when the Commissioners have closed their examination, and that I should have an opportunity beforehand of seeing what the witness has said.

(President.) No, we cannot recall the witnesses, thus putting them and the parties to very great expense; you must be prepared to put the questions at the time.

(Mr. Newmarch.) Would the Commissioners let me have a copy of the Bombay print?

(President.) I have sent one to you; we have no other. The Council of India are as much entitled to it as the committee of English shareholders; we have given them one. We sent one to your solicitor, which we hope you have got.

(Mr. Newmarch.) We have one.

Sylvester Douglas Birch further examined.

Mr. Birch.

578. (Witness.) You were asking yesterday about the Asiatic Bank, how the new shares were issued, and whether I could have got the shares unless I held old shares.

(President.) Yes; the evidence before us in India was that shares of the second issue were only allotted to the holders of the old shares.

(Witness.) By this document you will find that an immense number were allotted to the public at a certain premium in England, and in India also.

579. (President.) I suppose that the meaning of the evidence was that they could not have got them at par unless they had old shares. Before we go on with these loans, which we must take you through, I will ask you a few questions about the branches. With what object was the Kalbadevi branch opened?—For the purpose of opening current accounts in Kalbadevi, I believe.

580. Was it not intended originally that discounts, cash credits, and loans should be granted at that office?—I think that they were to be referred to the head office.

581. Was that your understanding of the principle upon which that branch was originally opened?—Yes, I believe so.

582. How came that office to be established; was it established as a branch, or was it established as part of the head office?—It was established as a branch there, I believe.

583. Then if it was established as a branch, it could hardly have been within the terms of the 41st section of the Act, which is as follows:—"It shall be lawful for the directors of the said Bank of Bombay, and they are hereby authorized and empowered, with the sanction of the Governor in Council of Bombay, to form such business relations with, and to establish branch banks or agencies at, such other places than Bombay, as they may deem expedient for the interests of the said bank." There is, therefore, no power to establish any branch in Bombay; did that strike you at all when you opened that branch?—No.

584. Did you not take any legal opinion about it?—I am not aware that I did.

585. We had some information that there was a legal opinion taken, but we could not find it?—There may have been, but I do not remember it.

586. It was never suggested to you that the branch at Kalbadevi must be part of the head office, and managed by the secretary, and not considered a branch, so as to avoid the effect of that section ?—I do not remember it.

587. You established it as a branch, and you got the sanction of the Government to establish it under the 41st section, and no other?—I do not remember whether the sanction of the Government was ever obtained.

588. It was obtained.—You are taking me back five years.

589. It is hardly so much, it is four years and a few months. Will you look at that section, and state how you felt yourself authorized to open a branch at Kalbadevi under it?—I do not remember.

590. Whom did you appoint as the Manager of the Kalbadevi branch ?—I believe Mr. Bullock.

591. By whom was he appointed ?—I presumed by the board.

592. But you were President at the time. Surely you had something to do with the appointments ?—I imagine that it would be on the proceedings.

593. I have not seen it, but it may have escaped my attention.—He must have been appointed by the board.

594. Was he personally known to you when he was appointed?—No, I do not think that he was.

595. Do you know whether he was a man of any experience in banking ?—I am not aware. I do not remember.

596. Was he a clerk in Smith and Elder's office ?—I do not know whether he was an under clerk or their head clerk. I believe that he was in their office.

597. What were the instructions given to Mr. Bullock ?—I do not remember.

598. Do you not remember what instructions were given on the opening of an important branch like that ?—No, I do not.

599. Do you remember whether any instructions were given ?—No, I do not.

600. Were instructions given him to put himself under Mr. Blair, and to consult him on all occasions ?—I believe that it was the understanding that he was always to consult the head office ; that is my impression.

601. Were you aware that he had given to him instructions also always to consult Premchund Roychund?—No, I was not.

602. What was your belief as to the management of that branch bank?—My belief was that all the applications for loans or discounts came to Mr. Blair, to the head office.

603. Was it your opinion that Mr. Bullock had no power to discount bills or advance money at all, unless he applied to Mr. Blair ?—I do not remember.

604. You do not think that he had any independent power ?—No.

605. Did you know that Premchund Roychund was always consulted by Mr. Bullock ?—No, I did not.

606. Did you know of any relations subsisting between Mr. Bullock and Roychund Deepchund, Premchund's father ?—No, I did not.

607. What instructions were given to agents generally ? I do not confine it simply to the Kalbadevi branch, but what instructions were given to the agents generally ?—I do not remember.

608. It is very painful for me to say so, but it is most extraordinary that the President of the Bank should not know about these things ?—As I say, this happened so many years ago that I never thought that all these things would come up, and I have no recollection of them.

609. Do you recollect whether the agents received verbal or written instructions ?—I do not.

610. This is a most important point. The losses at the Kalbadevi branch were 19 lakhs, and at Ahmedabad 6 lakhs, and so on ; there were frightful losses at all these branches, all owing more or less to the imperfection of the system. We have the distinct evidence of Mr. Brown that the affairs of the branches were left to the President and the secretary ?—I think not.

611. He excused himself from all knowledge of the management of the branches, upon the ground that the President and the secretary managed them between them ?—I think not.

612. Then if you did not manage them, and the directors did not manage them, who did manage them ? To whom were the branches left ?—I cannot answer that question.

613. Were not you aware that there were some printed rules (A 69) sent to the agents of the different branches ?—I forget it if there were.

614. The most important rule was never filled up, so that the rules did not put any limit whatever upon the agent's power of discounting. Rule 4. runs thus: "The agent is not permitted to discount any bill exceeding in amount rupees [ ], without first obtaining the sanction of the head office." Will you be surprised if I tell you that agents acting at the branches cashed and discounted bills as high as five lakhs ?—I do not remember their doing so. I remember their purchasing hoondees.

615. But there was not any limit in fact to that power ?—It does not appear by that, but there must have been.

616. We shall be very much obliged if you will show us where the limit was upon the agents. Was there any private discount list prepared at those branch agencies, and sent up to the head office for revision ; there ought to have been ?—I do not remember it.

617. I believe, however, that you had returns from these offices ?—We had, I believe.

618. Weekly returns ?—I do not remember whether they were weekly or not.

619. There were some weekly returns, but they did not show the securities, and then you had monthly returns ; do you remember the monthly returns ?—I do not recollect what the returns were, but there were returns.

620. Used you to look over those returns, and to study them ?—I may have looked over them, but I am not aware that I studied them.

621. Was not it the duty of somebody to see what business was being done at the branches ?—Yes.

622. Whose duty was it ?—I presume that it was the duty of the secretary.

623. By whom were the agents generally appointed ?—By the board.

624. But by whose recommendation ? How was it managed ?—Most of the agents I think were sent out from England to the branches, and to some of the sub-branches, but some were not.

625. What was your system of supervision of the branches ?—There was an inspector. I forget when he was appointed.

626. Mr. Fraser was the second inspector. Did you see that he visited these branches regularly ?—I do not remember.

627. Is it not the fact that these branches were very rarely visited ?—They were at a great distance from each other.

628. That is scarcely an answer to my question. Is it not a fact that they were very rarely visited ?—If there was only one inspector they could not have been very often visited.

629. We have the evidence of Mr. Fraser that during the whole time that he was agent at Kurrachee his branch never was inspected ; he was some time there, and he said that the inspector never came round when he was there ; are you surprised at that ? He also informed us that the branch at Hyderabad was never visited ?—I forget when the branch at Hyderabad was opened.

630. Is it not a fact that these branches were never visited unless there was something wrong there ?—I do not know.

631. I will read you a statement of the losses at these different branches : Kalbadevi, Rs. 19,01,160 ; Poona, Rs. 4,31,549 ; Ahmeedabad, Rs. 6,38,484 ; Surat, Rs. 5,94,699 ; Dharmar, Rs. 2,19,762 ; Kurrachee, Rs. 1,67,751. All these losses were between the 1st June 1864 and the time of liquidation?—In the financial statement in the Blue Book the losses seem to have been after 1865.

632. Can you account for that great loss occurring?—I remember hearing of one case where there was a loss upon some hoondees which had been purchased.

633. Can you account by anything in the system, or in the persons who carried on those branches, for such an extraordinary loss, every one of the branches ending in loss?—I imagine that every place ended in loss, men who were trusted there were worth nothing some time afterwards.

634. But why were they trusted when it was well known that all those people who were considered rich at that time were merely rich as speculators?—I beg your pardon. If you will take the returns of the money which came into Bombay during 1863–64 and 1864–65 you will find that it was enormous; it came in from England in return for cotton.

635. Did not a great deal of that money go up-country to the Ryots?—I believe that it did.

636. Has not the whole condition of the Ryot population in those districts been wonderfully improved in consequence?—I believe that it has.

637. I know that a great deal of money came into Bombay, but I ask you whether the whole of the mercantile population of Bombay at that time was not engaged in speculation in shares particularly?—I do not think particularly in shares. In 1863 and 1864 there were Mint certificates issued for 6,385,000*l.*, there were likewise bills drawn by the Home Government for 3,684,305*l.*, making 10,069,305*l.* altogether sent out to Bombay. In 1864–65 there were 7,419,555*l.* sent out.

638. I am quite aware that a great deal of money came into Bombay, but the question is, whether all Bombay was not speculating with that money when it did come?—I will now refer you to some of the loans. We have finished with Brown and Best's loans. We will take next Burjorjee Rustomjee. On the 1st of February 1865 there was an advance made to him of five lacs, an advance on shares; were you aware of that fact?—I do not remember it.

639. There was an advance on shares made by the agent of the Kalbadevi branch when the Secretary at the head office himself had no power to advance on shares in consequence of the resolution of the 6th of August 1863. The money was openly advanced on shares.—I do not think that I ever heard of it.

640. You are not aware that such a practice openly prevailed at Kalbadevi, whilst it was done under a thin disguise at the head office only in a very few cases?—No, I am not.

641. You are not aware that previously, viz., on the 16th December 1864, which was in your time, the same person Burjorjee Rustomjee had an advance of 2½ lacs?—I cannot call it to my recollection.

642. On the 3rd of February 1865 there was another advance of 30,000 rupees, so that in your time, in December 1864 and February 1865, there were 7,080,000 rupees advanced to Burjorjee Rustomjee; have you any knowledge of that transaction?—I have no recollection of it.

643. Did not you look over the weekly returns of the Kalbadevi branch?—I may have done so, and very probably I did.

644. Who was Burjorjee Rustomjee?—I do not know.

645. Do not you remember the old cabinet-maker Rustomjee, who used to sell black wood furniture?—I was a stranger in Bombay, and knew nobody.

646. He was a man who made furniture in Meadow Street, and his son seems to have got these enormous advances; how can you account for a man in his position obtaining 7,080,000 rupees from the bank; the sureties were men of straw?—Other people, I dare say, would be better able to speak of what his wealth was than I am.

647. Are you able to give us any explanation?—I have no recollection of it.

648. Are you able to give us any explanation of the system which was prevailing at Kalbadevi?—Not further than I have stated.

649. Did you ever visit the Kalbadevi branch?—I did not.

650. Did you ever go over their accounts, or examine their securities?—I did not.

651. You left it all to the Secretary?—I did.

652. The next case is that of Byramjee Hormusjee Cama. A cash credit was opened before 1864 of 51,000 rupees; that was operated upon till the 19th of May 1866, when it stood at 47,774 rupees. Another cash credit was opened for three lacs on the 30th of January 1864, and it was operated on till May 1866, when he was debtor to the bank on that credit 6,05,000 rupees; he had overdrawn that cash credit by 3,05,000 rupees; another cash credit was opened in 1864 for one lac, which was operated on from then till May 1866, and he was then a debtor on that account for 98,260 rupees. Do you recollect anything of those cash credits being opened?—I do not. I remember his name being brought up before the board by Mr. Blair, and his asking if he might discount his bills; but to what extent I do not know.

653. You do not recollect those cash credits. I will ask you about the fixed loans granted to him. On the 16th October 1864 he had a fixed loan for seven lacs; do you recollect that transaction?—I cannot call it to my recollection. I recollect that during the time when Mr. Cowasjee Jehangeer sat at the board Byramjee Horumsjee Cama's name was brought up, and was discussed, and it was Mr. Cowasjee Jehangeer's opinion that he was a wealthy man; and what the amount fixed was I do not remember, but it was large.

654. Cowasjee Jehangeer left the board in June 1864?—I thought that it was in July.

655. Therefore he must have been talking about the cash credits. The first fixed loan was after he left the board?—I do not remember. You are taking me through a whole series of loans going over from six to eight months, and it is impossible that I or any other banker can remember them.

656. He had three cash credits open (I admit that he was a man of large business) on the 16th of October 1864, when you gave him a fixed loan for seven lacs. I think that you ought to have had some recollection of so large a transaction?—Perhaps a man who was not perpetually dealing in such large sums on account of the Government as I was might remember these large transactions; but take the other cases which came before me, 50, 60, and 80 lacs, and all such cases.

657. Then I am to understand that you do not recollect that large transaction?—I cannot call it to my recollection.

658. Do you recollect on the 9th February 1865 advancing still more, another fixed loan to him for 94,800 rupees?—I do not remember it. I have told you that I remember Byramjee's name being brought up.

659. Was there any security for any of these cash credits, or those first two loans?—I do not remember.

660. I will tell you that there was no security for them. Do you think that that was a proper way of doing business?—Was it only his own name?

661. The bank had only his own name?—You have said that he was a man of great wealth.

662. He was a man of great business, and I admit that he was a man of great credit; but do you think that it was a prudent banking operation to allow these large accounts to be outstanding to one person?—I do not remember that I was aware that he had all these large sums.

663. But was not it your duty, and the duty of every director, to know that so large an amount was outstanding to one individual?—(No answer.)

664. Byramjee Hormusjee Cama told us that he was allowed to overdraw his cash credit of three lacs to 6,05,000 rupees, through Premchund Roychund's influence; and he has admitted that he obtained the loan of seven lacs through Premchund Roychund; were you aware of any such influence being exercised over the officials of the bank?—I was not. I was aware that Mr. Blair consulted Premchund Roychund when he was a director, and he had been consulted before, and had been asked what the position of people was.

Mr. Birch.
10 Nov. 1868.

665. I believe that you were rather an advocate, were you not, for lending upon mere personal security?—I believe so.

666. Then you were really the person who was responsible, if anybody was, for the introduction of that system?—I am not aware that I was the person responsible at the time.

667. I find this written by Mr. Hannay, your successor, in a discussion which arose upon that question, and upon which we shall have to examine Mr. Lushington; Mr. Hannay writes this (vide scroll minute marked A. 70.), "I agree with our late President Mr. Birch that good personal security is far better than any other;" was that your opinion?—What do you mean by "any other?" Not Government securities. I am not singular in my opinion, am I?

668. I ask you whether that was your opinion?—Yes.

669. That good personal security is better than any other?—I do not say "better than any other."

670. The words are "far better than any other?"—It cannot possibly be better than Government promissory notes.

671. Is it not clear from this that the impression left upon the minds of your colleagues, and of those who succeeded you, was that you were a very great advocate for advancing money upon personal security?—It may have been.

672. Was it not the fact that you were?—It was.

673. Do you really think that it was prudent banking to advance any large amount to people at that time, particularly in Bombay, upon personal security?—I do not see any objection to it.

674. You remain of that opinion after all the results?—Perhaps if it went on over again I might not do it, with all the experience which I have had since; but I think that you have it in evidence from Mr. Lidderdale that when Mr. Rootonjee's name was brought up he said "I myself would have given him five lacs."

675. Eventually the bank lent him eleven lacs?—The bank might have advanced almost any sum with the name which that family had.

676. The next case is that of Shapoorjee Dhunjeebhoy. He received a discount at the head office on the 20th of April 1864 of one lac, it was one of the earliest losses. On the 14th December 1864 he received three lacs. The loss upon those four lacs has been rupees 3,20,000. There was no security taken for either of those loans. Byramjee Manockjee gave his name with Shapoorjee for the second loan. Who were those persons?—I do not remember; most likely I heard their names at the time.

677. Who was Shapoorjee Dhunjeebhoy; do you not remember that he was the son in law of the late Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy?—I do not remember the Parsee names.

678. In granting loans, the Secretary should be guided, I suppose, by the "Opinion Book"?—He used to be, but that "Opinion Book" I do not think was written up for a long time.

679. It was written up in 1864; there were a great number of entries in 1864?—I do not remember when the last revision of the list was.

680. This man got a loan for a lac, and these are the opinions given about him: "Son in law of Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, quite safe for 75,000 rupees Cowasjee considers." Then there is this entry also: "Rustonjee" (the man's own relative) "thinks 50,000 rupees about enough"?—Yes.

681. Those being the statements in the book, how can you account for advances being made to those men to the extent of four lacs?—What is the date of that?

682. The first opinion is dated 28th September 1863, and the last was given on the 27th April 1864, just when you lent a lac. How was it that he got such large advances when the "Opinion Book" shows that the bank was advised only to lend him Rs. 75,000 and his own relative said that he was not to be trusted with more than 50,000 rupees?—I do not remember the transaction.

683. We will go on to the next case, which is that of Cursetjee Furdonjee. On the 28th of December 1864 he received a fixed loan of 6,25,000 rupees, and he gave no security whatever but the usual promissory note?—By himself?

684. By himself alone.—I do not remember.

685. You do not recollect that transaction?—I do not.

686. You do not recollect that on the previous 15th of August he had received another fixed loan for 3 lacs?—I was at Poonah then.

687. It was renewed on 16th January 1865, and you were at Bombay then?—Yes.

688. Were you also there when he had granted to him a cash credit on the 16th November 1864 for two lacs?—I was there on the 16th November 1864.

689. Were you aware of that cash credit?—I do not remember.

690. Here are 12,33,000 rupees given away on a promissory note to one individual, and you say that you do not know it?—I do not say that I do not know it; I say that I do not remember it.

691. Yesterday you said that you did not remember any of these large loans being granted on personal security?—I did not remember them, and I do not remember them.

692. Then am I to understand that your mind is a blank sheet of paper as to all these transactions?—Certainly not.

693. What do you mean?—I cannot call these individual loans to my recollection.

694. You must have seen the evidence taken in India, and you must have had many opportunities of preparing yourself for this examination?—What was I to refer to?

695. As I understood you yesterday, you said that the Secretary had very little power, that he had power only to grant loans to a small amount, and that you knew nothing of these large loans?—I said, I think, that I did not remember any of them.

696. Then who does remember anything of them?—I cannot tell you.

697. Who did know anything about these large loans?—I may have known of some of them, but I cannot call them to my recollection.

698. Did not you think that it was the duty of the President to ascertain as to the credit of the parties, and as to what discounts and cash credits and fixed loans were given them?—I dare say that I knew them at the time, but I do not remember. I have no doubt that I did.

699. Were you aware that Premchund managed any of these large loans for the bank?—How do you mean "managed" them?

700. Arranged them when he was a director?—He may have done so.

701. That is Mr. Blair's handwriting, is it not (handing Exhibit A 37. to the witness)?—Yes.

702. He says "My dear Premchund,—Cursetjee Furdonjee got the six lacs you spoke about before the holidays. Kindly tell me what the rate was that you fixed. The shares will also require to be deposited for safety. Truly yours, James Blair." This is the Secretary writing to Premchund. That is one of those cases in which that disguise was adopted. This is Premchund's answer: "My dear Mr. Blair. 1st July 1865, at 15 per cent. You shall have the shares to-day." That is one of those fixed loans for a very long date; do you know anything of that transaction?—I do not remember it.

703. Those transactions were on the 15th of August, the 16th of November, and the 28th of December 1864. If those applications did come to you, were not you in the habit of inquiring whether there was anything outstanding against the party?—How do you mean?

704. Any previous discount or outstanding?—If it came to me there ought to have been a memorandum with it, to say what was outstanding.

705. If the last application had come to you it would have come with the intimation that the sum of 12,33,000 rupees altogether was going out, including the application then made?—I do not think that any of them, or many of them, did come to me; some of them may have been brought before me, but I do not remember it.

706. If it had been brought before you surely you would have recollected so very large a transaction as lending 12 lacs and upwards to one person upon his promissory note?—I do not remember.

707. The next case is that of Kursondass Madhowdass. Here is a transaction which you must recollect. We were told by one of the witnesses that you would be able to tell us all about it. It is a loan of 25 lacs altogether. On the 31st August 1864 the firm of Kursondass Madhowdass borrowed in three different names, viz., the names of the different partners of that firm, Mayabhoy Premabhoy, eight lacs; Muggonbhoy Huttising, eight lacs; and Kursondass Madhowdass, four lacs. On the 26th September 1864, Kursondass Madhowdass took five lacs more, that makes 25 lacs altogether, and they got that without the least security, upon nothing but a promissory note; do you recollect that transaction?—At the first I was not in Bombay, I was in Poonah.

708. On the 26th September there were five lacs?—On the 26th September I must have been in Bombay.

709. Was that transaction brought to your notice?—I do not recollect it.

710. Did you never hear of these 25 lacs being advanced to one firm without any security?—I do not call it to my recollection.

711. Did you ever ascertain that that large sum was outstanding?—I do not remember it.

712. In the "Opinion Book" in March 1864, just preceding this transaction of August 1864, I find the following entry against the name of Kursondass Madhowdass: "Considered by Premchund good for one lac." And on August the 24th, 1864, the entry is, "Kursondass Madhowdass and Co., Premchund states, is good for four or five lacs." In fact, this was really an advance to Kursondass Madhowdass and Company of 21 lacs, and yet you see that in August, at the very same time that that firm had advanced to it 21 lacs, it was entered in the "Opinion Book" as good for four or five lacs. Can you account for that?—I do not remember it. Premabhoy was considered a man of enormous wealth.

713. It was his son who was in that firm. You are not able to explain that enormous transaction?—I am not.

714. It is to be regretted that we have not been able to examine Mr. Blair. We shall make an attempt to go through every one of these transactions. It will be a perfect failure of justice if we do not get his evidence. You know nothing of the subsequent proceedings with regard to these loans?—I do not.

715. The next case is that of the Eastern Financial Association. Do you recollect anything of the Eastern Financial Association? On the 18th October 1864 a loan was arranged with Mr. Blair of 10 lacs, for which Mr. Ryan, the secretary of that association, gave a promissory note?—I do not recollect it.

716. If you had looked at the "Daily Book" the next day you would have seen, under the head of Bombay Bills, that upwards of 10 lacs had gone out. You did not see that?—I did not.

717. You never saw anything which led you to make any inquiry?—I do not recollect it.

718. You do not recollect any inquiry being made afterwards about this transaction?—I do not remember.

719. There were 16 lacs and odd advanced to that association, but the other advances were all after your time?—Was that the association which purchased the powder mills?

720. No, it was not that, I think. I am asking you about these 10 lacs?—I do not remember it.

721. That is very extraordinary. Here is a violation of the principle which you yourself had approved, namely, that when you were dealing with one of these ephemeral companies you took the security in the names of the directors of the company?—Yes.

722. In this case that principle was abandoned?—I do not remember.

723. They took the name of the new secretary, a man who is now in the hospital in Bombay. Can you account for this?—No, I cannot.

724. You know nothing of the transaction?—I do not remember it.

725. The next case is that of Gopalrow Bulwunt. He obtained an advance at the head office of 50.000 rupees on the 21st of January 1865, and at the Kalbadevi branch on the 1st of February 60,000 rupees more, and it almost resulted in total loss; there was no security for either of those transactions; are you aware of anything about them?—No, I do not remember them; I myself knew none of these people.

726. You knew none of the natives. After your long residence in Bombay you had not acquainted yourself at all with the credit of the different native merchants?—No; excepting so far as I saw the "Opinion Book." Their names are rather confusing to a person who has not been long there. Cowasjee Jehangeer has a nickname; there is another Cowasjee Jehangeer who has a nickname. One day at the board the name of Cowasjee Jehangeer came up, and Cowasjee himself said, "I wish you would put the nickname to it."

727. The next case is that of the Imperial Banking and Trading Company. On the 8th of December 1864 they obtained an advance of five lacs?—I do not remember it; in whose name was it?

728. It was taken in the names of the chairman and directors, Memanjee Framjee Panday and others. Do you know anything of that transaction?—I do not remember it.

729. Were not many of these companies composed of a very disreputable lot of shareholders?—Of what?

730. Persons of no position?—I am not aware of it.

731. Were not many of the shares held by police Sepoys?—I did not know it.

732. Do you know anything particularly of this company?—I do not.

733. You heard nothing whatever of this loan at the time?—I do not remember.

734. Can you in fact remember one single transaction?—I can hardly call to my recollection any single transaction. I have told you of two which I recollect, namely, Byramjee Hormusjee Cama's and the Alliance Financial Corporation.

735. The next case is that of Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy. On the 10th and 11th February 1865 he got a cash credit from the bank of 2,31,282 rupees; there has been a loss of 59,376 rupees upon that; do you recollect that transaction?—I do not.

736. Did not he come to you himself about it?—I do not remember it; I do not think that he would have done so.

737. Would he go to Mr. Blair?—I presume that he would.

738. After going through all these loans, have you any doubt that Mr. Blair managed the bank entirely?—I think that they must have been brought to the notice of some of the directors.

739. If Mr. Blair had not the management of the bank, and if you had not the management of the bank, who had?—I cannot tell you.

740. During the year 1864 and the beginning of 1865 my recollection is that there is only one single discount minute referred to before the board; can you account for that?—What do you mean by a "discount minute."

Mr. Birch.
10 Nov. 1868.

741. A question of credit, whether an advance should be made to a particular individual. Formerly, in looking through the minutes you see constantly the application of so and so for two lacs, and so on, put down in the agenda and the minutes, and then again after the panic of 1865 that reappeared in the minutes, but from September 1863 to May 1865 all advances are omitted from the minutes, except one, I think; can you account for that?—No, I cannot.

742. But surely as President (and you seem to admit that you took under your charge the conduct of the proceedings at the board) you ought to have remarked upon the fact that all the discounts and advances seem to have been omitted from the consideration of the board?—(No answer.)

743. The next case is that of Manockjee Limjee and Co., cash credit, 31st January 1865, five lacs?—I knew Manockjee Limjee.

744. It is the firm?—I remember both Cowasjee Limjee and Manockjee Limjee; Manockjee Limjee was a member of the board.

745. You do not remember that transaction?—You seem to think that any director of the board would have a recollection of all those transactions after such a lapse of time.

746. I must say that you seem to recollect less than any director whom we have examined yet?—Very good.

747. The next case is that of Merwanjee Nusserwanjee Bhownuggur; a discount was granted to him on the 22d of June 1864 with Mr. Macfarlane of 15,000 rupees, and on the 21st of January 1865 there was another loan to him, 1½ lacs; do you recollect either of those transactions?—I do not call them to my recollection. You remarked just now that I seemed to be a director who remembered least of all these things; you forget that all the others whom you have examined were there the whole time, and were perfectly familiar with all the people in Bombay; I was not, and knew nothing. I hardly knew their names; at least, I knew their names, but I did not know who they were.

748. I consider that statement very important, because it just shows the value of Government directors?—Excuse me, I do not think that it does. I was a director of the Bank of Madras for very many years.

749. With respect to this man, I will ask you whether this letter was brought under your attention before this loan was made; it may perhaps revive your recollection of the transaction; it was admitted by Premchund to be in his handwriting: "Merwanjee is worth 15 lakhs, but he is a great speculator, and may lose the whole in three days; still, give him one lakh and risk it. Yours truly, P.R."?—If I saw it, my initials would most probably be to it.

750. Your initials are certainly not to it. You are not aware of that transaction?—I do not remember it.

751. The next case is that of Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff. He had a cash credit on the 2d of July 1864 for 60,000 rupees. You were not in Bombay then?—I was not.

752. On the 18th of October 1864 he had a cash credit for 40,000 rupees; you were there then?—Yes.

753. He had a fixed loan on the 19th December 1864 of 97,000 rupees, and afterwards he had further loans after your time. Do you recollect anything of those two transactions?—I cannot recal them to my recollection. I remember the man's name.

754. Do you know anything about him?—No.

755. You do not know that he was a great speculator?—I do not.

756. I will only ask you about one more case, Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy and Sorabjee his brother. You were, I suppose, in constant intercourse with Rustomjee. Was not he at the board?—No; he did not attend very often.

757. Did not you see him very often?—I think that I called upon him once at his house, and that was the only time that I was in his house; he called upon me, and I returned his call.

758. Do you recollect a cash credit on the 14th of July 1864 of five lacs to his brother Sorabjee which he afterwards took upon himself?—No.

759. Do you recollect an advance to Rustomjee himself on the 12th July 1864 of two lacs and upwards?—I was not in Bombay then. I was at Poona at the time.

760. We have gone through those loans, and it appears that you are really unable to give us any information as to these very large transactions of the bank. Is there anything which you can tell us about the bank during that period?—In what way do you mean?

761. First, as to its management?—No; I do not remember anything particularly which I can tell you.

762. You have told us what you did not do; will you now kindly tell us what you did do, as president of this bank?—Do you mean altogether?

763. Yes; what were your duties, and what did you do?—I cannot detail them.

764. We should like to know, because we have read to you Mr. Hannay's opinion, that you were one of the first financiers in India, and the board, in commemoration of your services in the bank, resolved that they would put up your picture. We want to know what you did?—I presume that the directors rather referred to the whole of my service; you are taking the last six months.

765. I, of course, am taking what is material to this inquiry. I must do so?—You ignore all the rest.

766. I do not ignore it, but I have nothing to do with it. I ask you what you did from the 1st of June 1864 till the 1st of February 1865, which happens to be the time when the great mischief occurred?—I was not in Bombay till October, and I returned from Poona so ill that I had little strength or inclination for anything except my own work. I do not think that I did very much at the board after that.

767. Is there anything which you desire to say besides in exculpation of yourself (because we wish you to have that opportunity) in these transactions which we have gone through?—No, not that I am aware of.

(President.) Then I think that we cannot usefully detain you longer.

768. (Mr. Melvill.) Were you, as president of the bank, in communication at all with Government regarding the management of it?—No.

769. Did you take the opinion of the Government as to the propriety of increasing the capital?—I believe that the matter was referred to me.

770. As Accountant-General?—As Accountant-General.

771. Did you hold any proxy from Government to vote at the meetings?—Never.

772. Were you a shareholder in the bank yourself?—No, the directors were not allowed to be shareholders.

773. Then if you were neither a proprietor yourself, nor authorized to attend for the Government, in what capacity did you attend and take the chair at the meetings?—As the president of the board. I think that you will find that it is not very often that I attended. I have before stated that the Government directors in Madras never held the appointment, and that I would not have done so in Bombay if I could possibly have helped it.

774. The Act provides for the Government attending at any meeting, and it says, that it shall be lawful to appoint any person as a proxy to attend any general meeting of the proprietors?—Yes.

775. If you were not a proprietor and did not hold any proxy for the purpose I do not understand how you had any business to be there taking the chair and advising an increase of capital?—I did not advise an increase of capital. I merely stated what the meeting arose out of. The meeting was called by the proprietors, and in the speech which I made there I merely remarked why it had been called, and gave an explanation of the reasons why the shareholders had called a meeting themselves, and why it had not been called in the usual way by the directors.

776. Still it does not appear why you and the other directors were present at the meeting of proprietors ?—We had no vote.

777. Then the Government did not vote on that question at all ?—I do not remember a proxy being ever given by the Government.

778. (President to Mr. Newmarch.) Do you wish to ask the witness any questions ?

(Mr. Newmarch.) I think not, Sir.

FORREST LOUDON BROWN, sworn and examined.

779. (President.) We examine you out of your turn in consequence of a letter which you have written to us stating that you are immediately expected to be in Bombay ?—That is quite true.

780. We should not otherwise have examined you at this stage of the inquiry. I believe that you had three advances from the Bank of Bombay ; there are three bills to which your name at all events is attached ?—Yes.

781. First of all there was a transaction with Mr. Macfarlane, a bill discounted on the 15th July 1864 for 30,000 rupees ?—Yes.

782. Then there was a second one, on the 20th December 1864, with Mr. Heycock and Venayek Pandoorung for 50,000 rupees ?—Yes.

783. Then on the 25th February 1865 there was one with Mr. Best, 2½ lacs ?—Yes.

784. We will take the first, namely, of the 15th July 1864, a bill discounted, Mr. Macfarlane being jointly bound with you ?—Yes, that is right.

785. With whom did you negotiate that loan ?—I think through Mr. Blair. I think that I applied to Mr. Blair direct ; by letter I should think.

786. Did Mr. Blair ask you for any security ?—I am not aware. I rather think not.

787. Did you give any security ?—No, I rather think not.

788. Did Mr. Blair ask you what you wanted the money for ?—I cannot call to mind at this time, but I should think not.

789. Mr. Macfarlane, who was jointly bound with you, was a solicitor of the Supreme Court, was he not ?—He was.

790. You divided the money between you, I suppose ?—I think so, and we bought Bank of Bombay shares with it.

791. You borrowed it to buy shares ?—I believe so. I am speaking from memory.

792. As a speculation ?—As a speculation.

793. Did Mr. Blair know that you were going to enter into that speculation ?—I cannot answer that question ; I am not sure ; I think that it is very possible that I mentioned it to him.

794. Were you in the habit of mentioning to Mr. Blair what you were going to do with the money which you borrowed for your speculations ?—On the whole of these three loans I think that I explained entirely and exactly what I wanted the money for.

795. Then Mr. Macfarlane was not in the nature of a surety, but you were both borrowers ?—We were both borrowers.

796. That note was renewed I suppose ?—I think that it was renewed for a smaller amount.

797. How often was it renewed ?—I do not remember.

798. Do you remember on what renewal it was that you paid something in reduction of that debt ?—I cannot remember the amount, but if you will give me my books I may possibly tell you.

799. Here are all your books, you paid 5,000 rupees, did you not ?—It is not down here (referring to his book).

800. Do you know on what renewal it was, whether on the first, second, or third renewal of that note, that you paid 5,000 rupees ?—I cannot remember the date.

801. How came you to pay that 5,000 rupees ?—I should think that Mr. Blair must have asked for something to be paid on account, and that we paid 5,000 rupees.

802. Do not you recollect ?—I do not, or I would tell you.

803. How often was this bill renewed ?—I think once or twice.

804. Was not 10,000 rupees paid upon that bill instead of 5,000 ?—I will tell you in two minutes (referring again to his book). I think that it is here, "On the 26th of January 1865 renewed a bill for 30,000 rupees with the Bank of Bombay."

805. You renewed the bill for 30,000 rupees, therefore on the first renewal you did not pay anything. Look at the second renewal.—That is all that I have entered here. The bill must have been renewed twice, I think.

806. Eventually how much did you pay on that bill ?—I am not aware that anything more was paid.

807. You paid 10,000 rupees ?—It is not here.

808. The bill was for 30,000 rupees ?—Yes.

809. Did you not pay 10,000 rupees on it, or was it Mr. Macfarlane who paid ?—There are 10,000 rupees entered as paid here.

810. There was a loss of 20,000 rupees upon that bill ; were you ever pressed to pay it ?—I must have been asked to pay it. I must have been pressed in a very mild form, I should think.

811. What do you mean by "pressed in a very mild form" ?—I mean that they did not threaten legal proceedings against me.

812. Who pressed you in a mild form ?—I think that I must have got notice from the bank.

813. What sort of a notice ?—Notice that the bill was overdue.

814. And they did not press you severely ?—I am not aware that they did.

815. They did not ask you to pay ?—I cannot call to mind their pressing me to pay.

816. May I ask what was your position in Bombay at that time ?—I think a very good position indeed. I was doing a very large business, as this book will show you. My receipts per month were very large indeed, irrespective of all of the amounts which I got on speculation, and irrespective of all the donations, as you call them, of shares which I got.

817. You were carrying on a good business as a broker in addition to that of a speculator in shares and a receiver of allotments, was that it ?—I got allotments given to me.

818. How long had you been a broker ?—About three and a half years.

819. What were you before that ?—I was an assistant in Smith, Elder, and Company's.

820. They were booksellers in Bombay, were they not ?—They were foreign agents, they were not specially booksellers.

821. Did you start in partnership with Mr. Best ?—No, I started alone.

822. We will take the next bill of the 20th December 1864 with Heycock and Venayek Pandoorung. Who was Mr. Heycock ?—He was a son of Mr. Heycock, the manager of the Central Bank.

823. What was Mr. Heycock himself ?—A merchant.

824. Was he carrying on any business ?—Yes, shipping business. My business with him chiefly arose from selling his bills.

825. Who was Venayek Pandoorung ?—His broker.

826. Was any security given for that loan ?—I am not aware. I had no interest whatever in it. I simply signed at their request as security or surety.

827. Did Venayek Pandoorung know that you were merely a surety ?—Yes ; and I observe that he made a statement in Bombay, which is totally false.

828. What is his statement which is false ?—On one of the days he said that he had no interest in the loan.

Mr. Brown.
10 Nov. 1868.

829. He corrected that afterwards?—Yes, to the extent of 1,000 rupees.

830. No, one third; he came forward very straightforwardly afterwards, and said so.—It was put in the newspapers 1,000 rupees.

831. He was interested in one third, and who was interested in the other two-thirds?—Not myself; I was interested in no part of it whatever.

832. Then am I to understand that you were admitted by Mr. Blair as surety?—Yes.

833. How did that arise?—I think that in the first instance Messrs. Heycock and Venayek Pandoorung asked me to apply to the Bank of Bombay for a loan on their account, which I did, and the loan was granted on the condition that I would endorse it, and, after considerable hesitation and some letters passing between us, I did so.

834. What has become of Mr. Heycock?—I do not know. He left Bombay without advising any one.

835. Do you know what that money was borrowed for?—I have not the least idea. I should myself think for speculation.

836. But surely, as you were the broker and were employed in that matter by Mr. Heycock, you ought to know what the transaction was?—Will you give me the date of it?

837. The date is the 20th of December 1864; it has been put down in the Blue Book as of that date, but originally the bill appears to have been given on the 12th July 1864?—I have no note of it.

838. Did you really gratuitously become surety and have no benefit from the transaction in any way?—I had no benefit whatever.

839. Not even buying the shares as broker?—That is possible. I may have bought the shares for them, if they did buy shares.

840. You are not able to tell us anything further about that transaction?—Not further than that I had no interest whatever in it.

841. On the 25th of February 1865, you and Mr. Best obtained an advance of 2½ lacs?—Yes.

842. With whom did you negotiate that loan?—I believe with Mr. Blair.

843. Are you quite sure of that?—I am not quite sure of it. I believe so.

844. If you did not negotiate it with Mr. Blair, with whom did you negotiate it?—With whoever was in his office. Mr. Robertson.

845. I think that this letter of the 24th February 1865 will revive your recollection as to whom you negotiated with (handing the letter to the witness)?—Yes, it was Mr. Robertson. I spoke from memory.

846. The letter is as follows: "My dear Robertson. Best and myself wish to pass a promissory note for 2½ lacs for 14 days, or less time, will you kindly see if the loan can be allowed? Premchund knows the security against which this money is wanted, and told me to ask you to refer to him if need be. Yours sincerely, F. L. Brown." Why did you not negotiate that transaction with Mr. Blair?—I should that he was not at the bank at the time.

847. Was any security given for this large advance?—The security was to be given in the shape of Port Canning Company's shares.

848. There was no security given at first?—I rather think that security was given at first.

849. There was none.—Then it must have been given after a very few days.

850. That was when the note was renewed 14 days afterwards, but I am talking of the original loan; was any security given for the original loan?—I cannot speak from memory. I say that the shares were to be given to the bank, and upon that understanding alone was the loan to be granted.

851. You negotiated with Mr. Robertson that if he would lend you that two and a half lacs to buy these shares, you would deposit those shares when bought?—A greater number; we had already bought many.

852. You bought fifty Port Canning shares altogether?—Yes.

853. The transaction was a transaction between you, Mr. Tracey, and Mr. Best?—I do not believe that Mr. Tracey had the slightest interest in it.

854. Are you prepared to swear that?—I am prepared to explain every particular of this transaction as far as you like to know.

855. Are you prepared to swear that Mr. Tracey had nothing to do with this transaction?—I will not swear that he had nothing to do with it.

856. What had he to do with it?—He had no interest in the transaction. I will swear that, to my knowledge, I do not know that Mr. Tracey was to receive any profit or pay any loss upon the transaction.

857. That is not the question which I asked you. I ask you whether he had an interest in that transaction or not?—I believe that he had an interest at the beginning of it, but I paid him his money back.

858. In whose handwriting is that pencil memorandum in that book (marked F 1., page 53)?—My own.

859. What does "Tracey" mean there?—It means Tracey, one and a half lac.

860. That was Mr. Tracey, a director of the Bank of Bombay?—Yes.

861. "Best, one lac." That is your partner?—Yes.

862. "B. B., two and a half lacs"?—Yes; that is the Bank of Bombay.

863. The whole makes up five lacs?—Yes.

864. Was not that five lacs to be invested in a speculation in Port Canning shares?—Yes.

865. And were not the parties to that speculation to be Tracey, Best, and you, and you and Best were the borrowers of that two and a half lacs?—No; that is simply a memorandum; it is a pencil memorandum.

866. But why was it there for any other purpose than as defining the parties?—I beg your pardon; it may be that I should define the money in that particular way.

867. Why did you put down Mr. Tracey's name in conjunction with this loan, except as showing that he was to be interested in some transaction of yours to the extent of one and a half lacs?—Not at all; he lent me one and a half lacs to buy those shares with.

868. Are you prepared to contradict Mr. Best's statement, your own partner's statement, about it?—Most undoubtedly, if it is contrary. I am stating what is correct.

869. I will read you what Mr. Best says:—"The transaction for which the rupees, 2,50,000, were obtained from the Bank of Bombay was a joint transaction, in Port Canning Company's shares, between Mr. Tracey, Mr. Brown, and myself. The transaction is entered in page 53 of this book (marked F 1)." He there puts it that way. We found it out; he did not volunteer it. He says,—"the transaction is entered in this book. Mr. Tracey had no connection with the loan," that is, of the two and a half lacs; he said first of all that he had. "You will see that the sum of rupees, 1,50,000, was found by Mr. Tracey." That is just the contrary of what you say now?—Not at all; I said that Mr. Tracey found one and a half lacs of rupees and gave them to me.

870. He lent them to you?—Yes.

871. But not for the transaction?—He perfectly understood what transaction I was going into.

The President reads from the Minutes of the evidence taken before the Commission in India as follows:—"(Mr. Best.) I found the other one lac, and the loan supplied the rest. Mr. Tracey knew that the loan had been obtained. The transaction was on the 25th of February 1865; I do not know that Mr. Tracey was a director of the Bank of Bombay at that time.—(President.) He was elected on 26th January 1865. To your knowledge did Mr. Tracey recommend you to the Bank of Bombay?—(Mr. Best.) Not to my certain knowledge. I think that it is very likely that he did. I have no doubt that he did."

872. (President.) That was the evidence of your own partner, Mr. Best, when that statement was put before him?—Yes.

873. You have had an opportunity of thinking over this matter ; have you talked to Mr. Tracey about it since the evidence was delivered?—I have not seen Mr. Tracey.

874. How came Mr. Tracey to lend you 1,50,000 rupees?—He did so more on account of Mr. Best, I should think ; he was a more intimate friend to Mr. Tracey than I was; but Mr. Tracey was very anxious that Port Cannings should be maintained ; he knew very well that I was a very large holder of Port Cannings on my own account, and, when I was interested in this speculation, I told him that most of my funds were locked up in Port Cannings.

875. If he was a very great friend of Mr. Best why did not he lend him the money instead of you?—Because the transaction was a joint one.

876. Why did he not get a security from Mr. Best as well as from you?—I do not think that Mr. Best was so well off as I was at the time.

877. I suppose that you gave a promissory note to Mr. Tracey for his loan of 1,50,000 rupees?—I repaid it to him partly in money and partly in Port Canning shares.

878. Can you name the security which you gave him for that loan?—What security?

879. He lent you 1,50,000 rupees?—Yes.

880. What security did you give him for that loan?—I think only a simple letter stating that I had received that money.

881. You did not give him a promissory note for it?—I think not. I am not sure that I did not. I am speaking from memory. I think that it was only a letter. You have referred to Mr. Best's evidence as being contrary to mine, but you have also an affidavit from Mr. Best denying what he said.

882. Which we did not receive in evidence, and will not receive. The day before the Commission left Bombay Mr. Best handed to Mr. Chauntrell an affidavit contradicting what he had previously said?—He sent me a copy also.

883. He knew that we could never examine him upon it, and he avoided all cross-examination upon the point by so doing. We did not receive that affidavit as evidence, and cannot receive it. I believe that you wrote out to Mr. Best directly you saw his evidence?—I did, very strongly indeed.

884. Will you give us copies of the letters which you wrote?—I have no copy.

885. You never kept copies of your letters?—I did in Bombay.

886. Have you kept no copies of those letters which you wrote to Mr. Best?—I have not done so.

887. Have you had any letters from Mr. Best on this subject?—Yes, three or four ; very few indeed.

888. Have you got them?—No ; I will give them to you.

889. Can you send for them now?—I cannot very well. I will go for them myself and get them for you when you adjourn.

890. Let us have the history of this transaction from the commencement. What was the commencement of this transaction?—I do not wish to free myself from the fact that I speculated largely, but I rather think that I was induced to go into that speculation by Premchund and Mr. Tracey. I believe that that is the true state of the case.

891. Why should Mr. Tracey feel any interest in your going into that transaction?—He was very largely interested himself in Port Cannings, I believe. I understood so, and he was very anxious that the market should be maintained. At that time the shares were at 11,000 rupees premium per share.

892. And you wish to tell us that Mr. Tracey lent you 1,50,000 rupees?—He certainly did lend me 1,50,000 rupees, and for that very purpose.

893. The way in which you put it, as I understand, is this, that, instead of it being a transaction in which Mr. Tracey was directly interested, it was a transaction in which Mr. Tracey was indirectly interested by wishing to keep up Port Canning shares?—Yes.

894. There is not a very great difference in that. Was he not originally a party to the transaction?—I do not think so.

895. Did not you write out to Mr. Best a full account of what was your view of the transaction?—No, I did not. I wrote out a very short note indeed, telling him that I thought that his evidence was absurd. You are aware that I telegraphed to you, asking to be sent to Bombay. I should have much preferred being examined there, where I had my papers.

896. I never had a telegram from you?—Mr. Chauntrell saw the telegram.

897. Is it not true that Mr. Tracey was first of all interested with you in a smaller speculation in Port Canning shares?—I do not recollect any.

898. You do not recollect that Mr. Tracey joined with you and Mr. Best in this speculation of the two and a half lacs?—I have told you already that I do not believe that he did.

899. That may have been at the last, but at the commencement did he not intend to be a party himself to the transaction to the extent of 1,50,000 rupees?—That I cannot say.

900. Was it an original loan to you of 1,50,000 rupees?—I was certainly alone responsible for that.

901. Was not it originally intended that Mr. Tracey should be a party to that transaction?—I do not believe so.

902. If Mr. Best said so in this affidavit, when we could not cross-examine him about it, is it false?—I should like to read it before I say that any part of it is false.

903. I will read what he says : "I verily and truly believe that Mr. Tracey was first interested with us in a smaller speculation in Port Canning shares for which no money was borrowed, and that after that was closed I and Mr. Brown entered into another and a larger one for 50 shares, and that I asked Mr. Tracey if he would join us in it, as it looked favourable, and he was a great friend of mine ; that he agreed." Is that true or not?—That I cannot say. I should think it to be true, but I know of no previous transaction with Mr. Tracey.

904. Then you are not prepared to contradict the statement that in the origin of this transaction Mr. Tracey was to be a party to it?—He and Mr. Best may have arranged it. I certainly knew of no such arrangement.

905. Who was to finance the money?—I arranged the money in that form.

906. Who was to get the money?—I think that I got all the money.

907. From the Bank of Bombay, and Mr. Best one lac?—Yes. It is wrong to say that I got the money ; the money was got by our office ; Mr. Best and I were in the office.

908. Mr. Best goes on to say, "When it became evident that we could not manage it without borrowing, then Mr. Tracey retired from it, paying 1,50,000 rupees for his share." Is that true?—I decline saying anything about that affidavit. I will give you my own evidence.

909. I want to know whether you are prepared to contradict Mr. Best?—I think that it is hardly fair for me to be called upon to speak as to that affidavit without seeing the whole of it.

910. Is this statement of Mr. Best true or false?—I will not swear that it is false.

911. His words are, "When it became evident that we could not manage it without borrowing, then Mr. Tracey retired from it, paying 1,50,000 rupees for his share."—That cannot be correct.

912. "And Mr. Brown gave him a promissory note for that amount."—Why should I do it if Mr. Tracey paid that amount for his share? Upon the very face of it it does not read.

913. Did you give Mr. Tracey a promissory note?—I am not sure. I may have done so.

914. Mr. Best's affidavit goes on to say, "Mr. Tracey lending the shares which had been his to us, which were afterwards lodged with the Bank of Bombay as security."—I cannot understand what that means. I have had a copy of this affidavit.

915. You are wholly unable to explain that statement of Mr. Best?—Entirely.

916. Did not you explain the transaction to Mr. Best in your letters to him?—Not in any shape or form.

917. It is a great pity that you have not kept copies of those letters to Mr. Best.—If they are in existence you shall have them, I will promise you that.

918. Mr. Best also says, "I believe that Mr. Brown (who has twice written to me since my examination, stating that he 'always, certainly, understood that Tracey had nothing to do with the loan') will confirm this explanation," and so on. Who recommended you for this loan from the Bank of Bombay?—Premchund.

919. Will you swear that Mr. Tracey did not recommend you too?—I will swear that Mr. Tracey at first did not recommend me, most distinctly.

920. If you will swear that Mr. Tracey did not at first recommend you, what did he do secondly?—He informed me that if I applied I should receive it.

921. Have you any doubt that he made the way plain for you?—None whatever.

922. And your version of it is, that his object was to keep up the price of Port Canning shares, and not, as Mr. Best first put it, for the purpose of his own speculation?—I think so; I think that that is the true state of the case.

923. Mr. Tracey and Premchund Roychund were both directors of the Bank of Bombay at that time?—I am not sure as to Premchund, Mr. Tracey was.

924. I understand you to say that Mr. Robertson knew how this money was to be invested?—Yes.

925. In a speculation in Port Canning shares?—Yes.

926. Which were at a very high premium?—Yes.

927. What premium were they at then?—11,000 rupees per share, I think.

928. What are they at now?—I do not know.

929. They are at a heavy discount?—I should think at an enormous discount.

930. At the end of the 14 days that transaction was renewed?—It was.

931. There was no security till then, was any security then deposited?—I think that the security was deposited before the end of the 14 days.

932. It was not even deposited on the first renewal; you did not deposit it until the 23d of June. Here are the entries (handing the securities ledger to the witness).—Then that is not correct.

933. These shares were deposited on the 23d of June; 46 altogether were deposited. Did you not deposit 46 shares?—That is quite right, but it was long before this date. That is not correct.

934. In the evidence of Mr. Best on that matter he tried first of all to convince us that that security was deposited at the end of the 14 days.—I think that that is correct.

935. But it was not deposited originally?—I will not say that it was.

936. Then the original loan was made to you without security?—Yes; but upon the understanding that those shares should be deposited.

937. Upon the promise that when you had bought the shares they should be deposited?—We had already bought many shares.

938. How was it that you entered into that transaction for 14 days; that you borrowed the money for 14 days?—We expected, before the 14 days were over, to have sold all our Port Cannings at a profit.

939. And Mr. Robertson knew that the money was for that speculation?—Undoubtedly.

940. What happened at the end of the 14 days?—The bill was renewed.

941. First of all did he not ask you for the money?—I do not remember being asked. I cannot call it to mind.

942. Did he ask you for part payment?—I cannot call it to mind. I should think that we asked for the thing to be renewed.

943. What had happened to Port Canning shares in those 14 days?—I really cannot say whether they went slightly up or slightly down. I think that the change was very immaterial at any rate.

944. Not enough to induce you to sell?—I think not.

945. And Mr. Robertson agreed to the renewal?—I think that the renewal was by Mr. Blair. I am not sure, but I think so.

946. Upon what terms did Mr. Blair renew it?—I really forget; the rate I think was something like 16 or 18 per cent.

947. What were the terms so far as regarded security; did they ask for security?—I have told you that I think that the shares were at that time, to the best of my recollection, given up to the bank.

948. They asked you to fulfil your engagement?—Yes, and we did so.

949. How many shares did you lodge then?—46 were lodged.

950. Did not you lodge 43 at first?—46 were ultimately lodged.

951. Before we pass away from the question with regard to the loan of the 2,50,000 rupees, may I ask you how you repaid Mr. Tracey?—I think that I paid him partly in cash by a cheque upon the Chartered Bank of India, and partly in Port Canning shares.

952. What number of Port Canning shares did you give him?—I cannot remember the number. I think that I gave him some five or six.

953. You gave him four Port Canning shares out of those 50 shares?—No, I think not.

954. Have you any books which will give you any assistance upon this point?—None whatever more than these.

955. The bank managers in Bombay I think were a good deal engaged in share speculations during the year 1864 and the beginning of 1865, were they not?—I am not prepared to say so; if you will ask me any particulars, I will tell you.

956. I ask you first of all, generally, whether in your business as a broker you did not know that the bank managers were then a great deal engaged in speculations?—Some of them were.

957. Were you employed by any of them as a broker to buy and sell shares?—Yes, by one or two I was.

958. I suppose that such transactions required a certain amount of secrecy?—I do not think so.

959. You do not think that it was employment of a confidential character; namely, buying and selling shares for bank managers?—All transactions in which a broker is employed are so far confidential, but I do not think that there is any secrecy in the matter at all.

960. Were not you the broker in October or November 1864 in the sale of six Back Bay shares by Mr. Morrison to Mr. Macfarlane?—I was.

961. Had Mr. Tracey any interest in that?—Not that I knew at first at all.

962. Did you know of it at last?—Yes, I did.

963. He had an interest in it?—He had.

964. Mr. Morrison was the manager of the Asiatic Bank?—He was at that time.

965. Will you look at page 51 of that book (Exhibit F. 2.); do you remember a transaction with Mr. Davison, a bank manager?—Yes, this is it.

966. You were the broker in that transaction?—I was.

967. Does Mr. Davison's name appear there?—Yes.

968. Of what bank is he the bank manager?—I think that he was at that time the manager of the City Bank, I am not sure. Mr. Davison simply bought those shares; they were sold and there was a slight loss, and he paid that loss. This has not the slightest connexion with the Bank of Bombay, and why you should bring in his name I do not know.

969. I have a particular object which perhaps you will see by-and-bye. You were also engaged in another transaction with Mr. Morrison for Commercial Bank shares?—I do not remember it.

970. It is mentioned by Mr. Best in his evidence. He says, "I should like to state that the transaction with Mr. Morrison was a trifling one in Commercial Bank shares;" that is one reference to it. He before says, "I have had joint operations with some bank managers; with Mr. Morrison of the Asiatic Bank." Then he says that that was about Commercial Bank shares. Was that your firm or himself only?—Himself only, I should think; I knew nothing of it.

971. Who was Mr. MacCulloch?—Which Mr. MacCulloch, because there were two Mr. MacCullochs in Bombay?

972. A bank manager.—Mr. David MacCulloch was manager of the Bombay City Bank.

973. Had you not some transaction with him?—Yes; we bought one Port Canning share for him.

974. Did not you also put your name to a promissory note for him of 10,000 or 12,000 rupees?—Yes, for that Port Canning share.

975. You advanced that money to him to buy that Port Canning share?—You can hardly call it an advance; we got that money from the bank.

976. From which bank?—From the Bombay City Bank.

977. Which of the MacCullochs was it?—The manager of the Bombay City Bank.

978. You borrowed the money from the Bombay City Bank to lend it to Mr. MacCulloch, the manager of that bank?—Yes, we did; we signed a note there for the purpose of buying a share for him in the Port Canning at his most earnest request.

979. Is it not the truth that you were engaged confidentially by many bank managers in the transaction of their affairs?—No, it is not; I was engaged in many transactions with bank managers, but I was engaged in no such manner as you refer to.

980. Then there is another entry at page 55 of your book (Exhibit F. 1.), and in the index do you see those entries?—Yes.

981. Can you explain those initials in that book?—No, I cannot; I came to this office a few days ago for the purpose of getting a copy of this sheet of the account, and I cannot explain what names those initials refer to if they do refer to names at all. You will see that the transaction is a completed one in every sense of the word.

982. It is the large sum of one lac and 62,000 rupees Port Canning shares, "B.B., R.F., and P.C.M."—For the last two or three days I have been thinking of almost nothing else, and I cannot call to mind whose initials they are; there is no person answering to C.M., but B.B. and R.F. and P. might stand for many people.

983. For whom?—I cannot say. I bought those shares and sold them to Premchund Roychund, and he paid me for them.

984. But you bought them for certain persons having such initials?—Evidently this account is a joint account, but it is a very small one, if it is to be divided between seven parties; therefore I do not think that the initials do refer to names.

985. Do you really mean to assure us that you do not recollect the names of those parties?—I do most solemnly assure you that I do not.

986. How came it that the greater number of the parties who signed your release were bank managers?—I only owed the banks at the time of that release.

987. Am I to understand that you had borrowed money from all these banks, and that it was in respect of that that they gave you this release?—I borrowed money partly in my own name, but mostly in the names of others and my own also.

988. There is the signature of "W. Fraser, Bank of Bombay," to your release.—If you go through all those names, I will tell you with whom I have had transactions.

989. "Signed, sealed, and delivered by Robert Campbell."—I never had a transaction with Mr. Campbell in my life.

990. Then he signed simply as representing his bank?—Yes.

991. There is the seal of the Bombay City Bank, and the signature of Mr. MacCulloch.—I had the transaction with him of which I have told you.

992. The seal of the Central Bank of Western India was affixed by Edward Heycock.—I never had a transaction with Mr. Heycock in my life.

993. You borrowed money from that bank?—Yes.

994. "Signed by A. Morrison for the Asiatic Banking Corporation."—I had transactions with Mr. Morrison.

995. Had you any other transactions besides those which you have mentioned?—I think that I had previously several transactions with Mr. Morrison in Government paper.

996. There is the name of Mr. Kelly; for what bank did he sign?—For the Bank of India, I think.

997. "Mercantile Credit and Financial Association, J. G. Weatherhead."—I never had anything to do with him.

998. Did you borrow money of that bank?—It was a joint promissory note with Venayek Pandoorung, with which I do not think that I had anything to do except as surety.

999. When did you submit a statement of your affairs to your creditors?—I am not quite certain as to the date. I think somewhere about May or perhaps the beginning of June 1865.

1000. Had you loans from all those banks; was that the nature of the transactions?—I had got joint loans with others, and my own as well.

1001. Did you ever enter into joint transactions wit Mr. Blair of the Bank of Bombay?—Never.

1002. Or Mr. Robertson?—Never in any way.

1003. Or Mr. Rodgie?—No.

1004. Mr. Rodgie signed your release?—He does not sign for himself but be signs as a trustee.

1005. Did you buy or sell shares for any directors of the Bank of Bombay?—Yes, I think that I sold shares for one or two directors.

1006. Just mention their names.—I think that I have sold or bought shares for Mr. Hannay.

1007. They were commercial directors?—Yes, it was quite a broker's transaction, in which I had no interest myself whatever.

1008. Had you any joint transactions with Mr. Blair or Mr. Robertson or Mr. Rodgie?—Certainly not at any time.

1009. You say that you submitted a statement of your affairs to your creditors; what was the amount for which you failed?—The amount of my liabilities was about 40 lacs, the securities taken that day were 23 lacs.

1010. That is to say, they were shares then valued at that amount?—Yes.

1011. At what date did you lay a statement of your affairs before your creditors?—I cannot remember the exact date, I think that it was in May or June 1865, at the beginning.

1012. There was a meeting of your creditors?—Yes.

1013. Who attended that meeting on behalf of the Bank of Bombay?—Mr. Robertson.

1014. What part did Mr. Robertson take at that meeting?—He took no special part, until finally he either proposed or seconded a resolution that I should execute a trust deed.

1015. By whom was the resolution which was passed at that meeting moved and seconded?—I think that Mr. Campbell proposed or seconded it.

1016. It was proposed by Mr. Campbell and seconded by Mr. MacCulloch, the manager of the City Bank?—Yes.

1017. Is that the resolution (handing a paper to the witness)? I see that Mr. Robertson was chairman of the meeting.—Yes, this is the thing (vide Exhibit F. 3.)

1018. Is that a correct copy of the resolution?—Yes.

1019. Was Mr. Robertson appointed your trustee?—Yes.

1020. How was it that Mr. Robertson undertook that trust?—That I cannot say. It has been a matter of great regret to him that he had anything to do with it.

Mr. Brown.
10 Nov. 1868.

1021. But what induced him to undertake it?—I cannot say; he was asked to do so, I think, from his position in the Bank of Bombay.

1022. Was he a great friend of yours? — Not specially so. I saw him very often at the Bank of Bombay. I was intimate with him.

1023. Have you never been mixed up with him in any transaction?—Never in any single transaction of any kind whatever.

1024. What books were handed over to Mr. Robertson when that deed was signed? — All the books that I had at the time which he wanted.

1025. He gave one book to us and this paper.—You got the books from the office.

1026. We got one from Mr. Best. Had Mr. Robertson all those books given over to him?—Yes.

1027. By whom was this deed of release drawn?—By the late Mr. Crawford.

1028. He is dead?—He is.

1029. Did you read this release before it was executed?—Yes, and you have taken very marked notice of it, but it is the very same release as others in the Bank of Bombay had.

1030. Did you read this release?—Of course.

1031. Here is the recital: "Whereas the said Forrest Loudon Brown in the course of his said trade and business in India has become indebted to the several persons, corporations, and firms, whose several and respective names and styles are set forth in the schedule hereunto annexed, marked with the letter A." I ask you whether that is a correct statement of the facts, that those debts were incurred in the course of your trade and business in India, which was that of a broker?—I can only tell you this, that I was in Bombay doing a very large business at the time when that speculation was going on, and I became involved to that extent.

1032. Is that a correct statement of how you became involved?—I take it that it is.

1033. That you became involved as a broker. Your designation is "broker of Bombay of the first part." Is that a correct statement? — I certainly became indebted to those persons, that is all that I can say about it.

1034. "Has become indebted to the several persons, corporations, and firms whose several and respective names and styles are set forth in the schedule hereunto annexed, marked with the letter A." Where is the schedule?—I sent it to Mr. Robertson, and every bank manager received a copy.

1035. Where is it annexed to the deed?—That I do not know; it ought to be attached to that deed.

1036. There is no schedule here.—I can send you a copy as soon as I get to Bombay. That deed was registered in the registrar's office immediately after it was executed; you could have got a copy there at an hour's notice.

1037. You say that May was the date when you laid your statement before your creditors?—I could not be sure of the date.

1038. When was the meeting? Was it not on the 11th July? It appears that the secretary reported on the 13th July that you and Mr. Best had laid a statement of your affairs before your creditors. Do you mean to say that you really did fail in May, and that you laid a statement of your affairs before your creditors at that time? — Certainly not; the first statement was made when that paper was drawn up, but I may have told them individually before that.

1039. When did you fail, was it in July?—The meeting was on the 11th of July.

1040. How long had you been insolvent before you got this release?—I should think quite for a month, if not more.

1041. Then your creditors did not harass you very much?—They have harassed me very much indeed. I laid the whole matter before them.

1042. They seem to have given you a full release on the 15th day of July, about a fortnight, I believe, after you became insolvent; that is a release for all these enormous debts, is that not so?—You have the dates there. I worked very hard and got what I thought a proper release signed.

1043. All these bank managers agreed to give you this release, Mr. Robertson being one? — All those parties present at that meeting agreed to it.

1044. What estate did you give up to your creditors?—I gave up the little which I had left.

1045. What was that little? — The schedule A., which you say you have not got, gives the particulars.

1046. Was not there a coffee estate?—Yes, it was a very large coffee estate, but it unfortunately fetched very little in the market afterwards.

1047. How much did it fetch?—I believe about 7,500 rupees.

1048. And I believe that that was about all the estate which was realized?—No, it was not so, I believe.

1049. What was the amount?—I should not like to be quite certain, but I think something like 25,000 rupees.

1050. I ask you seriously whether there was not some good reason why all these managers, Mr. Robertson included, gave you this release so freely?—I know of no reason whatever.

1051. You are not aware of any of their secrets?—There was not a single secret which I will not answer you.

1052. I can only ask you upon the information which I have received, but I will not pursue the matter further, if you undertake to swear that?—I undertake to swear it.

1053. Have you any further information to give us as to the Bank of Bombay?—None whatever; if you ask me any questions, I will faithfully answer you.

1054. You were a broker constantly doing business with the bank?—Yes, I was.

1055. What did you think as to the business, and how it was done?—Towards the end of 1864 and the beginning of 1865 they were very easy in giving loans; that is the only remark which I have to make about it.

1056. You have no particular information to give us on any point?—None whatever.

1057. Were you acquainted with Mr. MacCulloch, whom you have been speaking of?—Yes.

1058. Is he the Mr. MacCulloch who is a partner in the firm of MacCulloch, John, & Co.?—No, he is no relation whatever.

1059. Is he the Mr. MacCulloch who was mixed up with Mr. Premchund in business?—No; I wish to make an observation. I am a little excited, but out in India you expressed yourself very frequently to the effect that, when you came to England, you would summon me before you, and would examine me very closely about this deed of release.

1060. I said that I should examine you very closely.—Of course you had some reason for that?

1061. Of course I had, and you have seen it to-day.—You said that you should examine me in a very marked and special manner.

1062. And I have examined you in a very marked and special manner.—I think that you might have said why.

1063. I cannot do that. I am sorry to say that I have a very unpleasant duty to perform, and I am forced to act upon the best information which I can get.—Then I wish to say that I had no transactions whatever.

(President.) In consequence of the illness of Mr. Blair we have no further witnesses summoned for to-day, and we shall not be able to sit again until Friday. Four Government Directors are summoned for that day. We expected Mr. Blair to attend. We are going to examine him at his private residence. It must be a public examination within the meaning of the Act; we shall take a reporter and also our own reporter, and probably Mr. Newmarch will attend.

(Mr. Crole.) I am in attendance for Mr. Turquand, in obedience to a summons to him. So far as the account current of Mr. Blair is concerned, I can leave the Commissioners a copy of it.

(President.) I think that the only account which we shall want is that account.

(Mr. Crole.) I will leave you that.

Mr. Brown.

F. D. CHAUNTRELL, ESQ.

ARCHIBALD D. ROBERTSON sworn, and examined.

Mr. A. D. Robertson.
13 Nov. 1868.

1064. (President.) I believe that you are a retired member of the Bombay Civil Service?—I am.

1065. I believe that you were Chief Secretary to the Government of Bombay in the years 1863 and 1864?—I was. But before the Commissioners proceed to take my evidence, I wish to have their permission to make a statement. It is this: that in March last, when I left India, I was not aware that a Commission had been appointed to inquire into the losses of the Bank of Bombay; in fact I understood that the Government had consented to have no formal inquiry. I had stated to his Excellency the Governor of Bombay, as far back as November last, my intention to retire from the service in March, giving that as the reason for being permitted to refuse an appointment which he was then good enough to offer me. Notwithstanding that, had I known that the Commission were coming to Bombay, I should have felt it my duty to have offered to have given my evidence in Bombay before them. This I explained to Sir Stafford Northcote on my arrival in England, but I think it desirable to state it now here.

1066. When were you appointed Chief Secretary to the Bombay Government?—I was appointed secretary in May 1860, I think. At that time I had charge only of the Public Works Department and the General Department. Subsequently, in 1861, I was put in charge of the Revenue and the Financial Departments.

1067. I understand you to have been Chief Secretary to the Government?—I acted as Chief Secretary to the Government.

1068. When were you appointed a member of the Legislative Council of Bombay?—In 1863, I think.

1069. At what time of 1863?—The beginning of 1863; I think so; I am not sure; it might have been the end of 1862.

1070. When were you appointed a Government director of the Bank of Bombay?—When I became Financial Secretary to the Government.

1071. When was that?—In 1861.

1072. Did you sit regularly after that?—Yes, up to 1864; the 21st of April 1864.

1073. You were a director then when Act 10 of 1863 was passed?—I was.

1074. When did you resign the appointment of Government director?—In 1864. I left Bombay at the end of April or May 1864, and did not return again.

1075. Your last sitting at the board was on the 12th of May?—The 21st of April, I think.

1076. No; it was on the 12th of May, and you were appointed on the weekly committee on the 26th May?—Was I present at a meeting in May 1864?

1077. Yes.—Then it must have been so.

1078. And you were appointed a member of the weekly committee?—I went to Mahableshwar on the 14th May 1864, and never returned to Bombay, excepting, I think, for a couple of days, until I returned to England in September.

1079. Then how came you to be appointed on the weekly committee on the 26th of May?—I came to be appointed because I had not been officially gazetted out.

1080. I see that Mr. Jacomb, your successor, did not take his place at the board till the 9th of June?—That may be; I have a note (I am afraid that I have not brought it with me) from the assistant secretary in Bombay, giving the dates of my absence from Bombay, and he there puts down, "Proceeded to Mahableshwar, 14th May 1864."

1081. I see that you were absent from the 14th July 1863 till the 29th of October 1863?—Yes; I was at Poona.

1082. Did you attend the Bank regularly after the 29th of October 1863?—I cannot say that I did; the board minutes will show. I did attend pretty regularly; occasionally other business prevented my attending.

1083. The first point to which I wish to call your attention is Act 10 of 1863. What part did the Executive Government take in the preparation of that Act?—The first step was in 1861, it having been decided to withdraw from the banks their right of issuing notes, and to have a Government paper currency.

1084. We know that history, but I want to know what part the Government of Bombay took in the preparation of the Act?—In consequence of these changes the Government of India called upon the Government of Bombay in 1861, to inform them what alterations would be requisite in the law to carry out these modifications. In compliance with this request, I submitted to the Government law officers an interleaved copy of the original charter of the Bank of Bombay. This is it (looking at C 2), showing in the margin the modifications which it appeared to me would be desirable.

1085. I am not asking at present what you did, but I want to know what part the Executive Government took, that is to say, the Governor in Council?—I will explain it, if you will permit me. This having been submitted to the Government law officers, it was returned by them, with an opinion from Mr. Westropp, to say that they could not take upon themselves the responsibility to draft a Bill, and that we ought to call upon the directors of the bank to require their solicitors to prepare a complete draft, which would be submitted to them.

1086. Do you know of any minute or resolution of the Executive Government upon this Act 10 of 1863?—It passed through a good many stages. All these papers were submitted to the Government. I do not know that there was any formal minute; there were draft letters submitted.

1087. There is a memorandum of yours as Chief Secretary set out at pages 78 and 79 of the Blue Book, as to which it is stated, "This memorandum having been approved of by his Excellency the Governor, and the Honourable Messrs. Inverarity and Frere, the Government solicitor was addressed to the effect suggested in paragraphs 1 and 2 thereof, and requested to modify the provisions of the Bill, to the effect that the bank shall not deal in foreign exchanges, except to such extent and in such manner as the Governor of Bombay in Council may specially authorize;" and then again down below it is stated, "The following minute (dated 24th January 1863) was recorded by his Excellency the Governor, and concurred in by the Honourable Mr. Inverarity: 'These papers should be transferred to the Legislative Department, with the view that the Bill, amended as suggested in paragraph 4 of the opinion of the Advocate General, be published in the Government Gazette, in accordance with Rule 12 of the rules for regulating the conduct of business by the Legislative Council.'" Is there any other minute? We asked in Bombay and we were told that there was none.—I believe not.

Mr. A. D. Robertson.

1088. You do not remember ever seeing any other minute of the Executive Council?—I do not. The practice was that the secretary took the papers personally to the Governor, and took his instructions upon them, after which they were circulated, but very frequently no formal minutes were passed. Upon the instructions so received a letter was addressed to the Government of India or any other authority.

1089. Then I am to understand that the Governor and Council in the Executive Council wrote no minute on the policy or principle of this Act?—They wrote no minute; they relied upon the advice of their law officers.

1090. This bill appears to have been referred then to the Financial Department?—Yes.

1091. And it was for a considerable time under discussion there?—Do you mean the Government of India or the Government of Bombay?

1092. The Government of Bombay.—Yes.

1093. That came under your cognizance?—Yes.

1094. I will refer you to a letter of your own, dated 31st January 1867; it is found at pages 104 and 105 of the Blue Book. You say, "I had the honour to have charge of the bill before the Council; but in moving the first reading of it I did not, I must say, consider it requisite to institute any comparison between it and the bills granting fresh charters to the Banks of Bengal and Madras; all that it seemed to me necessary to do was to point out the principal changes which, as compared with the old charter, the bill proposed to effect. On remarking on section 31 of the draft, which corresponds with section 32 of the bill as finally passed, I did not, however, make special allusion to the words referred to in the extract from the despatch in question; and I may state, from my knowledge, as well as from my recollection of what took place both while the draft was under consideration and while the bill was before the Council, that these words did not attract attention on the part of any one. There is no doubt, I think, that they crept into the bill simply in consequence of the phraseology of the English Joint Stock Companies' Act having been followed in the preparation of the draft. It will be observed, from paragraphs 52 and 54 of the summary, that I had the honour of suggesting that the wording of the Act for the Bank of Bengal should be adopted in preference; but, for the reasons stated in paragraphs 53 and 56, that suggestion was not acted upon, which of course it is now to be regretted was not done." I ask you, did you institute any comparison between this draft Act and the Act for the Bank of Bengal?—I did, so far that I put, I think, the corresponding sections against the draft. I should like to see what I actually did; it is a long period since. I find here a copy of the draft with marginal annotations, as, for instance, against section 3, "The word made use of does not occur in section 39 of the Bengal Act, otherwise the substance is precisely similar;" and such like notes.

1095. Did you make any comparison between the two Acts to show in what respect they differed in point of principle?—I did, to a certain degree, but I admit that I did not properly weigh the precise bearing of all the words.

1096. If you had ascertained the difference of principle to have been great, I suppose that you would have felt it your duty to lay those differences before the Executive Council?—I should.

1097. That which you laid before the Council is to be found in paragraphs 52 and 54 of the summary, at page 77 of the Blue Book?—Yes.

1098. In paragraph 52 there is the following letter from yourself to the Bank of Bombay: "In forwarding extract paragraphs 49 to 55 of a despatch from the Secretary of State to the address of the Government of India, No. 158, dated 16th September 1862, on the subject of the transfer to the banks of the business hitherto transacted at the Government treasuries, and the introduction of the Government paper currency in India, I am directed to transmit copy of draft bill for the re-incorporation and re-constitution of the Bank of Bombay, as prepared by the bank's solicitor and revised by the Government law officers, on the margin of which I have caused to be shown the corresponding sections of Act 4 of 1862, for the re-constitution of the Bank of Bengal; and in drawing the attention of your directors to the verbosity of the Bombay Bill, as compared with the Bengal Act, I am instructed to suggest that for many reasons the wording as well as the order of the provisions of the latter should be adhered to as far as possible." Is it not clear from the wording of that letter that your objections to the Act were not objections founded upon principle, but to the verbosity and the arrangement of the Act?—The objection to the verbosity was so far as the wording of the Act of the Bank of Bengal was simpler and more easy to be understood. The Act for the Bank of Bombay had long repetitions, as it were, of the different provisions, and how far they affected them I knew not. I felt that it would be easier and more satisfactory to have a simpler wording.

1099. Is it not clear from that letter that your objection to the Act was an objection confined to its verbosity and arrangement, and not extending to its principle?—Yes.

1100. Your memorandum, set out at pages 78 and 79 of the Blue Book, says: "Submitted to the Honorable Board, with a suggestion that the opinion of the Government law officers be taked as to the advisableness or otherwise of adhering to the wording of the Bill as drawn, for the reasons stated by the bank's solicitors, or whether it would not be preferable to adopt the wording of the Act for the reconstitution of the Bank of Bengal." Is not that the same?—Yes. I felt that the Act for the Bank of Bengal was one which I could understand, and the other was one of which I could not quite understand the whole as worded.

1101. What is the meaning of the last paragraph in your letter on page 105: "It will be observed from paragraphs 52 and 54 of the summary that I had the honour of suggesting that the wording of the Act for the Bank of Bengal should be adopted in preference; but, for the reasons stated in paragraphs 53 and 56, that suggestion was not acted upon, which of course it is now to be regretted was not done." Why was it to be regretted, if it was only the wording and the verbosity and the arrangement which was objected to?—Because it is alleged that it gave powers which have caused the losses which have since occurred.

1102. Any alteration in the mere wording and arrangement would never have affected any change in its principle. I do not understand your paragraph?—If the wording of the Bengal Act had been adhered to, this clause, out of which it is supposed that the losses have originated, would not have appeared in the Act; and it is therefore to be regretted now, after the occurrences, that that suggestion was not acted upon.

1103. Then do you intend to say that you really did mean to suggest that the principle of the Act of the Bank of Bengal would have been better than this?—I supposed that the principle corresponded, and was similar.

1104. The principle of the two Acts ?—Yes.

1105. Did you read them ?—I did.

1106. Did you read Act 10 ?—I did. I most carefully read it.

1107. Did you ever point out to the Government the differences between the two Acts ?—As I state, and as is contained in that letter, I think, to the bank directors, a copy of the draft was submitted, showing the corresponding sections in the Act of the Bank of Bengal.

1108. But did it show the differences in principle ?—It did not refer to them in detail.

1109. The effect of this paragraph is to suggest that you pointed out the differences in the Act, whereas, in point of fact, it does not appear that you did, but that you rather throw the blame on somebody else ?—Pardon me. I merely point out that if by a fortuitous chance (I do not wish to take credit for it) my suggestion had been acted upon, everything would have gone right.

1110. I do not see that at all; you meant only that the Act would not have been so verbose, but with no alteration of principle ?—But if the wording of the Act of the Bank of Bengal had been acted upon, the result would have been different.

1111. Do you mean by "the wording" in fact a different principle altogether ? Do you mean, for example, that bills should not be discounted without two names ?—I mean that it would have been better if word for word the Act for the Bank of Bengal had been adopted. The bill was only originally prepared not to be brought into the Legislative Council of the Government of Bombay, but for submission to the Legislative Council of India. I felt that, if we adopted an Act which had been passed by the Government of India themselves, they would approve of it, and there would be no difficulty. I therefore thought that it would be proper and more judicious to take word for word the Act for the Bank of Bengal.

1112. Then do you mean to say that it was not the deliberate intention of all parties that that Act should be much less restrictive than the old Act ?—I would refer you to an opinion of the——

1113. Are you not aware that it was the deliberate intention of all parties that that Act should be much less restrictive ?—Yes.

1114. And did not the original draft contain words reciting that the provisions of Act 3 of 1840 were inconvenient and imperfect, or unnecessarily restrictive ?—Yes.

1115. Then how do you mean to say that you proposed that the exact words of the Act of Bengal should be adopted ?—I merely state the fact which is on record, that it was proposed by me that the wording of the Act of the Bank of Bengal should be adopted.

1116. But not its principle ?—If I adopted its wording, I should adopt its principle.

1117. I do not think that any one will say that that was the meaning of your suggestions to the Government. Were you acquainted with the policy of the Government at that time ?—In what respect ?

1118. As to the passing of this Act ?—There were despatches from the Secretary of State giving us general instructions from the Secretary of State, which referred to the transfer of the Government treasuries, taking away the right of issue of Government paper, and that they were to be, as formerly, banks of discount, and not to have the right of exchange. Those were the general instructions from the Secretary of State.

1119. We all know that perfectly; but I want to know what was the policy of the Government of which you were an executive officer. What did you understand to be the policy of the Government with respect to this Act 10 of 1863, as to the privileges of the Bank ?—I considered generally that they were to be unrestricted in their general business, with the exception of bills of exchange.

1120. They were to be unrestricted in their general business, except as to foreign bills of exchange ?—Yes.

1121. If that was the case, how could you possibly have adopted the wording of the Act of the Bank of Bengal ?—Because I saw that it was simpler, and easier to be understood.

1122. That was on account of the arrangement of the Act for the Bank of Bombay, and its verbosity ?—Yes.

1123. But not as to its principle ?—I do not wish to argue the point with the Commission.

1124. Was there any desire of the Government that the free-trade principle should, as far as possible, be applied to the Government Bank ?—May I read a part of an opinion by Mr. Bickersteth, the Government solicitor, in reference to this question ?

1125. That is not an answer to my question. I want now to know what was the policy of the Government ?—May I read a paragraph from a despatch of the Secretary of State ?

1126. Yes, if it is material to the framing of this Act.—The policy of the Government of Bombay was that laid down by the Secretary of State in his despatch * of the 14th September 1862. Here is the paragraph: "Any Bank to which the balances and treasury business of the Government are to be entrusted must be restricted to legitimate banking operations, such as those transacted by the Bank of England or by the Bank of Bengal as heretofore constituted." We took the advice of our law officer, Mr. Bickersteth; and he says:—"Upon a comparison of the powers intended to be conferred upon the Bank, with its existing powers, and those of the Bank of Bengal as heretofore constituted, it will be observed that they are considerably extended, and in some respects exceed those now conferred upon the Bank of Bengal by Act 4 of 1862. The Secretary of State, in the 53rd paragraph of the despatch, desires that the business of the Bank be restricted to legitimate banking operations, such as those transacted by the Bank of England or by the Bank of Bengal as heretofore constituted. So far as I am aware, the powers intended to be conferred by the Bill, though more extended in some respects than those of the Bank of Bengal as heretofore, or at present constituted, do not exceed those of the Bank of England; but my knowledge on this subject is very limited."

1127. When you got that opinion, did you make any comparison between the provisions of Act 10 of 1863 and the Bank of Bengal Act ?—I cannot recollect that I did.

1128. Do you not remark how very cautious that letter of Mr. Bickersteth's is ? His opinion is a very cautious one, and ought to have aroused suspicion, for it says: "If I understand the despatch correctly, the only points on which the Secretary of State insists on a modification of the proposed concession to the Bank is with regard to the limited authority intended to be conferred in certain cases, of drawing, or buying, or discounting bills payable in the United Kingdom, which I presume to be what is referred to, and deprecated in the despatch as dealing in foreign exchanges." He therefore seems to say that the Secretary of State has limited the discretion as to that. He continues thus: "This power was conferred by the 32nd section of the Bill, and I have therefore introduced the necessary restriction in that section. And as it seemed likely that there might be considerable conflict of opinion between the Secretary of State and the directors of the Bank as to what were legitimate banking operations, 'to which the business of the Bank is to be confined, and that which is not banking, but speculative commercial business,' I have thought it necessary further to modify the 32nd section by withdrawing the general power to transact any banking business, and to limit it to the transaction of the particular kinds of business specified in the section. In other respects I have not altered the provisions of the Bill, and do not express any opinion as to its propriety or otherwise."—Yes.

1129. So that he seemed to guard himself against expressing any opinion as to the policy of the Bill?—Yes.

1130. Then he goes on to make those observations which you have read.—Yes; with reference to this, I would state that it was after this letter of Mr. Bickersteth's that I think I suggested the adoption of the wording of the Act of the Bank of Bengal.

1131. You did do so after it, undoubtedly.—I did so simply because I thought that it would have been safer to follow that wording.

1132. Surely if you had meant that, you would have said what the differences in principle were. Did you at any time, after getting that letter from Mr. Bickersteth, point out to the Executive Council the great variations in principle between the two Acts?—I submitted Mr. Bickersteth's letter to the Council.

1133. But you yourself did not give them any comparative statement of the two Acts?—I wished to see what steps were adopted upon it. I did not, I see, specially point it out.

1134. Did you take the opinion of the Council as to whether the business clause should be confined to the business permitted to the Bank of Bengal, or whether it should remain as it was suggested in the draft?—The draft, after having been dealt with in this way, was forwarded to the Government of India for their approval, and came back approved by them.

1135. I believe that you had charge of this Bill in the Legislative Council?—I had.

1136. And I believe that Mr. M. H. Scott represented the bank?—I believe so; at least it was understood so. I think it very important here to note that this Bill, before it was brought up to the Legislative Council, was submitted to the Government of India for their consideration and approval, and was returned by them approved, and on its coming back from the Government of India, instead of being introduced direct into the Legislative Council of Bombay, was forwarded on the 12th of May 1862 to the Secretary of State. The Bank pressed us for some five or six months to proceed with it. They complained much of the delay in giving them the new charter; at last, getting no reply from the Secretary of State, and acting upon the approval of the Government of India, the Bill was brought into the Legislative Council February 1863.

1137. We know all that.—But the shareholders do not know it.

1138. The real point which I have is with reference to your letter, in which the object, as I understand it, of that paragraph of the letter, was to show that if your suggestion had been adopted, that Act with all its objectional provisions would never have been passed. It is pretty clear to me that you never did object to the principle of that Act 10 of 1863, but that in fact you only objected to its verbosity and its arrangement. I believe that you made a speech in moving the introduction of this Bill?—Yes, of course I did.

1139. And I suppose that the speeches in the Legislative Council of Bombay were very much as we used to have them in the Legislative Council of Calcutta, namely, corrected by the members themselves?—Yes.

1140. In introducing the Bill to the Legislative Council you said, "The principal changes now proposed are as follows: By sections 5 and 6 the directors of the Bank are to have power to increase to two crores and 10 lacs of rupees the capital which by the existing charter is limited to 50 lacs. By section 9 trustees are not to be recognized, and by section 10 transfers of shares are to be either by separate deed, or deed endorsed on the share certificate and to be registered. Section 14 provides that there shall be ten directors instead of nine, as at present. Of the ten directors four are to be appointed and removable by Government, and the remaining six by the majority of shareholders at a general meeting. By section 31" (this is the business clause) "alterations are provided for with respect to the business of the Bank, viz., in addition to the existing power (excepting that of issuing notes) the Bank is empowered to grant loans and advances on goods, wares, and merchandize, or other property, acting as agents on commission." Then you go on to speak about the Foreign Bills?—Yes.

1141. Did you ever point out to the Legislative Council the great and striking differences between Act 10 of 1863 and the old Act 3 of 1840?—I generally described the nature of the business there, but I did not enter into a comparative analysis of the two.

1142. Did you point out the following things?—I pointed out what is stated in the speech, and nothing else.

1143. Did you point out to them that, whereas the old bank had no power of discounting negotiable securities, unless two independent firms or persons were represented upon those negotiable securities, there was no such provision in the new Act?—I did not.

1144. Had that ever struck you?—No, it had not.

1145. Then it was not your wish to introduce that provision when you proposed that the wording of the Act should be that of the Act of the Bank of Bengal?—I cannot say that I had any special wish upon the point.

1146. Did you point out to the Council that the old Act provided that negotiable securities should not be discounted which had more than three months to run, and that there was no such restriction in the new Act?—I do not quite recollect what were the provisions of Schedule B., which was attached to the Act.

1147. But that was struck out?—I am not sure but that these provisions were not introduced there.

1148. Some of them were?—There was such an entire modification of the arrangement of the draft that it would have been a very complicated and difficult thing to compare every single modification.

1149. The three months' clause was in the Schedule, but not the first provision which I have mentioned. Did you point out to them that, whereas you were not, under the old Act, allowed to lend or advance money on any bank shares or certificates of shares, there was no such provision in the new Act, but that, on the contrary, the new Act contained express provision that you might advance money upon the shares of other public companies in India?—I did not.

1150. Did you remark that difference?—I did not.

1151. Then when you proposed that the wording of the Act of the Bank of Bengal should be followed, you did not propose it with the view of having those words inserted?—I can only state that there was a general feeling in my mind that the Act of the Bank of Bengal was a simply worded one, which everyone could understand.

1152. You preferred the wording and the arrangement?—Yes.

1153. That is what I understand you to have meant, and nothing else?—Yes.

1154. With respect to the words "other public companies in India," had those words attracted your attention?—They had not, specially.

1155. I remark that in your letter to the Government of Bombay, at page 105 of the Blue Book, you say, "and I may state from my knowledge, as well as from my recollection of what took place, both while the draft was under consideration and while the Bill was before the Council, that these words did not attract attention on the part of any one. There is no doubt, I think, that they crept into the Bill simply in consequence of the phraseology of the English Joint Stock Companies' Act having been followed in the preparation of the draft."—Yes.

1156. Where did you get that information?—The correspondence shows that we returned this draft to the directors of the Bank, with the suggestion that the wording of the Act of the Bank of Bengal should be adopted. They replied to the effect that it was very desirable to adopt the wording of the English law, in order that, if questions arose, they might have the advantages of the decisions of the English courts upon them. This letter came back to the Government, and the Government law officers were asked for their opinion upon the point. They concurred with the Bank's solicitors in the opinion that it was desirable to adhere as much as possible to the English form of law.

1157. In point of fact have you ever looked into those Acts?—I have not.

1158. Is the suggestion of Mr. Kelly, the Bank's solicitor, at all correct? Did you ever inquire into the matter, whether it was correct, and whether the phraseology of those Acts was adopted?—No.

1159. Who did inquire into that?—I considered that the Government law officers did so. You must recollect that I had a thousand things to do besides attending to this bank.

1160. I see that Mr. Lewis writes an opinion afterwards, and takes no notice of that observation. He says, "The clauses of the Bombay Act appear to me to have been framed with care, and I see no adequate reason why the wording of the Act relating to the Bank of Bengal should be adhered to in preference to that of the Bombay Bank Act;" but he does not refer to that question. You, however, seem to have adopted it as correct?—I did. I relied upon our legal advisers, as I consulted them.

1161. In consequence of that, it was adopted by the Government of India, and in their letter afterwards they say, "It is to be regretted that the legal advisers of the Bombay Government, instead of adhering to the wording of the Charter Act of the Bank of Bengal, should have gone out of the way to follow the Joint Stock Companies' Act, the provisions of which are not suitable to the regulation of the business of a bank in immediate connexion with the Government." There is no such provision at all in the Joint Stock Companies' Act. We have searched, and have looked over every English Joint Stock Bank Act.—It is evident that an error was committed.

1162. I admit that it does not originate with you.—I do not want to take credit to myself by saying that I should have discovered it, or should have made any alteration in the Bill finally after it came back from the law officers; but on the 27th of February 1862 I was temporarily relieved from the office of secretary to Government, and Mr. Ellis had charge of the office, and I did not resume charge until the 13th of March 1862. Between those dates the draft came back, and was forwarded to the Government of India, and was returned with their approval.

1163. It did not occur to you, or to any member of the Government, to send for the written drafts of Mr. Green, the counsel who drew the Act?—No; we had merely copies sent to us.

1164. I think that if you had done so you would have found out the whole history of the matter. How was it that Schedule B. came to be left out of the Act?—Have the Commissioners a copy of the proceedings of the Legislative Council?

1165. Yes; we have read them.—There is a report there. A committee of the Council was appointed to report upon the Act, of which I was a member, and Mr. Tristram, and Mr. Lewis, the Advocate-General, were the other members. In going through the draft we felt that there would be great difficulties in making this a part of the Bill, because, if any changes or modifications were necessary in a matter which could otherwise be done by byelaws, no change could be made without having recourse to legislative enactment; and it was therefore considered more advisable to adopt the course followed in the case of the Bank of Bengal, namely, to give permission to the directors of the bank to prepare byelaws, which were to be submitted to the Governor in Council for sanction.

1166. Supposing those to be good reasons (which I am not prepared to dispute), ought it not to have been your duty, as a director of the bank, to have seen that proper byelaws were passed to carry out these provisions?—Of course it was my duty, in common with the other directors.

1167. You and Mr. Scott particularly, having struck this out advisedly?—Mr. Scott had nothing to do with it.

1168. He was in the Legislative Council, and he must have known of the fact.—The Select Committee were reponsible, that is to say, myself, the Advocate General, and Mr. Tristram.

1169. Was not it your duty to have passed byelaws to carry out these provisions?—It was.

1170. And it was an omission on your part not to provide those byelaws?—It was; but I would state, in explanation, that I was frequently absent from Bombay. This Act, I think, did not receive the assent of the Governor-General in Council until the 1st of August 1863, and I was at that time absent at Poona until October.

1171. On the 29th of October 1863 you took your seat again at the Board?—Yes. No doubt it was an omission; but a question of byelaws is a matter requiring time and consideration, to see that all the points which should be introduced into the byelaws are included. I submitted a memorandum before the Bill passed to the bank directors, asking whether they had any objection to the withdrawal of this schedule; and at that meeting the matter was considered, and it was then talked of that this point would be taken into consideration afterwards.

1172. What difficulty was there in drawing up byelaws to the effect of the 5th, 8th, and 9th of these provisions?—There was none.

1173. In fact, why did not you pass this Schedule B. as byelaws?—No doubt it might have been done; but byelaws would require some consideration to prepare them. I can only give that as the reason why the thing was not done at once.

1174. Did you ever suggest that it should be done?—I can only recollect that the matter was discussed when the question of withdrawing the schedule was under consideration.

1175. But after the Act passed, you did not go into that question?—No, I did not.

1176. Did you attend a general meeting of the shareholders in 1865, at which Mr. Hannay addressed them?—I left India in September 1864, and did not return again until May 1866. I was therefore not present at that meeting.

1177. After saying that Mr. Birch was a model man of business, he says, "Mr. A. D. Robertson has been much blamed with reference to the new charter, but if the truth were told, I think it would be found that his brother directors considered him exceedingly obstructive, not only as objecting to some clauses now in the Bill, but also to some others which possibly (but for him) might have been there." What does Mr. Hannay refer to when he talks of your being "obstructive"?—I wish that he were here to explain it. There was very great delay in bringing the Bill into the Legislative Council, and I fancy that they supposed that, after it had been referred to the Secretary of State, I was keeping the matter back unnecessarily till the Secretary of State's answer was received. I do not know on what other grounds he considered me obstructive.

1178. There were no clauses which you proposed?—Upon the question of foreign exchanges they may have considered that I was obstructive; I was the organ of Government in communicating these things, and they perhaps thought that I had something to do with it.

1179. Leaving the Act 10 of 1863 so far as you are concerned with it, I believe that you were a director at the time of the second increase of the capital?—I was.

1180. On the 11th February and 7th March 1864 that increase was resolved on?—There was an increase.

1181. What is your opinion with respect to the wisdom of that measure?—With regard to the first increase, it certainly was a mere supplying of funds which were taken away by the withdrawal of the right to issue Government notes, and it left the Bank, you may say, in the position which they held before their privilege of issuing was taken from them.

Mr. A. D. Robertson.

13 Nov. 1868.

1182. I am not asking you about the first increase, but about the second increase?—I took no active part whatever in it as a director; it was a matter which I thought was entirely for the shareholders' directors to consider, and to submit to the Government; it was submitted to the Government.

1183. The old Act required that the question of an increase of capital should be submitted to the Government?—Yes.

1184. And the new Act did not?—It did in this respect, that the Government were shareholders themselves, and they were bound to decide whether they would take up their shares, and approve of it in consequence.

1185. That is quite another thing. But I want to know whether the consent of the Government was obtained to the increase of capital?—It was obtained in this way, that the sanction of the Government of India was given to taking up the new shares.

1186. That was after you had arranged for increasing the capital. They simply consented to take the shares. Was that all?—Yes.

1187. Before the increase of the capital was the consent of the Government obtained?—I do not think that it was required by the Act.

1188. It was not required by the Act, and therefore I am surprised at your saying that it was obtained. The old Act required the consent of the Governor General in Council?—Yes.

1189. Was the consent of the Government of Bombay obtained, or not, before the increase of that capital?—Only as regards taking up the shares.

1190. That was after the increase was resolved upon?—Yes. It was not previously obtained that I can recollect. I do not recollect its being submitted to them.

1191. Did you, as Government director, in that capacity consult Government as to the measure, formally or informally?—I certainly informally did so, but not formally that I can recollect.

1192. Did the Government raise any objection to the measure?—No. It was felt that that was a matter for the shareholders themselves to decide.

1193. What is your opinion of the measure in itself; do you think it a wise and prudent measure?—As a bank holding a Government account, and as a Government director, I should say that the larger the capital the better the security for Government.

1194. That depends upon what care was taken of it?—Of course.

1195. Do you think that there was room for the safe employment of so large a capital?—I think so; at least I see no reason why it should not have been safely employed.

1196. We have evidence before us in an official letter that there was the greatest difficulty in getting that capital invested afterwards, and that money was lying unemployed. You are not aware of that fact?—No. That was after my time. The resolution to increase the capital was passed in March 1864, but, as you are aware, I ceased to be a director at the end of May.

1197. Did you, when you called a general meeting for this increase of capital, take into consideration the fact that there were 16 banks established in Bombay at the time?—I do not recollect that I took any active part in the consideration of the question. I was present at the meeting of the board, I believe, but I took no active part in it.

1198. During the time that you were a director, which was nearly a year, namely 11 months, you had of course great opportunities of observing how the business of this bank was conducted?—Yes.

1199. What did the president do? what were his duties?—During the time that I was a director I never looked upon the president as holding a position different from that of any of the other directors, except as merely presiding at our board meetings. In confirmation of that fact, I think it is sufficient to note that weekly committees of directors, consisting of one Government director and two shareholders' directors, were appointed every week to look after and to attend to any matters which were of urgency between the board meetings, and that any special responsibility during that period rested with the weekly committee.

1200. Did Mr. Birch attend at the bank regularly every day?—I am not aware that he did.

1201. You are not aware that he paid any particular attention to the affairs of the bank more than any other Government director?—No; he may have paid more particular attention to the accounts. I mean not with regard to the banking transactions, but with the treasury accounts which were in the bank.

1202. What was your view of the duties of the secretary?—You mean in a financial point of view?

1203. As regards granting advances particularly?—His duty was to receive applications for advances and to submit them to the board, with certain exceptions. These exceptions, as far as my recollection of the business goes, were that he had a general authority to make advances to a certain amount (I am only speaking from memory) upon Government paper; and he had also a general power, I think, to grant small loans to well-known and respectable parties. For instance, if you wish to know what I call a small loan, I should say 15,000 or 20,000 or 25,000 rupees, but beyond that he had no authority whatever that I know of. In confirmation of this I would refer to what I presume the Commissioners have come across, namely, what were called the short minutes. The practice up to September 1863, as far as I am informed, was that bills and applications for loans were brought to be discounted before the board; but after that the practice, as far as I can recollect, was, that if an application was submitted from a person in whose favour there was not a sort of general sanction to make an advance in the "opinion book," or if he applied for anything beyond that, the secretary submitted in a box which went round to the weekly committee a memorandum upon which they recorded their authority to grant the loan or not.

1204. Do you know how often those discount minutes went round in 1864?—My roster for this duty occurred only once in every three weeks, I think. I can only recollect that frequently such things did come round whilst I was on the weekly committee.

1205. We have only found about 15 discount minutes of the year 1864; we have found plenty in 1865.—I can positively assert that the practice was for them to come round.

1206. With regard to the powers of the secretary, you say that you believe that he had power to grant money to a small amount upon Government paper, and to grant small loans of 15,000, 20,000, or 25,000 rupees; will you show us any byelaw or resolution of the board or anything limiting his power in that way?—No, I cannot. I can only refer to the byelaws which existed previously to the passing of the new charter, and the principles of which I always considered in force, unless specially rescinded.

1207. I am bound fairly to tell you that during the time when you were a director things had not got so bad as they afterwards did.—I should wish distinctly, with the permission of the Commissioners, to know whether losses did occur out of any of the loans sanctioned during my time. I am under the impression that none did.

1208. There are two or three, or perhaps more, but I have not looked into the question with reference to your particular time. Are you aware that, shortly after the Act passed, the secretary commenced to grant cash credits upon personal security only to a very large amount?—I am not aware of it.

1209. If you look at this little Blue Book (referring to A 33) you will see that he did. On October the 2nd, 1863, there is Roychund Deepchund one lac, Premchund Roychund one lac, and so on. You will find a great number of those cases during the time that you were a director. Taking it down to the end of May 1864 you will see that a great number of cash credits were granted upon mere personal security.—Yes.

1210. Upon two of those there has been a loss.—Yes.

1211. Were you aware that the secretary was doing that?—I was not.

1212. Are you greatly surprised to find that he exercised that power?—I am surprised; in fact, I would point to the resolution of the 6th of August 1863, as, I think, showing that especial authority was then given, which shows that he had no authority in other respects.

1213. I never asked you any question about that resolution of the 6th August 1863, because I know that you were then at Poona, but, as you have mentioned it, I will read it. "Resolved, that for the present, and until further orders, any application for advances on any Bank shares or other public company other than Government Banks, be submitted to the board, and not granted by the secretary."—Yes.

1214. Is not the inference to be drawn from that, that all other advances were to be made by the secretary without being submitted to the board?—No; I do not see that.

1215. That is the only limitation upon his powers which I have been able to find.—I certainly never was aware that he had such a discretion, or that he exercised it.

1216. You admit that you did not know of these transactions?—I did not.

1217. Ought not those transactions, all of them, to have been included in the application book?—Yes, they ought.

1218. Was not that application book laid on the table at the board meetings?—It was.

1219. Were you in the habit of referring to it?—Yes; I generally used to look over it.

1220. It did not contain those transactions?—I am not aware that it did.

1221. It did not. What is your opinion on those facts; is it that there were cash credits issued which were not entered in the application book?—Yes; that the secretary took an unauthorized power upon himself.

1222. Have you since inquired, or in any way ascertained, by whose order it was that those cash credits were kept out of the application book?—No, I was not aware of it.

1223. Have you not been aware of it since this inquiry begun?—No.

1224. That was one of the first things which we found out. What were the duties of the weekly committee during the time when you were a director?—They were chiefly, or in fact I may say entirely, with regard to the passing of applications for discount.

1225. Did they attend at the Bank?—No, they did not.

1226. How were they consulted?—A memorandum was drawn up by the secretary, stating the nature of the application, and it was put into a small locked box, of which each director had a key, and it came round, and the application was passed or otherwise.

1227. These are the whole of the discount minutes which we can find for the year 1864 (shewing fifteen to the witness). The weekly committee, I think, do not seem to have been very active.—It could only be whatever the secretary laid before them; they could not take steps in regard to what they were not aware of, if loans were made without their knowledge.

1228. Were you aware whether at that time, and down to the time when you retired from the direction, they were in the habit of consulting Cowasjee Jehangeer and Premchund Roychund as to discounting bills?—During the period that I was connected with the Bank, Premchund Roychund had nothing whatever to do with it. I am not aware that he was ever consulted. Cowasjee Jehangeer was a director, and the practice was, when natives applied for discount, to consult the native directors, because they were supposed to know more of the position, status, and credit of the natives than the mercantile directors could do; therefore the practice was, in the first place, to ask a native director what he had to say about the application, and if he reported favourably, it then went on to a mercantile director, and then to a Government director.

1229. Then in point of fact do you undertake to say that Premchund was never consulted?—Not to my knowledge; of course I only speak within my own knowledge.

1230. I believe that you were secretary to the Government at the time when the Kalbadevi branch of the bank was established?—I should like to know the date of it.

1231. It was in June or July 1864.—Then I must have been.

1232. This is a letter from Mr. Blair to you (marked V 1), and at the back you will see your sanction (marked V 2) for the establishment of the Kalbadevi branch.—Yes.

1233. That is your handwriting, is it not, giving the sanction on the part of the Government?—Yes, and my signature.

1234. Did you take any opinion upon the legality of establishing that branch Bank?—I am sorry to say that I did not.

1235. Did you look at the clause of the Act authorizing the establishment of branch Banks?—No, I do not think that I did at that time; I knew that the Bank had the right, with the sanction of the Government, to establish branches.

1236. Looking at the correspondence, it appears that the directors of the Bank asked for leave to establish a branch in Bombay?—Yes; I am aware, from what occurred here the other day, that they had no legal right to do so.

1237. It was a most unfortunate and disastrous act.—I am sorry to say that it was.

1238. Nineteen lacs were lost in that branch. Was that proposition laid before the Government at all?—I presume that it was. It probably might have been mentioned in the Council, and have been passed in that way.

1239. You certainly would not have sanctioned it without getting the orders of the Government?—No, I would not.

1240. Here is a précis made on the back of the letter from the Secretary of the Bank; what is that for?—Whenever papers came in, a précis was put on the back of them, and upon those papers which were circulated you will see the initial of the member of the Council. Probably that paper might have been received on a day on which they were going to have a meeting of the Council, and I wrote my name upon it.

1241. Did you, or did you not, take the orders of the Government upon that subject?—I think that I must have done so; everything was circulated or laid before the Council.

1242. And you have no doubt in your own mind that it was sanctioned by the Government?—It was reported to them.

1243. Notwithstanding there are no initials?—Yes.

1244. You proposed it in Council?—Yes.

1245. My colleague directs my attention to another point. You put on the back of the document "Bank of Bombay; establishment of branches in the Mofussil." How came that to be put there when it was just the contrary?—It appears that the clerk who made that docket was more accurate than myself.

1246. He could not have called Kalbadevi in the Mofussil?—Of course not. That was the heading for the index.

1247. You were not aware that there was any lending on shares in your time?—I was not.

1248. You were not aware of the practice of lending money for shares to be bought, and then for the shares to be deposited for safe custody?—I was not.

1249. I believe that you lived with Mr. Cassels, did you not?—No, I did not. He lived with me in

Mr. A. D. Robertson.

13 Nov. 1868.

1866 or 1867, when he last came to India. Before that we never lived together.

1250. You did not live with him before that?—No.

1251. You did live with him at some time?—Then I did.

1252. I believe that you are a great friend of his?—Yes I am.

1253. I believe that you had great joint transactions with Mr. Cassels, had you not?—No, I had not.

1254. Have you not had any joint transaction in speculations?—No; but I will be perfectly frank with you. I had allotments given to me of certain shares. Mr. Cassels was good enough to sell these shares for me, and to realize the amounts, and he held the proceeds. He did invest some of that money in shares for me, which I will mention to you. I was called upon by the Secretary to bring my Bank account, which I have.

1255. You got allotments of shares?—I did.

1256. Will you kindly tell us what shares you got allotted to you?—I got, in the first place, 150 shares in the Joint Stock Bank Corporation, afterwards called the Asiatic. That was about April 1863. I held those shares for about a year, and parted with them then.

1257. When did you sell them? Look at your banking book, and tell us.—It is not in my banking book.

1258. They were sold by Mr. Cassels for you?—Yes.

1259. In 1864?—In 1864.

1260. Will you kindly point out the item in your book which represents the money which you received for those shares?—It is not in my book. Mr. Cassels realized the proceeds for me, and I left that money in his hands.

1261. What other allotments did you receive?—Perhaps, before answering that question, I may be permitted to state that this allotment of Asiatic Bank shares was the only allotment which I received whilst I was a director of the Bank of Bombay. I have no wish to withhold any information with regard to my private affairs which the Commission may desire; but it is a fact which I think should be prominently noted, that, whilst I was a director of the Bank of Bombay, with the exception of these shares, I had no allotment.

1262. When did you apply for your allotments in the Financial Association of India and China?—I think that it came out in June; I am not certain; it must have been about May or June 1864.

1263. When did you apply for those allotments?—I cannot recollect the exact date.

1264. Were not the allotments actually made on the 6th of June 1864?—They may have been; it was about that time.

1265. When did you apply for them?—A short time before.

1266. How long before?—It may have been ten days, or it may have been a fortnight; I do not know.

1267. I believe that you received about the same time an allotment of four Back Bay shares?—I received altogether nine Back Bay shares.

1268. You received five in another name?—Yes; five were in Mr. Cassels's name. It was thus:—I was absent from Bombay at the time when the allotments were made; I wrote to Mr. Cassels requesting him to pay the deposit, and to take up the shares for me; in doing so, he thought that it would be advisable for me not to hold the whole nine, but probably to sell some of them; my intention was certainly to hold a portion of these permanently, and to sell a portion of them; as he had no power of attorney from me to act for me, he thought that it would facilitate his disposing of these shares if he took them in his own name, and that he could then part with them if he got my permission to do so. On his writing to tell me that he had done this, I expressed my great regret to him that he had done it; and he then endeavoured to have the shares all put in my name, but he was, I believe, told that the lists had been completed, and that the matter must rest; to prevent however any misunderstanding on the part of any one with regard to that point, I always, when the matter was referred to, stated that I had nine shares.

1269. When did you apply for those Back Bay shares? It is fair to you to say that they were allotted on the 1st of July, after you ceased to be a director of the Bank. When did you apply for them?—I may have applied at the end of May. The Commission have probably got my letter to Mr. Scott. I do not know.

1270. What other shares had you allotted to you about the time? Had you any other allotments during the time, or about the time, that you were a director of the Bank of Bombay?—As you have all the information, you perhaps will be able to tell me which it was; but I had either 30 or 100 Indian Peninsula Bank shares. I forget at this moment.

1271. Had you them in your own name?—I had.

1272. I have looked through the allotment book of that Bank, and I do not remember seeing them.—I think that it was 30; I am not certain; but I will say 100 in case it might be that.

1273. When were they issued?—All these things were issued from June 1864 onwards; I cannot recollect the exact dates.

1274. Are you quite sure that those Indian Peninsula shares were in your own name?—I believe so. I have no distinct recollection about the matter; but I think that I had these 30 shares.

1275. Those were issued about June?—Yes, I think that they were.

1276. Can you say when you applied fer those shares?—I cannot. I had no other allotments whatever before leaving India. What I have mentioned were the only allotments which I had. I had 150 Asiatic Bank shares, and 50 or 100 of the Financial Association ——

1277. There were 100 of the Financial Association?—Yes.

1278. When had you the new issue?—I had none of the new issue. I had also 30 Indian Peninsula shares and the nine Back Bay shares, and after I left India I got some Port Canning shares, whilst I was in England, but I made no application for them. My friend Mr. Cassels made application for them.

1279. Twenty Port Canning shares were allotted to you on the 1st of February 1865?—I was in England at the time.

1280. To whom did you apply for the Joint Stock Bank shares?—I made an application in the general way, just as any one else would do.

1281. To whom?—To the promoters; to no one in particular that I recollect.

1282. Do you not know who were the persons who started that company?—Yes, I know who started that company, but I do not recollect whom I addressed. I may have addressed their secretary, or their manager, or whoever it was.

1283. You do not remember through whose influence you obtained those 150 shares?—I suppose that I may have got them through Mr. Scott.

1284. You did not ask any native?—I did not, that I recollect.

1285. You did not ask Premchund Roychund or Cowasjee Jehangeer?—I do not think that I knew Premchund Roychund then. I was not introduced to him until 1864.

1286. How much was paid up on each share?—I think that it was 200 rupees; I am not certain. 120 I think it was first of all. I forget whether it was so, or whether the whole amount was called up.

1287. What did you realize by the sales of those shares?—I realized a profit of 40,000 rupees.

1288. Have you your account with Mr. Cassels here?—No. Mr. Cassels did not render me any memorandum of the transaction until he himself came home in 1865; and before I went out to India in 1866 I destroyed it, with a number of other papers which I was destroying at the time.

1289. You, however, admit that you made a profit of 40,000 rupees ?—Yes.

1290. To whom did you apply for your Back Bay shares ?—To Mr. Scott.

1291. Through whose influence did you get them ?—Through Mr. Scott's I presume. I am not aware that I had any influence with any one else.

1292. Did you apply to Cowasjee Jehangeer ?—No, I did not.

1293. Or to Premchund Roychund ?—No, I did not.

1294. What did you realize by the sale of those nine Back Bay shares ?—Two were sold for 18,000 rupees premium each, two for 20,000 rupees premium each, three for 23,000 rupees premium each, and two for 25,000 rupees premium each, making a total of 195,000 rupees profit.

1295. You do not know when it was that you applied for those shares ?—I think about the end of May.

1296. That is the reason why I wanted to know particularly the date of your resignation.—At that time Back Bay had nothing whatever to do with the Bank of Bombay.

1297. As to the 100 shares in the Financial Association of India and China, to whom did you apply for those shares ?—I forget whether I asked Mr. Willis, a member of the firm of Forbes and Company, or whether I made an application to the manager of the proposed company.

1298. Did you apply to any native ?—I did not, most certainly. I applied to no native for any shares.

1299. What was paid up on those shares ?—I think that it was 100 rupees a share.

1300. When did you sell those shares ?—I do not recollect now, but I sold them at a considerable profit, I do not recollect exactly when I sold them.

1301. Do you know the profit ?—Yes, I sold them at 80 per cent. premium, at a profit of about 30,000 rupees.

1302. To whom did you apply for the Indian Peninsula shares ?—I applied to the office of an allotment. I may not have had these Indian Peninsula shares, but I have an indistinct recollection that I had them.

1303. I am surprised at your saying that you had them in your own name.—To the best of my recollection I had only 30.

1304. Are you quite certain that they were in your own name ?—I am not quite certain now how it was.

1305. Was not Mr. Cassels in the habit of taking shares for you, and putting forward his name ?—No ; with the exception of the five Back Bay shares, everything stood in my own name.

1306. Did not you enter into any mercantile transactions or speculations of other kinds with Mr. Cassels ?—No ; Mr. Cassels sold these allotments for me, and realized the amount. I left the money in his hands, to be invested for me, with the object of doing what was best for me, and he invested it. The first thing was in buying Bank of Bengal shares. I think that I bought ten altogether, and ten new ones were allotted. I held these shares till May 1866, when I instructed the Oriental Bank's manager in London (I was in England at the time) to dispose of them, and, very unfortunately for me, to remit the amount to Bombay, and to put it into Bombay Bank shares instead.

1307. I ask you, did not Mr. Cassels invest money for you in mercantile or other speculations ?—He invested it in shares.

1308. Any other shares besides these ?—I will presently tell you. He bought 190 Asiatic Bank shares for me and 130 Financials——

1309. What Financial Company was that ?—The Financial of India and China. He also bought some Bombay Bank shares, most of which I hold to the present day. Besides that I had no other transactions.

1310. Premchund Roychund told us, "I think Mr. A. D. Robertson and Mr. Cassels must have had joint transactions. Mr. A. D. Robertson bought and sold shares."—None, except what I have mentioned to you ; those are the only shares which I have bought.

1311. Are you quite sure that you have never entered into any joint transactions and speculations with Mr. Cassels ?—No other.

1312. He has done nothing more for you than invest this money in the way which you have mentioned ?—Nothing ; the 190 Asiatic Bank shares and the 130 Financials he afterwards disposed of, and the money went into the Bank of Bombay.

1313. Perhaps you will be able to explain to me some of the items in your account with the Bank of Bombay. Were not you in debt to the Bank of Bombay in the first part of the year 1863 ?—Yes.

1314. And you got right with the Bank about May of that year ?—Yes.

1315. On the 29th September 1863 you discounted a bill ?—Yes ; for 14,000 rupees. On the opposite side of my account you will find that I made a payment of 10,000 rupees to the Oriental Bank ; it was to meet that ; a bill had been drawn upon me from England, which I had to meet at that time through the Oriental Bank.

1316. On the 5th of Feburary 1864 there is the following entry :—"Received from Peel, Cassels, and Co., 17,498 Rs." ?—Yes, on the 5th of February 1864. I have a little pencil note written against this entry in my pass book at the time, "Balance of mother's remittance." With reference to this, I would explain that a part of my father's estate was in Bombay Bank shares. As executrix to the estate, my mother became entitled to take up 55 new shares, and she made a remittance to me of a part of this money, to take up these 55 shares on account of the estate, and this is a part of that money, the rest I found in India.

1317. How did you receive it from Peel, Cassels, and Company ?—I must have got a draft, which Mr. Cassels realized for me, and paid in. When I received a bill of that sort, I gave the bill to him, and he realized it and paid it over to the Bank.

1318. You got that money sent in ?—Yes.

1319. Was it for investment ?—It was to take up the 55 new shares to which the estate was entitled.

1320. It was for investment in Bank of Bombay shares ?—Yes.

1321. On the 15th of February I find you received 9,000 rupees. I exclude from this account your salary, and all sums under 1,000 rupees.—Against this 9,000 rupees you will see the initials "W. W. R." in my pass book (showing it to the President.) My brother remitted another 9,000 rupees for my mother towards the amount. The fact is that she told him that if he could take up some of these shares himself he might have them.

1322. On the same day there is 1,240 rupees ; what is that ?—I do not know ; it was some small payment ; I cannot say what it was.

1323. The next item is on the 16th of February ; "Received 7,500 rupees."—That I cannot recollect ; that I think was also a remittance. You will observe that on the 16th of February, on the other side of my account, I paid over 24,000 rupees to the Oriental Bank, and it was on account of Bombay Bank shares, which another brother asked me to purchase for him, and those 7,500 rupees are a part of the money which was received on that date, as far as I can recollect, by putting the one side of the account with the other, towards the 24,000 rupees which I paid over to the Oriental Bank.

1324. Which brother was it ?—J. W. Robertson. I will show you my check book file for February 1864. Here it is : "24,000 rupees for J. W. R. and W. W. R."

1325. On the 26th of March there is 3,320 rupees. —I do not recollect what that is. I see it here. I have nothing in the book which explains it.

1326. You cannot explain that ?—No, I do not remember what it is.

1327. On the 23rd of April : "by Bill discounted."

Mr. A. D. Robertson.

13 Nov. 1868.

We have looked at that, and find that it is a promissory note of yourself and brother, 15,573 rupees. —Yes.

1328. What is that transaction?—At that time I was going to buy the Bengal Bank shares, and I asked the secretary or agent of the Agra Bank to purchase them in Calcutta, through his agent. He wished a deposit to be placed, so that, if I withdrew, there might be something to fall back upon. I had this sum of money, and on the 4th May I paid 10,000 rupees to the Agra Bank.

1329. Why did you not get that amount from Mr. Cassels, he had the money?—No; he had not realized my Joint Stock Bank shares then.

1330. He realized in that very month?—No; he realized in May.

1331. You bought these shares in April?—Yes. I knew that this amount was to be realized, and it was a temporary arrangement which I entered into.

1332. I suppose that we can get this account from Mr. Cassels, to confirm this statement?—I do not believe that he has kept a copy of the account. I did not deal with him, nor did he deal with me, as men of business, but as a mere matter of one friend acting for another. He gave me a memorandum in 1865, when he came home, showing the amount which he had realized for these shares, and the payments which he had made on account.

1333. Have you asked Mr. Cassels whether he has any account of these transactions?—Yes; because I have asked him to assist my memory with regard to the premiums which I got.

1334. Does he tell you that there is no account? —There is no account. He said, "This is a rough draft" (in 1865) "of the account;" and I can almost swear that he told me that he had no copy of it then; it was on a sheet of overland paper.

1335. On the 29th of June there is this entry: "By cheque, 5,000 rupees." What is that?—I do not know what that is; I have tried to recollect it, but I do not recollect it at this time; it may have been 5,000 rupees which Mr. Cassels gave me, or something of the sort; I wanted the money. I do not know what it is.

1336. How did you pay for the Back Bay shares? —Mr. Cassels paid for them; he had the proceeds of the Joint Stock Bank shares in his possession at the time.

1337. Then there are two receipts of 10,770 rupees and 10,700 rupees on the 28th of September 1864?— That was a bill on Ritchie, Stewart, and Co., I think; it was in connection with taking up the second allotment of Bombay Bank shares for the estate. That money came out to me just as I was starting for England; and I paid up the money in advance to the Bank of Bombay for the second issue of shares to my mother.

1338. There are two sums?—There must have been two bills; there are two entries.

1339. How did you apply these sums?—I paid them into the Bank of Bombay; they were carried to the deposit account of the Bank of Bombay for new shares; the new share account.

1340. Were they carried to the deposit account of the estate?—It was for my mother's shares. On the 5th of October 1864 you will see debited at the bottom of the account a payment of 55,000 rupees, which is entered "New Capital of Mrs. Robertson."

1341. Then there is a further sum received from Peel, Cassels, and Company, 40,000 rupees; what is that?—It was towards meeting that payment; it was part of the money which Mr. Cassels had in his hands. I had to advance; I had not received sufficient money from home; I had only received about 20,000 rupees, and it was about 35,000 short, because there were 55 shares.

1342. How did you raise the money from Peel, Cassels, and Company?—I got Mr. Cassels to pay some of the money which he had realized on my account, and I lent it to my mother.

1343. 40,000 rupees was lent out of that money? —Yes; that was on the 3rd of October, and the 55,000 rupees went to new capital on the 5th of October. I wish to say that I am one of the greatest losers by the Bank of Bombay.

1344. How many shares have you in the Bank of Bombay?—200.

1345. Were not you at all in the habit of trafficking in shares; buying and selling?—I had no other transactions but those which I have detailed.

1346. You never employed any other person than Mr. Cassels to buy and sell?—No. I have omitted one transaction, which has just occurred to me. I bought 500 shares in the Bank of China about August 1864. I held those shares until two months ago, when, having left India, and the Bank being in liquidation, I wrote out to the Oriental Bank to sell them off. I took them up as an investment, but the Bank never came to anything, and I held on till the other day.

1347. (Mr. Maxwell Melvill.) With respect to the Kalbadevi Branch, the letter from the Bank is dated the 16th of June 1864?—Yes.

1348. And the Resolution of the Government is dated the 25th of June 1864?—You must not take that date as the date when it was passed by the Government, because it went to the printing press, and might have been delayed there for some time. That was the date when it was issued from the office.

1349. Can you explain how it was that the Kalbadevi Branch was opened on the 20th of June by Mr. Blair, and gazetted on the 23rd? Had you given him any authority for that?—He must have had a semi-official authority.

1350. That was before the resolution?—It was probably a mere matter of printing delay.

1351. Then you think that he had authority for opening that branch on the 20th June 1864?—He must have had it.

1352. (President.) Did you consider it a portion of your duty to report to the Bombay Government any course taken by the directors which in your opinion tended to injure the shareholders?—If any such course had been adopted, I should have considered it a part of my duty to report it.

1354. The question is, was not the Act subsequently passed at Bombay without any despatch having been received?—It was.

1355. Did it subsequently receive the assent of the Secretary of State?—It did.

1356. What did you consider to be the particular duties of the Government directors?—Our duties were, on behalf of the Government, to see that the charter was not infringed.

1357. Was not it their duty to bring to the notice of the Bombay Government any infringement by the directors of the charter, or any action on their part which might be considered detrimental to the interests of the Bank?—Yes.

1358. Was not it your duty to have discovered that loans were made by the Secretary, and that cash credits were granted by him without security?—I must give a general answer to that question. I did not look into the detailed accounts of the Bank, I relied upon the Application Book containing all the information necessary for us to know.

1359. Did the Secretary submit weekly or monthly to the board or to the weekly committee a statement of all loans?—I do not recollect at the present moment. I do not remember that he did.

HERBERT EDWARD JACOMB sworn, and examined.

Mr. H. E. Jacomb.

13 Nov. 1868.

1360. (President.) When were you appointed a Government director of the Bank of Bombay?—On the 8th June 1864.

1361. Mr. Archibald Robertson was your predecessor?—Yes.

1362. Your first sitting at the board was on the 9th of June 1864, I think.—Possibly; I have not the date.

1363. Do you recollect the date of your last sitting?—I believe that I was gazetted out on the 28th of September 1864. I do not know.

1364. The 22nd of September was the last date which we find, so that you were only about three and a half months a director?—Yes.

1365. Did you attend the board regularly?—Yes; I think that I missed once.

1366. Did you know how the business of the Bank was carried on?—There was an "Application Book" put on the table, but I cannot say whether all the loans which were granted were entered in that "Application Book." No loans were brought before the board during my tenure of office.

1367. By which you mean, I suppose, no advances of any kind?—No advances. The "Application Book" was brought on the week afterwards; that was after the transaction.

1368. By whom then were applications for advances, either by way of discount, cash credit, or fixed loan, considered?—I presumed at the time that they were considered by the Accountant General and the secretary of the Bank.

1369. By "the Accountant General" you mean the Chairman?—Yes; but I had no distinct grounds for my presumption. I was a new-comer and a junior, and not likely to know anything about the solvency of applicants. They probably held it in their own hands, and more especially because I think the Accountant General was placed on the list of directors for the week each time, whereas my rotation perhaps was only twice during the whole period.

1370. Did you ever interfere as to the advances?—No. I believed that the loans were given solely on Government paper; because before I went into the Bank I wanted an advance myself, and I asked the the question, and I was told that the only security on which an advance would be given was Government paper. I believe that the discounts were given on two names, the drawer and the acceptor; and the cash credits I certainly had reason to suppose were granted on promissory notes in very exceptional cases, at least I supposed that they were in exceptional cases, and to approved parties for legitimate purposes.

1371. Did you understand that cash credits were granted upon personal security only?—I did understand that certain cash credits were so granted occasionally, but only as an exception; and if there had been any doubt about it I should have supposed that collateral security would have been taken in the shape of shipping documents or otherwise.

1372. Were you aware of the practice as to discounts of taking promissory notes in a single name?—No, not as to discounts.

1373. You were not aware as to the granting of cash credits upon a single name?—No.

1374. Or loans?—No; I thought that they were all on Government paper, and I think that the heading of the loan statement was, "Government paper or bullion."

1375. You say that you never interfered as to those discounts in any questions of credit?—Never; they were never discussed at the board at all.

1376. Did you ever attend at the Bank on any other days than board days?—On one occasion, when the capital of the Bank was increased, I was present; but I had no authority from the Government to be present. It was simply because, either before or immediately afterwards, there was a meeting of the directors, and I sat in the room.

1377. You had no power to vote?—I had no power to vote on the part of the Government.

1378. I suppose that you were more or less incompetent to decide upon questions of credit?—Quite so; and I can only say now that I do not think that I ought to have accepted the appointment.

1379. Were not any loans ever brought before you?—Not one.

1380. I will just ask you as to two which were made in your time. On the 31st of August 1864, when you had been about two months a director, there were 20 lacs lent to Kursondass Madhowdass, Mayabhoy Premabhoy, and Muggonbhoy Huttising?—I do not know about that. I heard the other day, when I was in the room, that it had been done, and I had seen it from the Bank records; but if I had knowingly passed it I should have said that I was conniving at robbery.

1381. I will give you another case; namely, that of Rustonjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy and his brother Sorabjee. On the 14th of July 1864, a little over a month after your taking your seat, Sorabjee had five lacs on a mere promissory note.—I knew nothing about it at the time. I have seen it since, in a statement which I got from the Bank of Bombay before I left Bombay.

1382. Was not it your duty to know of those transactions?—I relied upon the secretary and the Accountant-General. I knew very little of individuals in Bombay. I had never been in Bombay before the month of April 1864, so that I could not possibly know anything about the names of the individuals, and I thought that all that I had to do was to see that the charter was not infringed.

1383. Then did you think that the question of credit was entirely beyond your province?—No, not exactly so; but beyond my competency.

1384. You did not think that you were qualified to discuss such questions?—I did not think that I was qualified. I thought that there were better opinions than my own.

1385. From what you have said, I apprehend that you do not think that that was good banking?—Certainly not.

1386. I believe that you have received allotments of shares?—Do you mean before my connection with the Bank or during it, or afterwards?

1387. First of all will you state what allotments you have received?—May I only answer with reference to the period previous to my connection with the Bank and during my connection with it?

1388. Will you state the whole of it?—The first allotment which I received was of 50 Indian Peninsula Bank shares.

1389. When did you get them?—I do not know the date. I banked with the Bank of India at that time. I do not think that I have the dates. I may have them in Bombay, but I certainly have not got them here.

1390. You got those shares at the time when you were a director of the Bank?—I did.

1391. To whom did you apply for those shares?—They were got for me by Mr. Sands and Mr. Bevis. They were two friends of mine.

1392. Those shares were at a premium at that time?—Yes.

1393. What did you sell them for?—I do not know what I sold them for. I made, 3,000 rupees, I think, on the transaction.

1394. What other shares were allotted to you?—I had Port Canning shares afterwards.

1395. On the 1st of February 1865?—That was long after my connection with the Bank.

1396. You had one Port Canning share?—I had one and a half. A relative of mine had another.

1397. Was not there some other allotment besides that?—I had no other allotment individually.

1398. But collectively?—If you wish to ask me any question as to my relative's transactions, I can tell you. I had some Indo-Egyptian Bank shares, and I had some Brick and Tile shares.

Mr. H. E. Jacomb.

13 Nov. 1868.

1399. They were allotments?—Yes.

1400. When were they allotted?—I do not know the dates, but they were certainly after my connection with the Bank had ceased. I think that the Indo-Egyptian Bank shares were allotted in 1865.

1401. We have not heard of the Brick and Tile company before. It is new, and there is very little novelty left for us now. Will you tell us something about this Brick and Tile company?—It was a company brought out by the Financial Association of India and China. It was not what was called, I think, the Victoria Brick and Tile Company, but another.

1402. How many shares did you receive in it?—Ten, I think.

1403. Were not they brought in the autumn of 1864?—I was under the impression that it was in October, or after. It was certainly not during my connection with the Bank.

1404. How many shares had you in the Indo-Egyptian Bank?—Ten, I think.

1405. When were they allotted?—Very late; probably well on in 1865; I mean to say, well on in that part of the season.

1406. To whom did you apply for those shares?—I cannot say now. I know who was the promoter of the company, but I really do not know to whom I applied. I should think that I applied when it was brought out. Mr. Lewis, the late Advocate-General, was the promoter of the company.

1407. Did you sell those shares?—I did.

1408. At a premium?—Yes; at a small premium; 200 rupees.

1409. Had you any other shares?—I told you in my letter (Exhibit W.) what I purchased.

1410. I observe that you said that you had purchased ten shares in the Financial Association of India and China. When did you purchase them?—That, I believe, was done at the time when I was a director, and I said so in that letter.

1411. When did you sell them?—I sold them almost immediately.

1412. You made a profit, I suppose?—I made a profit. It was after I had had the 3,000 rupees from the Indian Peninsula Bank shares that I bought a few shares in the Financial Association, and I sold them.

1413. You also purchased 20 shares in the Bank of India while you were a director of the Bank of Bombay?—I will not be certain that it was 20. I have put that number in that letter as the outside figure.

1414. When did you purchase them?—I have put it in that letter, but I would not be positive that it was during my time of office. Without the actual dates it is rather difficult to remember a transaction four years back with precise accuracy.

1415. Did you sell them at a profit?—No; I bought them at a heavy premium. They were going down, and I got frightened, and sold.

1416. You did not make a profit by that transaction?—I did not.

1417. How came you not to mention in this letter those other allotments which you received?—I distinctly stated in that letter that it was during and previous to my connection with the Bank.

1418. You did not mention anything about the other allotments?—I think that you will find that the other allotments were not during that time.

1419. Did you buy or sell any other shares during the time that you were a director?—Not during the time that I was a director.

1420. Did you buy or sell shares shortly before or shortly after you were a director?—Certainly not shortly before. I had not a single share transaction before I was a director; afterwards, in 1865, I probably had share transactions.

1421. I suppose that you were aware of the Government orders discouraging speculations in shares?—I considered speculation to mean speculation out of my depth. My transactions were very trifling ones; they never involved more than 2000 or 3000 rupees at the outside; so that I could not consider them speculations, because I could always cover them.

1422. Do the Government orders say anything about the Government servants speculating out of their depth?—I was not aware of any order against taking shares.

1423 (Mr. Maxwell Melvill.) You have said that applications for discount never came before the board in your time; were not they referred to you as a member of the weekly committee?—As a member of the weekly committee all that came to me were shares, transfers, and any questions about the employés of the Bank.

1424. In your time there seem to have been one or two applications for discount; none ever came to you?—Nothing of the kind.

Mr. E. W. Ravenscroft.

EDWARD WILLIAM RAVENSCROFT sworn, and examined.

1425. (President.) I believe you are a member of the Bombay Civil Service?—I am.

1426. I believe you were Acting Secretary to the Government of Bombay in the Revenue Department in the years 1864 and 1865?—I was at the close of 1864, and for the first two months of 1865.

1427. When were you appointed?—I think at either the end of September or the beginning of October 1864.

1428. Were you in Bombay before then?—I was in Bombay from February 1864, having previously served up country.

1429. What appointment did you hold in February 1864?—I was Inspector in Chief of the Cotton Department, to prevent frauds in the mixture of cotton.

1430. Since February 1864?—Yes.

1431. When were you appointed Commissioner to consider applications from promoters of schemes for reclaiming portions of the foreshore of the Island of Bombay?—I think that it must have been either in November or December 1864.

1432. Was not it the 2nd of December 1864?—It may have been.

1433. When were you appointed a Government director of the Bank of Bombay?—Shortly after I was appointed Revenue Secretary.

1434. I find that your first sitting at the board was on the 6th of October 1864?—Yes, I think that that was the first day that I sat.

1435. Do you remember the last day when you sat?—The 23rd of February 1865.

1436. When did you leave India?—On the morning of the 1st of March.

1437. Did you attend the board regularly?—I did not the first two months that I was a director, because the Governor was absent, and it was my business occasionally to go to him, and it happened that once or twice my visits took place on the day that the board sat. The Governor was at Matheran and Poona during that period.

1438. You were a director little more than four months?—Yes.

1439. And during a good portion of that time you were absent in attendance upon the Governor, you say?—I had to go up and return in the evening, and it so happened that on those days the board sat.

1440. Did you attend the board meetings very regularly, except on those days?—I did not attend very regularly. I did so as regularly as my other duties permitted me to do.

1441. Did you attend on any other days than board days?—Never.

1442. Did any applications for discounts, cash credits, or loans, come before you?—No applications of that sort were made to the board.

1443. Were you consulted personally with respect to any such applications?—I was never consulted. There was one application which came before the board, I remember.

1444. Only one?—Only one.

1445. What case was that?—I forget the name of the man. A man wanted a loan on personal security, and gave as his security the name of an officer in Bombay; and immediately the proposition came before the board, I said that it was preposterous; that loans of that sort were never made by the Bank; and his application was immediately rejected.

1446. Was it some officer who applied?—I believe that it was an officer of the Bank, giving the security of a gentleman holding a judicial appointment in Bombay.

1447. But no other case was ever brought before the board while you were there?—No other case was brought before the board while I was there.

1448. Were you ever applied to individually upon questions of credit?—Never.

1449. Had you opportunities of observing how the business of the Bank was conducted when you were there?—I did my best to ascertain how the business was conducted.

1450. What did the Chairman do?—The Chairman presided at our meetings.

1451. Did he do anything else?—I am not aware of what he did, except on those occasions, from my own personal knowledge.

1452. You did not remark that he interfered much, or at all?—He presided at our proceedings.

1453. But in other matters he did not interfere?—No, not that I am am aware of.

1454. What were the powers of the secretary?—The powers of the secretary, as far I understood them, were to advance to a certain extent on the securities which were laid down in the law by which we acted.

1455. Did you find that he was doing that?—I understood that he was doing it. May I be allowed to see the "Application Book?"

1456. Yes. (The book was handed to the witness.) How came you to think that the secretary's powers were limited to a small amount?—I do not exactly remember how the matter arose, but I remember that I was asked to sign the monthly abstract of liabilities and assets which was returned by the Bombay Bank to the Bombay Government. There are different headings. I was asked to sign this document, and I made some inquiries about it.

1457. I ask you how you came to know that the powers of the secretary were limited?—I am going to answer that question. I understood from the secretary that the loans which he made were entered in this book, and the cash credits which he granted, and that, as long as he kept within the letter of the law, he was authorized to advance the money on the securities which the law laid down.

1458. What securities did you think that the law laid down, on which he should advance money?—The securities which I saw entered in the application book which I have before me.

1459. Did you labour under the impression that after 1863 he could only lend money on Government paper and bullion and guaranteed railway shares?—The abstract returned to the Government, so far as I understood it, distinctly laid down that money could only be advanced on securities.

1460. This is a copy of the monthly return (handing exhibit A 25[4] to the witness). Just look at the head of "securities;" that is what you mean?—Yes. I mean to say that from that document I inferred that no loans were made except on fixed securities; certainly not on personal security, or cash credits without security.

1461. You thought that it was on deposit of Government security, or deposit of other description of security?—It left the impression on my mind connected with this book that the whole of the loans and cash credits which were granted during the time while I was on the board were either on bullion or Government security, or the deposit of security of other kinds, such as are mentioned there.

1462. What you mean is, that, if there were any loans on personal security, there ought to have been another heading there for them?—Just so; and another proof that loans were not made on personal security was, that when an application was made for a loan on personal security they brought it before the board, and we instantly, without a moment's hesitation, rejected it, and, as far as I remember, censured the secretary for doing so.

1463. When was that?—In November 1864, and it is in the minute book. (The witness referred to the minute book.)

1464. Have you seen it in the minutes yourself?—I do not remember having seen it; but I am perfectly positive that the thing occurred; it certainly occurred, because I remember the names of the people.

1465. Can you give us the names?—I can give you the name of the person who was offered as surety.

1466. What was his name?—It was the chief magistrate of police in Bombay; a naval man.

1467. Oliver?—Oliver; and I perfectly remember that it was entered in the book.

1468. Am I really to understand that you were quite ignorant of the fact, that they were lending money on cash credits, loans, and discounts, upon the mere personal security of the borrower or borrowers?—Most distinctly.

1469. During the whole time that you were upon the direction?—During the whole time that I was upon the direction I had no idea that any loan or cash credit was granted, except upon the deposit of security for about the amount of the loan.

1470. You mean Government security?—Not only Government security.

1471. Or guaranteed railway shares?—Or shares in a bank. Here is a Commercial Bank receipt referred to.

1472. That is a fixed deposit receipt; that is quite another thing from a share. A fixed deposit receipt is where a man has got a fixed deposit with a bank, and cannot draw out the money, because he has promised to give fourteen days' notice, or something of that kind. He could go to the Bank of Bombay, and give that deposit receipt as security; it would be a good security; that is not an advance on shares. No loan upon shares was entered in that application book till after April 1865.—My impression was that the loans and cash credits were invariably secured by the security which is entered in this book.

1473. Then you did not know that they were advancing upon the shares of companies?—I had a sort of idea that shares were taken and entered in this book, but I did not examine this book minutely. I observed that it appeared to be in form.

1474. Did you ever look at the "daily book," and see what large sums of money were going out?—Yes; the "daily book" was sent to me every day, I believe, or something or other by which we could see what was going on.

1475. This is one of the "daily books;" it would show you the amount which had gone out in bills, and so on. Did you ever make an inquiry as to that?—I saw daily that there was a large difference, and I presumed that the Bank was doing a large business, and, with the exception of discounts, I presumed that they were all advances upon securities.

1476. Were you wholly ignorant that the Bank was then advancing upon no security at all other than a promissory note, or advancing upon shares?—I was entirely ignorant of that; and in proof of that assertion I say that the one loan which I have mentioned came before the board, and we immediately negatived it, and I believe censured the secretary for presuming that we should advance money except in the usual way; and that I know is here (referring to the minute book), but I cannot find it.

1477. Will you kindly tell us who it was that

Mr. E. W. Ravenscroft.

13 Nov. 1868.

censured the secretary?—I believe that I did so myself.

1478. Did he laugh at it?—He generally used to laugh whenever he was spoken to; but I do not know that he laughed particularly on that occasion. I do not mean to say that he laughed offensively, but he had a way of laughing.

1479. With respect to this return, are you aware that the form of it was subsequently altered?—When I returned to Bombay in 1867 I had occasion to look at those returns, and I saw in the return of January 1867 that a marginal note stated that one of those columns included advances upon personal security, and that made me go a little into the matter, and it is from that that I have been able to tell you what I have told you.

1480. Then I am to understand that you were positively deceived by the form of the "application book"?—Certainly; and not only that, but I involuntarily deceived Sir Bartle Frere.

1481. How do you mean?—In February, shortly before I left India, he said to me, when I was with him on business, "I hope the Bank is going on satisfactorily," or some words to that effect, and I said, "To the best of my belief it is, sir."

1482. Did you ever sign this monthly return?—Never; I refused to sign it.

1483. Did you assign any reason for refusing to sign that monthly return?—I told the secretary that I did not like to sign that document until he would furnish me with a list showing the securities upon which the advances had been made.

1484. Did he do so?—He said that he would do so, but he did not, and therefore I did not sign the return.

1485. Did you ever object to it to any of your brother directors?—No. This matter did not come before any of the other directors, so far as I was concerned; it was simply a matter between the secretary and myself.

1486. Then I am to understand that the secretary did not give you information as to the securities upon which the money was advanced, though you asked for it?—I happened to go rather late one day to the meeting, after the directors had left. This document must be signed by three directors. I saw the names of two directors on it, and the secretary said, "Will you sign this?" I said "What is it?" I looked at it, and said, "I want to know about these securities; can you give me a list showing what they are, because otherwise it is rather an important paper to sign?" He said, "It will take some time;" and I also understood him to say, "Here are the securities." There were a lot of books upon the table. I said, "I cannot do it; I must have a regular list." He said that he would furnish it, but he did not furnish it, and I could not wait; and it so happened that I never did sign that return during the whole time that I was at the board.

1487. I wish that everybody had been as careful in that respect as yourself. Were you aware that Mr. Birch was receiving allotments on shares during the time that you were a director?—I was not personally aware that he was.

1488. Did you know it? How do you mean, that you were not "personally aware"?—I cannot personally say that he received allotments of shares, because he did not tell me that he did, nor did I see him recceive them.

1489. Where you aware that Mr. Blair and Mr. Robertson and the other officers of the Bank were receiving allotments of shares?—No, I knew nothing about the officers of the Bank.

1490. You do not speak so confidently as to Mr. Birch?—I, of course, saw the newspapers of Bombay, and in some of them a gossip was mentioned that he had taken them; but whether it was true or not I had no means of judging, and I did not consider it my business to interfere.

1491. I believe that you addressed this letter (Exhibit X.) to the Commissioners (handing a letter to the witness)?—I did. At that time I was not under the impression that the Commissioners were coming to England, otherwise I should have reserved what I had to say until they came.

1492. I believe that you received allotments; did you not?—I received no allotments from any one in Bombay during the time that I was on the direction, or that I was Secretary to the Government.

1493. Is that so?—Certainly.

1494. Did not you receive two Back Bay shares on the 1st of July 1864? you were then in the service of the Bombay Government.—I say while I was Secretary to the Government, or in the Bank of Bombay. I received an allotment of two Back Bay shares, but that was nearly four months before I was on the direction of the Bank of Bombay.

1495. To whom did you apply for those shares?—I applied to the promoters.

1496. From whom did you obtain them?—I obtained them from the promoters.

1497. You did not apply to any particular promoter?—Not that I remember.

1498. Did you hold those shares whilst you were a director?—No I did not.

1499. Did you sell them immediately?—I handed them over immediately to my agents, Forbes and Company, and they held them, I believe, for about a fortnight, till a panic arose, and sold them for me.

1500. Did not they sell them at a very high premium?—They did.

1501. You received no other allotments than those?—No, I was in no scheme connected with Bombay.

1502. You received one Port Canning share on the 1st of February 1865?—I did.

1503. And you were also interested in some Bengal Bank?—I was.

1504. But you had no shares in anything in Bombay?—No, certainly not. There is one exception; the day before I left India I purchased a Colaba Land share.

1505. With respect to the Port Canning share which you got allotted when you were a director, was not that an effete speculation in Calcutta, and was not it brought round by Mr. Schiller, and started afresh in Bombay, under the auspices of three or four gentlemen in Bombay, and were not fresh allotments made of shares?—No, certainly not.

1506. Are you quite sure of that?—Perfectly certain.

1507. Are you certain that fresh allotments were not made on the 1st of February 1865?—It was the first allotment which I received. I do not exactly understand your question.

1508. Was not it a new issue of shares started in Bombay, the scheme being taken up by some parties there?—No; nothing of the sort; the Port Canning scheme was brought out in Calcutta.

1509. Several years before?—No; at the time, in January 1865.

1510. It was brought out in Calcutta long before I left India.—But I do not think that the articles of association were signed and a regular company formed.

1511. Yes; and it was almost stillborn there, and then it was brought round to Bombay by Mr. Schiller, and he got two or three enterprising persons to take up the scheme, and they issued a new allotment of shares, of which you received one.—I do not think that that is a correct explanation of the matter. The scheme was brought out in Calcutta; it was to cost two millions; they had not sufficient money there to float it, and therefore they brought some shares to Bombay to give the Bombay people an opportunity of taking them.

1512. There was a fresh allotment in Bombay on on the 1st of February 1865.—Not that I understand, but a portion of the shares were allotted in Bombay.

1513. I believe that you did not receive any shares in the Financial Association of India and China?—No, I had no other shares of any kind, so far as I remember, except those which I have mentioned.

1514. Did you buy or sell any shares?—No; with the exception of the Colaba Land Company's share.

(President to Mr. Le Mesurier.) Have you any question to put?

(Mr. Le Mesurier.) No, Sir.

Mr. E. W. Ravenscroft.

13 Nov. 1868.

HENRY ALBERT MANGLES sworn, and examined.

Mr. H. A. Mangles.

1515. (President.) I believe that you are in the Bengal Civil Service?—I am.

1516. You are employed in the Financial Department under the Government of India?—I am.

1517. You lately held some appointment in Bombay?—I held the appointment of Civil Paymaster.

1518. When were you appointed a Government director of the Bank of Bombay?—Early in 1864.

1519. Your first sitting at the board was, I think, on the 4th of February 1864; was it not?—Very likely. I do not remember the exact date; it was immediately after I was appointed.

1520. What was the date of your last sitting?—It was at the last meeting prior to the 1st of April 1865.

1521. It was on the 30th of March 1865?—Yes.

1522. That is a most eventful period. You were a director during almost all the time when the mischief occurred, namely, from the 1st of June 1864 to the 1st of May 1865. Did you attend regularly at the board?—Yes, very regularly.

1523. Did you attend at the Bank on other days than board days?—No; never that I remember. I was away from Bombay on leave from the 1st of February 1865 till the 7th of March 1865.

1524. Did you ever act as a member of the weekly committee?—I do not remember it.

1525. I think that your name so appears?—I may have been there.

1526. (President, reading from the minutes.) "Directors for the next week, H. A. Mangles" and others; and there is also the same entry afterwards.—Yes; I rather meant to say that as a member of the weekly committee I do not remember ever going to the Bank or taking part in the business.

1527. So far as the weekly committee was concerned, there were no active duties that you are aware of?—None, that I am aware of.

1528. No case of discount, cash credit, or loan was referred to you as a member of the weekly committee?—I do not remember any.

1529. Were you ever consulted otherwise as to cash credits, or discounts, or loans?—No; I do not remember being consulted. I took objection once to some business which they were doing, which I discovered accidentally.

1530. What was it?—I was told in the middle of 1864 that the Bank was advancing on promissory notes, and at the next meeting of the Board I looked at the "application book" and I found that an advance of 30,000 rupees had been made to the gentleman who had mentioned it to me, and without any security having been taken.

1531. Will you point that out in the "application book"?—I forget the month.

1532. Was it on personal security?—It was merely on a promissory note.

1533. You will not find it entered in the "application book;" you might find it in the register of bills discounted—I found in the book a column headed "on what security," and under that there was nothing but a dash of the pen.

1534. That "application book" refers to cash credits and loans only.—If I remember rightly it was the other book, because there was a column headed "security on which granted."

1535. (Mr. Melvill.) What is the name of the borrower?—Mr. Bevis. (The register of bills discounted was handed to the witness.)—Here is the entry, on May the 10th, 1864, but it is for 60,000 rupees. My impression was that it was for 30,000 rupees; but I will not be sure about the figure.

1536. (President.) Is that it?—Very likely.

1537. What took place? You say that you objected?—I found it there when I got to the Bank. After reaching home I wrote a letter to the secretary, and asked him whether he was in the habit of discounting promissory notes only, as it seemed to me to be a violation of the charter. He wrote back, saying that it was a hard term to use, but that the board of directors considered that they could do it under the charter. I then wrote a private note to Mr. A. D. Robertson, who was then one of the directors, and he said that he thought that it could be done under the charter. I then went to Mr. Birch, and asked him whether he was aware of it, and he said that he was; and I asked under what clause of the charter it could be done. He said, as a cash credit. I said that I did not agree with him.

1538. Are you quite sure that he said that it could be called a cash credit?—I am positive. I then wrote to Mr. Lidderdale, and asked him whether, as a mercantile man, he could conscientiously sanction that kind of cash credit. He wrote back and said, No, certainly not, but that it was the custom of the Bank to discount bills of that sort.

1539. Under the term "negotiable security." If it had been under the old charter you could not have done it, but the new Act let in all this sort of thing. Did you, at any other time, object to advances on personal security?—No; never, that I remember. I never heard of it again.

1540. I believe that you were a director when the last two increases of capital were made?—I was.

1541. Do you think that those were wise and prudent measures?—I thought that the first was.

1542. You mean the first before you became a director?—Yes; the latter I thought was unnecessary; but the matter was discussed at the board, and the majority of the mercantile men, who had much better means of forming an opinion, seemed to think that it was necessary, and so I made no objection.

1543. You deferred to the commercial directors?—Yes.

1544. Was it your habit to do so?—Yes; always in a matter of that kind, or in the matter of the credit of individuals.

1545. What was the date of that discovery of yours which you have mentioned?—The 10th of May 1864, or a few days subsequently.

1546. Was it in consequence of that discovery that the resolution of the 2nd of June 1864 was come to? Do you recollect it? (Handing the minute book to the witness.) I see that you were present on that day. It is with regard to the Scotch system of cash credits?—Yes; I remember that resolution being passed.

1547. Were you aware that cash credits were granted on personal security before that?—No, never.

1548. You thought that that was a resolution authorizing, for the first time, cash credits to be granted on personal security?—Yes.

1549. Would you be very much surprised if I showed you a long list of cash credits granted upon personal security before that date?—Yes, very much.

1550. Would you consider it disingenuous on the part of the persons who put that before you, if they concealed the fact of cash credits having been so granted before?—Yes, I should.

1551. Were you aware of what the Scotch system of cash credits was?—It was discussed at the board.

1552. Who proposed the resolution?—I think that it was brought forward by the secretary, or by the president on behalf of the secretary.

1553. I want to know the original shape in which that motion was brought forward?—I understood it to be that one name should be required instead of two; but I did not remember that it was without any collateral security at all.

1554. This was the original proposition. (Handing Exhibit A 48 to witness.) You see that it ran quite in another way; it stated the Scotch system of credit quite honestly, namely, that it required two persons as sureties, if you read what is scratched out, and read it as it stood originally.—Yes. As I understood it, it was one name instead of two which was proposed, but not without any security whatever. I never knew that until I heard the evidence of Mr. Birch here the other day.

Mr. H. A. Mangles.

13 Nov. 1868.

1555. What was the original proposition? Do you remember that alteration being made, altering it from two names to no security?—I have an idea that on this day I came late to the meeting, and that they had just finished discussing the matter, and that the president read it out to me; but the impression which I had up to the other day was, that it was merely reducing the number of sureties from two to one.

1556. Were you present at the next meeting, when the minutes of the meeting of the 2nd June were read?—Yes.

1557. I understand that you never took any objection to this system of lending money, at all events after the 2nd of June, on a cash credit upon the security of the borrower alone?—No, I did not.

1558. Do you think that that was a wise system of banking to introduce?—No, certainly not.

1559. Did you know of loans on promissory notes or bonds, without any other security?—No, I never heard of it.

1560. Did you know of loans, nominally on a promissory note, shares being deposited for safe custody; a sort of disguise to cover advances upon shares?—No, I never heard of it. I asked the question several times of the secretary, whether he was ever advancing upon shares, and he said that he was never doing it.

1561. Which secretary told you that?—Mr. Blair. I remember two distinct occasions on which I asked him the question.

1562. Do you remember any cases of advances to buy shares on the promise that those shares should be deposited when bought?—I never heard of such a thing.

1563. Did you know of any advance on shares openly made at the Kalbadevi Branch, without any disguise like that which was adopted at the head office?—No. I was informed by the secretary that they never advanced on shares. I asked the question two or three times; but I remember two occasions. I also talked to the president about it, and he likewise told me that they never advanced on shares. I knew that the power was given by the charter, but I understood that no money was to be advanced on shares except the matter was first laid before the board.

1564. (Mr. Melvill.) Do you know at what time in 1864 you asked the secretary that question?—No.

1565. (President.) Are you quite sure that on more than one occasion you asked that question of the secretary, and got that answer?—Yes.

1566. It is rather material as to the time when you asked him that question. You were a director on the 4th of February 1864; they did not begin to lend even on shares in that way till the latter part of 1864?—I could not state the exact date at all.

1567. What did you understand the powers of the secretary to be?—To advance money on Government securities; Government promissory notes, or railway shares; and to discount bills or grant cash credits only, in communication, as I was told, with the mercantile directors and the president. When I was in Madras I was on the board of directors there, and it was the custom in that place to circulate all bills for discount prior to their being passed, and two of the directors put their initials to them. When I got to Bombay, I inquired why this was not done, and the secretary told me that he consulted the mercantile directors.

1568. Did you put yourself in communication with the chairman, or any of the commercial directors, to test the truth of that statement of the secretary?—I did not.

1569. You took what he stated to be the fact?—Yes.

1570. Were you aware of the practice of referring bills to a native director?—I knew that Cowasjee first, and Premchund afterwards, was consulted with regard to the credit of natives, but I did not know that anything more was done than that.

1571. You were not aware of Premchund's habitually introducing men to the notice of the secretary, and writing notes, saying "Lend So-and-so so many lacs"?—Never; I never heard of it whilst I was there.

1572. You never heard of his being constantly referred to by Mr. Blair, and Mr. Blair acting upon his authority alone?—I never heard a word of it, and I had not the slightest suspicion of it.

1573. Did you see Premchund Roychund yourself at all?—I think that he sat on the board about twice while I was there, just before I left.

1574. Did you ever talk with him on the Bank's affairs, or find out that he was interfering at all?—Never. I did not know him. I never spoke to him.

1575. You were also a Bank director when the Kalbadevi Branch was opened?—Yes.

1576. What was the original idea in opening that branch?—My impression was that it was merely to do the same business in the native part of the town as was done at the Fort.

1577. Did you think that it was to grant discounts, cash credits, and loans?—That I understood, from what the president said.

1578. You understood the president to say that?—Yes.

1579. In your idea it was not to be a mere Bank of deposit?—No. The Fort is at some distance from the native part of the town, and the natives might not wish to come so far.

1580. I believe that you were at the board on the day when Premchund Roychund resigned for the first time, namely, the 15th of September 1864?—I do not know.

1581. Do you remember the letters which passed at the time? There is the following letter from Premchund recorded on the minutes: "10 Sept. 1864. I beg to tender my resignation as director of the Bank, owing to my being constantly absent from Bombay. I remain yours, obediently, Premchund Roychund." You were not present on that day; you were not a party to pressing him to remain on the direction?—No.

1582. Were you aware that Mr. Birch was receiving allotments of shares?—I knew that he received one allotment in the Financial Association of India and China, which he told me of, and it was reported that he had received two, but I did not know that he had received any besides those.

1583. Did you know that Mr. Blair and Mr. Robertson were receiving allotments of everything which was going?—No.

1584. Or that they were receiving allotments at all?—No, I did not know that they were receiving them at all.

1585. Did you know that any other Bank official was receiving them?—No.

1586. Your attention was never called to that fact, so that you could signify your disapprobation of it or otherwise?—Never.

1587. Did you know that the majority of them were speculating in any way?—No.

1588. Or that they were interested in any other Bank?—No; I had not the slightest idea of the fact.

1589. What allotments did you receive?—I received one allotment in the Financial Association of India and China.

1590. Fifteen shares, I think?—I forget the number.

1591. Did you receive any of the new issue?—No, I did not have any of those. I thought the number was 25 in the first issue.

1592. We have it down 15.—It is a long time ago.

1593. You are quite right (after referring to the allotment register); it is 25. Did you have any other allotments?—I had an allotment in the Peninsula Bank of India.

1594. With respect to the Financial Association, to whom did you apply for that allotment?—To the provisional manager, I think they called him; the person who advertised in the papers.

1595. Was not his name Smith ?—No ; I think it was before Mr. Smith became manager. I forget his name.

1596. The shares were at a premium at the time ?—Yes, when they were allotted.

1597. How much was paid up on each share ; was not it 100 rupees ?—I do not know.

1598. When did you sell them ?—I sold them two or three days after allotment.

1599. At what price ?—Between 70 and 80 rupees profit. I forget exactly.

1600. As to your Peninsula Bank shares, how many did you have of them ?—Forty, I think.

1601. The Financial Association shares were allotted on the 6th of June 1864 ?—I do not recollect the date.

1602. When were the shares of the Peninsula Bank allotted ?—I should think about a month later, so far as I remember.

1603. July 1864. At what premium were they ?—I think that I sold some at about 20.

1604. You sold them directly you got them, I suppose ?—Within a fortnight.

1605. At how much ?—I think that some were sold at 20 and some at 13, or some at 13 and some at 7.

1606. You sold them at a premium. How many shares were there ?—Forty, I think. I am not quite sure as to the number.

1607. Did you receive any other allotment ?—I received an allotment in the Brick and Tile Company.

1608. That was in the latter part of 1864 ?—Yes, I think so. It was the Victoria Brick and Tile Company, I think.

1609. How many shares had you in that company ?—Fifteen, I think.

1610. Did you sell them at a premium ?—No, I kept them.

1611. Then I suppose that you have sold them at a loss ?—They have gone into liquidation.

1612. (Mr. Melvill.) Had you not some shares in the Bombay Joint Stock Corporation ?—I bought some in the market. I had a share in the United Colaba Land Company.

1613. Did you make a large profit by those shares ?—No, I think that I sold them at 3,000 rupees profit. I sold mine immediately.

1614. (President.) What did you consider to be your duty as a Government director ?—The most important duty, I thought, was to see that the terms of the charter were not exceeded in any way.

1615. Did you feel it to be your duty to report to the Government anything which went wrong in the Bank ?—Certainly.

1616. Did you, in fact, during the whole time when you were a Government director, make any such report to the Government ?—Never.

1617. You did not think that anything was going wrong ?—No.

1618. Did you receive any instructions from the Government as to what your duties were to be ?—None whatever.

1619. Not during the whole time that you were a director ?—None so far as I remember.

1620. Were there any rules laid down for Government directors ?—None that I ever saw.

1621. Did you consider that your duties were in any way different from those of the commercial directors ?—Not at all, with the exception that it was the duty of a Government director, if anything went wrong, to let the Government know of it.

1622. You did not think that the Government directors were at all more absolved from looking into the advances than the commercial directors ?—No ; but I did not think that they were in a position to look into them.

1623. You did not think that they were qualified ?—Just so. I was a stranger to Bombay. I had no means of knowing the credit of the different parties who had bills discounted at the Bank.

1624. Had you any notion as to the powers which the secretary was assuming ?—No, not the least.

1625. You have told us that you thought that he was only advancing upon Government paper and bullion, and securities of that nature ?—Yes.

1626. That is to say excepting those two cases to which you have called attention, namely, a promissory note, and then, eventually, after the 2nd of June 1864, on cash credits in one name ?—Yes.

1627. You were aware of those two alterations ?—Yes.

1628. And of no other ?—Of no other.

1629. Were you aware of any byelaws ?—No ; I never saw any.

1630. You had been a director before of the Bank of Madras ; had they no byelaws there ?—I presume so, and I presume that they had them in Bombay.

1631. In point of fact you never inquired as to byelaws ?—No ; I never asked to see them, I was guided by the terms of the charter.

1632. By Act 10 of 1863 ?—Yes ; and I of course considered that there was a regular set of rules laid down in the Bank for the secretary's guidance.

1633. But you did not inquire or ask for those rules ?—No.

1634. (Major Innes.) You had found a difference of opinion among some of the directors as to the power of the secretary to advance upon a single name ?—Yes.

1635. Did not that lead you to inquire as to byelaws ?—I found that the opinion of two Government directors and of one mercantile director was against me, and the mercantile director said that it had been the custom in the Bank of Bombay to discount those bills, and of course I thought that I was wrong and that the others were right.

1636. I do not mean as a matter of opinion, but detailed byelaws ; you did not ask for them ?—No ; the mercantile director stated that it had always been the practice of the Bank, and therefore I did not ask.

1637. There being a difference of opinion, you did not ask ?—No. The Government directors merely said that they thought that it could be done under the charter ; and Mr. Lidderdale said that it had been done, and that he thought that it always had been done.

1638. (President.) We must take you a little more particularly through the transactions at the Bank. On the 21st of October 1864 a bill of the Alliance Financial Corporation was discounted for five lacs of rupees, and on the 8th of November 1864 another for five lacs ; were you aware of those facts ?—No.

1639. Did you know that Atmaram Madhowjee had 20,70,000 rupees outstanding when he got a bill discounted at the head office of 5,50,000 rupees ?—No.

1640. In fact you really did not know of any of these loans or cash credits ?—I understood that the secretary was acting in communication with the president ; and I thought that if any person wanted an advance to any large amount, it would be brought before the board by the president.

1641. Then you thought that the president, Mr. Birch, was actively interfering in the management of the Bank ?—I thought that he was.

1642. Was he constantly at the Bank ?—He was there on board days with the secretary before the directors met, and he generally stopped afterwards.

1643. Do you know whether he was there on other days ?—I do not know.

1644. Did you know of those large loans to Brown and Best ?—No, I never heard of them.

1645. With regard to Burjorjee Rustomjee, at the Kalbadevi Branch, did you know of the transactions there ?—No.

1646. Did you ever inquire how that branch was managed ?—No. Other branches had been started, and I presumed that the same set of rules issued for their guidance would be sent to the Kalbadevi Branch.

1647. Did you hear of a sum of 10 lacs, namely, 100,000*l.*, passed across the counter for a promissory

Mr. H. A. Mangles.
13 Nov. 1868.

note to the Eastern Financial Association?—No, I never heard of it.

1648. In fact, I suppose it is of no use taking you through these transactions; you do not know anything of them?—I do not know of a single one.

1649. You yourself did not know what was going on in the Bank?—I had no idea that they were advancing money in the way in which it now turns out that they were.

1650. Was the Government aware of it?—I presume not.

1651. Do you know whether the Government was informed by any other person during the time that you were in Bombay of what was going on in the Bank?—Never, I believe.

1652. (President.) At the next meeting we shall examine Mr. Blair at his own house. Mr. Blair's examination will certainly take two days.

Monday, 16th November 1868.

PRESENT:

President.

SIR CHARLES JACKSON.

Members.

MAJOR MCLEOD INNES. | MAXWELL MELVILL, ESQ.

Secretary.

F. D. CHAUNTRELL, ESQ.

Mr. J. Blair.
16 Nov. 1868.

JAMES BLAIR sworn and examined at No. 90, Richmond-road, Bayswater.

1653. (President.) I believe that you were employed for a very long time in the Bank of Bombay?—In the first place, perhaps, you will allow me to put a question to you. Is the statement which I have given in, under medical advice, entered upon the Minutes of the Commission?

1654. Not yet. It will not be entered until after the examination, and probably the examination will render it unnecessary to enter any such statement.—If not, I must decline to answer any general questions, as recommended by my medical attendant.

1655. I thought that you had arranged with Mr. Chauntrell to be examined here?—On the document certainly, on the statement which I have sent in.

1656. You will be examined upon that statement, and upon other points also?—That must be the first, under my medical attendant's advice. By my medical attendant's opinion it is dangerous to my life.

(President, to the Secretary.) I understood Mr. Blair to state that he could bear an examination here in private?

(Secretary.) Mr. Blair did not state to me that he required to be examined on that statement which he sent in, but said that he was quite willing to be examined here.

(Mr. Blair, to the President.) I asked you whether the statement had been received, and you seemed rather to evade the question, and simply to state that the document had been received. I have been waiting for an answer to that letter.

(President.) The statement has been received.

(Witness.) Yes, but my medical adviser states simply, that I should be examined on written interrogatories in the present state of my health.

1657. (President.) We would rather not examine you at all, than examine you on written interrogatories; that would be entirely nugatory.—You have medical statements which I can read over to you.

1658. We have read them most carefully.—In fairness I am quite willing to give any evidence, but at the request of my medical attendant I have given a written statement. I have acted upon his advice.

1659. You have given a written statement which is extremely unsatisfactory, avoiding all the really important points upon which we wish to examine you.—That statement is what is required, as far as I could find out from the notes which I have taken.

1660. Having received that written statement, which has not been recorded, I should hope to get something more satisfactory from you; but of course if you find that the examination is more than you can bear, we must retire.—I simply go upon medical advice. I came up here, on the first notice, without medical advice, to wait upon you.

1661. We are wasting a great deal of time, and consuming your strength. Do you intend to be examined or not? We have all come here for that purpose.—Yes, if the statement is recorded upon the minutes.

1662. I have no objection to record that statement upon the minutes.—If the statement is recorded, I am ready, as far as possible, to answer any further questions.

1663. I believe that you were employed for a long time in the Bank of Bombay?—Since 1853.

1664. You were deputy secretary before you became secretary?—I entered the bank as chief accountant.

1665. You afterwards became deputy secretary?—In 1856.

1666. And secretary in 1860?—Yes. Then it is understood that this statement, a copy of which I have, is to be recorded on the minutes?

1667. Yes.—With the medical opinions and my letter. I should wish my letter to be recorded, because it has been stated that I have been summoned against my will.

1668. It is not only recorded, but set out in full in the printed minutes of our proceedings.

I wish you to confine your attention as much as possible to the important facts, as we do not want to detain you longer than is necessary. First of all, will you tell us when you were absent from Bombay. I understand from your statement that you were absent from the 16th January to the 14th March 1865; is that correct?—That is correct.

1669. Were you absent at all during 1864?—Yes; during the races at Poona, in September I think it was, I was away for five weeks, at the end of August and in September, as far as my recollection goes; but you must bear with me so far, inasmuch as it is a long time since.

1670. When did you resign?—I left Bombay on the 29th April 1865, but the deputy secretary was gazetted in the "Bombay Gazette," as far as I recollect, on the 2d January 1865, as the Directors knew that I was going home.

1671. Do you mean to say that Mr. Robertson was officiating secretary in January 1865?—Yes, on the 2d January 1865 he was gazetted officially.

1672. Do you mean to say that you did not attend as secretary after that?—I was away at Ajmere. I think that that was the date.

1673. But you were still secretary?—I was immediately going away, and Mr. Robertson was gazetted as secretary; that is, as far as my memory bears me out.

1674. Are the assertions in this statement (Exhibit

Y 1) which you have sent into us true ?—Yes, perfectly true.

1675. Is this memorandum (Exhibit Y 2) which you sent in of your shares correct?—Yes, as far as my recollection goes.

1676. You returned to Bombay on the 13th March 1865 ; on what day did you sail from India ?—On the 29th April 1865.

1677. You attended as secretary from the 14th of March to the 29th of April ?—Yes.

1678. You were well acquainted with the practice of the old Bank ?—Yes.

1679. I will not ask you any questions about the preparation of the Act of 1863 ; we are going to examine the Governor as to that, and we have pretty well ascertained all about it, and do not want therefore to take your evidence upon that point. You knew the system of discounts under the old Act ?—Yes.

1680. There were two names of independent persons, or firms, always required ?—Yes.

1681. There was a private discount list kept, and revised from time to time ?—Yes.

1682. Under the old Act the time for which loans were to run was limited to three months ?—To three months.

1683. And there was a limit imposed by the Act upon discounts, as to amount ; they were not to exceed three lacs of rupees ?—Yes.

1684. You could not lend more ?—No ; except to Government, seven lacs.

1685. And there was a register of bills discounted kept accurately at that time ?—Yes.

1686. I am cross-examining, and therefore I put leading questions. In discounts under the new Act the alteration consisted in your taking the name of one individual or one firm ; that was one alteration under the new Act ?—Yes, there was that power.

1687. "Negotiable securities" being the words in the new Act, you considered that that authorized you to advance upon a promissory note with one name ?—Will you repeat that question ?

1688. The new Act authorized you, did it not, to advance upon a promissory note with a single name ?—Certainly.

1689. When did you first do that?—I may state that I was simply the servant of the directors.

1690. The very next question which I am going to put will give you an cpportunity of stating that ; I want to know, first of all, the time. When did you begin to do that ; was it immediately after the Act passed, or did you wait until the middle of 1864?—Will you allow me to refer to these notes, which were made up at my leisure, as far as my memory could bear me out ?

1691. Did you begin to do it shortly after the Act passed?—The private discount list was discontinued about 1863.

1692. When did you begin to lend on one name ?—From that date.

1693. By what authority did you introduce that new practice ?—Of the directors, of course.

1694. To whom did you apply for that authority ?—I do not know that I applied at all. We could get little or no business unless that system was adopted when the branches were to be commenced. The Hoondee system was entirely on one name ; the natives would not generally trust each other.

1695. You volunteered the information when I did not ask for it ; and now I want to have it. By what authority did you introduce this practice of one name ; who authorized you ?—The directors.

1696. What directors?—The minutes will show that.

1697. We have the minutes ; will you kindly show us any minute which authorized you to do it ?—It is not authorized in the minutes ; it was tacitly agreed to by all the directors, and acted upon continuously ever afterwards.

1698. They could not have given you instructions tacitly ; you must have had some instructions. There were Mr. Birch, the Chairman, Mr. M'Ilwraith, Mr. Gavin Steel, Mr. Cowasjee Jehangeer, and other directors at that time ; cannot you remember by whose authority it was ?—There is no name in my memoranda ; it was a general order, as it was understood by the directors, and I was to act upon it.

1699. We want to get at the fact who it was that told you to do it, but you cannot say ?—My memory will not serve me upon it ; it was the general board.

1700. Was not there a new system introduced at that time of referring bills to native directors ?—Perhaps you will allow me to read what I have written ; this bears upon the point. Circulars have been returned and minutes made on them to this effect : "I do not know the applicant ; ask a native director, and be guided by his opinion ;" so that involuntarily on my part, and with the knowledge of the European directors, all applications for advances by natives were only submitted to a native director.

1701. During the latter part of 1863, and until June 1864, the native directors consulted were Cowasjee Jehangeer and Premchund Roychund, were they not ?—Premchund Roychund succeeded Cowasjee Jehangeer as far as I know.

1702. You are right ; until June 1864, Cowasjee Jehangeer was consulted, and after him Premchund Roychund ?—Yes.

1703. Do you remember that practice being objected to by Mr. Foggo, one of the directors ?—Never.

1704. Cannot you recollect the name of a single director who authorized you to make discounts upon one name ?—No, I really cannot.

1705. Cash credits under the old system were granted upon the security of Government paper, railway shares, the interest on which was guaranteed by Government, or bullion, is that not so ?—On Government paper and railway shares under Government guarantee.

1706. And bullion ?—Yes.

1707. Were not they always entered in the "Application Book" ?—Always.

1708. The "Application Book" should contain every application for a cash credit or a loan ?—It should.

1709. Shortly after Act No. 10 of 1863 passed you commenced the system of granting cash credits upon the simple promissory notes of the borrowers, did you not ?—Yes.

1710. When do you first remember to have done that ? Perhaps looking at that book will refresh your memory (handing Exhibit A 33 to the witness). You see that, of the first two which were granted, one was to Roychund Deepchund, and the other was to Premchund Roychund.—The first date in the book is the 2d of October 1863.

1711. Yes ; that is after the Act passed. You began about that time to grant cash credits on personal security ?—I cannot state as to that. These appear only when they were paid off ; as to date, I cannot exactly state when the first was.

1712. This was a book kept by Mr. De Ga (you must recollect it), and all cash credits granted on personal security were entered in it ?—I never saw the book, and do not know what it refers to at all.

1713. He kept it for his own protection ; you do not recollect it ?—I never saw such a book.

1714. You never saw that book before ?—Never ; it seems to have been a private book for memoranda. It has no initials of mine, or anything of that sort.

1715. I will show you some presently which I think have your initials. When did you begin to grant cash credits on personal security ?—I forget the exact date. You can refer to the minutes.

1716. Was it not shortly after the passing of the Act ? there is nothing on the minutes till the 2d June 1864.—That was the first of the cash credits that I recollect.

1717. We have distinct evidence that cash credits were granted on personal security, and began in August 1863. We have the evidence of the men who actually received them, and here they are kept by Mr. De Ga and the authorities in the bank. You saw this book and it tallies with all the accounts. You do not recollect cash credits being granted in 1863 upon personal security? I do not recollect. Was it not an overdrawn account?

1718. No, these were cash credits.—That was the first time when the board sanctioned it to my knowledge.

1719. Are you prepared to say that you never granted a cash credit without security till the board sanctioned it on the 2d June 1864?—Yes; as far as my memory helps me out.

1720. Do you mean to say that all the entries in the books (we have recently examined these entries) are incorrect?—I was not aware until now of these.

1721. Did not Premchund Roychund himself come and ask you (he has sworn it himself) to begin this system of granting cash credits on one name without security? I will read to you the questions which I put to him, and his answers.

The President here read as follows from the Minutes of Evidence taken by the Commission in India:

"(President.) Are you aware that Mr. Blair commenced granting cash credits upon personal security in August or September 1863? A. Yes. Q. I believe that you and your father were the first two persons who ever took the benefit of that resolution of his to grant cash credits upon personal security. A. So it appears in the book. Q. You each of you got a cash credit of one lakh; did you not? A. My father got a lakh. Q. You both got a cash credit in August or September, your father got a lakh and you also got a lakh. Mr. Blair had never done this before, you know? A. I do not know that at all. Q. But your father was the broker of the bank, and all your life you have had transactions with the bank; you must have known that they had never done so before? A. Not before, not while Mr. Stuart was there. Q. How was it that you and your father contrived to induce Mr. Blair to break through the old rule of the bank? A. I did not induce him; it was his own wish that the bank should advance upon personal security. Q. Was there a bank director in August or September 1863, who knew that Mr. Blair was advancing money upon personal security? A. I do not know. Q. I want to know how it was that you and your father managed to get Mr. Blair to break through the rule of the Bank of Bombay, by granting cash credits upon personal security? A. The rule of the bank was to advance upon two names;" and so on.

(President.) At last I got it out of him; he replied as follows: "It was this; some shroffs and native merchants, and European merchants also, did not like to bring their names before the directors of the bank, and the directors of the bank could get out no discounts at all. I said to Mr. Blair, if the bank would grant loans upon personal security he would get plenty of persons to come forward to take loans."

The examination continued thus: "Q. You suggested then to Mr. Blair that if he would grant cash credits upon personal security he would get plenty of applicants to come forward? A. Yes, and Mr. Blair said he would let me know after he had consulted with the directors. Q. Did Mr. Blair consult the directors? A. I do not know that, Sir; he must have done so: how could he advance upon personal security without consulting the directors at all. Q. How do you know he did consult any one but yourself? A. He told me himself that he would consult with some of the directors, and let me know the result. Q. You knew most of the directors of the bank at that time? A. All of them. Q. Can you say that any of them knew that cash credits were granted upon personal security? A. I think they knew it. Q. What directors knew it? A. I do not know that."

1722. (President.) You observe that he distinctly stated it, and the bank books show that it was so?—I do not recollect it at all.

1723. We find a great number of large transactions, some of them for as much as two lakhs, and a great many others down to 1864. Premchund Roychund came again for two lacs before that time.—My memory does not bear me out so far as that.

1724. Then do you mean to contradict the evidence, furnished by the books themselves, of that fact?—I cannot do that. I was frequently away.

1725. You were not away at this time. Here are the initials of Mr. Ryland, the deputy secretary, all through this book (referring to A 33).—So I see, but I do not recollect that authority having been given before the resolution of the board passed it.

1726. I ask you, as the secretary of the bank, whether they could have been lending a lac and two lacs day after day without you knowing it?—By the deputy secretary, certainly.

1727. Would you not have known it the next day, when you looked at the accounts?—But I could not look at the accounts constantly.

1728. But you were the supervisor of the whole bank, and you certainly knew that large sums like those were going out?—Yes; but they must have been recommended.

1729. That is not the question. I only want the fact, whether they were granted before 1864?—I was not aware of it.

1730. When do you say that authority was first given for it?—As far as my recollection goes, from that resolution, which you will find on the minutes.

1731. Of the 2d June 1864?—So you say, I do not recollect the date. These memoranda I see are called promissory notes as well as cash credits. I do not understand that book at all.

1732. The personal security consisted of a promissory note, and that was the system introduced, viz., granting cash credits upon the personal security of a promissory note; that system was adopted by the board on the 2d June 1864. May I ask who suggested that resolution of the 2d of June (handing the Exhibit A 48 to the witness)? In whose handwriting is this?—That is mine. I may state that it was long under discussion by the directors before it was adopted.

1733. Will you kindly answer the question?—The front is mine, and the second page is like Mr. Ryland's writing.

1734. Is not the alteration in your handwriting?—Certainly, but not the whole page.

1735. That is in Mr. Ryland's handwriting, is it?—Yes.

1736. Whose initials are those (handing the Exhibit A 33 to the witness)?—Indeed I can hardly tell you. They are not mine.

1737. (Mr. Melvill.) Are not those words "given up" in your handwriting?—No, they are in the handwriting of some clerk. It refers to securities, I fancy.

1738. (President.) I know what it refers to. The original suggestion was as follows: "It is respectfully suggested that the number of credit accounts might be greatly increased if the system practised in Scotland was introduced, namely, on a bond for a certain amount being signed by the party requiring the accommodation, together with two good names as security." Did not that original statement give a correct description of the Scotch system of cash credits?—Various banks have their own ways in Scotland, I fancy.

1739. I ask you as a matter of fact whether it is not the Scotch system always to require two names as security?—That I really do not know.

1740. You were educated in Scotland, were you not, and you were employed in a bank there before you went out to India?—Yes.

1741. Then how was it that you (for you admit that it is your handwriting) altered the statement, and made it appear that the Scotch system was "with, or without good names as security according to the credit of the party," striking out the words that it required two good names?—It was with the sanction of the directors.

1742. Am I to understand that you made that alteration by the direction of the directors?—Certainly.

1743. At the board meeting?—At the meeting, and it would be copied into the minutes and signed at the next meeting by the directors.

1744. What director authorized you to make that alteration?—The board.

1745. I want to know what director authorized it?—If you will kindly refer to the minutes you will see what directors were present.

1746. Perhaps you will look at them, and then perhaps you will recollect the names?—That is impossible, because the resolutions which were passed were all passed by the directors; the directors present agreed.

1747. Possibly there was some discussion, and somebody proposed it?—That is possible; but I cannot recollect the discussion which took place so long ago.

1748. Will you look at the names; you were present on that occasion?—(After referring to the minutes) Seven directors were present.

1749. You do not recollect under whose authority you made that alteration?—The general board of directors.

1750. This statement goes on to say, "At present "no person, in however good credit, can have a credit "account with the bank unless he can lodge Govern- "ment paper as security, besides signing a bond which "has to be renewed every three months." We shall examine Mr. Ryland about this matter. I ask you is that a correct statement?—That was the old system.

1751. Was that the system which was adopted after the Act 10 of 1863 was introduced; it had been passed nearly a year then?—I really do not recollect. Will you kindly read it over again?

1752. "At present no person, in however good "credit, can have a credit account with the bank "unless he can lodge Government paper as security, "besides signing a bond which has to be renewed "every three months." Is that a correct statement of the practice existing at that time?—It was the practice certainly.

1753. Then you utterly deny what appears in the bank's books, and what appears from the evidence of all the witnesses, that cash credits were granted on personal security in 1863, and in 1864 previously to June?—No, it was a regular practice after June 1864.

1754. I am asking you as to the practice previously to June 1864. I want to have it distinctly that you deny the evidence of all the books, and all the witnesses, showing that cash credits were granted upon personal security previously to June 1864?—It is impossible to deny it, the books must show; the books are there, and they must be accurate.

1755. Then if the books must be accurate, did not you know the fact that those cash credits were granted?—As I stated a little while ago I was not aware of it, as far as my recollection goes, unless it was by the sanction of the directors.

1756. Do you mean to say that anybody could have conducted that business, and have granted all those cash credits, without your knowing it?—There are many things which it is impossible to know.

1757. There were sums of two lacs, one and a half lac, and never less than a lac going out.—They must have had authority to grant it.

1758. Now that you have looked into the matter, do you still say that you were unaware of the existence of that practice before June 1864?—I have it here (alluding to his notes) from 1863; my memory does not bear me back.

1759. Do you recollect that in 1863 cash credits were granted upon personal security?—I cannot recollect; one person was not sufficient in 1863.

1760. We have already got the evidence with respect to the discounts. I am now talking of the cash credits?—I cannot recollect particularly as to the cash credits.

1761. Do you recollect in October 1863, directing Mr. De Ga not to enter cash credits granted on personal security in the application book?—I never gave such an order. I never knew of it until I came to Scotland, and Mr. Robertson told me that De Ga had made such an assertion.

1762. How can you account for the fact that none of these cash credits appear in the application book until after that resolution of June 1864?—I cannot account for it at all; they should have been there.

1763. Do you think that anybody would have ventured to have left out those applications upon personal security, unless it had been sanctioned by you?—Not unless it was by omission; they must have been omitted; it was not authorized by me.

1764. You never authorized that omission?—Never.

1765. You deny that you told Mr. De Ga not to enter them in the application book?—Most certainly.

1766. You will see that there are Mr. D. Robertson's initials also in this little blue book?—So I see.

1767. There can be no more doubt about the practice than there is of our existence?—The authority must have been given by the directors.

1768. Then it must have been passed through you?—The deputy secretary was acting for me at the time, but certainly I should have known of it if it was the fact.

1769. Did you ever see these interest books (handing Exhibits A 28, A 29, and A 30, to the witness), showing the interest accruing upon these loans?—Yes; some of the interest is of my marking.

1770. Those are cash credits upon personal security, and that is the interest on them. Can you now doubt that you were aware of the existence of cash credits on personal security previously to June 1864? We have it in evidence that those books were the books kept by Mr. De Ga to show the interest which was due, and when it became due, on these cash credits.—Were not all these upon Government paper?

1771. Some may have been, but some were not?—They must have been granted upon undoubted information of the security of the people by consulting the directors.

1772. That is not the point; what I want to know is, whether after having seen these books, and seen your own initials to them, you can doubt any longer, for a moment, that you must have known of the fact of these cash credits being granted previously to June 1864?—That is evidence itself that it must have been so, but it was certainly on the authority of some of the directors.

1773. That is another point; I simply want to know whether you knew of it?—It must have been so.

1774. Then if you knew of it, how is it that you could have assented to this statement, "At present, no person in however good credit, can have a credit account with the bank unless he can lodge Government paper as security, besides signing a bond which has to be renewed every three months"?—That was not correct—I cannot recollect it.

1775. We will now go to loans under the old Act; they were granted upon the same security as cash credits, were they not; namely, Government paper, and bullion, and railway shares?—Yes, under the old Act, just the same as the cash credits.

1776. Under the new Act you began to lend money upon promissory notes and bonds, did you not?—On promissory notes.

1777. Of a single person?—On promissory notes. I do not know that bonds were prepared even at the time when I left.

1778. Yes, they were. We will show you one or two as specimens. Here is a bond (producing Exhibit A 51), upon which the sum 62,500*l.* was lent. This is Cursetjee Furdoonjee's. Look at this (handing another paper to the witness). Whose initials are those?—I do not know; they are not my initials.

1779. This is a bond by Messrs. Brown and Best for 25,000*l.* (Exhibit marked A 131.) This bond is drawn in this way: "We have deposited in the Bank of Bombay personal security (that means a promissory note) to the amount of Company's rupees, two lacs and fifty thousand, as security for the repayment of two and a half lacs advanced by them to us with interest thereon at the rate of Company's rupees 14 per cent. per annum, and we agree that in case default should be made in payment at the expiration of the said period, interest shall then be charged at and after the rate of Company's rupees 12 per cent. per annum." Do you remark that? So that if they failed to pay at the due date they were to pay less interest. There is the same condition in this (handing Exhibit A 51 to the witness).—These, I think, are just the same.

Mr. J. Blair.
16 Nov. 1868.

1780. But you remark that in case of default in payment at the due date the person is to pay less interest, and instead of putting "personal security" you put "P.S."?—That is personal security.

1781. Did you personally superintend the preparation of these documents?—No, I did not, that was for the solicitors.

1782. Do you mean to say that the solicitors drew up these documents?—They were old forms before I joined the bank.

1783. But they are filled up very incorrectly?—I never saw them, to my knowledge.

1784. Do you say it was the duty of the solicitor to fill up these forms?—No, he had drawn out the original form.

1785. Who filled up these forms?—That I never saw.

1786. In whose handwriting are they?—The words "1st July 1865" in A 51 are in Mr. Robertson's writing, the others I do not know.

1787. You are not able to say who filled up those bonds in this careless manner?—I do not know. I do not know the handwriting.

1788. Do you consider those proper documents to advance upon?—Certainly; they are stamped.

1789. Do you think that they are proper documents containing the letters "P.S." for "personal security," and, in default of payment, less interest having to be paid than before?—That is not done by me.

1790. First of all, I ask you whether you consider those proper documents?—They were legal, certainly.

1791. Do you think they reflect credit upon the administration of the bank?—If the names were considered a perfect security, I consider so.

1792. I am now speaking about the forms of the bonds, how they were filled up.—But there may have been other bonds in preparation, and we could not perhaps get them prepared in time.

1793. Did not you consider it your duty as secretary to see these forms properly filled up?—These were done apparently by the deputy secretary.

1794. Do you mean to say that it was not your duty, but that it was the duty of the deputy secretary, to see these forms filled up?—I simply passed them; it was impossible for me to do everything.

1795. Then you say that the deputy secretary, Mr. Robertson, filled up those forms?—It was his duty to fill them up. Very often the form was filled up by a clerk.

1796. But you see Mr. Robertson's handwriting there?—I do.

1797. Were not these loans granted sometimes for long periods?—There was no period mentioned, it was simply to bring business to the bank, and the directors had power to call them up on demand, so that, when money was required, they had power to call them up whenever they liked.

1798. Shortly after the passing of the Act were not loans granted for longer periods than three months?—There was no date specified.

1799. Yes, in the case of Kursondass Madhowdass, who had the great loan of twenty-one lacs, he got that loan in August 1864, and it was understood that it was not to be repaid till the 1st of July 1865, the opium settling day; is not that so?—I am not aware of that case. Did I pass it?

1800. I ask you first of all as to the general practice, and then when I can get no answer from you on that point I ask you as to a particular case?—No date was specified to my knowledge.

1801. Do you mean to say that in every document every loan was made repayable on demand?—They bear that on the surface.

1802. But I ask you what the practice was?—The practice was to grant on demand.

1803. We have two cases before us; Brown and Best's is one for 14 days?—There may be exceptions.

1804. And Cursetjee Furdoonjee's, granted on the 28th of December 1864, is payable on the 1st July 1865 (again handing Exhibit A 51 to the witness).—That is Mr. Robertson's writing.

1805. Never mind that. I am asking what the practice of the bank was.—It was the practice to make it payable on demand, and we had the power of getting the money back whenever the directors chose.

1806. I ask you whether it was not one of the alterations in the practice to make loans occasionally (I do not mean to say that it was done often) for very long periods?—I was not aware that there was any case where it was fixed for a long period.

1807. Here is one; do you doubt the existence of it? Here is a case of a loan for more than six months.—That decidedly bears it upon its face.

1808. Were not you aware of that practice?—I was not aware of the specified dates, because the stamp there would require to be altered.

1809. Then you were not at all aware of the practice?—Not of fixed dates, but simply on demand. I will read my own private notes which bear upon it; it is so long ago I cannot recollect with regard to the whole of these transactions.

1810. You do not know about it; that is quite enough.—I should like this to be correct. I do not suppose that you are in any great hurry, and it is as well to get it right. It was the case that the bank was obliged to dispense with all the Government paper which it was accustomed to take formerly.

1811. Do you recollect any loans being granted for long periods?—I do not think that they were granted for any fixed period.

1812. Is it not extraordinary that a person holding the position of secretary of the bank should not be aware of such things being done?—Cash credits there are none.

1813. I am not talking of cash credits now, I am talking of loans. You do not recollect loans being granted for a long period?—I certainly do not recollect any of long dates, but I presume that it was quite allowable by the new charter.

1814. That is another point. I am only asking you as to the practice. Was not it also the practice, after the passing of that Act, to lend money without any other security than a promissory note or bond?—On personal security.

1815. The security of a promissory note or bond, without any other security, was not that the practice?—I think that I said that it was the practice on personal security.

1816. I have gone through all the loans granted from the 1st of June 1864 to the 1st May 1865, which are now outstanding, and I find that in that time there are still 101 loans outstanding.—From when?

1817. From the 1st of June 1864 to the 1st of May 1865. Some of them represent more than one loan, but that is the number of transactions. Are you surprised to hear that 82 of those 101 loans were granted originally without any security whatever, except a promissory note or bond?—I should suppose that they were on personal security which was considered good.

1818. You are not surprised to hear that 82 were granted upon that security?—Not at all; in fact we had no other than the native business to fall back upon.

1819. I have analyzed these loans; one was granted on an insufficient amount of Government paper, and nine were granted on the security of shares at that period.—At what period?

1820. Previously to the 1st of May 1865.—On the security of shares?

1821. Yes; I am coming to that presently.—None except as collateral securities.

1822. Some of these transactions were loans on the security of shares, and others were on no security. That is an analysis of the 101 cases outstanding during your administration, that is, down to the end of April 1865?—Exactly.

1823. 82 of the 101 cases at this moment are without any security having been taken originally. I do not mean to say that Mr. Robertson did not get security for them afterwards, but that is another thing. You are not surprised at this analysis, showing that 82 of those loans were granted without any security at that time. You said that that was the first case of personal security which you remembered?—Certainly; or rather the consulting director brought these cases to us.

1824. I am coming to the question of the directors afterwards. Did you consider that a proper system of banking, namely, to grant loans on personal security?—Yes.

1825. Of the borrower alone?—One person?

1826. One person or one firm?—Certainly, if they were considered wealthy enough.

1827. As to the loans on shares, when did you begin to advance money on shares?—There was no money advanced on shares during my time.

1828. Let us go back a little. Was not there a resolution passed on the 6th of August 1863, stating that no money should be advanced on shares unless the case was brought before the board and received their sanction?—I forget the date; you will find it upon the minutes. There was a resolution that it should not be done without the sanction of the directors; it was under discussion then.

1829. Do you not remember getting a letter from the Bank of Bengal about that time, shortly after the passing of the Act, advising you strongly not to lend upon the shares of those ephemeral companies which were then starting up?—No, I do not recollect it. I recollect a letter from the Bank of Bengal at the time of the resolution stating, as far as my recollection goes, that they would advance upon the shares of the Oriental Bank.

1830. It is the same letter, but I am not talking of that part of it.—I cannot recollect what was in it altogether.

1831. Did it not wind up with a strong piece of advice from the Bank of Bengal to you not to lend on shares of the ephemeral companies which were then starting up?—I am not aware.

1832. When did you in point of fact begin to advance on shares?—We did not advance on shares.

1833. When did you begin the practice of lending on shares in this way, lending money to a party upon the understanding that he was to deposit the shares for safe custody. When did you begin that practice of lending monies to parties, it being understood that the shares were to be deposited with the bank for safe custody?—That was the first loan, I think, of Cama's. I will read this to you. When the loans were granted Premchund said that the parties were undoubted, but that to make it doubly secure they would lodge securities of the Elphinstone Land and the Back Bay companies. I stated at once that I was, as he knew, not allowed to advance on any shares without the directors' sanction. He answered that he did not mean the advances to be made on the shares at all, but they were to be kept for safety, without the slightest risk to the bank, they being available by the directors at the proper time, when they thought necessary to use them as collateral security. That was for Cama's or Dr. Diver's loan as far as I recollect.

1834. Then it was the suggestion of Premchund that you should adopt that practice?—Certainly; he was consulting director.

1835. When did that system of lending money (the shares being deposited for safe custody) commence?—I have just stated that it was when Cama's loan was granted.

1836. Do you mean Byramjee Hormusjee Cama's loan?—Yes, or Dr. Diver's.

1837. Do you not recollect the great loans to Kursondass Madhowdass and Co., of 21 lacs?—No, I do not recollect it.

1838. They were made in the months of August and September 1864?—I was in Poona at that time, in August and September, as far as I recollect. You will find my initials to the loans which were passed by me.

1839. You mean to say that you had nothing to do with those loans?—I do not recollect the name at all; but you will see at once by my initials.

1840. But you admit the practice clearly?—Certainly.

1841. That is to say, that there was in the year 1864 a practice of lending money on promissory notes; shares bought with the money being deposited for safe custody?—Just as I have stated.

1842. That being so, were you aware that shares were openly advanced on, before April 1865, at the Kalbadevi branch?—No, I was not aware of it.

1843. Do you mean to say that Mr. Bullock never told you that?—Never.

1844. Or did he ever tell you that he adopted the same practice as you did, namely, lending money, and having the share certificates deposited for safe custody?—No, he never told me anything with regard to that, as far as I recollect.

1845. Just let me ask your attention to a letter which I have here of Mr. Bullock's of the 22d December 1864, addressed "To the Secretary and Treasurer, Bank of Bombay." It contains the following passage: "We included these transactions with our fixed loans, but as they fall due we do not renew them, and collateral securities will in future be taken with private bills for safe custody, in the manner in which this is done at head office."—What is the date of that letter?

1846. The 22d December 1864. Is it not clear from that letter that the same custom prevailed?—Have you the letter signed by me to which that is an answer?

1847. I do not know that it is signed by you.—I think that I was at Ahmedabad at that time.

1848. You told us that you were absent from Bombay from the 16th of January till the 14th of March 1865, and that you were absent in 1864 for the Poona races in August and September, five weeks.—Then it must have been in 1863 that I was away.

1849. This is a letter of the 22d December 1864, addressed to you, in which Mr. Bullock says, "Collateral securities will in future be taken with private bills for safe custody in the manner in which this is done at head office." Is it not therefore clear that this practice of lending money and having the shares deposited for safe custody prevailed both at the head office and at Kalbadevi in December 1864?—Similar to what is stated here by Premchund's advice.

1850. I want to fix the time?—I have not got it.

1851. I have fixed it by that letter. Then there is another letter from Mr. D. Robertson.—It is stated in the other letter, I think, that the certificates are only for safety.

1852. You were absent at that time; it was just a few days before your return; but I am only giving you further evidence of the practice which was existing. This letter (Exhibit A 122.) is from Mr. D. Robertson, who was acting for you at the time: "My dear Cowasjee, We do not, as a rule, advance upon any shares; but in some instances we have granted loans on personal security, and have received Back Bay and Elphinstone shares from the parties for deposit in the bank for safe custody."—That is signed by Mr. Robertson.

1853. It is.—I think that that must have been the letter which Mr. Melvill alluded to in Bombay, as if I had stated it.

Mr. J. Blair.
16 Nov. 1868.

(Mr. Melvill.) That was not the letter. I referred to a letter (Exhibit A 37) written by you.

1854. (President.) What I want to fix is this. We have this practice existing in 1864 and in the early part of 1865, and we have that fact clearly established, I think, upon documents which cannot be disputed. Was not that, in point of fact, under a thin disguise, lending the money on shares?—No, certainly not. As it is stated here, it could not be done without the directors' sanction.

1855. That is another point. We will have the directors' sanction by and bye, but I want to get the fact. What I want to get from you is this; was not it, in fact, under a thin disguise, lending the money on shares?—No; because the shares were not lodged for a long time afterwards; the people were considered undoubted.

1856. Was not the agreement at the time that a promissory note was to be given, and that the share certificates were to be deposited for safe custody?—I do not recollect.

1857. It is impossible to dispute that.—I think that what I have stated here as to Premchund is recorded.

1858. We have the fact that it was his suggestion. —Yes, that it was he who did it.

1859. We come next to the board minute of the 12th April 1865. Will you kindly look at it. Here is the resolution of the 12th of April 1865 (handing the minute book to the witness). Do you remember the passing of that resolution?—This first part of it refers to the resolution of 6th August 1863, to which you have referred formerly.

1860. Do you remember the passing of that resolution of 12th April 1865. It is a most important one?—Yes, certainly.

1861. What necessity was there for that resolution, if you in fact were doing this before?—It was fixing the amounts to be advanced. Formerly there were no particulars as to amount, or anything. It simply corroborates what I stated before.

1862. It was fixing the amount which you might advance?—Yes, as far as I recollect, unless the directors had any other reason.

1863. Who brought forward that resolution?—I do not recollect that; it was a general resolution of the directors.

1864. You do not seem to recollect any of these most important things, which we should have thought, as secretary, you would have told us?—It was passed by the general board; the directors all agreed.

1865. That resolution must have taken a great deal of time to prepare; somebody must have brought that resolution already prepared into the room. Was it your suggestion?—It was not my suggestion, certainly.

1866. Who did suggest that resolution?—The directors on some applications; you will find that there would be applications for loans at that date.

1867. Which director framed that resolution?—I cannot state which director.

1868. Was there any discussion on that resolution? —As far as I recollect there were certain companies which were objected to as regarded their being brought under the headings here. There are seven companies here stated; and there was certainly some discussion with regard to others, as to whether money might be advanced upon their shares; that was so to the best of my recollection, and it was a general topic.

1869. Was not the policy of the measure at all discussed?—It must have been.

1870. Did you think it a wise or prudent measure to rescind the old resolution?—I was the servant of the directors, acting under them.

1871. You did not entertain any opinion upon it yourself?—I was simply the secretary under paid directors.

1872. Did any of the directors know of this practice which had previously existed, of lending money and taking share certificates in deposit for safe custody?—I cannot state what they knew privately.

1873. Was there any discussion upon the propriety of lending on shares, the calls upon which were not paid up?—Yes, I think there was, as far as my recollection goes, with regard to Port Cannings. I do not think that they were allowed. I think that that was the only discussion, as far as my memory serves me; there was a discussion with regard to them, to the best of my recollection.

1874. Was there any discussion as to the propriety of lending money on the premia of shares? You see that that resolution authorizes you to advance on the premia of shares.—It does, on the value of each share.

1875. Was there any discussion on the propriety of advancing on the premia of shares?— Against it?

1876. For or against it, was there any discussion? —Not that I am aware of; they were all for it.

1877. Was there any discussion on the propriety of leaving it entirely to the secretary's discretion as to lending on such shares?—It was to be on Premchund's judgment; he was to bring the chief over, as far as I recollect; he was the consulting director.

1878. Was it said at the time of the discussion that Premchund was to be consulted; that you were to exercise your discretion subject to Premchund's opinion?—I think that it was, as far as my recollection goes; that it was only to be granted to first-class applicants; and Premchund said, that being stated, that he would take care that they were all first class; he was present at the board; that is, to the best of my recollection.

1879. Cannot you recollect, now that your memory is refreshed about it, who was the author of that resolution?—No, I really cannot; it seemed general.

1880. Were you the author of it?—No, I was not.

1881. Was the chairman, Mr. Hannay, the author of it?—I have told you already that I do not know.

1882. Will you tell us why those particular companies were selected?—No, I really cannot; it was because they were considered good, I should suppose.

1883. And can you tell us why, having been selected, that selection was not subsequently adhered to?—No, I cannot; it should have been adhered to.

1884. Can you tell why it was, that the bank took the shares of many other companies in addition?—I cannot tell you now; I am not aware that that was done in any time.

1885. To go a step further, were you aware of any practice of lending money on the promise that when certain shares were bought with it, the certificates of those shares should be deposited as security?— Never.

1886. You undertake to say that that was never done in your time?—I never was aware of it.

1887. Do not you remember a loan to Messrs. Taylor, Diver, and Atmaram Madhowjee? Mr. Diver in his evidence makes the following statement, which I will read in order to refresh your memory. "Premchund also told me that the Bank of Bombay would advance money upon Bombay Reclamation Company's shares at the then market price until the 1st July 1865, upon a bill or note falling due then, or on the 30th June, I forget which, without any margin whatever. The joint promissory note of Mr. Taylor, Atmaram Madhowjee, and myself was to be given; Premchund told me that the bank was prepared to do it, and he would arrange it; I conferred with Mr. Taylor and Atmaram Madhowjee on the matter, and the promissory note was sent to us for signature; I forget who sent it; I think Mr. Blair. I never saw Mr. Blair about making the advance; I believe Taylor and Atmaram Madhowjee did not see him either. It was all arranged by Premchund."—Exactly.

The President continues to read from Mr. Diver's evidence as follows:—"I signed the promissory note; I was recommended by Premchund to do it, and I did it. I do not know what was done with the money. I did not see the share certificates. Twenty Bombay Reclamation Company's share certificates were to be deposited with the Bank of Bombay. It was represented to us that that security was to be deposited; the certificates of twenty Bombay Reclamation Company's shares. I did not arrange about lodging the security, but I understood that it was to be given. The bank lent the full amount for the purpose of the 20 shares being bought. I understood Premchund to have bought the shares, to have lodged the certificates with the bank, and to have received the money."

1888. (President.) Are you prepared to dispute the fact that that sum of 5,50,000 rupees was lent for the express purpose of buying shares, the certificates of which shares were to be deposited as security when bought?—Certainly, I am prepared.

1889. If such a practice was prevalent, would it not have tended to encourage the wildest speculation?—Certainly.

1890. And the security itself would have been insufficient, inasmuch as it would only have represented, at a very exceptional time, the money actually lent?—They were considered quite good for the amount when Premchund recommended the loan; in fact, so much so, that they had been buying Government property; they bought the Government house at Dapoorie, as I understood.

1891. Not at that time. Do you know anything about the monthly returns to Government, do you remember them?—Certainly.

1892. Did they set out the securities; you remember the form in which they were made?—They had the headings of the various loans at the top, on whatever security they were granted. Government paper, and railway shares with the Government guarantee, I think had a separate heading, and there was also one for personal security.

1893. "On deposit of Government securities," and "on deposit of other description of securities;" was not that the form of the return every month sent to the Government (handing Exhibit A 25[A] to the witness)?—Yes; but there was one additional heading as far as my memory serves me, namely, "on personal security."

1894. There is no other printed form than that?—But they always, I think, wrote "personal security."

1895. After Mr. Stuart returned, and became secretary again, he objected to that form, and then it was altered.—I am positive that "personal securities" was added to that. You will get the returns from the Government. I am positive of it. I was asking Mr. Robertson as to that, and he confirmed it. Our chief business was on personal security, I may say, after the Government paper was taken away.

1896. Did not Mr. Ravenscroft make an objection to you one day about this form?—I do not recollect Mr. Ravenscroft doing that. Was he a director of the bank?

1897. He was a Government director for four and a half months, and he deposed before us on the last day when we took evidence that he objected to this form.—Then it would be in the minutes.

1898. It is not in the minutes; he did not say that he did it at the board. Are you prepared to deny the fact that he did object to the form?—I do not recollect Mr. Ravenscroft ever mentioning the subject.

1899. Are you really prepared to say that the form was ever sent in to Government in any other shape than this (referring to Exhibit A 25[A])?—I am nearly positive that "personal security" was mentioned.

1900. But I want you to be quite sure.—It is not printed there, unless there were other forms, but I am nearly positive that I have seen "personal security" in the heading sent in to the Government. Perhaps Mr. Birch, who was accountant general at the time, will recollect. Our business was chiefly on personal security after the Government paper was taken away.

1901. There is no doubt that the heading of "personal security" ought to have been there?—In my impression it was.

1902. (Mr. Melvill.) Was the weekly statement a copy of this?—Yes, but more particular.

1903. (President.) What was the practice as to renewals during your time?—I do not recollect that there was any particular practice; it depended entirely on individuals.

1904. Was not the practice in fact to leave it entirely to the secretary whether notes should be renewed or not?—He had a discretionary power, certainly.

1905. Perhaps we had better defer that until we come to another point, namely, your powers, and how you exercised them. How do you say that the powers of the secretary were defined?—I will look at the paper which I have in my hand in order to refresh my memory. This is the commencement of it, and I must read it. (Witness read as follows.) The practice followed in 1860 to 1863 in granting loans, discounts, &c., was to send a circular to the committee for the week, which consisted of two Europeans and one native director. One of the Europeans was a Government director. As the applicants were chiefly natives, the European directors were generally guided by the opinion expressed by their native colleague. The Government director could not know the means and standing of one in a hundred of the applicants, in fact he rarely knew them even by name. The mercantile director, of course, had means of information generally in his own office from the broker, but I do not know whether that source of information was often taken advantage of, as it might have led to the exposure of the bank's transactions, and the names of applicants for money in the native bazaar. So that almost invariably the European mercantile directors agreed with the opinion of the native directors. The native directors were men who commanded the respect and enjoyed the confidence of the shareholders of the bank who elected them, and all elections were made by a general meeting of shareholders called by the regular advertisements in the Government Gazette and newspapers.

The foregoing is only my own opinion, but if the European directors are asked, I think that they will corroborate what I have said. Circulars have been returned, or minutes made, such as the following: "I do not know the applicant, ask the native director, and be guided by his opinion." So that involuntarily on my part, and with the knowledge of the European directors, all applications for advances from the natives were duly submitted to a native director. The private lists were discontinued about 1863, as it was found difficult to find out the standing of the natives, owing to the great changes which had taken place, in most instances from the enormous wealth which they had made from profits upon cotton. It was also well known that persons did not like their applications to be submitted to the directors, and they preferred going to the other banks, where it was not necessary to do so. Europeans especially did not like their transactions to be known by the mercantile directors of the bank, and therefore the bank lost a great deal of business, and greater power was then granted to the secretary to discount and purchase what he considered safe bills on the authority of one director. Mostly all the loans and discounts granted were on the recommendation of one or other of the directors. Lacs and lacs of bills were consequently purchased on Calcutta and Madras, where formerly little business was done, and great profit was thus derived without the loss of one rupee. During all the time that Cowasjee Jehangeer Readymoney was a director, and who was the means of bringing so much business to the bank, no loss was sustained. So that the system was naturally considered to work well, and on his retirement the bank was considered very fortunate in getting Premchund to succeed him; and even Cowasjee, when in doubt about any applicant for money, repeatedly asked me to refer to Premchund before the latter became a director, and, to the best of my recollection, said, in one of his notes to me, that Premchund knew more about the position of the natives of India than any other man in the country.

1906. Then I understand you to say in substance that in the course of practice, finding little assistance from the European directors in ascertaining the credit of natives, you involuntarily adopted the system of applying to a native director?—Exactly. In fact I was obliged to do so. I had no other course.

1907. And you applied to Cowasjee Jehangeer for advice down to June 1864, when he resigned?—Yes.

1908. And after Cowasjee Jehangeer resigned, you followed the advice of Premchund Roychund?—Yes; with the knowledge of the directors certainly. The same system was therefore adopted with Premchund as with Cowasjee Jehangeer, and all loans and discounts recommended by him were at once accepted. So much good business was he considered to have brought to the bank, that when he resigned (that is, Premchund) in 1864, he was requested by the directors to reconsider his resignation, and he wrote in answer, saying, that he thought it better to resign, as at that time he was frequently absent from Bombay, but would at any time continue to give his advice, and bring the same business to the bank. The above, of course, is, to the best of my recollection, what was said by him. The foregoing was the acknowledged system from 1863 to 1865, when I left the bank.

1909. Then I understand that in point of fact during the latter part of 1864, and until your departure, you acted upon the advice of Premchund, and not upon the advice of the directors in granting loans; is that so?—Upon his advice, of course agreed to by the directors.

1910. It was agreed to by them that you should take his advice?—Certainly, it was acknowledged by them.

1911. In the latter part of 1864 and the beginning of 1865, believing it to be in accordance with the wish of the directors, you consulted Premchund as to granting advances, and were guided by his advice?—Certainly; in fact he brought all these.

1912. What did you suppose to be the limit as to amount of your power of making advances?—It was discretionary, there was no limit fixed. As I stated before, I have bought lacs and lacs of bills on Calcutta, 25 lacs at a time, and have never lost a rupee from that class of business.

1913. You were then in the habit of acting upon your own opinion?—On Premchund's opinion in purchasing those bills, certainly.

1914. You were in the habit of acting upon your own opinion supported by Premchund's advice?—Or another director.

1915. What other director did you ever consult between the 1st of July 1864 and the time of your retirement, which is the critical period in the bank's history?—I do not recollect that there were any other directors consulted. Premchund was the only one; he was the acknowledged consulting director then, on Cowasjee's retirement.

1916. Did you ever consult the chairman, Mr. Birch, as to loans?—As I stated before, you can hardly expect the Government directors to know anything about them.

1917. Did you ever consult Mr. Birch, the chairman, as to loans from the 1st of July 1864 till he went away at the end of February 1865?—I do not recollect having done so. Premchund or Cowasjee was the acknowledged consulting director. There is one thing which bears upon the point, and I will read it.

1918. I wish to know whom you consulted, and how far you acted upon the authority of the directors, Did you consult any other European director during that time?—I think that from the minutes you will see that.

1919. We find nothing in the minutes with regard to granting cash advances at that time?—No, but it rested upon the standing of individuals. Very few Europeans came to us, our business lay with the natives.

1920. Then you were not in the habit of consulting the European directors?—They could see the books and the abstracts from them.

1921. Did you consult any directors, and if so, name them?—I do not recollect consulting any other than Premchund, or an acknowledged native director.

1922. Did not the chairman, Mr. Birch, attend at the bank regularly?—Regularly every Thursday, unless absent from Bombay.

1923. Did he only attend on Thursdays?—No; some of the directors may have come at another time during the week, but not as a general practice.

1924. Then as a rule none of the directors visited the bank except upon Thursday, the board day?—Very seldom.

1925. What were the duties of the chairman?—Is it requisite that a servant acting under the directors should state what the directors should do?

1926. I ask you what were his duties, as a matter of fact; you must know, having been long employed in banks, what were the duties of the President?—I cannot tell you; the general supervision of the bank, certainly, to see that there was nothing wrong. The directors were the managers in fact, as is acknowledged in the charter.

1927. How could a great bank like this, with 2,100,000*l.* of capital, be managed by directors who only attended on Thursdays, except casually?—That lies not with me to state.

1928. Must not the result of that system be that the whole power of the bank would become vested in its officers?—No, certainly not, if there was an acknowledged consulting director, which was the case.

1929. The effect of the system was not to vest the management of the bank in the officers, but to vest it in the officers and one consulting director?—Yes.

1930. That was the real practical working of the system at the end of 1864 and the beginning of 1865?—Yes, and also in Cowasjee's time in 1863.

1931. Was not it a fact that you had implicit reliance on Premchund?—Certainly, it was acknowledged by every one, as is stated in that statement which I sent to you, everything is stated there as far as I recollect.

1932. Did it not go as far as this, that you actually gave him a book of blank forms of promissory notes to make use of, and to fill up with the names of the parties who desired to have loans from the bank?—I do not recollect having done so, he may have got it.

1933. This is the book (handing Exhibit R. 2. to the witness).—Yes, I know the form. Does he state that I gave it?

Yes.—It is very likely. As you have referred to the President, perhaps you will allow me to read this. The directors knew of the large loans granted, for I distinctly remember bringing the subject to the notice of the President at the board. He generally sat on my left. I sat on his right.

1934. Can you tell the time of that?—Yes, this will explain it; it was at the paying of the dividend in December 1864. I distinctly remember bringing the subject to the notice of the President at the board meeting when Mr. Lidderdale was so anxious to have the profit on the sale of the new property of the bank included in the dividend. The reserve at the time was under ten lacs; I said, "Recollect there are single loans granted for large sums, ten lacs," (referring to the one granted to Dr. Diver and the Camas,) and that the reserve ought to be largely increased, in which Mr. Birch agreed, and this in a great measure I thought was the means of getting the sum added to the reserve. On the breaking up of the board meeting I mentioned the circumstance to the deputy secretary, and the difficulty experienced in adding the amount to the reserve.

1935. The deputy secretary was Mr. Robertson?—His name was down as acting at the time, his room was adjoining.

1936. Almost all the directors tell us that they were quite unaware that these large loans were advanced on personal security. Is that the truth or is it not, according to your belief?—I should think that they knew, because the abstract book which contained all these transactions every morning was sent for their initials.

1937. You mean the daily book?—The little abstract book of the whole transactions of the preceding day, so that the large amounts must have been seen, and must have attracted their attention, and then they had all the books to ask for and to refer to.

1938. I have no doubt that, if they had looked at the daily book, they would have seen, for instance, on the 19th of October, that on the 18th ten lacs had been paid upon Bombay bills, but was there anything in that daily book to show them that those monies were advanced upon personal security merely ?—They were under various headings, such as "Cash Credits." No, it did not state particulars.

1939. Was there anything to tell them that no other security was taken ?—No, it was a mere abstract book, so that they had the power of making inquiry if they were not satisfied.

1940. Did the directors know, as a matter of fact, that you were advancing money either on loans, cash credits, or discounts for large amounts like five lacs and ten lacs, upon personal security merely ?—They must have known it from what I have read here of what occurred at the board meeting.

1941. That is something to the point, but have you any other ground for saying so ?—That is a pretty strong one, I think.

1942. Why were not those large loans mentioned in the application book ?—They should have been, certainly.

1943. But why were they not ?—It must have been an omission of those who had charge of it.

1944. Was not that the book which was laid upon the table at the directors' meetings ?—It was one of them.

1945. Then why did not these large loans appear in that application book ?—As I have stated, the entering clerks must have been blameable for that omission. I was never aware of it until I arrived in Edinburgh four months ago.

1946. Was not it your duty to see that it was properly kept up ?—Certainly not ; it was for various parties. I could not have my eye everywhere. Very often it was not sent up to me till I was going to the board.

1947. Did not you begin by telling us that all loans upon personal security down to April 1865 were entered in the application book ?—I understood that they were all entered there.

1948. Then if they were omitted it must have been done by some designing person without your knowledge, though you were the head of the establishment ?—I will not say by a designing person ; they must have been omissions.

1949. Can you account for any person omitting them honestly ?—I cannot make it out, because every person in the bank, every clerk, knew of these transactions ; it was openly done, and there was no secrecy in the transactions, and so much so, that on my return from Ajmere, on understanding that the constituents of the bank at the branches were endeavouring to obtain money at other branches, to which they had no right, I had a large book made up in the directors' room, with every individual who had had money from the bank ; every rupee was entered, so that they could see in a moment who had had money.

1950. Where is that book ?—It was in the bank. It was written up there. It was a large book.

1951. We asked for it, and they assured us that they never had any such book.—Mr. Duncan wrote it up in the directors' room.

1952. When was that ?—When I returned from Ajmere. I returned on the 14th of March 1865. I am only showing that there could be no secrecy, because every one in the bank knew of these transactions.

1953. It is very singular that we should not have seen that book.—It was a very large one. Every individual who had had a rupee from the bank was mentioned in the book.

1954. (Major Innes.) Can you tell us the name of the book ?—It was a general sort of ledger. It was a ledger for the use of the directors and the secretary, to see at a glance each individual who had had money from the bank.

1955-6. (President.) If that is the case, how can you account for it that Mr. Foggo should say that he never knew of such a thing as a cash credit being granted on personal security ? When was Mr. Foggo there ?—He was there till the end of December 1863.

1957. How do you account for it that Mr. Brown says that he never knew of these loans till June 1865 ; and how do you account for it that Mr. Lidderdale says that he never knew of them until just as he was going to China in May 1865 ? How can you possibly reconcile those statements with your present statement, that you had a book made up showing all these outstandings ?—All that I can say is that they should have seen them, or made themselves acquainted with them. It was not the work of a day.

1958. It is very singular that we should never have been able to see this book, we have had every book before us ?—You will find, I think, that Mr. Robertson will corroborate the existence of that book, and that Mr. Hannay will acknowledge having seen that book himself on the last day that I attended. They should have seen it. If you had asked for it I daresay that you would have got it.

1959. We asked particularly whether there was any book showing the outstandings of the bank, and were always told that there was no such book.—Not only so, but on the declaration of every dividend, a full statement was made, with the name of every individual, and the advances which had been granted were stated before the dividend was declared. A balance sheet of that was laid before the directors, and also a statement as to all the branches.

1960. (Mr. Melvill.) And particulars of the securities ?—The securities were in the hands of the auditors ; they had all the securities.

1961. (President.) Did this statement show the securities on which these sums were outstanding ?—I think that it had the heading "Cash credits on personal security," which are particularized. There were lists for discounts, and lists for loans of various sorts.

1962. Do you really mean to say that those gentlemen were speaking inaccurately, to say the least of it, when they said that they had no notion that large loans on personal security were being made ?—I do not mean to make any assertion of the kind.

1963. (Mr. Melvill.) Had they not a right to expect them all to be entered in the application book ?—I doubt very much whether the applications are very often recorded. I tell you honestly that until I came to Edinburgh I was not aware that the loans were not all in that book ; they certainly should have been, and I have a statement bearing on that point which perhaps you will allow me to read.

Witness proceeded to read as follows :

"There was no intention of secrecy. The abstract book was regularly sent round to the directors every morning, and it contained a summary of the whole of the preceding day's transactions ; so that the full amounts of loans, cash credits, and discounts daily granted, were seen by each director every day ; and if any of the amounts had appeared too large, or any information whatever regarding any of them had been wanted, the particulars would at once have been given of the various items, or any of the directors could have examined any of the books themselves at any time they wished, as the whole of the books were open to every one in the office, and every transaction was seen by the clerks of the bank ; and the books containing all loans granted, and bills discounted, were laid on the board table every Thursday when the directors met (and this refers to the book which I have mentioned) ; and to make certain that every thing was in order, on my return from Ajmere I ordered a ledger to be made out, and to be written up daily in the directors' room, so that the exact amount due by every one owing money to the bank, embracing the amounts due at the branches also, and at the head office, was shown, and the directors and secretary could at a glance see the full amount due by every debtor to the bank."

Mr. J. Blair.
16 Nov. 1868.

1964. (President.) The point to which I have directed your attention is not answered by that. I am asking whether the directors knew that those large loans were advanced on personal security; and if you read your statement over and over again you will find that it does not answer that question. It says that a ledger was made showing the amounts due, but it does not state that it showed that they were lent upon personal security.—I think that what I read to you as to the discussion about the dividend shows it.

1965. That one point I admit is an answer; but there is a book which you say was made up, showing that the directors knew that the money was lent on personal security.—I do not say that, but I say that there was no secrecy.

1966. What I want to know is whether there was secrecy on that one point, namely, as to loans being made on personal security? You will see by this daily book (referring to A 8.) that it gave the directors no information upon that subject whatever.—I simply say that the largeness of the amount should have shown them.

1967. That is a point which we have put to all the directors. Was there anything in that abstract account showing that the loans were on personal security?—Not in that abstract book certainly.

1968. We will now turn to the subject of the branches.—Will you allow me to make an observation with regard to another point, with respect to the directors' knowledge? I have it here. (Witness read as follows.) "When I left Bombay in April 1865, Premchund was generally supposed to be immensely wealthy and very prosperous, and I had every confidence that in recommending loans he was quite disinterested, and had the prosperity of the bank at heart. He and his father had been the brokers to the bank for many years, if not from the time the bank was opened, and there never was a rupee lost to the bank that I ever heard of from any transactions with them. I think also that Premchund was the holder of a large number of shares in the bank. I feel perfectly certain that the European directors, both Government and mercantile, held in 1864, and the beginning of 1865, the opinion of Premchund's character which I did, and that they were satisfied it was a wise plan to follow his advice in business. They knew that he was almost hourly consulted when a director, and recommended almost every advance which was made, and no objections were raised by them. At the same time all the advances and discounts were entered in the books of the bank, which were accessible to the directors daily. The Financial Secretary never found fault with what had been done, and it would have appeared in the minutes of the board meetings if it had been so. On the contrary, the board were entirely satisfied with the prosecution of the business, and they, on two occasions, increased my salary without application from me, indeed on the first occasion of the increase I was at Kurrachee, opening a branch there. If any of the directors had objected to any portion of the business transacted, it would either have appeared in the minutes of the board meetings, or the directors would be able to refer to letters or documents to prove their assertions, and their inability to do so proves their assertions to be mere after-thoughts."

1969. All that would be very important if you could really show that they knew that you were lending money on personal security. You have stated one point which is very material on that matter. We should like you to give us more evidence on that subject.—I was in daily communication with one of their body, namely, Cowasjee Jehangeer; we were in daily communication with Cowasjee, we saw Premchund every other day. It was the great business, and I have not the slightest doubt that they all knew of it.

1970. We will turn to the question of the branches. What instructions did you give to the agents of the branch banks?—I think that there were printed regulations sent to each of the branches, so far as I recollect, but the branches were opened at so many different periods that I hardly remember.

1971. That is the form (handing Exhibit A 69 to the witness)?—Yes.

1972. Those regulations refer to mere questions of account, except one item?—Yes, and the way to conduct the branches, so far as I recollect.

1973. The fourth is the one which refers to granting cash credits and discounts and loans. Was this blank ever filled up?—I think that there was at one time an amount fixed, but I do not know that it was put into the printed forms. I think that the branches were advised never to grant more than two lacs to one person at a time, as far as my memory bears me out.

1974. To whom did you send that advice?—To each of the agents, I should think.

1975. Then are you prepared to contradict two branch agents whom we examined, namely, Mr. Bullock and Mr. Fraser, who both said that that blank never was filled up, and that they never had instructions as to the limit?—It was never put in this form.

1976. Are you prepared to contradict those two gentlemen?—I am not prepared to do so without looking over all the letter-books. Their two branches were about the last.

1977. Kurrachee was not one of the last. Mr. Fraser was agent at Kurrachee in your time.—Yes, that was about the first, but Cowasjee always said that the agents were responsible for what they did themselves. At the time that I was in the bank a loss occurred at Belgaum of some 20,000 rupees, and Cowasjee said "The secretary has nothing to do with that, that is for the branches."

1978. Was there a discount list prepared at each of those branches?—There was originally, but it is not upon my note, it was for guidance as to the amounts passed by Cowasjee, but it was constantly revised.

1979. I find this "A second list of the Sowcars and Shroffs was revised by Premchund, and a copy forwarded to Surat on the 14th instant." That occurs on the board minutes of the 3rd of October 1864, so that he revised the discount lists of the branches, or some of them?—Yes, he or Cowasjee.

1980. Premchund was not a director then, he had resigned in September.—But we referred to him, as I stated before. Cowasjee referred to Premchund.

1981. Did not the directors find it rather troublesome to revise the lists of these branches?—I do not know that, Cowasjee and Premchund had always their own people.

1982. Do you remember this letter being sent to the Hyderabad Branch (handing Exhibit A 75 to the witness)?—Yes, I recollect it, it was in 1863.

1983. This is what the directors then wrote "In returning the revised list of names of bankers and others at Hyderabad and elsewhere, I am to point out that the information we have been able to obtain here is, to a certain extent, uncertain, and that the directors consider that the agents have better opportunities of ascertaining the means of persons in their neighbourhood. Persons who have been stated to be worth 'any amount' have been fixed at a maximum of three lacs, that being, in the opinion of the directors, sufficient credit at one time for any person." So that instead of two lacs the limit was three lacs.—I was only speaking from recollection.

1984. The letter proceeds as follows, "Except in special cases, in which the agents are at liberty to exercise their discretion."—When was that written?

1985. On the 22nd of September 1863?—I recollect seeing the letter, but I think that I was at Poonah at that time, as I stated before.

1986. But you never objected to this letter?—Certainly not.

1987. It is stated that the agents had better opportunities of ascertaining the credit of the parties than the directors had?—Yes.

1988. Although there was to be a maximum of three lacs, yet in special cases the agents in their own discretion were to be at liberty to increase that amount. Did you think that a wise or proper communication to have sent to the branch agents ?—That is not for me to state, that must have been for the directors.

1989. You think that the directors ordered it ?—It must have been so; is it not so stated there ?

1990. This is a communication from the officiating secretary.—The directors must depend entirely upon their agents.

1991. We are, therefore, not surprised to find that after that the revised discount lists were discontinued. —I do not recollect, but the standing of people had so changed, that it was of very little use to adhere to the former lists. I allude to the original lists on starting the branches.

1992. After that, instead of revising the discount lists, you sent the agents instructions to consult some person at the branches, just as you consulted Premchund in Bombay, did you not ?—Have you that on record ?

1993. I will show you two letters (the witness was here referred to Exhibits A 77 and A 78).

(Witness.) It was Premchund who advised that, he being a director.

1994. (President.) So that that was the system ; you got some adviser to advise the agents at the branches.—Yes, to assist him. Premchund was a director at that date, in January 1865.

1995. Did you examine the weekly returns which were sent up from the branches ?—It was impossible for me to do so ; that was in the accountant's department, and anything wrong would have been represented either to the deputy secretary or to myself.

1996. You did not think that it was a part of your duty to inspect those weekly returns ?—It was simply an impossibility. It very often took me to open the letters from 10 o'clock to 2 in the afternoon. I entered every enclosure received.

1997. Might not that have been done by somebody else ?—Possibly, but that was the system.

1998. Those weekly returns did not show the securities, did they, upon which the money was advanced ? —I do not know that they did.

1999. Did you look at the monthly returns ?—I generally glanced at some of them to see what profit there was, to see what they were doing.

2000. The supervision of the branches was left, I understand, by you to the inspector of branches ?— Yes, and the accountant's department.

2001. Were these monthly and weekly returns ever brought before the board of directors ?—Yes.

2002. When ?—At Mr. Inverarity's request, when he was a director.

2003. Was it the practice to lay them before the board after he retired ?—I have seen them ; I do not know that it was regularly continued. I remember that on one occasion he asked for them, and that they were brought up for his examination ; but so many books were brought up.

2004. Mr. Inverarity last sat at the board on the 12th of November 1863. Do you remember those monthly or weekly returns ever being laid before the board in the latter part of 1864 and the beginning of 1865 ?—I do not recollect. They were always received on a Monday.

2005. Had the inspector of branches any written instructions as to what he was to do ?—No, I think not ; he had not been appointed long enough.

2006. Did he regularly visit the branches ?—No.

2007. Mr. Fraser told us that when he was agent at Kurrachee the inspector of branches never visited the branch at Kurrachee ; is that true ?—That is very likely.

2008. We have it also in evidence that the branch at Hyderabad never was visited ?—It was visited by Mr. Robertson.

2009. I mean by the inspector of branches ?—He was acting as inspector, as well as accountant.

2010. Did not he go there to open that branch ? Did he afterwards inspect it ?—It was the only time that he was there ; the agent was there at the time.

2011. I ask you whether the inspector of branches ever went to Hyderabad to inspect that branch ?—Not that I am aware of, except at that time.

2012. Is it not the fact that the inspector of branches generally remained at the head office, and never went to the branch offices unless something was wrong ?—All those statements can be referred to. It was so expensive to send inspectors through India that I fancy that it was not necessary unless something was really wrong, because everything was going on well.

2013. Had the inspector any instructions given him when he went to any of the branches when something was wrong ?—I do not think that there was any rule.

2014. I suppose that you are aware that there has been a heavy loss at these branches ?—Yes, I believe that there has been.

2015. At all of them ?—No ; some have not lost anything, they were mostly those connected with cotton.

2016. We will come to the Kalbadevi branch ; can you tell us the object with which that branch was esta blished ?—Chiefly to bring business to the bank ; that was the idea of the directors. Cowasjee Jehangeer chiefly wished it, so as to be an assistance to the natives in that part of the town.

2017. Was it meant to be a mere current account office, or for regular business, and for making advances ? —It was for regular business, the same as any other branch ; that was the intention, so as to make it pay if possible.

2018. Do you remember any doubts being expressed as to the power to open a branch in the town of Bombay ?—No.

2019. Did you, or did anybody else, remark the wording of the section of the Act which provided that branches might be opened out of Bombay only ?—No, I do not recollect any such observation being made.

2020. You do not remember any legal opinion being taken as to the power to open a branch at Kalbadevi ? —I do not.

2021. By whom generally were the agents of the branches appointed ?—They were sent out from home, they were picked and trained men, for that purpose.

2022. By whom was Mr. Bullock appointed ; he did not come out straight from England ?—No ; he was appointed by Cowasjee Jehangeer.

2023. He was in the Bank of Bombay before ?— Yes.

2024. What experience had he had in banking before he was appointed agent at Kalbadevi ?—I do not know, except what he had learnt at the head office.

2025. What situation did he hold at the head office ? —I really do not remember ; I think that he had been in various departments.

2026. He was a clerk ?—He was an assistant or a clerk.

2027. Were any instructions given to him when he opened that branch at Kalbadevi ?—That I cannot recollect. I should think that he would get the printed regulations.

2028. Were any instructions given to him to consult any particular person as to the credit of the individuals requiring advances ?—I think that Cowasjee used to attend there regularly. I used to see him sitting at the office.

2029. That could only be for a month.—Premchund would succeed him ; but as far as I am aware Mr. Bullock had no instructions from the head office.

2030. Mr. Bullock has distinctly shown that you instructed him, and it appears from the correspondence.—It may appear.

2031. Did you instruct Mr. Bullock to apply to Premchund ?—That is very likely.

2032. I find that Mr. Bullock was reprimanded in a letter written by Mr. Rodgie in your absence, on the 9th of February 1865 ; but after receiving his explanation Mr. Rodgie, on the 22d of February 1865, wrote to him as follows :—"I am in receipt of your favour of 11th instant in answer to our letter of 9th. We are glad to learn you availed yourself of the reliable information to be obtained from Mr. Premchund Roychund before you discounted the major part of the bills referred to in our letter mentioned above." Have you any doubt that Mr. Bullock was directed to put himself in communication with Premchund?—There is no doubt they addressed that circular, but I was absent.

2033. I believe also that you were in daily communication with Mr. Bullock?—I was not aware of it. In what way?

2034. He was in the habit of coming to you and asking your advice, and consulting you?—Do you mean from his branch?

2035. Yes.—Not that I am aware of.

2036. He was not then in the habit of coming to you?—Certainly not.

2037. Was not he considered in a more especial way under you. Was not his branch a sort of sub-office of the Bank of Bombay, and was he not under your guidance?—It was a regular branch when I returned from Ajmere. I understood that he was not obeying instructions, and he was written to to refer everything to the head office in future.

2038. In April 1865, or the beginning of May, you put a stop the business of the branches by telling the agents to remit to the head office all the cash balances, and also not to discount beyond a certain amount?—Yes, that was as to new business, so far as I recollect. It was upon that representation.

2039. You knew I suppose, at the time, that Premchund was consulted by Mr. Bullock?—Yes. It was in the part of the town in which Premchund resided, and he was a director then in 1865.

2040. Did you know that Premchund Roychund had considerable influence in that branch?—In what way?

2041. To be more particular. Were you aware that his father was lending money to Mr. Bullock, the agent of the branch?—No, I never heard of it until this moment.

2042. Surely you have read the evidence which was given before us in India?—No, I have not. I have acted upon Mr. Paget's advice to keep very quiet; the only thing which I have read was one thing which was brought to my notice where Mr. Melvill had asked whether it was not a subterfuge referring to something which I had done.

2043. Were not you aware that Mr. Bullock was in debt to Roychund Deepchund?—I never heard of it. I was not aware of it.

2044. I believe that there was no new business done at the branches until after you left. You put a stop to it before you left?—Yes.

2045. All available cash balances were sent up to head quarters just at the time when you left?—I am not aware; the order was simply not to go into new business.

2046. We find that on the 28th of March 1865, Mr. Rodgie wrote to Mr. Bullock to this effect: "Dear Sir, We will feel obliged by your exercising at present the greatest amount of caution in your business generally, and in particular avoid all transactions with parties doing business in the Fort. Those who call on you may easily be referred to head office; in the case of all renewals and special bills we will be glad that you refer to us before renewing or discounting." There is another letter of the 21st of April 1865, as follows: "Dear Sir, Please note for your further guidance that without the sanction of head office you are not authorized, for the present, to advance on one party's name more than 20,000 Rs. at a time, and even for this amount we wish you to obtain collateral security, if at all possible." Afterwards there was another letter directing the agents to send in all available cash, which of course would put a stop to further business.—That was on the 29th of April 1865.

2047. There was a loss of 19 lacs at the Kalbadevi branch alone, and there was a loss at all the other branches more or less, at some six lacs and at some two lacs. Have you any explanation to give us how this state of things came to pass?—It was, I imagine, from the general collapse at Bombay among the natives; all our business was amongst the natives.

2048. You have no special explanation to offer? We wish to give you every opportunity of explaining all these things which occurred during your administration.—No.

2049. One of my colleagues points out that in the notice which you gave of opening the Kalbadevi Branch you departed from the usual form of notice; that formerly you said "under the provisions of section 41 of Act 10 of 1863," but that when you issued the notice for opening the branch at Kalbadevi, you did not follow that form, but gave the notice in these words: "It is hereby notified that under the provisions of Act 10 of 1863" (without referring to the section), "a branch of the Bank of Bombay will be opened on Monday next." "By order of the board of directors. James Blair, secretary and treasurer." Was that change at all the result of your having some doubt about the applicability of section 41 to the Kalbadevi Branch?—I was not aware that any change had been made.

2050. (Mr. Melvill.) Section 41 of the Act only permitted you to open a branch bank out of Bombay, and reference to this section was omitted, and it was put generally in the notice "under the Act 10 of 1863," that change of form was not by reason of any doubt as to your powers?—I understood that we had full power.

2051. (President.) You have put in a written statement of all the allotments of shares which you have received, as to which we have asked you whether it is true, and it is now part of the evidence in the case. I should like to ask you a few questions as to some of them. It appears that you received an allotment in the Bombay Joint Stock Bank, afterwards called the Asiatic Banking Corporation. Were not you aware that you were prohibited by a clause in the Act from being engaged in any other mercantile pursuit or bank?—I did not consider that to be an infringement of the Act, it was simply investing my own money.

2052. Do you consider it right or proper for you to have become a shareholder in a rival bank in your own town?—It was an exchange bank.

2053. No doubt an exchange bank carries on a great deal of business which the Bank of Bombay could not have done, but still exchange banks carry on other descriptions of banking business also.—The directors advised me to apply for those shares; Cowasjee Jehangeer advised me to apply.

2054. Do you mean to say that any other director advised you to apply for shares in the Asiatic Bank?—No, I think not.

2055. To whom did you apply for them?—I really forget; to the company itself, as far as I recollect.

2056. To whom did you apply for your Elphinstone Land and Press Company's shares?—I purchased them as an investment.

2057. There were two shares allotted to you in the Bombay Shipping Company; to whom did you apply for those?—I think that an allotment letter was sent to me without any application at all.

2058. It was sent to you as a bank manager?—No, not as the bank manager, but simply as a friend, I suppose.

2059. Ten shares were allotted to you in the Iron Ship Company; from whom did you get those?—I applied to the company as for an investment, and I held them to the last, and the Shipping Company's shares also.

2060. The question is, whether they were not all at a premium in 1864?—Yes, they were at a very high premium, and I did not sell them.

2061. To whom did you apply for, and from whom did you get these ten Iron Ship Company's shares?—The company itself, upon my application, in the same way as any shares here.

2062. From whom did you get your ten shares in the Goa Coffee Company?—From the company.

2063. Did not you apply to any director?—I was asked by one of the directors to put down my name.

2064. Who was the director?—Mr. Steel.

2065. Was not it a very great favour to get one of those allotments? It was a present of so much money, and if you had gone into the market the next day you might have realized the amount.—I did not do so; it was an investment.

2066. Who allotted to you your shares in the Mazagon Land Reclamation Company?—It was in the same way.

2067. You applied to the company?—As far as I recollect.

2068. Did not you apply to Premchund for those shares?—No, I did not, as far as I recollect, but simply to the company.

2069. He says that you applied to him for them?—I never applied to him as far as I recollect.

2070. Do you mean to say that you took no trouble at all to get those shares?—I simply applied to the company.

2071. Two shares in the Frere Land Company were allotted to you; to whom did you apply for those?—Just in the same way, as an investment.

2072. Did not Premchund ask for those shares for you?—It is very likely that he may have done so.

2073. You state that in the Bombay Warehouse Company one share was allotted to you. To whom did you apply for that?—I do not recollect. Very often letters of allotment were sent to me.

2074. You received 200 shares in the Bombay Gas Company; to whom did you apply for those?—That was an investment which I kept too.

2075. But 200 shares were allotted to you; to whom did you apply for those?—To the company. I think that it was Fulcher, Cooper, and Company.

2076. Cooper was afterwards a borrower from the bank?—Was he? I thought that they lost nothing by him.

2077. Very largely. Who allotted the shares in the Bank of Surat to you?—It was done during my absence.

2078. But who allotted the shares to you?—I asked Mr. Robertson about them, and he said that Premchund had advised him to take them; that it was a good thing.

2079. Premchund allotted those shares; he was the absolute governor of that bank?—I know nothing about those shares being allotted to me till I went out in 1867. I had so much to do in the bank.

2080. Did not you pay the call?—Mr. Robertson did it for me.

2081. Had not you an account with Mr. Robertson? He acted for me.

2082. We have his letter showing that he paid the call for you?—Exactly, out of my money.

2083. Then he had an account with you?—No; he operated on my own funds by cheque, as far as I recollect. He had my power of attorney.

2084. If he operated on your deposit account by power of attorney, you must have seen it directly you returned?—I did not look into my account. I had so many other things to do that I did not pay much attention to it, unfortunately.

2085. Then you really did not know to whom you were indebted for these 30 Bank of Surat shares?—To the company, I should say. I was not obliged to them for them.

2086. You might have sold them immediately?—I was not aware until I went back to India in 1867 that I had such shares.

2087. Thirty shares were allotted to you in the Alliance Financial Association; to whom did you apply for those?—They were allotted to me.

2088. You did not apply to any of the directors of the Association?—No.

2089. You mean that they were sent to you without any application?—Yes, so far as I recollect, except it was just an application to the directors.

2090. How do you account for the fact that these shares, mostly at a high premium, should be sent to you without any application; what was the object of it?—Were they at a high premium when the allotments were sent to me?

2091. Yes, we have very distinct evidence of it.—I did not take advantage of that.

2092. You say that you never applied for them; how came they to be sent to you?—I applied for several.

2093. But the others were sent to you without any application?—Even if I had applied for them I do not see any harm.

2094. How came they to be sent to you if you never applied for them?—I cannot state that.

2095. Was not it from your position as secretary and treasurer of the Bank of Bombay?—I cannot say that; it may have been very likely.

2096. Can you give any other reasonable explanation of their being sent to you?—They very likely considered that I was a good holder of shares, and I can prove that so far.

2097. I have no doubt whatever that you held very much to your loss, but that is not the point; you might have realized an enormous fortune if you had only sold at the time.—I did not.

2098. In the Asiatic Financial Association 25 shares were allotted to you; by whom were they allotted?—On application, I presume, by the company. No, I think that Mr. Frazer, one of the directors, holds shares in that company.

2099. You sold those shares at a small premium?—I think so.

2100. From whom did you get those shares?—From the company.

2101. Whose influence did you use to get them?—I never used any influence at all.

2102. They came to you as secretary and treasurer of the Bank of Bombay?—No, they simply came to me as James Blair.

2103. In the Financial Association of India and China 100 shares were allotted to you on the 6th of June 1864?—Yes.

2104. From whom did you get them?—I applied for them in the regular way.

2105. To whom did you apply?—To the company.

2106. Not to any particular director of the company?—Not that I am aware of. I did not know them.

2107. When did you sell those shares?—Very soon afterwards.

2108. At a very high premium?—I think so.

2109. In the Mofussil Press Company 23 shares were allotted to you, and you purchased some more. From whom did you get that allotment?—The company.

2110. Did you apply to any member of the firm of Nicol and Company?—Not that I am aware of.

2111. Not to Mr. M'Ilwraith?—I forget. I may have done so.

2112. From whom did you get the Back Bay shares?—I got them in the regular way, by application for an investment.

2113. To whom did you apply for them?—The company.

2114. You know that all the applications for shares went to the promoters?—Yes.

2115. To which promoter did you apply; did you apply to Mr. Scott, or Premchund, or Cowasjee?—No, simply the promoters. I recollect Mr. Scott stating that it was of no use applying, except in the regular way, to the promoters, and those shares were not sold.

2116. One share was allotted to you in the Asiatic Trading Company?—That was while I was away.

2117. You received it from Premchund Roychund?—I do not know; I thought that it came from Ritchie, Stewart, and Company.

2118. In the Port Canning Company you had two shares. How did you get those?—I think that they were sent to me. I do not recollect.

2119. You never applied for them at all?—I really forget.

2120. Those shares were at a premium of 8,500 rupees each at the time?—I forget.

Mr. J. Blair.
16 Nov. 1868.

2121. You admit having received these numerous allotments of shares from all these companies. Do you think that it was right and proper for you, as secretary of the Bank of Bombay, to receive them?—Certainly, as an investment.

2122. Whether they were investments or not, those shares being at a premium at the time, do you consider that you were doing your duty to the Bank of Bombay in laying yourself under obligations to the promoters of these different companies?—I do not consider that I was laying myself under any obligation, but that I was simply investing my own money.

2123. You did not consider that you were laying yourself under an obligation to people who were giving you allotments which you could take the next day into the market, and sell at a high premium?—I fancy that they were too glad to get me.

2124. Why should they have been glad to get you?—To prevent pressing shares into the market to be sold. I held them.

2125. Can you hesitate for a moment in saying that the real reason was because you were secretary and treasurer of the Bank of Bombay?—I do not know what their intentions were.

2125 a. Can any reasonable man doubt that?—I am not sure that they might. When I left Bombay I believed in the soundness of the business of the Bank of Bombay, and I invested all my money at the time.

Adjourned to Tuesday, at half-past 11 o'clock.

PRESENT:

President.

SIR CHARLES JACKSON.

Member.

MAJOR MCLEOD INNES.

Secretary.

F. D. CHAUNTRELL, ESQ.

Mr. J. Blair.
17 Nov. 1868.

Mr. JAMES BLAIR further examined at No. 90, Richmond Road, Bayswater.

(Witness.) I wish to correct a statement which I made yesterday with regard to the scroll minute (Exhibit A 48) of the 2nd of June 1864. I stated that I thought that the handwriting of the second page was Mr. Ryland's. I think that it could not be his, for, as far as I remember, he was at home at that time.

2126. (President.) In whose handwriting do you say it is?—It is difficult to say; it must have been Mr. Robertson's, I think, as he was acting after Mr. Ryland. I am positive that Mr. Ryland was away at that time. I intended going home at that time myself, and Mr. Ryland, being a married man, asked that he might be allowed to go instead, so that I am positive that he was absent at that time. The granting of these cash credits was long considered by the board before the resolution was passed, and the resolution must have been confirmed by the minutes of the 4th of June.

2127. I find that there is an omission in your list of allotments (Exhibit marked Y 2). You obtained an allotment of two United Victoria and Colaba Company's shares?—I was not sure about it; I asked Mr. Robertson about it; I was positive that I had two, and he said that he was not sure. I think that I must have had them, because he got two and I got two also.

2128. I have seen the entry of them in the allotment book of the company.—They were sold at any rate.

2129. We have a letter from Mr. Robertson enclosing a cheque for their payment.—My affairs were carelessly kept; I must also have had 100 shares of the Bank of China, and they were sold.

2130. In looking over this schedule (Y 2) I find that the two United Victoria and Colaba shares are omitted, and that the Bank of China shares are also omitted.—With regard to loans,—soon after the regulation as to government paper making interest thereon payable in London came into force it was found very difficult to obtain any to make advances on; very little paper comparatively was held by the natives in Bombay, therefore everything was transmitted to England in exchange operations, and very little was sent to the bank for advances, although every inducement was held out for doing so at low rates. It was the same with regard to advances on railway shares, so that the bank business depended chiefly on discounts and advances on personal security.

2131. I yesterday asked you about a loan of rupees 6,25,000 to Cursetjee Furdoonjee, and I asked you whether you had ever lent money on long loans, and you did not seem to recollect that you had done so.—I do not recollect it.

2133. That you did not know that these long loans were made.—But this does not show that it was upon shares.

2134. Does it not show very distinctly that the share certificates were to be deposited for safety?—Yes.

2135. Here is Premchund's answer written over leaf (Exhibit marked A 103).—That was Premchund's agreement.

2136. That was a loan for a very long date, more than six months.—It was payable at the bank at any time.

2137. Nothing of the kind; look at the bond (A 51). It appears that you were a party to that transaction.—It would have required a proper stamp if the loan was for six months.

2138. Whether properly stamped, or not, there is your agreement for the loan from the 28th December 1864 to the 1st July 1865.—I did not recollect it. The new charter did not prohibit long loans.

2140. That is not an answer to my question.—This bears upon the point (reads again as follows):

"There was also taken into consideration the increased capital upon which dividends had to be made." I wish to show you the reason. It was in order to get some interest for the shareholders' money.

2141. That is quite another point; I am going to ask you about that. The question which we now wish to inquire into is as to your purchases and sales of shares during the time that you were secretary. Before I go into that, however, I want to ask you one other question. Was Mr. Birch aware that you were receiving allotments?—I should think that he was, as well as all the other directors.

2142. There was no concealment whatever on your part?—Certainly not, and no intention to do so. In the several companies in which I held shares I took no interest in their management, and made it a point not to attend any meetings of shareholders. When urgently solicited to vote at a meeting of the shareholders of the Elphinstone Land and Press Company, I refused, on the ground that as Secretary and Treasurer of the Bank of Bombay I could not, consistently with my duty to the bank, take any interest in the management of the Company. I held the shares simply as an investment, and had been offered upwards of a lac and a half for each of the two old shares, but refused to sell them. I heard afterwards that the subject had been mentioned to the President, Mr. Birch, and that he said that I was perfectly right,—that alludes to not attending any meetings; therefore he was cognizant that I held shares. It was at the time when other Companies were anxious to purchase up the Elphinstone Land Company for amalgamation.

2143. You say that the other directors were aware that you were receiving allotments?—They must have been. I think you will find that yesterday I stated that some of the directors had given me shares.

2144. The native director Premchund.—No, the European directors.

2145. You mentioned Mr. Gavin Steel. Did any other European director of the bank give you any shares?—It was all stated yesterday, as far as I recollect.

2146. You mentioned that Mr. Gavin Steel gave you some, but did any other director ever give you any shares?—I do not recollect particularly, except that Cowasjee Jehangeer, I remember, advised me to purchase some at the very first.

2147. And Premchund?—Very likely, he may have done so, of course, too.

2148. Did not you know that Mr. Birch was receiving allotments of shares?—Yes; he had received one at any rate. The Back Bay allotment.

2149. I believe that he gave a power of attorney to you?—I am not aware of it. For what purpose?

2150. Mr. Birch admitted it himself.—(Mr. Birch.) I quite admit it.

2151. (President to witness.) Mr. Birch gave you a power of attorney to sign allotments which he received?—

(Mr. Birch.) May I say one word? You do not put the case exactly as I put it; I said that it was a special power for one particular purpose.

2152. (President to Mr. Blair.) Was special power given to you by Mr. Birch to sign for his Back Bay shares?—I do not recollect. Was it in the secretary's name or the deputy secretary's?

2153. It was in your name?—Did I sign?

2154. You executed the Memorandum of Association of the Company for Mr. Birch?—Then it is undoubted, but I do not recollect it.

2155. Did you ever advise him about allotments?—I am sure that I do not recollect. I do not think that it is very likely that I should advise my senior.

2156. Did he ever consult you about allotments?—I do not recollect; he may have done so, or not.

2157. Did you ever give him information as to where allotments were to be had?—I do not remember; he would know that himself.

2158. But I am asking you. We have the same power as one of the Justices of the Court of Queen's Bench to ask these questions. I want to know how far the servant did know what the President was doing; that is the very point of my inquiry. I want to find out whether you did know that Mr. Birch or the other directors were receiving allotments?—Please to put the question again.

2159. Were you aware that Mr. Birch and the other directors of the bank were receiving allotments of shares?—From general hearsay.

2160. You knew as a fact that Mr. Birch received an allotment of Back Bay shares?—Certainly.

2161. You are not able to speak, as a matter of fact, as to his receiving any others?—I cannot say.

2162. You are not able to speak, as a matter of fact, as to any other director of the bank receiving allotments of shares?—I cannot say.

2163. But do you know, as a fact, whether any of the other directors were receiving allotments?—I have stated, from general hearsay.

2164. From general hearsay you know that the other directors were receiving allotments. I asked you did you know that any of the directors were receiving allotments, and you said "from general "hearsay;" that is an answer?—Yes.

2165. It was from no other source of information except general hearsay?—Not that I recollect.

2166. Were not you always, or very often, buying and selling shares yourself?—Not always.

2167. Were not you very often buying and selling shares yourself?—Simply to get money to pay for the calls upon the shares which were allotted to me, selling out of one into another as an investment, into what I considered a better investment.

2168. We have your account with the Asiatic Bank. I believe that you deposited all those shares with the Asiatic Bank, and you now owe them 26,000*l.*, after having received credit for all those shares? (handing the account to the witness, produced by Mr. Turquand on the 10th November, marked Y 3.)—No; I settled with the Asiatic Bank.

2169. Is not there now a liability from you to the Asiatic Bank of 26,000*l.*?—No; it is all paid.

2170. They do not press you for the payment?—No; I have settled it. I have their discharge in a letter. That debt was simply for an investment which I intended to keep of these ten Back Bay shares (Letter produced by witness, and marked Y 4).

2171. (President reading from the letter.) "As I have good reason to believe that you have given up your property I now grant you a release." That is not the point; that shows that you have been released, but is not this a correct statement of the account upon which you were released, that after taking all your shares there was a balance of 26,000*l.* due to the Asiatic bank?—Yes; when I went home.

2172. After giving you credit for all your shares, there is a balance of 26,000*l.* due from you to the bank; is not that so?—They took over the whole of these shares. I do not know about the balance.

2173. That is the account of the Asiatic Bank?—These shares were much more valuable than they took them over at; they took them all over at that price.

2174. After giving you full value for all your shares there was 26,000*l.* due from you to the Asiatic Bank?—No, not at all; they valued them themselves, and took them over.

2175. When was this done?—It was done in 1867, when I went out to look after my own affairs. This was between Mr. Robertson, the liquidator, and myself.

2176. Did you employ Premchund Roychund as your broker in buying these shares?—Yes, certainly.

2177. You employed him in buying and selling shares for you?—Yes.

2178. I believe that on the 16th July 1864 Premchund Roychund bought ten Back Bay shares for you at the auction?—Yes.

2179. For 3,11,782 rupees and 8 annas?—I forget what the amount was.

Mr. J. Blair.
17 Nov. 1868.

2180. Where did you get the money for them?—From the Asiatic Bank.

2181. Through whose influence did you get that loan from the Asiatic Bank?—No person's influence at all. It was my own application.

2182. Was it openly done?—Yes, as I was going home. I had a private account at the Asiatic Bank. I intended being home in 1864.

2184. Were you not a great friend of Mr. Morrison, the agent of the Asiatic Bank?—Yes.

2185. I suppose that he managed this loan for you?—I do not know whether he was acting at the time.

2186. Then there was another transaction on the 6th of December 1864, a joint transaction of yourself, Mr. Tracey, and Mr. Morrison. You bought six shares in the Elphinstone Land and Press Company, did you not?—They were bought.

2187. You bought them, for how much?—I do not know. Premchund gave me no particulars until that transaction was completed. Premchund asked me to join Mr. Tracey and Mr. Morrison in the purchase of a few shares in the Elphinstone Land Company, which he knew were likely to be sold, and he said that he was sure I would not lose by them. I was surprised, on asking him a short time afterwards if he had purchased any for me, and how much I had to pay, by his stating that he had, and had also sold them at a good profit, and that he would send me a cheque for my share. This was received from Mr. Morrison, as far as my recollection bears me out.

2188. The shares were bought for 7,42,000 rupees, and were sold at a clear profit of 1,62,000 rupees on the whole transaction. You had your share of the profit?—I always understood that the shares had been bought and sold without any purchase money having been paid. No money was advanced by the bank for any such purpose. Mr. Tracey never spoke to me on the subject.

2189. I only want to show that you were speculating at this time in shares, and it clearly appears that you were?—That is the only thing which you can call a speculation. The money was all lost again.

2190. We will go to the next transaction, namely, the sale of some of your Back Bay shares. You sold five of those Back Bay shares for 33,000 rupees a share; that is a premium of 28,000 rupees per share, is it not?—I never sold any.

2191. Premchund sold them for you?—I never got a rupee for them.

2192. How many did you receive?—Five; and I purchased ten.

2193. How many did you hand over to the Asiatic Bank?—They had those ten.

2194. What became of the other five?—They were handed over to the Asiatic Bank when I went out in 1867.

2195. The Asiatic Bank have only received ten?—They received the whole.

2196. As to the other five there is a distinct entry in the books of Premchund, showing that he sold them for you.—I never got any money for them.

2197. Premchund's books could not have been made up for this Commission. They were put into the hands of his trustees in 1866, long before this Commission was thought of, and therefore he could not have concocted any of these statements for the purposes of this Commission.—I distinctly state that I never got a rupee from Premchund for the Back Bay shares. It is included in these 27 Back Bay shares given to the Asiatic Bank (returning Exhibit Y 3 to the Chairman).

2199. Do be cautious.—I tell you honestly that it was not the case. He said that he had done so, but that the money would not be paid for some months. He did not mention who the purchasers were, and I did not inquire, as I had full faith in Premchund's word.

2200. Did not you begin this examination by saying that Premchund had not sold five Back Bay shares for you?—Not the five originally allotted to me.

2201. You denied the fact that you had sold five.—I read over this statement.

2202. I ask you whether Premchund Roychund did not buy from you five Back Bay shares on the 24th April 1865?—Not that I am aware of.

2203. Do you mean to say then that this is a false entry in his book, he never having been able to touch that book since the year 1866 (handing Exhibit R 23 to the witness)?—I am not aware of the money having been paid. I was not in India in the year 1866. It must have been five of those ten shares which he bought for me at the auction and became responsible for. He stated that he would guarantee me against all loss. I had no intimation of it. I have told you that he said that ten shares were sold; my five original shares I held.

2204. I want you to attend to the point. You sold those shares to Premchund?—Which shares?

2205. Those five Back Bay shares.—No; certainly not; the five which were allotted to me.

2206. Five shares you sold to Premchund on the 24th of April 1865?—He stated that he would sell them.

2207. Then why did you deny it when I put the question to you?—Because I thought that you were alluding to the five which I originally got.

2208. We have it now that those shares were sold to Premchund at that rate?—But I had no intimation of that sum having been paid in by Premchund.

2209. You sold them for 1,65,000 rupees, and he re-sold them to Jaivirilall Umiashunker for 1,80,000 rupees. Do not you know that Premchund bought those shares for 1,65,000 rupees?—I have simply the fact that ten shares were sold.

2210. You are so ignorant of your own affairs that you cannot state whether you sold five shares at that time or not?—I trusted it entirely to Premchund, and he stated that he had sold the ten shares for 28,000 rupees premium per share for time; he mentioned no names.

2211. And you had to pay interest upon that transaction, namely, Rs. 2929 5. 0.?—He never gave me an account of it.

2212. Do you mean to say that you never received the money for the shares?—Never.

2213. Was not it paid into the Asiatic Bank, in fact, in part discharge of your loan?—No.

2214. Was not the sum of Rs. 1,62,070. 5. 0. carried to the credit of your cash credit account in the Asiatic Bank?—I was never informed of it.

2215. We seem to know more about your affairs than you know yourself.—So I think. I never got the money. I see that he did sell these ten shares, but I never got the money from the people.

2216. This will give you a short summary of the transaction; there is the statement taken from the books of the Asiatic Bank (handing to the witness marked Exhibit Y 5); it was taken in reduction of your loan to the Asiatic Bank, and you have had the benefit of it in that way.—(After looking at the paper) —That is undoubted. I was not aware until now that they had paid it; they never furnished me with any statement after I went home.

2217. Before you settled your accounts with them did you never look at them?—Mr. Robertson did it all for me when I was at Poonah.

2218. Did you yourself never look at the accounts? —No; because I thought that it was all right, Mr. Robertson having full power to act for me.

2219. The interest was deducted and the balance paid to you. Did you know that it was a time bargain?—I have stated so.

2220. Do you think it was a proper thing to do, as the Secretary of the Bank of Bombay, to enter into a time bargain?—No; it was as I stated before, because the shares were bought at such a high figure that I intended Premchund to sell them again, I bought them at first as an investment.

2221. There is an entry in your current deposit account with the Asiatic Bank. Premchund tried to explain it. It appears that you paid 4,950 rupees on the 22d of July 1865 to Premchund. We asked him whether he could explain that transaction, and I think that it is fair to you to read his evidence. He says, "I am unable to give any further information about the item of rupees 4,950 which was paid by Mr. Blair to me. It relates to some transactions between Mr. Blair and Mr. Barnes, who is now in England."— I never heard of Mr. Barnes.

2222. Mr. Barnes of the Agra Bank.—I only met him once.

2223. Premchund added "I think it was for some share transaction between Mr. Blair and Mr. Barnes in which I acted as broker, but I do not recollect what share transaction it was." It was clearly not that, according to your account?—I only met Mr. Barnes once at dinner, and never had any transactions with him.

2224. Then how came you to pay this sum 4,950 rupees to Premchund Roychund; what was it for?— I cannot tell; it must have been his brokerage.

2225. He distinctly declares that you never paid him brokerage to the amount of a shilling.—I do not recollect it at all.

2226. We should like to get an explanation of that transaction.—I cannot give it to you.

2227. Do you think that it is possible that Mr. Robertson, who acted as your agent when you were away from Bombay, could explain that transaction? —He may, if it was when I was absent; I never had any transactions with Mr. Barnes.

2228. Mr. Robertson acted for you as your agent after you left Bombay, did he not?—Yes; he had a power of attorney.

2229. Then he probably will be able to tell us how that was?—Certainly.

2230. You are wholly unable to give an explanation of that payment to Premchund?—Certainly.

2231. It was not a payment of any debt to him?— Certainly not.

2232. Did you not enter into another speculation, viz., the purchase of 50 Back Bay shares with Tracey, Scott, Morrison, and Hannay? Your name is not mentioned, but we have evidence that you were interested in Morrison's share in that transaction.—Will you put the question again?

2233. Were not you interested in the purchase of 50 Back Bay shares with Tracey, Scott, Morrison, and Hannay?—I will read my memorandum with regard to it. "There were stated to be so many shares by Premchund purchased in the Back Bay Company, but it was broken off, as I understood, in consequence of the shares being his own, which he was trying to sell to us."

2234. Did you enter into a speculation with Messrs. Tracey, Scott, Morrison, and Hannay for the purchase of 50 Back Bay shares?—I was asked to do so for five.

2235. You agreed to take five of Mr. Morrison?— No; nothing with regard to Mr. Morrison more than the others. On my return from Ajmere, Premchund said that he was to purchase five Back Bay shares for Mr. Hannay, Mr. Tracey, Mr. Morrison, and myself; but I was so much occupied at the time with the bank business that I thought no more of the subject as Premchund never again alluded to the matter to me; and only two days, I think, before I left for England either Mr. Hannay or Mr. Morrison said that I would lose a lac, as they thought Premchund had bought the shares. I said that Mr. Robertson would see to that, and pay the amount if necessary, he being my attorney, but that Premchund had told me nothing further about it, and to this day he never did, and no claim was ever made on my account to Mr. Robertson. I was afterwards informed that the shares were found out to be his own, and the transaction was broken off. When in India lately, although I frequently saw Premchund, he never alluded to the subject, or made any claim, but said that he was glad to hear I was all right, which I told him was not the case, having calls on the Asiatic Bank shares yet to pay.

2236. That confirms the evidence which we have taken. Did not you enter into another transaction with Morrison and Tracey in Back Bay shares? It was a transaction after you left; it commenced in August and ended in December 1865. Did you not, through your agent Mr. Robertson, or in any other way, enter into that speculation?—Certainly not, that I am aware of. Mr. Robertson never told me of any such thing.

2237. We have evidence before us that you were interested with Morrison in that speculation of Back Bay shares?—I am not aware of it.

2238. Will you deny it?—Certainly to the best of my knowledge. I thought that was all the same thing.

2239. This was after you left.—I am not aware of anything else.

2240. You are not aware of an account as to that transaction having been opened in the name of Nusserwanjee Ruttunjee and Company?—No.

2241. Premchund never informed you of that transaction?—Never.

2242. You never were informed of that transaction by Mr. Tracey or Mr. Morrison?—Never, to the best of my recollection. I hardly knew Mr. Tracey.

2243. Were you ever engaged with Mr. Tracey or Mr. Morrison in any such speculation?—None, that I am aware of.

2244. Did you not enter into another transaction in November 1864 in the purchase of 180 Bank of Bombay shares as a speculation?—Never. I purchased for an investment 60 shares; that is all.

2245. Did you enter into a transaction for the purchase of 180 Bank of Bombay shares as a speculation with Morrison, Tracey, and Premchund?— Never.

2246. If Dossabhoy Dhunjeebhoy said so, that is incorrect?—I never heard of it.

2247. You were never interested in that account? —I never heard of it.

2248. Did Mr. Birch or any of the directors of the bank know that you were engaged in buying and selling shares?—Do you mean only those who were directors?

Mr. J. Blair.
17 Nov. 1868.

2249. Did any of the directors know that you were ever engaged in buying and selling shares?—Not that I am aware of.

2250. Did you ever receive any present from Premchund Roychund?—I refer you to my statement. I never received any present from any one whatever. I believe that you frightened him into a statement of that sort. I never received a present from any one, as is stated in my statement sent to you.

2251. Did Premchund ever charge you brokerage in any of his transactions with you in the purchase and sale of shares?—I suppose that he would take care to deduct it himself; he never told me to do so.

2252. I have looked over his accounts with great care, and I never find a single charge for brokerage against you.—Did not his father make a charge?

2253. His father may have done so in other transactions, but Premchund swears that he never charged you brokerage.—That was his fault; I was not aware of it; I understood you to say a short time ago that in the account with the Asiatic Bank there was a charge for brokerage.

2254. No; there is a charge for interest.—That would very likely be included in it.

2255. I have gone through the accounts myself, and there is not any charge for brokerage.—He should have charged it.

2256. Do you not consider that that was in some sense receiving a present from Premchund?—Certainly not, because I was not aware that he had not charged brokerage in the usual way.

2257. You were not aware that he had refrained from charging you brokerage?—Certainly not.

2258. You were not aware that he was in the habit of giving that facility to bank managers generally?—I was not aware of it.

2259. Did not you borrow money from Premchund?—Never from Premchund; from his father, Roychund, I did once.

2260. Be careful. I ask you, did you not borrow money from Premchund Roychund?—Not to my recollection.

2261. You deny that you ever borrowed money from Premchund?—To the best of my recollection I never did.

2262. We shall be able to show you from your own account with the Asiatic Bank (Exhibit Y 6), a confirmation of the evidence which we have received upon that point. Did not Premchund lend you, on the 22d of June 1864, 20,000 rupees?—I do not recollect it.

2263. Surely if a man lent you 2,000*l.* you would recollect it?—Not at this length of time. The only ones that I recollect are from his father, but he may have lent it to me to prevent my overdrawing my account at the bank.

2264. Your account at the Bank of Bombay?—To prevent my overdrawing the money at any bank. I am not aware of Premchund having done it. I am aware of having had money from his father.

2265. Are you prepared to swear that you did not receive a loan of 20,000 Rs. from Premchund on the 22d of June 1864?—I do not recollect it.

2266. Here is, first of all, a translation of an entry in Premchund's book (Exhibit R 24), which, as I tell you, he could not have altered; there is an entry of 20,000 rupees on that date.—I do not recollect it. Then he has got my cheque.

2267. I suppose that you will not doubt it when I show you a reference to it in your own account with the Asiatic Bank the next day? "By cash, 20,000 rupees." It was paid into your account the next day.—I do not recollect that transaction certainly.

2268. Do you not recollect repaying it with interest?—No; I do not recollect having it from Premchund. That banking account is confirmatory enough.

2269. Did you not repay it on the 7th of July with interest?—My cheque will show it.

2270. Here is your own account with the Asiatic Bank: "7th of July, to cheque Premchund Roychund 20,075 rupees." You paid Premchund 75 rupees interest.—That is confirmatory.

2271. Did he not also lend you, on the 16th of December 1863, 20,000 and odd rupees?—I cannot recollect at this date.

2272. Here is a translation of the entry in Premchund's book (Exhibit R 24). He lent you on the 16th of December 20,000 rupees and odd. Is it not so? Do not you recollect that?—No; I do not recollect it at all.

2273. You do not recollect your repaying him that money on the 5th of March 1864?—The cheque must show it, but I do not recollect such a thing.

2274. It was repaid on the 7th of March (showing Exhibit R 24 to the witness).—I did not recollect it, but I must have borrowed it to prevent my overdrawing my account.

2275. Was not that last sum borrowed for the purpose of buying Bombay Joint Stock Bank shares?—Very likely; I cannot recollect.

2276. Were not you in the habit also of borrowing money from Premchund, just for a day only, as a temporary loan?—I really do not recollect it.

2277. You do not recollect that he was in the habit of letting you have money for a day?—Very likely, if he had been purchasing shares for me.

2278. You told us just now that Roychund Deepchund, his father, lent you money?—Yes, I recollect that distinctly.

2279. Here is a translation of your account in Roychund Deepchund's books (Exhibit marked R 25). Just look through that account. In the native year 1920, that is to say the year ending in October 1864, you received 4,000 rupees. Do you remember whether, on the 8th of August 1864, you borrowed a sum of 20,000 rupees from Roychund Deepchund? The entry is "Paid a cheque on Asiatic Bank, for which a written acknowledgment has been taken."—I really do not recollect.

2280. That 20,000 rupees is carried to the next account, and that account is balanced for that year. Then there is the following entry in the cash book, "3d October 1864, 17 shares of the Bank of Bombay 58,182 rupees." Then, in the cash book on the 4th October 1864, "13 shares of the Bank of Bombay, and 13 new shares 48,396 rupees." In the cash book of the 13th October 1864, "3,500 rupees." Again, in the cash book on the 13th October 1864, "for call on 17 shares of the Bank of Bombay 5,100 rupees." Then he advanced you money to buy one share of the Victoria Company, 33,000 rupees. Are not all those sums correct?—I did not know the items; he sent me a statement of the whole 60 shares of the Bank of Bombay, which I purchased.

2281. Just look down the account, and say whether you dispute it.—What he gave me was simply the full amount, and I gave him a cheque for it.

2282. There is Rs. 1,68,000 odd, which is a large sum; what is that?—I never borrowed such a sum; he may have purchased the shares, and I paid him, and he sent the account to me.

2283. Was not this account made up, and did not you, just before you left India, pay him Rs. 1,51,875 4 9, as the balance which you owed him?—As far as I recollect I gave him what I owed him.

2284. Do you not observe that this is an account current running through two years?—I never saw it before.

2285. Are you prepared to dispute those items?—I cannot.

2286. Did not you clear off that balance just before you left India?—I gave him a cheque.

2287. Do you dispute the correctness of that account, and do you deny having paid the 1,51,000 rupees odd, which was the balance against you when you came away?—I do not remember.

2288. Do you mean to say that you settled an account to the extent of Rs. 1,51,000, without ever looking at it ?—I never heard of that account at all; he may have kept accounts as he chose, but I never was furnished with an account by him.

2289. After actually paying a balance of 1,51,000 rupees, which was the balance of an account of two years standing, do you want us to believe that you never looked at that account, that you did not know the amount, and that it was only for some shares which might have been bought the day before ?—They were bought a short time before.

2290. Look at the items ; some of the items relate to money borrowed by you, and some are for shares. There were some very small payments on the other side, but you were always in debt to Roychund Deepchund according to that account ?—Then that is a wrong account ; I never heard of it.

2291. Do you deny the fact that on the 3d of October 1864 he bought 17 shares of the Bank of Bombay for you ?—I simply state the full number that he gave me an account for, namely, 60.

2292. You do not deny that you paid that sum of 1,51,800 rupees as the balance of an account.—I was not aware that I had a running account with Roychund.

2293. Then you mean to say that you paid that sum without asking for a statement of how it arose ?—Yes, simply because I understood that it was for the shares of the Bank of Bombay purchased for me at a large premium, and certainly those advances were always paid at the time, or a short time afterwards.

2294. Did not you mortgage your Bank of Bombay shares to raise that money ?—I got the money from the Asiatic Bank. It was my intention when I went home to send out the money from my father's property. I intended to hold them as an investment.

2295. You had your father's property out in India ?—Not all.

2296. Did Mr. Birch or any of the directors know of these dealings between you and Premchund, and these dealings between you and Roychund Deepchund ?—Certainly not.

2297. You kept those transactions secret ?—I did not think that it was necessary to tell them ; they were simply temporary loans to save my overdrawing my account, and in expectation of money received from home.

2298. It is proved distinctly that you received allotments, that you speculated in shares with borrowed money, and that you borrowed money from Premchund Roychund and Roychund Deepchund. Do you think that you did your duty to the Bank of Bombay in entering into such transactions ?—Certainly. It was on my private account, and with the view of going home. I had no pension or anything to look to, and it was merely dealing with my own money and what I received from my father.

2299. Do you think that you put yourself into a proper position to protect the bank against Premchund and his father when you did this ?—Their position was recognized by every one in Bombay. I trusted them, and they were trusted by the Governor, who praised them as examples for the rising generation.

2300. Then I am to understand from you that you did not see the impropriety of these transactions ?—Certainly not ; because I intended them for investment.

2301. On looking back, you do not regret that you should, as Secretary of the Bank of Bombay, have put yourself into that position ?—No ; I do not see that there is any position which is wrong. I dare say that a number of things which we see now, would not have been done if the result had been known.

2302. I will turn to another subject. Do you remember the meeting of the shareholders of the 20th of December 1861, at which the following resolution was passed, "Proposed, seconded, and carried unanimously, that the directors be authorized to take such steps for varying, altering, or annulling all or any of the provisions of the Act under which the bank is at present constituted, and for obtaining the re-incorporation of the bank, as to them may appear expedient for securing the efficient working of the bank." Do you remember that meeting of the shareholders ?—No, I do not recollect it particularly.

2303. Can you tell us what was the practice in giving notice of special general meetings ?—It was by a general advertisement in the Government Gazette and other papers.

2304. Do you know of any practice existing at any time during your connexion with the Bank of Bombay of giving any notice to shareholders in England ?—No ; the Bank being in Bombay it was in the Bombay papers. They would be seen at home I suppose.

2305. The Act requires only 15 days' notice, and I suppose that you were not in the habit of giving more than 15 days' notice ?—We acted upon the Act.

2306. You do not recollect at any time during your connexion with the bank having a meeting postponed for a long time, so as to take the sense of the shareholders in England ?—No ; I cannot speak positively as to that.

2307. As to the meetings for the increase of capital, I suppose that the notices were given in the same way as for a special general meeting ?—They must have been in the general way.

2308. There was the 15 days' notice required by the Act, and no other ?—It was just in the regular way. The minutes will speak for that.

2309. The practice was only to give the 15 days' notice required by the Act, is that so ?—Certainly ; we acted up to the Act.

2310. Was that notice given upon calling those general meetings for the increase of capital ?—The regular notice must have been given.

2311. Did any one at any time propose that there should be any delay, and any reference home to the English shareholders ?—I do not recollect.

2312. We must now take you through a few of the loans made by the bank, and, as you are not well, we will merely take the principal loans in your time.—Before you go into that, perhaps you will allow me to state that up to those dates my nature was not speculative, and that all my savings were invested in Government paper.

2313. The Alliance Financial Corporation obtained a bill from the Bank of Bombay on the 21st of October 1864, for five lacs, and a cash credit on the 8th of November 1864, in the names of the directors, for five lacs ; and there was another bill which they discounted subsequently for a very small amount, after you left. I am now talking of the advance to the Alliance Financial Corporation and their directors, Mr. Diver, Atmaram Madhowjee, and others, more particularly. Did you make any inquiry about these persons before you let them have those large sums ?—It was brought by Premchund, and he said that they were perfectly safe and undoubted.

2314. He negotiated those two loans with you. Did you, yourself, make any inquiry about them ?—No ; I depended entirely upon Premchund, as we had been accustomed to do.

2315. Did not you inquire as to what was outstanding against the different men whose names were given ? Was not it your practice to do so ?—Yes ; certainly.

2316. Atmaram Madhowjee had an enormous sum outstanding against him at that time ?—I was not aware of it.

2317. What was your practice when Premchund came to you and said, "these are good men" ? Did you say, "Here is the money" ?—He brought them specially.

2318. Did not you institute an inquiry ?—We depended entirely upon Premchund.

2319. Did not you make an inquiry as to what the bank had already lent to those men ?—I do not recollect that special one. We generally sent down to get the information from the ledger keeper.

2320. You had independent ledgers, and clerks in charge of those independent ledgers, instead of showing all outstandings in one book?—That is the very book which I started on coming from Ajmere.

2321. You had the loans under one person, and the cash credits under another?—Ever since I went to the bank that was the system.

2322. And consequently you had to send to two or three persons to ascertain whether there was anything outstanding?—We depended entirely upon them to make inquiry, and to send up the opinions as to any particular individual. We had to depend upon the various departments.

2323. Then I am to understand that you completely put yourself into the hands of Premchund?—Certainly; and the directors trusted him in the same way as they trusted Cowasjee.

2324. Do you say deliberately that the directors always put themselves in the hands of Premchund?—They must have been aware, he was one of their own body, and a consulting director, and the thing was never objected to; he occupied the same place as Cowasjee as consulting director, and he was strongly recommended by Cowasjee, who was not very desirous to recommend any one.

2325. Did you make any inquiries about this company, the Alliance Financial Corporation?—No, I did not; we depended upon the names. Premchund said they were undoubted men of wealth.

2326. But were not the men largely speculating, especially Atmaram Madhowjee?—I was not aware of it.

2327. I believe that at the time when you left he had 28 lacs outstanding against him in the books of the bank?—I was not aware of it.

2328. What did you know of Atmaram Madhowjee?—I knew nothing of him, except from Premchund.

2329. Did not you know that he was an enormous speculator?—I hardly knew him, except from Premchund.

2330. Did not you know that he was a man dealing in time-bargains in shares?—No.

2331. And did not you know that the others were men in the Deccan Cotton Company, and that they were in several other companies?—I did not know of this at all, except from Premchund.

2332. Did not you know at the time that they were entering into a gigantic speculation, that they were buying from Premchund Roychund and others the Mazagon Powder Works?—No.

2333. Did not you know that they were giving 20 lacs more than Premchund had given to the Government for the property?—I was not aware that they had purchased it. I was not aware that it was connected with their purpose.

2334. You were not aware that these men to whom you lent these ten lacs were most gigantic speculators?—No; I trusted entirely to Premchund.

2335. Surely, in your position as Secretary of the Bank of Bombay, these things could scarcely have been concealed from you?—I trusted entirely to the native director. We were tied down to natives in the business, and we were too glad to see a European in the bank.

2336. I will take the next loan. On the 22nd of April 1865, when you were back in Bombay, there was a loan of two lacs, and the loss upon that has been 1,97,831 Rs.; that is to say, you only recovered 2,000 rupees out of the whole two lacs. That money was borrowed by Ameerchund Becherdass. When you lent that money on a single name did you inquire who Ameerchund Becherdass was?—It must have been brought to me by Premchund, because I did not know the name at all.

2337. Did not you know Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff?—Yes; that was one strongly recommended.

2338. Did not you know that Ameerchund Becherdass was his clerk?—No, I did not at all. Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff I understood himself came.

2339. Now that your recollection is revived about it, do you recollect anything with regard to that loan; do you remember how that man got two lacs, upon which there has been almost a total loss?—Not in the slightest, except through Premchund; it must have been through Premchund, for I did not know the man at all.

2340. The next case is that of Ardaseer Cursetjee Dady. On the 8th of December 1864 (you were then in Bombay) he got a loan of a lac and a half; 74,252 rupees was the loss upon that. In your time there was no security whatever taken from him.—It must have been on his good name.

2341. Who was he?—I do not recollect. It must have been from Premchund.

2342. He was recommended to you by Premchund, and in the minute book it is stated "Premchund "says, good for one lac and a half?" you relied solely upon Premchund (Exhibit A 27)?—Yes; there was no other source but Premchund, who was considered to know the case the best of any one.

2343. We will now come to Atmaram Madhowjee. I have it on my notes that he had 22,82,000 rupees, and the transactions in which he was concerned amounted to 28 lacs. Surely you will be able to tell us something about him?—I have stated that I knew nothing about him except through Premchund.

2344. The very name ought to have become familiar to you?—It is very difficult with the native names to follow them. I was not aware that he had so much.

2345. We will take one of your last transactions with him. On the 16th of December 1864 you granted him a loan of two and a half lacs with Burjorjee Rustomjee, did not you inquire what sums were outstanding against him at that time?—It is very likely. I generally sent down into the bank to inquire.

2346. And if you found there were 15 or 20 lacs outstanding, what did you do?—I do not recollect that circumstance at all.

2347. We find this letter of yours as to this very man on the 20th of October 1864: "My dear Premchund.—Kindly tell me what amount we have discounted to Atmaram Madhowjee and Burjorjee Rustomjee at present, and oblige, yours sincerely, James Blair." You do not seem to have known what enormous sums were outstanding against him then?—Certainly not in his own name.

2348. This is Premchund's reply: "My dear Blair,—Give them 25,000 rupees. Yours, Premchund Roychund." Do you see that?—And they got that amount.

2349. Atmaram Madhowjee got with Diver and Treacher on the 19th of January 1865, 60,000 Rs., and on the 31st of March 1865, Rs. 80,000?—With other names?

2350. Yes; and on the 21st of February 1865, Atmaram Madhowjee with Brice and Co. got 30,000 Rs.; on the 16th of December 1864 Atmaram Madhowjee with Burjorjee Rustomjee got two and a half lacs. You received a letter from Premchund on the 20th of October 1864, telling you to let Atmaram Madhowjee and Burjorjee Rustomjee have 25,000 Rs., and two months afterwards you let them have two and a half lacs?—It must have been from Premchund; they were always on Premchund's advice, because I did not know the people.

2351. You had the distinct advice of Premchund. Look at his handwriting?—That is undoubted.

2352. Having his authority that you should only advance those people 25,000 rupees, how came you to let them have 2,50,000 rupees within two months afterwards?—That I cannot say; it must have been upon his advice, and he must have changed his opinion of them. These natives were alway getting wealthier.

2353. Are you prepared to say that he did change his opinion as to them?—I should like to see who passed that loan; that is material.

2354. You were the executive officer in Bombay at that time, and you were the responsible person. On the 16th of December 1864 2,50,000 rupees were passed to Atmaram Madhowjee and Burjorjee Rustomjee after being advised that you were only to lend them 25,000 rupees?—It must have been on Premchund's advice, because to the best of my knowledge, I was very particular to act upon Premchund's advice.

2355. Then you are unable to recollect this transaction?—I do not recollect it. I was acting simply upon Premchund's advice, and with the consent of the directors.

2356. Premchund's advice appears in his letter.—That is only with regard to one transaction.

2357. If Premchund, on the 20th of October, stated to you that he thought that those parties might be trusted to the extent of 25,000 rupees, why should he on the 16th of December afterwards think that 2,50,000 rupees more might be advanced to them?—He may have done so; he may have had some reason.

2358. On the 11th of October 1864 a loan of 5,50,000 rupees was granted to Atmaram Madhowjee with Mr. Taylor and Dr. Diver. We know who Atmaram Madhowjee was, Mr. Taylor was the Master of the High Court, and Dr. Diver was an uncovenanted Doctor in Rampart Row.—Very likely; I do not know.

2359. Here is your opinion book (A 27). This opinion book was your guide, was it not?—Very long ago; it had not been written up for many years.

2360. But we find in it entries up to 1864 and 1865.—Very likely.

2361. (President reads): "George Taylor, Premchund considers very safe for a lac." Is that entry in your handwriting?—Yes.

2362. That is dated the 2nd of April 1864. How came you, on the 11th of October 1864, to lend 5,50,000 rupees to those three parties without any security?—Simply on Premchund's strong recommendation that they were undoubted for the amount at that date.

2363. Did not you know that Premchund was a broker whose object was to sell shares?—Certainly not; he was a director of the Bank of Bombay, and was acknowledged as trustworthy in every respect.

2364. But was not he doing an enormous business in buying and selling shares?—I cannot say. He made a great fortune in cotton.

2365. Did not it strike you during the whole of your administration that he might be borrowing money to pay for shares sold by himself?—Never; certainly not, as I have stated in the statement sent to you.

2366. We have had it distinctly proved before us that he sold his shares to these very gentlemen, who borrowed this money, and so made a good profit in this way?—That I know nothing of.

2367. How did Atmaram Madhowjee stand in your opinion book? On June 21st 1863 there is the following entry: "Atmaram Madhowjee considered speculative, but considered to have made some money by Premchund.—Whose opinion was that?

2368. I apprehend that this was your own.—It must have been from some authority certainly.

2369. It was no doubt from Premchund. Shortly before, there is the opinion of Cowasjee Jehangeer, whose opinion was really worth something, "good for 20,000 rupees," and yet he got 28 lacs, which are outstanding still; a good many other loans I dare say may have been paid, but his name is outstanding for 28 lacs.—These were all got on Premchund's advice, who was considered undoubted in his recommendation.

2370. Why could not you have turned to Premchund, and said, we have your advice here that we ought never to lend any such amount to these people? I did make this statement to him that these large amounts should not have been lent, but he said that they were undoubted.

2371. Do you mean to state that you said so as to this particular loan?—No, I do not mean to say that.

2372. Do you not remember that Premchund said that he would deposit for safe custody the certificates of 20 Back Bay shares which they were going to buy? Did not you know what that sum of 5,50,000 rupees was going to be applied to?—No; they would not have got the money if it was to be applied to shares.

2373. Do you mean to say that you never knew to what purpose that money was going to be applied?—No.

2374. As secretary did you never ask what the money was going to be applied to?—No.

2375. The borrowers were Atmaram Madhowjee, a great speculator as appears in your opinion book, George Taylor, a great speculator and Master of the High Court, and Dr. Diver, a doctor in a small way in Bombay. What could you conceive that they were going to do with those 5,50,000 rupees at that time?—I trusted to Premchund; he said that they were undoubted, and they were undoubted men of wealth; they purchased the Government House and all the property round it.

2376. That was I think purchased afterwards?—It was very likely that it was for that purpose.

2377. If anything was known of Mr. Taylor, was not it known that he was embarking largely in speculation, and that Dr. Diver and Atmaram Madhowjee were similarly engaged?—I was not aware of it at that time.

2378. If you had known that those gentlemen were going to buy the Government House, ought not that transaction to have put you on your guard?—I do not know. I simply state that they were acknowledged to be wealthy at that time. Will you allow me to read this, bearing upon that point: "I objected "to the largeness of the amounts, but Premchund "assured me that there would not be the slightest "risk, as the parties were known to have realized "large fortunes; one for instance, Cursetjee Fur-"doonjee, was considered to be worth upwards of a "crore, and the Camas a crore and a half."

2379. Did not you know that 20 Back Bay share certificates were to be deposited for safe custody?—Premchund proposed to lodge so many shares. As I stated before he strongly recommended it generally.

2380. Did not he forget to do that?—You will very likely find a letter about it.

2381. Did not you write on the 4th of January 1865 to Premchund about it (Exhibits A 31 and 103)?—Certainly.

2382. Premchund said in his evidence, "The certificates of the 20 Back Bay shares were not lodged till afterwards. I promised Blair that I would send them to him, and I sent him 10 first and 10 afterwards." That is the fact, as we find from the register.—I recollect writing to get as much as I could from him.

2383. You got 10 share certificates then, and 10 more were deposited long afterwards, and then, in consequence of an extraordinary decision of Mr. Justice Anstey, they were never realized by the Bank of Bombay. How did you transact this business; did you pay the money out, and leave it entirely to Premchund's honour to deposit the share certificates?—Will you kindly repeat that question?

2384. What was your way of doing business? This was one of the very cases in which no security was lodged at first, but where there was an understanding that the shares when bought were to be deposited for safe custody. Did you trust entirely to the honour of Premchund, or to the honour of the borrowers to deposit the share certificates when they got them, or did you take any security?—At the time when the money was borrowed I thought very little of the shares; the people were undoubted.

2385. Premchund, in his reply to your letter, says, "I send you 25 shares on account of Byramjee Cama,

Mr. J. Blair.
17 Nov. 1868.

and 10 on account of Dr. Diver; I will send you the other 10 in half an hour (Exhibit 103)."—On what date is that?

2386. The 4th of January 1865. The share certificates were not received until three months afterwards. What was your way of doing business? If you intended to have shares as security why did not you have the certificates deposited?—Because we trusted entirely to these people being undoubted, as Premchund stated, without the shares.

2387. I want to know whether it was your usual way of doing business just to trust to the honour of the party and let him deposit the share certificates whenever he pleased?—I certainly trusted to Premchund, who was the adviser of the bank.

2388. And he might let you have the share certificates whenever convenient to himself, either three or four months afterwards?—The advances were not made on the shares.

2389. In this particular case the advance was made on the shares.—As I stated yesterday it was simply collateral security to be used by the directors if found necessary.

2390. Premchund states in his evidence, "I promised Blair that I would send them to him, and I sent him ten first and ten afterwards. That was my and Mr. Blair's way of doing business. If I gave him my word he was satisfied."—Yes, certainly.

2391. Do you remember Dr. Bhow Dajee getting loans from the head office in 1864?—Yes; as far as I recollect 30,000 rupees.

2392. Twice over, and it was a total loss?—One loan I think was obtained at the branch.

2393. There were advances at Kalbadevi of Rs. 50,000 and Rs. 25,000, besides the two at the head office. There was no security given for any of these loans in your time?—His was an undoubted name at that time; Premchund recommended him.

2394. He was Premchund's doctor, was he not?—I do not know.

2395. Premchund recommended him, and you gave the money without any security?—Without any security, except personal security.

2396. We will take the case of Mr. Brown. You are not responsible for the original granting of that loan of two and a half lacs; Mr. Robertson was then acting as secretary; that was on the 25th of February 1865.—What were the names?

2397. Brown and Best. But you renewed the loan directly it became due?—I let it lie over.

2398. But you renewed it?—I recollect Mr. Best coming up and asking for it to lie over for so long, which I agreed to, because I understood that they were undoubted. That was on my return from Ajmere; Mr. Best promised to take it up in a short time.

2399. Who were Mr. Brown and Mr. Best, who recommended you to renew that loan?—I did not renew it, but I only allowed it to lie over.

2400. But it was renewed?—Afterwards. I do not recollect its renewal.

2401. You got them to deposit Port Canning share certificates; do not you remember your doing that?—No, I do not; all that I recollect is that Mr. Best asked for it to lie over for a short time.

2402. Did either Mr. Tracey or Premchund ask you to let that loan lie over?—Never. Premchund had always the highest opinion of them because they had a good business.

2403. They were only brokers.—But being brokers in exchange business in Bombay was a very profitable thing in those days, and Mr. Best was of the highest character; he was trustworthy.

2404. You had previously lent, on the 20th December 1864, 50,000 rupees to Mr. Brown, Mr. Heycock, and Venayek Pandoorung, had you not?—I do not recollect it.

2405. On the 15th July 1864 you passed 30,000 rupees for Mr. Brown, with J. Macfarlane?—Was not that paid off?

2406. No. 10,000 rupees has been paid on one loan, and 5,000 on the other, and there has been a loss of the whole of the rest. When you were called upon to renew the loan of 2,50,000 rupees, did not you take into account what was outstanding at that moment?—I do not recollect renewing that loan.

2407. It is an undoubted fact that it was renewed; and that you asked for the security of 46 Port Canning shares.—I do not recollect it.

2408. Then you did not inquire when you renewed this loan as to that; you do not recollect anything about the transaction?—I do not recollect it, only that they were undoubted at the time.

2409. Did you know anything of Burjorjee Rustomjee?—I do not recollect.

2410. Do not you recollect his father, Rustomjee, who used to be a cabinet-maker, who made blackwood chairs at Bombay?—I cannot recollect Rustomjee.

2411. We will take next Byramjee Hormusjee Cama. There was a cash credit opened before 1864 for 51,000 rupees in his name, and it ended in a debit against him of 47,773 rupees. A cash credit was opened of three lacs on the 30th of January 1864, and it was operated upon until May 1866, when there was a debit on that account of 6,05,000 rupees. There was another transaction upon which he was a debtor for 98,260 rupees, those are three different cash credits.—Were they all separate credits?

2412. Yes. There was a fixed loan on the 16th of October 1864 of seven lacs; there was another on the 9th of February 1865 of 94,800 rupees, and there was one afterwards on the 1st of May with which you had nothing to do.—Nor with the February one.

2413. It was in your time, but no doubt you were not responsible for it, was there any security taken for either of those three cash credits, all those were loans in your time?—They were granted on personal security to the best of my recollection, the whole of them.

2414. There was no security taken for those loans beyond the personal security?—No.

2415. Was it not an enormous account, amounting to 17,71,682 Rs. when the account was made up in May 1866?—Were there no loans on Government paper?

2416. No. What explanation have you to give of that transaction?—It was strongly recommended by Premchund, and Cama was considered worth upwards of a crore and a half realised in cotton.

2417. Was not that an enormous sum to have on one name?—It was.

2418. Did not you know that Premchund was dealing in cotton with Byramjee Hormusjee Cama at that time?—I was not aware of it; he was a large dealer in cotton himself.

2419. Byramjee Hormusjee Cama was the first man that failed in 1865, was he not?—Yes; I only heard of that.

2420. Have you any other explanation to give of that transaction, except that the money was obtained through the recommendation of Premchund?—No; he was undoubted as to the amount.

2421. Do you think that it was legitimate banking to lend out these enormous sums upon a promissory note. What is your opinion now from your experience of these transactions?—Now, I should say that it would have been better if it had not been done; but these men were of character, and instead of having a great number of small individuals who left Bombay, these men had their characters at stake, and would not leave, so that I think that it was better to give a large sum to a number of men who had standing, than to those who had none at all.

2422. Some of these men who had large sums absconded from Bombay. First of all there is Premabhoy Hemabhoy.—He was considered of undoubted wealth.

2423. Next Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff, he absconded?—Yes.

2424. He had large amounts. On the 21st April 1865 he had 6,97,000 rupees.—It was strongly recommended by Premchund.

2425. He got 6,97,000 rupees without any security; his was the first case after you got your power of lending on shares; the loan to him is the first which appears in the Application Book. Was it not known to you and to everybody that Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff was speculating largely?—I did not know the man at all, except through Premchund.

2426. He was in everything. He was almost as well known in those days as Premchund, was he not?—I did not know the man.

2427. But one would have expected that the secretary of the Bank of Bombay would have had great knowledge.—But so many of these persons had risen to be great men. I knew that he was considered undoubted, at the time that it was granted, by Premchund.

2428. In the end of 1864 the Opinion Book estimates him at one lac (Exhibit A. 27), and yet he got 6,97,000 rupees; and he got another lac with Bomanjee Cursetjee, who says that he never got the money. Have you any explanation to give as to how he got the money?—None whatever; except that he was strongly recommended by Premchund as undoubted.

2429. Was not he connected with most of the bubble companies at that time, the Eastern Financial, and the Alliance, and all those companies?—I did not know.

2430. Was not it your duty as secretary of the bank to find that out?—It was an utter impossibility to find out every man. I could not do everything when it was the special duty of one of the directors to find out.

2431. We will take the case of Kursondass Madhowdass. On the 31st of August 1864 there were some fixed loans granted. Mayabhoy Premabhoy had eight lacs, Muggonbhoy Huttising had eight lacs, and Kursondass Madhowdass had four lacs. Those were all partners in Kursondass Madhowdass's firm.—I think that you will find that I was at Poonah during that time.

2432. You know nothing of that transaction?—No.

2433. (Major Innes.) Were you absent at the same period in 1863?—Yes.

2434. (President.) Are you quite sure that you had nothing to do with that transaction?—I do not recollect the names at all in my time.

2435. Do you not recollect Kursondass Madhowdass coming to you and applying for the money?—I do not.

2436. Do not you recollect asking Premchund to get some money out at that time for you—to get money invested for the bank?—No, he was always bringing applicants. He prided himself upon bringing business.

2437. You did not ask him about investing it at that time?—No, not to the best of my knowledge.

2438. Do you not recollect receiving a letter of the 31st of August 1864, from Kursondass Madhowdass about this loan?—I do not recollect it.

2439. Is not that Premchund's handwriting (showing a letter to the witness)?—Yes; he was consulting director, and Kursondass Madhowdass was considered quite safe for it. That is undoubted.

Letter read as follows:—

"My dear Mr. Blair,

"Kursondass wants a loan for four to five "lacs. I think he is safe for any amount.

"Yours sincerely,

"23rd August 1864. PREMCHUND R."

2440. Do you recollect anything about the transaction on the 31st of August, when he and his partners in their several names got twenty lacs, and on the 26th of September he got five lacs more, making 25 lacs altogether?—I do not recollect anything more than that note.

2441. It is a quarter of a million?—I had no idea of such a large sum having been advanced to them until this present moment.

2442. This note of Premchund's is the beginning of the transaction?—It was acknowledged by our own director that he was considered safe for five lacs.

2443. But he got with his firm 25 lacs?—It was obtained through Premchund Roychund for a general purpose.

2444. Kursondass Madhowdass in his evidence says, "No security was given for the loan of four lacs, security was given for the three loans of eight lacs, eight lacs, and five lacs. My firm consisted of Mayabhoy Premabhoy, Muggonbhoy Huttising, and Veerchund Deepchund, besides myself. The proposal was to buy one hundred Back Bay shares at 24,000 or 25,000 rupees premium. That was the ruling rate. The money was to be obtained from the Bank of Bombay as a fixed loan till the 1st of July 1865, on security of the shares. I believe that the two loans of eight lacs each were obtained by Mayabhoy Premabhoy and Muggonbhoy Huttising through Premchund's influence. The loan to me of five lacs was negotiated through Premchund with the Bank of Bombay. (Question.) Why were Premabhoy's and Premchund's names kept back? (Answer.) It never occurred to me that it was better to keep back their names. There was no reason for suppressing Premchund's name. He was a director of the bank at the time. The question of keeping back his name was never discussed between us." The real fact was, that although these partners' names were put forward, the real party to that transaction was Premchund himself. Then he speaks of Premabhoy Hemabhoy.—Premabhoy Hemabhoy was considered undoubted.

2445. You know nothing further as to this transaction?—No.

2446. I will refer you to the loan to the Eastern Financial Association. Do you remember that loan being arranged with you on the 18th of October 1864; and 10 lacs, that is 100,000*l.*, being paid across the counter upon no other security than a promissory note?—Was it passed by me?

2447. It must have been; you were secretary at that time, and were in Bombay.—It must have been through Premchund; it was one of these large loans which he must have brought to the bank.

2448. Premchund says in the Opinion Book, "We may safely advance 10 lacs." Did you make any inquiry about that Company?—Nothing further than that when they were trying to get additional money from the branches we stopped them.

2449. Do not you recollect such a large loan as that?—No.

2450. Do you not recollect Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff asking you to lend that sum?—No.

2451. On the 23d of March 1865, which was after your return, a cash credit was granted of two lacs to the same persons, although they had 10 lacs already; do you recollect that?—I do not recollect it.

2452. Do you recollect receiving a telegram from the Surat Branch on the 27th of March, and another on the 3d of April 1865, announcing that they were offered one lac on each day, and asking leave to accept them?—That was what I was alluding to, I think.

2453. Not if you stopped them. Did not you advise the discount of those sums?—Not that I recollect.

2454. We have it in evidence that you did. That makes just 14 lacs which you advanced to that Company. They obtained two lacs more at the Kurrachee Branch. There was altogether issued out of the Bank of Bombay without the least security 16,31,000 rupees to the Eastern Financial Association; that was during your time.—I can only say that the Company was strongly recommended by Premchund.

2455. Do you not recollect that you reprimanded the agent at Kurrachee for granting the last two lacs?—I do not recollect.

2456. You began to be alarmed at that time?—That is what I allude to; that on my return from Ajmere I found out that various constituents of the bank were endeavouring to get money at the branches, and letters were written to the agents to do no new business.

Mr. J. Blair.

17 Nov. 1868.

2457. On your return you advised the Surat agent to lend two lacs, and a few days afterwards you reprimanded the agent at Kurrachee; do not you recollect that?—No.

2458. I have not language to express what I think about such large sums going out upon promissory notes; what is your opinion?—Simply that Premchund strongly advised these large amounts.

2459. Do you mean to say that you would have done anything which Premchund recommended?—Nearly so, at that time; and I think the directors also, as he was in daily communication with the directors, and had every opportunity of speaking to them, and was trusted by everyone; he was considered a millionaire himself.

2460. Did not you know that the Eastern Financial Association was a bubble Association?—No.

2461. Did not you know that they were rigging the market, and buying up their own shares?—No.

2462. It was pretty well known in the market in Bombay; it was a subject afterwards of a suit in the High Court; it was proved distinctly that the directors went into the market to buy up their own shares.—I do not recollect that.

2463. Do you remember who was the secretary of that Financial Association?—He was one of their own people, brought up in the bank; it was Mr. Watson.

2464. Before him do you remember a man of the name of Edward Gunning Ryan?—I do remember Ryan.

2465. He came and negotiated that loan of 10 lacs?—Through Premchund.

2466. When you took that loan of 10 lacs why did you not take it in the name of the directors, as you did in the case of the Alliance Financial Association?—I do not remember. I presume that it was strongly upon the recommendation of Premchund.

2467. To take the name of Edward Gunning Ryan, a man worth nothing, and whom we examined in the hospital?—I do not recollect. I am sure that there could not be an account in his name.

2468. Cash credits were granted to the Eastern Financial Association by that name. Was not that a departure from the instructions which you had received in the Alliance Financial case? In the case of the Alliance Financial Association did not you receive instructions to take the loan in the name of the directors?—It was simply Premchund's advice.

2469. Do you think that if you advanced this money to the Compnay it was safe simply to take the name of the Secretary of the Company?—It must have been considered so by Premchund, if he recommended it.

2470. As a matter of business, as the secretary of the bank, do you think it was a safe thing?—I think so. I suppose that he must have been authorized to sign for the Company, and it was upon Premchund's strong recommendation that it was all safe.

2471. Was the Company registered at that time?—That I cannot say. It must have been. Does Mr. Ryan or Premchund say nothing about it?

2472. They tell the whole story. Premchund had so many Back Bay shares to sell, and the Eastern Financial Association dealt and trafficked in shares, and they agreed to buy these shares from Premchund Roychund, and so Premchund Roychund got the money from you and the money was paid to him. You were not aware of all this?—Not the slightest. I never heard of it.

2473. How can you justify allowing that advance by the Surat Branch when they had 12 lacs outstanding already?—I cannot recollect that transaction at all.

2474. A telegram came, and it was answered, we have the telegram.—I cannot recollect that point, was I present?

2475. Yes, you had returned from Ajmere then. Was there no reference to Premchund then?—I was guided entirely by him.

2476. Mr. Watson, the manager of the Eastern Financial Association, told us deliberately that he went to those branches, and got the money because he thought that he had had enough from the head office.—It was after I returned from Ajmere. Circular letters were written, upon these things being taken into consideration, namely, that natives were endeavouring to get money at other places. I recollect distinctly having these letters drafted out soon after my return from Ajmere, because it was at some of these places that they were getting this money, namely, at other branches.

2477. Dossabhoy Merwanjee and Company's transactions are the next which I wish to take; the first was on the 24th of February 1865.—I was absent.

2478. The next was on the 23d of May 1865?—I was at home.

2479. The next was on the 17th of March 1866?—I was at home.

2480. That is an important question for Mr. Robertson. Did you ever lend money on land?—Never, it was not allowed by the charter.

2481. You never did lend money on land?—Never.

2482. You never in your time considered yourself justified in lending money on land?—I dared not do so.

2483. Do you remember on the 18th of November 1864 discounting a bill for one lac for Hormusjee Jamsetjee?—I do not recollect; he must have been one of the Jamsetjee family.

2484. There was no security given for that loan in your time; and we find that Premchund Roychund recommended him to you as quite safe; is that your opinion?—I do not remember.

2485. Let us see whether you recollect another transaction. On the 6th of September 1864 the Imperial Banking and Trading Company got a discount of one lac from you, which they subsequently paid off?—I was then at Poonah.

2486. On the 8th of September 1864 they got five lacs; you were back then; do you recollect that?—Yes; it was strongly recommended by Premchund, but I do not recollect whether I passed it or not.

2487. Premchund did not say that he wanted to buy some of those shares?—No, it is not likely.

2488. Do you recollect on the 28th of March 1865 lending them three lacs more?—No.

2489. And on the 30th of March 1865 two lacs more? that makes 10 lacs to the Imperial Banking and Trading Company on no security?—I know that Premchund considered it first class, as he said, undoubted.

2490. Then I am to understand that you lent them 10 lacs solely upon the recommendation of Premchund?—Yes, it must have been so.

2491. You knew nothing of the Company yourself?—I knew nothing of the Company.

2492. You did not know that Premchund was entering into joint speculations with that Company in buying and selling shares?—Certainly not; or none of these loans would have been granted. Indeed, if it had been proved, I doubt whether he would have retained his seat at the board so long.

2493. Did not you ever by any chance refer any of the applications for these large loans to any of the directors besides Premchund Roychund?—No. I considered him quite sufficient.

2494. Do you remember lending Doongersey Gopajee the Muccadum of Merwanjee Framjee 2,50,000 rupees, and two lacs to Dhunjeebhoy Pestonjee, the nephew of Merwanjee Framjee?—No, I do not recollect it. They must have been all brought by Premchund.

2495. There is in reality 14½ lacs lent to the Imperial Banking and Trading Company; 10 lacs actually in the name of the Company, and the other 4½ in the names of the Muccadum and the nephew of the chairman of the Company, without any security. It is an enormous amount.—Premchund considered them undoubted.

2496. I will take you to one more case. Do you recollect Sorabjee, the younger brother of the Jejeebhoys?—Yes.

2497. Do you recollect advancing him five lacs upon a cash credit on the 4th of July 1864?—I do not recollect it.

2498. It was to Sorabjee and another, without any security.—It is impossible for me to recollect these transactions. The Jamsetjee family were considered undoubted. They were our oldest constituents.

2499. You do not recollect that transaction at all?—I do not.

2500. You do not recollect Premchund advising that transaction?—I do not, very likely he did; he he must have done it unless it was Sorabjee himself.

2501. Here is Premchund's letter (showing Exhibit A. 40 to the witness).—He was considered undoubted; he must have been.

2502. You have no doubt now on whose recommendation you granted that loan?—Certainly not; it must have been so.

2503. You seem to shield yourself under the protection of Premchund Roychund in every one of these loans?—Simply on his own evidence.

2504. And you say, either that you had not the knowledge, or that you did not exercise it, but that you rested upon the recommendation of Premchund Roychund as to the credit to be given to different native parties.—Certainly, I depended upon him.

2505. Are we to understand deliberately from you that the directors knew that this was your practice?—I have not the slightest doubt that they did, from Premchund being one of the board and in daily communication with the rest of the directors; and I am positive that it was all done for the best at the time.

2506. Do you think that it was legitimate or proper banking?—We had little else to go upon except personal security; government paper or railway shares were the only other things, and there was very little in the market to be advanced upon.

2507. Is it not the fact, to some extent, that there was too great an increase of capital?—That is found out now.

2508. You admit that the capital was too largely increased?—Certainly I think so; and it would not have been necessary to increase it to so great an extent if the Government had made over the treasuries at the branches, because the various agents wrote to us to say that if that had been the case many parties would have lodged as much as five lacs with them, but they were uncertain and would not do it. These are only the reports from the agents, there was one from Hyderabad, and one from Ahmedabad.

2509. Was that the ground put forward for the increase of capital?—No, I am only speaking of what might have been the case.

2510. When did the Government promise to hand over the balances?—It was understood that when we opened the branches the treasury balances would have been made over to us, the same as at the head office.

2511. Can you point out any letter authorizing the directors to expect that?—There is no letter that I am aware of.

2512. Can you point out any time when the Government promised to hand over the cash balances to the branches?—I think that it is acknowledged in the new charter, it was certainly understood so, and Sir Charles Wood was constantly written to upon it.

2513. Can you point out any letter in which the Government ever promised that as soon as you opened a branch they would hand over the cash balances at that place?—We always understood that they would do so. The Bank of Bengal had it, and we expected that on the same grounds, the same thing would be done with us. The great delay caused in the granting of our charter in Bombay gave them time to consider the matter, but they never refused us permission to open the branches, so that it was almost giving us consent to open the branches. To the best of my recollection when the new charter was adopted it was simply a sort of copy of the charter of the Bank of Bengal. I recollect a copy coming from the Bank of Bengal with the alterations or bye-laws, and the same was adopted by our directors before it came from the Council. You will find by the minutes that the Act was passed according to the revised charter of the Bank of Bengal; and the Bank of Bombay committee, to the best of my recollection, adopted the same until it was all altered by the Bombay Council.

2514. As respects that matter perhaps the Act was prepared in the bank parlour.—And was it with no reference to the Bank of Bengal copy?

2515. I dare say that they may have had it before them. I find that there is very little use in taking you through these loans, and I am not going through them, because upon every one of them you seem to rely entirely on the statements of the director. There is one more point. As to advancing upon shares, are you one of those who say that the bank did not advance upon shares?—I think that I have stated so before.

2516. Did you only advance upon shares as a collateral security?—Simply.

2517. What do you mean by the words "collateral security"?—Simply that the directors could make use of the shares should they find it necessary to do so, and thus indemnify the bank.

2518. Collateral security I understand to be security existing side by side with some other security. What were the shares collateral to?—Some of the loans were on personal security.

2519. What other security were the shares collateral to?—Personal security, that is all that I know of.

2520. They were collateral to what?—I cannot answer your question.

2521. Were not they collateral to promissory notes?—To personal security.

2522. And were not the promissory notes collateral to the shares?—It was only on personal security that the loans were granted.

2523. Was not almost every one of those transactions, at any rate after the 12th of April 1865, upon an agreement that the money should be advanced upon a promissory note and shares?—I do not recollect.

2524. Suppose that you lent money upon a promissory note, and by some subsequent agreement took shares as security, then you might say that you had taken them as collateral security.—Most of these shares were lodged afterwards were not they?

2525. Some of them were, but when you lent directly on a promissory note and the deposit of shares, was not the loan on shares?—It would look so.

2526. And is it not stated expressly in this resolution of the 12th of April 1865, "Resolved that the Secretary be authorized to advance on the shares of the under-noted Companies"?—Yes.

2528. (Major Innes.) When did you first join the bank?—In December 1853.

2529. You were in that bank for about 12 years?—Exactly.

2530. And you were experienced in bank management?—Yes; under the directors.

2531. You were experienced in bank management?—I should have been.

2532. What were your views as to the actual duties of the secretary?—To act under the directors' orders.

2533. As a clerk, or as the responsible secretary.

Mr. J. Blair.
17 Nov. 1868.

Were you to know nothing, or were you to be the responsible secretary, knowing the business of the bank, and conducting its business?—The latter I should think, as far as possible.

2534. All that you have told us is what you did not know. You say that you did not know the status of these people to whom you were giving money, and that you acted upon Premchund's advice, and you say that you did not inquire into the advances during your temporary absence.—It was utterly impossible.

2535. Then what did you do in discharge of your responsibility?—There was the opening of the letters from 10 o'clock.

2536. What was your salary?—Latterly it was 2,500; shortly before coming away it had been increased.

2537. What did you do which a clerk on 300 or 400 rupees a month could not have done?—I cannot mention that.

2538. What did you do as the secretary on a large salary?—I had a general supervision over the bank.

2539. Did you supervise it?—Most assuredly, as much as I could.

2540. Did you consider yourself responsible for investigating cases in your temporary absence from duty?—The person acting for me was responsible.

2541. And you did not consider yourself responsible to find out what he had done?—No, he was acting under the direction of the directors.

2542. Was it any part of your duty to see that the minute book was right?—I always read over the minute book at the meetings of the directors.

2543. Was it your duty to see that everything was entered in the minutes which should have been entered?—They were read over.

2544. Were not you responsible for entering in them all that should have been entered?—They were generally copied by a clerk, and I never heard that anything was wrong. The scroll minutes were copied and read over on the next Thursday.

2545. Did you not consider yourself responsible for any omission in the minutes of all grave discussions as to the introduction of new business?—Certainly, it should be put on the minutes and read over and confirmed by the directors; the minutes were always acknowledged.

2546. I am talking of an omission from the minutes of what ought to have been put on the minutes.—I never heard of any omissions.

2547. You said that on the introduction of the system of advances on a single name the matter was discussed, and that the directors were unanimous as to the propriety of the introduction of that class of business, and that therefore it was done without any further authority. Was not it a matter which should have been entered upon the minutes when such a change of business took place?—The minutes were entered and read over to the directors.

2548. Was the introduction of such grave business as that deliberately omitted from the minutes?—Everything was entered upon the minutes that was passed by the directors.

2549. Was that change of business entered upon the minutes?—I cannot say.

2550. If it was discussed should it not have been entered?—Certainly not, if no resolution was passed. All resolutions of the directors were entered in the scroll minutes, and copied fair by one of the clerks into the minute book, which was on the next Thursday read by me, or by the person acting for me, to the whole of the directors, and confirmed by the directors.

2551. Was not it a part of your duty to see that when any grave business was done at a meeting it should take the proper shape, and be entered upon the minutes?—Certainly not. The directors would see their own resolution.

2552. The resolution to advance upon personal security only, does not appear there.—It was shown to me yesterday, and acknowledged.

2553. You say that this grave change of business of advancing upon personal security only was introduced by the board; you say that your authority for it was an approval at a meeting; there is no record of it in the minutes, and I wish to find out from you in what shape you got that authority; ought it not to have been put in the shape of a resolution, and to have been entered on the minutes?—I understood that it was.

2554. Was not it your business to see that the Opinion Book was properly kept up, if you were to be responsible?—It was given up; it was dropped.

2555. With a tacit understanding?—Yes, with a note from the Consulting Director.

2556. Could you produce any authority for that?—It was simply in the proceedings which were constantly adopted.

2557. You stopped the Opinion Book because you referred to a director?—I did not stop it. Sir Charles Jackson has referred as far back as 1854.

2558. Then you could not consider yourself responsible for the opinions in the Opinion Book?—Certainly not, when Premchund recommended it.

2559. You considered it unnecessary for your protection?—I considered his word perfectly good, as all the other directors did.

2560. Do you recollect the circumstance of your becoming secretary?—Certainly.

2561. Who proposed and seconded you as secretary?—I do not remember. It was very much against my wish. I was rather against accepting it, and I wish that I had not accepted it.

2562. You cannot remember the name of the book which you say you introduced to keep the board informed of all advances?—It had no particular name; it was a general book for the directors' guidance.

2563. When did you begin it?—Soon after I came from Ajmere on the 14th of March 1865.

2564. And when did you give up the management of the bank?—In April.

2565. It was then about a month at the outside that you could have had the book?—It was on finding out that the people were getting money from the branches.

2566. Did you ever see that book on the table?—Yes; it was constantly being written up; it would take a long time to make these regular entries.

2567. You say that it was constantly there; there could only have been two or three meetings after you came back; have you any recollection at how many meetings it was there?—I do not recollect.

2568. Do you recollect whether it attracted attention?—At the last meeting I recollect Mr. Hannay seeing it particularly.

2569. Have you any recollection of the form of the book?—It was a large book, like a ledger.

2570. Was the form in which it was ruled and drawn up like a ledger?—I do not recollect it.

2571. Have you no recollection in what shape that book was kept by you?—Every item as far as I recollect was in it.

2572. Did it not strike you as a difficult thing to prepare?—There was a great deal to do, and one man was specially put apart for preparing that book, he had nothing else to do.

2573. Who was it?—Mr. Duncan.

2574. Had not he charge of the past due bills in your time?—I forget; it was in the accountant's department.

2575. You were not responsible for the accountant's department?—I had a general supervision over the whole. All these men were picked men sent out from home, and, as far as possible, I looked after them to the best of my power.

2576. Who else was cognisant of this book besides Mr. Duncan?—Mr. Robertson.

2577. Anybody else?—All in the office.

2578. Should Mr. Rodgie have been cognisant of it?—Certainly.

2579. Must he have known of it?—I should think

Mr. J. Blair.
17 Nov. 1868.

so, because he was acting for Mr. Robertson in his absence on my return from Ajmere.

2580. Would Mr. M'Lean know of it?—He was the deputy accountant.

2581. Would he have known of it?—I think so; certainly.

2582. (President.) Was the book to be kept in the shape of a ledger, or in the form of a list of outstandings?—It was in the most distinct form possible, so that you could see what every man had.

2583. Then it was not to be kept in the shape of a ledger?—Every man had his own heading.

2584. His own page of the ledger?—Yes.

2585. (Major Innes.) I am to understand that there was a book of that kind in which each debtor to the bank had a page to himself, and each transaction was entered?—Yes.

2586. For instance, if Premchund Roychund had two or three bills discounted, two or three cash credits, and two or three loans, all those items would appear?—They must appear.

2587. Have you any idea how the balance would appear?—All the items were entered, showing it each day.

2588. You actually saw that book in existence?—The book was being worked. I saw the book myself frequently.

2589. How did it work?—I wish that it had been commenced sooner; we had not an opportunity, unfortunately.

Adjourned to Friday, the 20th November, at 11 o'clock.

Friday, 20th November 1868.

PRESENT:

President.

Sir Charles Jackson.

Member.

Major McLeod Innes.

Secretary.

F. D. Chauntrell, Esq.

Mr. R. McIlwraith.
20 Nov. 1868.

Robert McIlwraith sworn and examined.

2590. (President.) I believe that you were a commercial director of the Bank of Bombay?—I was.

2591. When were you elected a director?—On the 4th December 1862.

2592. When did you resign?—The last meeting which I attended was on the 22nd of December 1864.

2593. I believe that you were a member of the firm of Nicol and Company?—I was and am.

2594. Did you attend regularly at the Bank?—As regularly as the other duties which I had to undertake permitted.

2595. Does that mean merely on board days?—On board days simply.

2596. You were a director when the Act No. 10 of 1863 was passed?—I was a director when it was passed, but it had been under consideration for a considerable period before I became a director.

2597. What am I to understand from that answer; do you mean that all discussion on the subject of the Act was closed at the time when you became a director?—No; but on referring to the minutes of the first meeting at which I sat, I observed that there were some minor points only discussed, for instance, the question of obtaining power to grant bills on London for convenience to constituents.

2598. That was refused by the Secretary of State?—It was. Another point was also discussed at a subsequent meeting on the 2nd February 1863.

2599. What was that?—There was a letter from the Government. May I be permttted to look at the minutes?

2600. Certainly. (The Minutes were handed to the Witness who reads as follows:—"The secretary drew attention to the fact that the draft Act for the re-incorporation and re-constitution of the Bank had been published in a supplement of the Government Gazette of the 28th ultimo, and circulated; stating that the Act would be read a first time in the Legislative Council on Wednesday next.") At that meeting a committee was appointed to watch over the interests of the Bank during the passing of the Act.

2601. Who were on that committee?—Mr. Michael Scott, Mr. Tristram, and the Honourable Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy.

2602. But you were not on the committee at the time when the draft bill was before it?—No, I had nothing whatever to do with the preparation of the draft bill.

2603. Do you remember the leading provisions of the old Act, and how far they differed from the new one?—I had never had experience of the old Act. I had never been a director under the old Act, in fact I was a novice altogether and knew very little on the subject. I knew that alterations had been made, because they had been pointed out.

2604. You were a director under the old Act for some months?—I became a director in December 1862, and I think that the Act was finally completed in March 1863, although it was not published until the following August.

2605. It was published on the 1st of August, and until that time, during those eight months, you acted under the old Act?—Yes.

2606. Did you approve of those alterations? Take the most important. The new Act authorized you to discount negotiable securities generally, without having the security of two independent firms; it enabled you to discount promissory notes or bills, which would not have been allowed under the old Act. Do you think that was a wise alteration?—I saw no reason to find fault with it at the time.

2607. Do you think that it is a prudent system of banking to lend money upon mere promissory notes?—It entirely depends upon the standing of the person borrowing.

2608. Yes; but that would be giving a discretion to somebody to ascertain who were the proper parties, would it not?—In all banking a discretion must be given as to the parties to whom loans are granted, whether on single names or double.

2609. Do you not think that it would have been safer in a Government Bank to put some restriction upon that?—It might have been.

2610. Do you think that it was wise to allow you (for this was another restriction removed) to discount negotiable securities without any limit as to time? The old Act prescribed three months, the new Act left it quite open, and you might grant (as it seems you did afterwards) loans for ten months.—No loans for ten months were ever given with my cognizance.

2611. But there is no doubt about the fact from the books. Loans were granted on promissory notes for 10 and 11 months.—I certainly disapprove, as a banker, of such long transactions.

Mr. R. McIlwraith.

20 Nov. 1868.

2612. Long loans of that sort are apt to become dead loans, are they not?—There is no doubt that the longer the transactions, the greater the risk.

2613. The new Act gave a power of granting cash credits generally without any security whatever being taken. Do you think that that was wise?—As I said before, with regard to all loans, it depends entirely upon the parties to whom they are granted.

2614. Do you think that it was a safe measure in a place like Bombay where people were so much connected with each other, more or less, to have so wide a discretion?—I am not aware that in Bombay, at that time, there was a greater connexion, than in any other place. I think not at that time; at that time there was comparatively little joint-stock operation.

2615. At the time when the bill passed?—Yes.

2616. The old Act provided that there was to be no advance by way of discount, loan, or cash credit, exceeding the amount of three lacs; that restriction was removed. Do you think that that was a prudent measure?—I think that the restriction was excedingly irksome in some cases, because many people were certainly entitled to credit to a much larger amount than three lacs, owing to the wealth which had accumulated in Bombay since the original Act was passed.

2617. But do you not think that in connexion with the power of lending money simply upon promissory notes and negotiable securities, accommodation bills, for instance, it was very dangerous to open the door and to enlarge the amount?—It may have been dangerous, but I do not know that in the most prudently conducted banking institutions in this country any similar limit reducing the discretion of the directors is customary. I do not think that there is any similar limit. I think that the amount of credit granted in this country is proportioned to what is known of the means of the borrowers.

2619. Do you mean to say that it is the practice of a banker in this country to give, for instance, an advance of a quarter of a million to one firm upon a mere promissory note?—Amongst the exchange bankers of London I do not suppose that even that amount would be considered very extraordinary.

2620. Would you yourself have advanced the money of the Bank of Bombay, if you had known it at the time, upon mere promissory notes to natives in India?—It would have depended entirely upon what I knew of the people who were wanting the money at the time. When I was in Bombay, at the time when I was leaving, I would have granted unlimited credit so far as my means went. I may mention, as an example, that for one man I had a simple verbal authority to purchase a diamond for 80,000*l.*, and I committed my firm to that extent without the slightest hesitation. I instance that as a proof of the confidence which I had in some of the men in Bombay at that time.

2621. Whatever you might do, do you think that it is prudent banking to lend large amounts of money upon a mere promissory note?—Any opinion which I can give upon that matter must be merely theoretical, because I never had any transaction with any bank except the Bank of Bombay.

2622. The old Act prevented anybody from overdrawing his account, that restriction was excluded from the new Act. Did you approve of that alteration?—I presume that in excluding that, it was only meant to provide for trifling overdrafts by oversight; I do not think that it had reference to any other transactions.

2623. You do not think that it would have authorized an overdraft for twenty lacs?—I can only speak of what I presume to have been the reason for excluding the restriction at the time when the new Act was granted. For the abuse of that, if it was an abuse, I do not think that the absence of the restriction can be quite held responsible.

2624. The old Act required the consent of the Governor General in Council to any increase of the capital; the new Act had no such provision; it left it open to the proprietors themselves to do what they liked with respect to increasing the capital up to 2,100,000*l.* Do you think that that was prudent?—I think that so far as the increase of capital was concerned there was nothing particularly imprudent in it.

2625. Of which increase are you speaking?—There were three increases; there was first an increase of half a million, I think, that that might be very fairly done. I think that there was an immense necessity for an increase of the capital of the Bank of Bombay when I joined it.

2626. And there was an increase first of half a million?—Yes.

2627. There was afterwards an increase of another half a million?—I think that both these increases were judicious.

2628. Then there was a third increase of another half a million?—I think that that was still judicious.

2629. Do you think that there was room for the safe employment of so large a capital as that in Bombay?—I think certainly so, at certain seasons of the year. But why I approved of the increase of the capital was that the Bank of Bombay at that time was the custodian, not only of the Government money, but of the balances of all the exchange banks, and without a very enlarged capital the Bank of Bombay was quite at the mercy of these exchange banks at any time that they chose to create a tightness in money. Moreover, at certain seasons of the year, I have known the Bank of Bombay unable to discount Mint certificates, simply because their capital was quite insufficient. It seemed to me fatal to the safety of the Bank of Bombay that that Bank should be going on discounting with other people's money the local applications for discount; and that they required, in order to have security, a large capital of their own. They were restricted from other business, from exchange business, and in my mind that only increased the necessity for an enlarged capital. I would point here to the Bank of England with a capital of fourteen millions and would compare it with their liabilities. The Bank of Bombay having two millions, its capital was absurdly small in proportion to its liabilities to the exchange banks, and to the other depositors, and to the Government.

2630. If the Bank, as you say, was liable to a sudden call to a very large amount by these exchange banks, was it not necessary that they should have all their securities easily convertible?—There is no doubt whatever that all bankers ought to have their securities as easily convertible as possible, but the Bank of Bombay had no resource to go to, they must be self contained; so that convertible securities to them merely meant securities maturing at a certain time.

2631. You must remember that besides their capital they had large cash balances of the Government.—Yes, but those were liable to be wanted upon short notice.

2632. The balance was between 30 and 40 lacs, and if the Government drew below 30 lacs they had to pay interest.—Yes. The Bank of Bombay had no power of converting their securities, because they had no place to go to to convert them.

2633. I mean securities easily realized.—The securities of that nature which the Bank of Bombay could hold were only Government paper; they could not sell all their private discounts; they could not re-discount, because they had no place to go to at which to re-discount them; and therefore their convertible securities, as private securities, were simply those which were maturing at certain known times.

2634. Ought not they to be convertible at very short periods?—Their limit at that time, I think, was 90 days' sight for advances, and I think that that was quite reasonable.

2635. I will go to another point. The Bank were entirely prohibited under the old Act from advancing on bank shares or the certificates of any shares; and instead of that they had power granted to them by the new Act of advancing on the shares of all public companies in India. Did you approve of that alteration?—I do not know, and cannot tax my memory as to the fact of my being aware of that alteration, or not, at the time when it was made; but I do not say that such a power, in certain circumstances, was not an advantage to the Bank.

2636. At all events I suppose that you would have limited that power in some way, and not have allowed advances on the premia of shares, or on shares the calls upon which were not paid up?—Prudence would certainly have dictated some such condition.

2637. As far as I can collect from your evidence, the provisions of the new Act did not startle you, and you did not consider them altogether prudent; is that the substance of your evidence?—Generally speaking I think it is; at any rate, I saw nothing at that time to find fault with, and I certainly did not find fault with anything; it may have been from inexperience.

2638. Would you not have found fault with advancing on shares, if you had anticipated that the Bank would have advanced upon the premia of shares, or rendered itself liable for calls upon shares not paid up?—It is almost impossible for me to say; judging by the subsequent course of events, no doubt it would have been right to have made provision against that.

2639. Were you a party to the resolution of the 6th of August 1863, forbidding any advance on shares without its being brought before the board?—I was present at the meeting at which that resolution was passed.

2640. Did you approve of that resolution?—It is impossible for me to state positively whether I did or did not; no doubt I considered it prudent.

2641. You did not long remain of that opinion, did you?—No; at least it appears so.

2642. I believe that on the 14th of September 1863 Mr. Ryland, who was acting as secretary, proposed that that rule should be rescinded, did he not?—I am not quite sure whether it was in that form or not.

2643. This is what he proposed, as appears by the scroll minute (Exhibit A 132:) "With reference to board resolution of 6th ultimo, it is now resolved that the secretary may exercise his discretion in making advances to persons of undoubted respectability, on their signing a promissory note for the amount advanced, payable on demand, and depositing with the Bank shares in railway companies, guarantees by Government, or shares in the following institutions—the Oriental Bank, the Chartered Mercantile Bank, the Agra Bank, the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China, the Commercial Bank, the Central Bank of Western India, the Comptoir d'Escompte de Paris; such shares not to be transferred into the Bank's name, but to be held simply as collateral security: the margin to be advanced on such shares to be also left to the discretion of the secretary." That was the proposal of Mr. Ryland, that is his handwriting, and his signature, is it not?—Yes.

2644. I believe that you made a minute on that?—I did.

2645. Will you read that minute?—It is as follows: "I would suggest that shares in the Bank of Madras (many of which are held here) be added, and with that addition, that the resolution be formally proposed on Thursday. If all the directors agree, the secretary may act on it in anticipation. The depositor of shares, I understand, signs a blank transfer paper, and signs a letter stating that they are deposited as collateral security."

2646. Mr. Gavin Steel wrote another minute, in which he said that he had no objection to it, but thought that there should be a better security. Then followed a strong protest from Cowasjee Jehangeer. His English is not very good, but it is quite clear that his objection is very strong indeed. He says: "I decidedly protest against advancing on any other bank shares, on the following ground: no security of registry of shares to our Bank, because the opposite bank has lien on its own share; respectability is of no use if pledger is a poor man; all the banks' shares are now got up, by one artifice or other, in value, and fluctuate by 20 per cent. to 25 per cent. in every few weeks. How the margin is to be settled on these shares; it is utterly impossible to do so under present circumstances, and our bank lead in a bad example, first of this kind, and introduce into Bombay as yet practice considered so dangerous that none of our joint-stock banks does advance on other bank shares; lastly, such practice will induce greatly more gaming in shares. I ask my colleagues, for instance, how they keep faith on other bank shares value when each one is increased by 100 and 200 per cent. advanced abruptly. I would wait, and never to have this sort of dangerous business for the present. If I am not in order, my colleagues must forgive me when I say that if this dangerous practice is introduced now, I, as proprietor, would lay the bare fact before my co-proprietors in a general meeting to be called for the purpose." In a subsequent minute he says: "Another argument for to-morrow's meeting, for consideration, I submit, is the shares are not easily realizable, and consequently against sound banking principle." Do you remember that?—I do.

2647. Limjee Manockjee, I think, rather supported Cowasjee Jehangeer, did he not?—I think so.

2648. Then came an opinion of Mr. Inverarity?—He says: "Section 32, clause 1, gives us authority, supposing the banks mentioned are public companies." He had some doubt as to what were public companies, but he adds: "I do object to large balances being allowed to lie in the bank perfectly idle, as has been the case all this monsoon; and if the new charter allows us to deal as above discussed, we should not be doing our duty to the proprietors did we not avail ourselves of the latitude and field allowed. The Bank loans would be in proportion to the par value of the stock placed with us, not according to the market value, as apparently supposed by Mr. Cowasjee Jehangeer."

2649. You remember that discussion, do you?—I do.

2650. It came on before the board, I think, on the 17th of September 1863, did it not, and a resolution was passed which overruled your view?—Quite so.

2651. That resolution was as follows: "Resolved, That the secretary be authorized to make advances on stock, or shares, in Indian railway companies guaranteed by Government, without such stock or shares being transferred into the name of the Bank, on the borrower signing a form of agreement to be prepared by the Bank's solicitor." The board resolved only to advance on the shares of the Indian railway companies, which a former Act allowed them to do before Act 10 of 1863 was passed; is that so?—Yes.

2652. What part did Mr. Birch take in that resolution; was he there?—I rather think that he was absent, but I cannot say; it is impossible for my memory to serve me upon it. Though the minute which I made may appear injudicious, it was based, to a certain extent, on the undoubted respectability of the applicants for advances on shares; but I do not regret in the least degree the resolution having been carried, because it clearly laid down that no shares were thenceforth to be advanced upon, and that settled the matter for me, so long as I remained in India.

2653. You were not aware then that shares were advanced upon during the time in which you were a director?—Not to my knowledge.

2654. You are not aware that there was a practical rescision of that resolution of the 6th of August 1863?—I am not aware of that.

2655. You are not aware that a thin disguise was adopted of this sort—that the secretary advanced the money on condition that the share certificates should be deposited with the Bank, not as security but for safe custody?—No, I did not know of that.

Mr. R. McIlwraith.

20 Nov. 1868.

2656. You are not aware of that being the practice?—Not to the best of my recollection. I have not the least recollection of any transaction of that kind.

2657. Were you aware of cash credits being granted on personal security; that is to say, upon a promissory note without any security, during the latter part of 1863, and throughout the whole of 1864?—Not in 1863, so far as my memory serves me. I have no recollection of any in 1863.

2658. Do you recollect it being done before the 2nd of June 1864?—I think that I must have been aware of it about that time.

2659. It is material, because there was a resolution passed about it on the 2nd of June 1864; do you recollect hearing before the 2nd of June that there was such a practice?—(After looking at the minutes) I do not think that I was aware of it before that time.

2660. You will see from this book (handing exhibit A 33 to the witness) that many cash credits were granted upon personal security in 1863. Were you aware that any cash credits were granted upon personal security before the 2nd of June 1864?—So far as my memory serves me, I say no.

2661. Ought not cash credits to have been entered in the application book?—I should say so, certainly.

2662. Were you in the habit of looking at the application book?—Yes; in a general way at the meetings, very often in the intervals of the other business.

2663. What would be the effect if these cash credits were not entered in the application book?—Then I do not think that I should be aware of them.

2664. In point of fact none of these are so entered. Did you ever see this book (A 33) before?—No.

2665. Did you ever see these books, which are the books showing the interest payable on these cash credits upon personal security (handing Exhibits A 28, 29, and 30 to the witness)?—No, I never saw those before.

2666. Were you present at the board on the 2nd of June 1864?—No.

2667. Were you at the next meeting when the minutes of the 2nd June were read?—I was at the meeting of the 9th of June 1864.

2668. Then you must have had those minutes read to you?—I presume so.

2669. Just turn to that minute of the 2nd of June 1864?—It is here.

2670. Were you aware then that there was an authority for granting cash credits in a single name without security?—I think that I must have become aware of it about that time.

2671. Can you tell us in whose handwriting that scroll minute is (handing Exhibit A 48 to the witness); Mr. Blair was unable to say, the correction is his own?—No, I do not know this handwriting.

2672. Is it Mr. Robertson's?—I should say not; it is not like his signature.

2673. There is no signature there. Is not the handwriting Mr. Robertson's?—I cannot say.

2674. Is it Mr. Ryland's?—No; I should say that it is not Mr. Ryland's, it is very like the handwriting of these minutes (referring to the minute book).

2675. Then I am to suppose that you assented to the granting of cash credits upon the promissory note of the borrower without any security whatever?—No doubt I did.

2676. Do you think that it was a wise and prudent measure to vest that authority in the secretary?—It does not appear to me that it was vested in the secretary.

2677. Practically it was. The directors did not reserve it to themselves to do so, but they resolved that such cash credits should be granted, and the secretary acted upon that resolution. Was not it your intention that the secretary should act upon it?—So far as I recollect it was not the intention.

2678. But is there any resolution which leads you to that conclusion?—There is no allusion to any change in the system on which loans were previously granted.

2679. But was it not a fact that at that time the secretary was in the habit of granting large loans upon his own responsibility?—I do not think that he had any authority from the board on record justifying his doing so.

2680. Was there any resolution of the board restricting his authority, except that of the 6th of August 1863?—I think that that resolution of the 6th of August 1863 was almost sufficient.

2681. That was only with reference to loans upon shares?—True; but the shares formed an additional security, so that I think that it would be intended that, when no security at all was taken, greater care should be exercised.

2682. That resolution of the 6th of August 1863 does not contain the words "as additional security"?—Loans were to be granted to persons of undoubted respectability on their giving collateral security.

2683. Are those the terms of the resolution of the 6th of August 1863?—I think that it is so, it is to that effect at least.

2684. Were any byelaws passed?—No byelaws were passed.

2685. Ought not byelaws to have provided to what extent the secretary should be authorized to advance?—The byelaws ought to have defined the general system on which the Bank was worked, as I understand.

2686. There were no such byelaws, and no resolution, except that of the 6th of August 1863?—There was a general custom providing, as far as my memory serves me, that the power was reserved to the directors.

2687. The resolution of the 6th of August 1863 is as follows: "Resolved, that for the present, and until further orders, any application for advances on any bank shares, or other public companies, other than Government banks, be submitted to the board, and not made by the secretary." There is not a word about any other security.—No; but I think that, if it was necessary to restrict the power of the secretary in advances with security, it was doubly necessary in advances without security. As far as my recollection serves me, it had been the custom to grant loans without security. Applications for loans were submitted to the board, or to three directors. It was the custom to read out the names of the directors for the ensuing week, and the practice should have been to submit these loans to these directors. That, as I understood, was the object of it, and I recollect applications for loans being circulated in a box and the opinions of the directors were recorded on them, as to whether they should be granted or not.

2688. We have only found about fifteen of those discount minutes for the whole of the year 1864, which were referred to the weekly committee, and Mr. Blair in his evidence has said that in the year 1864 he found there was very little use in consulting the European directors about the credit of native parties, and that under some special sanction he consulted only one native director.—He might have given the European directors, who were ready and willing to do their duty, an opportunity to do it at least. If there was a change in the practice I think that he is responsible for it.

2689. There is no doubt that he incurred great responsibility, but that is not the question. I want to know whether you were aware of that change in the practice?—I was not aware, so far as my memory serves me, of any change in the practice up to that time.

2690. Up to the time when you left the Bank, were not you aware that the reference to the weekly committee had almost fallen into disuse, and that the applications for native loans were referred to one director, namely, Premchund Roychund?—I only attended one meeting of the board with Premchund Roychund, which was in August 1864; and I did not know that it was the custom to refer to him. Up to that time I think that the custom had been to consult Cowasjee Jehangeer.

2691. You are quite right. It was the custom to consult Cowasjee Jehangeer, and everything went right so long as that was the case. Up to June 1864 there was, I think, only one loss (there is a dispute about another); but from the time when he retired was not it the practice always to consult Premchund Roychund?—Not to my knowledge. I was not aware of its being the practice at that time; if it was the practice, it was without my knowledge.

2692. Mr. Blair says that he believes that all the directors were aware that he was doing it.—I will only speak for myself, and I am certain that I was not aware that Premchund was the referee in loans to natives.

2693. He was not on the direction after September 1864.—No, he was not.

2694. And he joined again in December 1864.—Yes; he joined again, I think, the day after I left.

2695. Would you have approved of the references being made to Premchund when he was not a director?—In former years, when he was, as was considered, the broker to the Bank, it was customary to refer the brokers at the local branches to Premchund, and sometimes to Cowasjee Jehangeer, and sometimes to Rustomjee Jejeebhoy.

2696. You were not aware that at the head office Premchund was the constant referee?—I was not.

2697. And that Mr. Blair considered himself justified in making any advance, as he told us the other day, if he had Premchund's sanction?—I was not aware of it. I never delegated such a power to Premchund.

2698. You never heard of such a power having been delegated to Premchund by the board?—Not while I was in Bombay at that time; and I am certain that it never was.

2699. Not verbally?—Not verbally.

2700. Were you aware of fixed loans of large amounts being granted on promissory notes without any security?—No, I was not aware of it.

2701. Were you aware that there were any large loans in one name?—No.

2702. You never heard of large advances for long periods, eight or ten months for instance?—I never heard of them until this Commission discovered them.

2703. We will take a few specimens. We will take the case of the Eastern Financial Association on the 18th October 1864. Were you aware that on that day the sum of ten lacs was advanced to the Eastern Financial Association on a promissory note signed by its secretary Mr. Ryan?—No. I never heard of it until it was disclosed by the Commission.

2704. Were you aware that the secretary claimed the power to grant, and did actually grant, such a loan?—I was not.

2705. Were you in the habit of looking at the daily book?—I was; it was circulated in a box, and was looked at.

2706. Look at the daily book (Exhibit A 8 handed to the witness). If you had looked at it on the next day, you would have seen under the head of "Bombay Bills" ten lacs and upwards amongst the items of the day before.—I might very easily have passed it unnoticed.

2707. It does not contain any name, but it shows that above ten lacs had gone out the day before. You think that that would not have been sufficient to attract your notice?—Most probably not. To the best of my recollection I did not carefully scrutinize the items in these balances, but looked at the balance of the day's transactions to see how the balance at the Bank remained. I do not think that I went critically into the different items composing the daily balances.

2708. There is nothing there to show upon what security that advance was made. That was a short loan. I will take the case of Byramjee Hormusjee Cama. On the 14th October 1864 he had a fixed loan of seven lacs; did you hear of that?—No, I have no recollection of it, and I do not believe that it ever came under my notice.

2709. He had at that time cash credits out, one for three lacs, and another for one lac, without security. I believe that that loan was for a long period. There were several for very long periods made payable on the 1st of July 1865, the opium settling day.—No; I think that the 1st of July 1865 was the settling day for Back Bay shares. I never heard of such loans in the transactions of the Bank, to the best of my belief.

2710. Was not it the duty of the secretary to lay all these transactions before you?—Most certainly.

2711. And they ought to have appeared in the application book?—Certainly.

2712. What is your excuse for your supervision not being sufficiently accurate to detect them?—I never considered it incumbent upon me, as a director, to do more than attend the meetings, and give such opinions as I had on what came before me at the meetings, and I think that my responsibility ended there. My own business would have prevented my doing more I think than that, and had more been required I think that I should have resigned.

2713. Who did you fancy was supervising the management of the Bank. You did not leave it derelict, did you?—The secretary had charge, and I think that the chairman certainly had an extra responsibility.

2714. Do you happen to know whether the president did assume any extra responsibility or not?—He took the chair at the meetings; he conducted the business, and said when the business was ended.

2715. You do not know, of your own knowledge, that he did in fact supervise the Bank's proceedings at all?—I have no means of knowing that.

2716. In point of fact, who did attend at the Bank besides the secretary?—I cannot say on what the conviction is founded, but the impression which I had at the time was that Mr. Birch was supervising and taking more than ordinary care of the business. Mr. Birch I regarded, and do regard, as an able man; and my belief at that time (whether correctly or incorrectly founded I cannot say), was that Mr. Birch was doing his duty as chairman of the Bank.

2717. Did the president, so far as you know, keep any private note book of his transactions?—I have not the least idea. I never saw any private note book of his on the board table, to the best of my memory.

2718. Was he in the habit of having an understanding with the secretary, and not formally entering it on the minutes?—I never heard of anything of the sort.

2719. Was there any practice of having some understanding, and not writing it on the minutes, but entering it in the private book of the president?—I never heard of anything of the sort.

2720. Did not the month of July 1864 find you with a great deal more money than you knew what to do with lying in the bank?—I believe that the balances at that time were very large.

2721. Was not there a great pressure to get it out at that time?—I do not know that the Bank officers were using pressure, but they were no doubt anxious to get the funds employed with the view of paying a dividend.

2722. Was not it a fact that the great object was to get high interest?—I presume that income to a banker is always an important consideration, and no doubt an income or a dividend was an object to the executive.

2723. Were not the ruling rates of interest enormously high about that time?—I do not recollect what the rates were at the time.

2724. We see them as high as 13, 14, and 15 per cent. upon most of the loans during 1864.—During the monsoon of 1864?

2725. I will not undertake to say in July, but in the latter part of June those were the ruling rates.—I do not recollect the rates at the time.

Mr. R. McIlwraith.

2726. There was no pressure, to your knowledge, put upon the secretary to advance money, and not to be particular about the security?—Not at all that I am aware of.

2727. It is fair to tell you that from the 1st of June 1864 till about the 1st of May 1865 was about the most disastrous time of the Bank. From the 1st of June 1864 till the end of April 1865 there were large loans, and the losses from them have been enormous. During a great portion of that time you were a director. The six months between the 1st June 1864 and the end of the year were the worst six months of the time. Have you any explanation to give us of a system which resulted in such disastrous loss?—The only explanation which I can give of it is that there were transactions not submitted to the directors.

2729. When did you leave India?—On the 29th of December 1864.

2730. What was your opinion of Mr. Blair?—I never thought Mr. Blair a sufficiently able man to manage the Bank of Bombay.

2731. Was not that also the opinion of Mr. Michael Scott?—I cannot say; he was a greater personal friend of Mr. Scott's than he was of mine; that is to say, he was more intimate with him. But I had no means of knowing what Mr. Michael Scott's opinion was.

2732. Did not Mr. Michael Scott endeavour to get him removed two or three times?—I am not able to say that.

2733. Then you are not able to say whether Mr. Birch stood his friend and resisted it?—I cannot say.

2734. If you thought that Mr. Blair was not such an efficient man as he ought to have been for such a Bank as that, surely you ought to have seen that he was removed?—I had no evidence of his incapacity.

2735. In fact, as I understand it, your case is that the whole matter was concealed from you?—So far as my memory serves me it was completely so as to those disastrous loans; but, certainly, the loans to Rustomjee Jamsetjee I should have made without any hesitation.

2736. Should you have made them to Sorabjee? He used to be called the "poet," and Rustomjee the "man of business."—I certainly had nothing like the faith in Sorabjee that I had in Rustomjee.

2737. You lent Sorabjee five lacs without any security?—Sorabjee was reputed at that time to have a good deal of money and property.

2738. Were you engaged in the share speculations of 1864?—I never trafficked in shares, that is to say, I never bought and sold shares.

2739. The allegations are made in certain publications which, no doubt, you have seen, and it is my duty to ask you these questions. Can you tell us what allotments you received during the year 1864?—I do not know whether the Joint Stock Bank was established in 1864 or 1863.

2740. It was established in 1863; and it was changed into the Asiatic Bank in 1864.—In 1863, when the shares were about to be allotted, Mr. Michael Scott told me that he was going to put me down for 1,500 shares, for the purpose of obtaining the aid of my partner, Mr. Fleming, to procure a charter for the Bank. I told him that it was useless, and that neither Mr. Fleming nor I would be connected with the Bank; that it was against our policy, notwithstanding that a number of shares were allotted to me; and the day that they were granted to me I gave them away to private friends. I never signed the articles of association, nor took a profit of a single rupee from those shares. The only other shares that I recollect being allotted to me, or to my firm in Bombay, were ten Back Bay shares, which were granted to William Nicol and Company and friends, as an allotment in that concern, to the constituents and clients of William Nicol and Company, and the partners of William Nicol and Company, the partners of William Nicol and Company being most intimate private friends of Mr. Michael Scott. Of those ten shares I distributed five to the constituents of the firm as I call them. Two I gave to Mr. Kessowjee Naik, who had not received any allotment from the Company. One I gave to Premjee Jewan, a piece-goods dealer, who was dealing largely with us. Another I gave to our piece-goods salesman, Ardaseer Bomanjee; and one my partners permitted me to give to my brother, who resided in this country. That left five to the firm of William Nicol and Company, which I sold as soon as I possibly could.

2741. Had you any other allotments?—Not that I can remember.

2742. Then I understand you to say that you were not buying and selling shares for the purpose of profit?—No. We kept ourselves as much aloof as we could from what you call the share mania. I can submit a few letters written by me from July 1864 to the time when I left Bombay, showing my freedom from any share gambling. I warned people against taking shares; and on several occasions when people wrote to me to apply for shares for them, I declined to comply with their request. I can give two instances of it.

2743. Did it never occur to you to ask at the Bank of Bombay how much was out on shares?—No, because I did not know that any money was out at all on shares.

2744. Did you know anything of the proceedings of your brother directors? Did you know that Mr. Birch was receiving allotments of shares largely at that time?—Everybody in Bombay, generally speaking, was receiving allotments; I do not know that I could single him out. I have not the slightest doubt that I knew that Mr. Birch had received allotments of shares at that time. I think that Mr. Birch very soon after that time proposed retiring, and employing himself in the affairs of some of these new Banks in this country.

2745. Did you know that Mr. Blair was receiving allotments of shares from every company which was started?—I do not know that I knew it from my own knowledge. I do not think that I did. Having refused to join many new companies established at that time, I was rather out of the circle of that business.

2746. But it is rather singular that a director in business like yourself should not have known of such a thing as Mr. Blair being in almost every company which was started?—I have no doubt whatever that I had a sort of general idea that he, like others, had shares; almost everybody was holding shares at that time.

2747. Do you know that he was actually a shareholder in a rival bank, namely, the Asiatic Bank?—I do not think that that was within my knowledge.

2748. Then again, as to Mr. D. Robertson, did you know that he was receiving allotments?—I knew less about Mr. Robertson than about Mr. Blair. I do not think that it would come to my knowledge that he was receiving share allotments.

2749. Did you know that Mr. Blair, or Mr. Robertson, Mr. Blair particularly, was entering into share speculations?—I knew that Mr. Blair had money, and that no doubt he was employing it. It came under my notice as the secretary of the Elphinstone Company that Mr. Blair had bought two shares in the Elphinstone Company with his own money.

2750. You did not hear of a large speculation of his, buying six of those shares with Mr. Morrison and Mr. Tracey?—No. I knew nothing of it.

2751. You never heard of it, although you were the secretary of that company?—The probability is that I simply signed or initialled the transfers without taking any notice of that whatever. The press of business in the transfer of shares was very great. A great deal of gambling was going on at that time in all shares in Bombay.

2752. Had you not sufficient knowledge to lead you to make further inquiry as to Mr. Blair being concerned in share speculations?—Nothing special. I have no recollection of anything coming to my knowledge to cause me to make special inquiry.

2753. I suppose that you would have thought it very objectionable for the secretary of a bank, like the Bank of Bombay, to be engaged in every speculation which was going on?—A notorious share speculation at that time I certainly would have regarded unfavourably.

2754. You were not aware that he was?—I was not.

2755. Or Mr. Robertson?—Or Mr. Robertson. I had no special knowledge of it. I distinctly understood that Mr. Blair bought the two shares which he bought in the Elphinstone Company as an investment.

2756. I understand that you do not recollect any meeting of the directors in which it was verbally agreed, and not recorded in the minutes, that the secretary should advance on one name?—I recollect no meeting giving that authority without a reference to the directors. I recollect Cowasjee Jehangeer speaking of first-class borrowers, as he regarded them, objecting to submit their private applications to directors, but I recollect nothing at that meeting which absolved the secretary from his duty to submit loans of any importance to two or three directors.

2757. Can you explain Mr. Birch's minute (he was not able to explain it himself), upon Cowasjee Jehangeer's proposition to increase the powers of the secretary, and to give him a veto upon your proceedings?—I recollect Cowasjee Jehangeer having an idea about the secretary being as good a judge as the directors as to raising or reducing the bank rate of interest, but nothing beyond that; that is, speaking from memory.

2758. Do you recollect that minute written by Mr. Birch about it? I think that you signed your name to it. Just read it through; is not your signature there?—I do not see it.

2759. Do you remark that passage in which Mr. Birch says that the power is practically in the secretary now?—Yes; that, as I understand, has simply reference to the power of being an ex officio member of the board, and being able to speak at the board.

2760. And to a veto also?—No. I think that no veto was contemplated. It is difficult to understand Cowasjee Jehangeer's meaning. I do not think that anything more than that was intended; so far as I recollect the discussion, Cowasjee Jehangeer in many cases did not know the meaning of the words which he was using; he was a most worthy and excellent man, but his English was most imperfect.

WALTER CASSELS sworn and examined.

2761. (President.) I think that you were elected a commercial director of the Government Bank of Bombay on the 5th of February 1865?—The letter which I received was dated the 5th of February 1865. I sat for the first time on the 12th of February 1865.

2762. Are you quite sure about that?—I am quite certain. I sat for the last time on the 2nd of March, and I left India on the 14th March 1865.

2763. I thought that your last sitting was on the 23rd of February 1865?—I think that I sat on the 2nd of March. I may be mistaken there.

2765. You sat for the last time on the 23rd of February 1865, and you were only a director for six weeks; why did you resign?—I was very ill, and left India on the 14th of March. I may explain with regard to my being elected a director, that when I was asked to serve in the first instance I refused, stating that I was ill and was going to leave India immediately, and was too busy to act. I had the Municipal Bill on my hands, and was overwhelmed with work. I was, however, pressed to act, because the directors wished to have my assistance with regard to considering the renewal of the government business with the Bank; and it was for that purpose I joined, and that was the only business to which I attended as a director.

2766. You were only six weeks a director at that time; you were, however, re-elected a director on the 10th of December, 1866. The Bank at that date was in fact in liquidation?—Completely so.

2767. There were no losses after that?—No.

2768. I believe that as a shareholder you attended the general meeting of the 7th of March 1864?—I did.

2769. I think that you proposed the resolution which is recorded on the proceedings as follows: It was proposed by Walter Cassels, Esq., seconded by Cowasjee Jehangeer, Esq., and carried unanimously, that the capital of the Bank be increased by 52,25,000 rupees by the issue of 5,225 new shares of rupees 1,000 each?—I did.

2770. There were not many shareholders present I think?—They had notice of the meeting, and those who chose, attended. With regard to that, Mr. Cowasjee Jehangeer informed me that he had brought before the board a resolution for an increase of capital, which had been adopted by the board, and he merely requested me, as he could not make a speech himself, to say a few words in bringing the resolution before the meeting.

2771. Before the calls were paid up, there was a resolution carried to increase the capital another half million, was there not?—There was.

2772. That was upon a requisition signed by sixteen shareholders, was it not?—I believe it was; the meeting was called in consequence of that requisition.

2773. That requisition was addressed to the directors?—Yes.

2774. You were present at that meeting?—I was.

2775. I believe that you moved the principal resolution for the increase of the capital?—I did so.

2776. And you made a speech upon that occasion, which is recorded in the Bank proceedings. You said, "At the general meeting at which it was proposed that we should increase the capital of the Bank, I stated my own opinion that it should at once be doubled; but as we were then in the height of the monetary pressure, and as we had power at any time further to increase the amount, I confined myself at that time for the sake of caution to proposing that one new share should be issued for two old ones. Subsequent consideration and examination have strengthened my conviction that the capital should at once be raised to the full limit of the charter, and I shall now propose that this be done." What were the grounds upon which you made that statement?—I may state that in this I was merely explaining a proposal to a unanimous meeting, and therefore had not to argue the desirability of it; but that which led me to propose it, was a statement which had been made to me by the Bank. About the beginning of May I was called upon by Mr. Blair, the secretary of the Bank. He stated that further experience had shown the necessity for calling up the full amount of the capital; that the majority of the board considered it necessary to do so, and that the time was extremely favourable for getting the money paid up; in fact, that if that opportunity were not taken, it could not be obtained, and I was asked to propose the further increase of the capital.

Mr. W. Cassels.

It was pointed out to me that five days after the passing of the resolution about the first increase of capital on the 7th of March, the Bank of Bengal had doubled their capital, namely, they had increased it from one crore and ten lacs to two crores and twenty lacs; and the reasons which had been stated by the Bank of Bengal for doubling their capital, were in every respect applicable to the Bank of Bombay. The notification of the Bank of Bengal dated 12th March, 1864, was as follows: "It is hereby notified that as the present capital of the Bank is insufficient to meet its requirements in consequence of the increase of business, principally arising from the establishment of branches subordinate to the Bank in various parts of the Bengal Presidency, the directors have determined to increase the capital." On the 30th of June 1864 the directors of the Bank of Bengal made the following statement: "As the amount of the Bank's capital was proved during the severe financial crisis, already referred to, to be quite inadequate to the wants of the public, and as the branches recently established have opened a wide field for the profitable employment of the Bank's funds, the directors by notification, dated 12th March last, called for an addition to the capital of 1,10,09,091 Rs." The Bank of Bombay had been instigated by the Bombay Government to open branches throughout the Presidency.

2777. How do you mean?—In this way: On receiving the transfer of the Government business it was arranged that the Bank should open branches throughout the Presidency, to receive the Treasuries of each division of the Presidency. It was arranged, that at each place at which there was a Government Treasury, the account of the Treasury was to be handed over to the Bank, and a minimum balance fixed for each branch. I may also say that intimation was given that if the Bank of Bombay did not occupy the field first, before other banks, the other banks would have the preference.

2778. Will you kindly give us references to these facts?—Certainly. Perhaps you will allow me to read a part of a letter from the Bank.

2779. I want the letters from the Government on the subject.—I can give you an extract from a letter of the Secretary of State for India, Sir Charles Wood, addressed to the Governor General in Council, dated the 10th of June 1863 (Exhibit marked C 2), which you will find at page 601 of the Correspondence of Government. It is the 17th paragraph, and it runs to this effect:—"I entirely approve of your placing the whole of the Treasury business in the hands of the Bank of Bengal and its branches, as pointed out in paragraph 57 of my Financial Despatch of 16th September 1862. I am also in favour of your encouraging the Bank to establish branches in different parts of the country, to which the Government Treasury business of the place may be transferred." The next paragraph states the terms. The 19th paragraph states the condition, which is, that the Bank shall not deal in foreign exchanges; and the 21st paragraph says: "The same course should be adopted also in regard to the Banks of Madras and Bombay."

2780. Can you bring it any closer, and show us that they agreed that directly a branch was opened they would hand over the Treasury to it?—Yes; I can give you a reference to that also. Here is an Order of His Excellency Sir George Clerk, the Governor in Council, signed by the Acting Secretary, Mr. Peel. It is of February 1862. It was published as a Gazette Extraordinary. I produce the Gazette Extraordinary of the 28th of February 1862, in which it is stated that an agreement has been entered into (and it gives the whole of the agreement) with the Bank. It adds: "The Bank of Bombay is prepared at once to establish branches at Poonah, Surat, Ahmedabad, Dhollera, Sholapore, and Dharwar, and the notes will be taken and paid at all the Treasuries comprised in the circular of issue mentioned above."

2781. That is with reference to the currency. That was withdrawn by Sir Charles Wood afterwards?—Yes.

2782. Therefore, that would not be applicable?—The Bank constantly complained, and the Bombay Government sent telegram after telegram to the Governor General asking for permission to hand over the Treasuries. This is one:—"Please expedite decision on the draft agreement submitted in my letter 1600" (Exhibit marked C 3); and so on.

2783. What is the date of that?—There seems to be no date given.

2784. The date is very material, because after May 1865, of course, the Governor General was very reluctant to hand anything over to the Bank of Bombay?—It must have been about June 1863. At page 315 of the Government Correspondence (Exhibit marked C 3) it is requested that the Supreme Government will favour the Bombay Government with their early decisions on the draft agreement with the Bank and the New Charter Act Bill. The directors had addressed an urgent representation on both these subjects.

2785. June 1863 was before you got your new Act?—Yes, it was before it passed through the Council; but the agreement had been made before this as to handing over the Treasuries.

2786. But you could not have opened the branches at that time?—In the Government Gazette on the 28th of February 1862 the Government announced that the branches had been opened.

2787. What branches do they refer to?—Poonah, Surat, Ahmedabad, Dhollera, Sholapore, and Dharwar. It says the Bank is prepared at once to establish branches at those places; and if so, it gives, I should say, the sanction of Government to the opening of those branches.

2788. (President). That refers to the Government notification as to the currency, and it all fell to the ground afterwards by Sir Charles Wood withdrawing his sanction from the Bank's having anything to do with the currency; and then it was open to you to cancel the whole agreement, but you did not, and you preferred to go on and take only the cash balances. That passage appears to me simply to refer to the currency business.—I will show you another document. This is a resolution of the Government of India, dated 27th March 1862; it is at page 103 (Exhibit marked C 3); they say, "The arrangement with the Bank of Bengal having now been completed for the transfer of the Treasury business at Calcutta, Patna, Mirzapore, Benares, and Dacca, and for undertaking the agency of the Government currency in the circle of Calcutta, the time has arrived when the Government desire to extend similar arrangements to the North Western provinces." Whatever applied to Bengal was to apply to Bombay, and it is a fact that the Treasuries were actually handed over in Bengal.

The letter of the Bank of Bombay gives a kind of résumé of what took place, it is a letter addressed to to Sir Charles Trevelyan at the desire of Sir Charles Wood. A deputation from the Bank in January 1864 waited upon the Secretary of State with a view to get these Treasuries handed over, and he referred the Bank to Sir Charles Trevelyan, who was then Finance Minister, and they wrote to Sir Charles Trevelyan. The letter is dated 5th May 1864, and contains the following passages: "You are aware that on the 28th of February 1862 an agreement was entered into between the Government and the Bank of Bombay, by which the latter were to take over the management of the Government Treasury in Bombay, and whereby provision was made for handing over to the Bank, under certain circumstances, the Government Treasuries at those places at which the Bank might establish branches. Before this agreement was executed there had been some negotiation between the Government and the directors, and it was upon the clear understanding that the Treasuries would be handed over at those places at which the Bank should establish branches that the directors entered into the agreement of February 1862. Immediately after that agreement was executed, the directors proceeded to establish branches, and they now have branches at Ahmedabad, Belgaum, Broach, Baroda, Bhownugger, Dharwar, Hydrabad (Deccan), Indore, Kurrachee, Oomrawuttee, Poona, Surat, and Sholapore; but at not one of these places has the Treasury been handed over to the Bank." The fourth paragraph refers to a letter on the subject. The fifth paragraph is as follows: "In the month of January last, a deputation on behalf of the Bank, consisting of Mr. Tristram and Mr. Hannay, waited upon Sir Charles Wood in London, and after some conversation with him he stated that you were in possession of his views on the subject, and that he would write to you again, and that any further communication from the Bank should be addressed to you." The sixth paragraph calls on Government to fulfil the agreement. I need not read that. The seventh paragraph is as follows: "The delay hitherto has been of serious injury to the Bank. In full faith that Government would perform the agreement, and would place at their disposal the several balances at the local Treasuries, the directors at once proceeded to establish branches, but they have not received these balances, and have been obliged to supply the funds necessary for carrying on the business at the branches. The result is that the arrangement, which should have been a beneficial one, has tended to increase, instead of relieve, the monetary pressure which was recently felt in Bombay. Had the arrangement been carried out, it is not too much to say that the great pressure which existed in Bombay would not have been nearly so severe as it was. The delay, moreover, has had a tendency to damage the reputation of the Bank. When a branch was established at any place, it was stated, and publicly believed, that the local Treasury would be handed over to the Bank. That we were justified in making such a statement is evident from the Government notification in which the agreement of February 1862 was published, and wherein it was stated that the Bank was prepared to establish branches at the several places therein mentioned. As Government have not, as yet, handed over the Treasuries, the native merchants doubt the bonâ fides and stability of the Bank, and generally abstain from making any deposits at the branches, though they, in some cases, express their willingness to make fixed deposits of large amounts if the Government business is in the hand of the Bank."

It was in consequence of not receiving the Government Treasuries and the balances, as the Bank had a right to expect, that the Bank made the statement to me, which I repeated to the meeting, that the whole of the paid up capital of the Bank was absorbed at the branches; and I was not content with that statement from Mr. Blair, but at the meeting I stated it, and I paused and looked at the secretary and the president, who bowed their adhesion to what I stated.

2789. Your words were, "The whole of the paid up capital of the Bank of Bombay is absorbed by its present branches."—Yes.

2790. Who told you that?—Mr. Blair, in the first instance; in the second instance, at the public meeting Mr. Blair and the president bowed their adhesion to what I stated.

2791. And you say that that was because they had not the Government Treasuries?—Yes; and my case is, that the Bank of Bengal at the same time set the example of doubling its capital, and its prudence has not been called in question, but, on the contrary, it has been highly praised.

2792. Was not the business of the Bank of Bengal considerably larger than the business of the Bank of Bombay, and has it not had many more branches?—No.

2793. Have they not been at larger places?—The Bank of Bengal at the end of 1864 had ten branches, and the Bank of Bombay had seventeen branches, and at the very beginning of 1865 they raised the number to twenty.

2794. I am talking about the 9th of June 1864.—There were then thirteen branches open, and three more were opened within a few days. I have prepared statistics of the comparative trade of Bombay and Bengal from the official reports of the Commissioners of Customs, which I beg leave to hand in. These statistics show, amongst others, the following results. I have taken the last twelve years, for which there are comparative statistics: Comparing the last three years before the increase of capital, that is to say, 1861–62 to 1863–64, with the first three years, namely, 1854–55 to 1856–57, the trade of Bombay shows the following increase: Exports 198½ per cent., imports 158¼ per cent. Aggregate exports and imports 177¾ per cent.; and comparing the last three years, 1863–64 to 1865–66, with the first three years, the exports had increased 308 per cent., and the imports 218 per cent., the aggregate being 261 per cent. Then again in 1863–64, the year preceding the increase of capital (these figures are made up to the 30th April), the trade of Bombay as compared with that of Bengal was, exports 57¾ per cent. more than Bengal, imports 111 per cent. more than Bengal; the aggregate exports and imports being 78¾ per cent. more than Bengal. During the four years ending April 1864 the trade of Bombay averaged in exports 42 per cent. more than Bengal, and in imports 58 per cent. more; the aggregate exports and imports nearly 50 per cent. more than Bengal.

2795. Was not that in consequence of the American war?—Partly, but not wholly; and I am prepared to show it.

2796. Would not a prudent person have calculated upon a collapse of trade as soon as the American war was over?—Certainly not; and it has not been so up to the present time. My last statistics are on the 30th of April 1866; during the six years ending then the exports of Bombay were 46½ per cent. more than Bengal, and the imports 58 per cent. more than Bengal, the aggregate exports and imports being 51¾ per cent. more than Bengal. The figures are all here detailed.

2797. Have you taken into consideration, with all that extra business, that sixteen other banks had started in Bombay?—There were quite as many in Calcutta, and I can give you the names. Here is a list of the Banks opened in Calcutta. There were nineteen in Calcutta at the end of 1864, and they all existed when the capital was doubled; and at the end of 1864 there were twenty-two in Bombay, but two of these had not been established when the capital was doubled. I should state that I get that from the calendars only, but I believe that it is correct.

2798. Are those the only documents which you are able to produce, showing that the Government proposed to give over the Treasury balances?—I do not know whether it is of any value to show that the Government of Bombay invited tenders at Kurrachee for a bank to take over the Treasury.

2799. Perhaps you will hand to us the paper to which you are referring?—These are only references to minutes; but I will do so with pleasure. Here is a very important document, I think that it is at page 243; it was during Sir Bartle Frere's time, because I see that there is a minute by him. The secretary had laid before the board some suggestions with regard to the Treasury business, and the terms, and he was desired to discuss the matter with his colleagues in the Bank direction.

2800. What is the date of that minute?—It appears to be the 18th of October 1862. The Secretary of Government did discuss the matter, and he then gives an account of what took place at the meeting. He consulted Mr. Birch, and the Secretary of the Bank was called upon to prepare a report of the actual cost incurred by the Bank for conducting the Government business. Fourteen hundred rupees per mensem was mentioned as a suitable allowance. The secretary says: "In reference to this, I agreed that the Government could not be called upon to pay this charge in full, either in the shape of a minimum cash balance being guaranteed, or partly in that form and partly by money payment, and that some attempt ought to be made to fix the actual sum which it would cost the Bank to keep the Government accounts, and that against this should be put down, as a set-off, the profits which they might be expected to realize from the average cash balance. After some discussion the directors agreed to forego any annual money payments, as have been given in Bengal, and said that if the Government would agree to guarantee a minimum cash balance of three lacs of rupees at each branch, they would be satisfied. This represents an annual income at 5 per cent. of 15,000 rupees, or 1,250 rupees per mensem. I am disposed to think this too high, but I fear that the directors, seeing the terms which have been given in Bengal, will not agree to much less. They laid great stress on these terms, and although they admitted that they could fix on no known principles, they nevertheless considered that the Government were under a sort of promise to give them the same, if not similar terms, to those granted to the Bank of Bengal."

2801. That shows that the matter was then under consideration.—It does.

2802. It shows that there was a serious negotiation.—Yes. The Bank of Bengal had received the Treasuries, and the Government were ordered to act towards the Banks of Bombay and Madras in the same way as towards the Bank of Bengal. I may say at once, that certainly the Government of Bombay did not hand over the Treasuries, and did not consider that they had power to do so. The Secretary to Government, on the 10th of December 1862 states, in addressing the Bank: "I am directed to forward herewith, for the information of your directors, the draft agreement to be entered into with the Bank of Bombay, in connexion with the proposed transfer of the Government treasury business at the several stations where the Bank has established branches; and to request its early return;" and the agreement which was sent was that which had been entered into with the Bank of Bengal.

2803. I have never been able to get, and am not sure that I have got now, a distinct promise by the Government that they would, directly a branch was opened, hand over the Treasury balances at that place. — The Government of Bombay pressed the Government of India to grant them the permission.

2804. We will revert to your speech. You stated: "I assert, with very little fear of contradiction, that absolute want of capital has paralysed the Bank of Bombay during the last few years." What did you mean by the Bank of Bombay having been paralysed? —In the first place, a very short time previously to my making that statement, the balance at the Bank of Bombay had been reduced below ten lacs; and I believe that it was only by a fortunate accident that the Bank was able to continue its payments.

2805. It was not a very unhappy sort of paralysis, because the Bank paid dividends of nine and sixteen per cent.—It fortunately turned out well, but it might have turned out very badly. That is one observation. The next is, that the amount of the deposits in the Bank was certainly out of proportion to its own capital. It was stated by the Bank, that the whole of its capital was absorbed by the branches, and I believe that six Banks alone deposited in the Bank three crores of rupees at call. Of course there was a very great temptation to make use of that money; but these Banks could, and absolutely upon one occasion some of them did, without any notice call up the whole of their deposits. That was exposing the Bank to a very great danger. I should like to mention another thing, namely, that on the 1st of August 1864, the following statement appeared in the annual report of the Bank: "The general Treasury balance, which the directors were led to expect would seldom be reduced below the minimum amount, which, according to the agreement, is thirty lacs of rupees, was, for several months at the close of the year, when money was much wanted, considerably under that amount, and on more than one occasion the Government was debtor to the Bank. Of course it was a very good use of money to lend it to Government.

2806. You got interest from Government for it, when the balance was reduced below the minimum? —Yes, but the Bank having a right to calculate upon a minimum of thirty lacs being generally kept in the Bank, employed its own funds, and suddenly found itself in the position of a creditor to the Government instead of a debtor.

2807. It is evident that that was contemplated by the agreement, because it provided that when it did happen the Government should pay you interest.—Yes, but it was understood that the balance should seldom be reduced below the minimum.

2808. You go on in your speech as follows: "Now the question is, shall the Bank of Bombay take its legitimate position as a great discount Bank, making large dividends for its shareholders, and gradually extend throughout this Presidency the benefit of an enlightened system of finance, or must it decline business, and sink into insignificance from want of capital? New banks are everywhere springing up to do the business which we undertook, but have not been able to perform from want of means. All neighbouring establishments are increasing their capital for the same purpose, and I believe that we are yet in the mere infancy of banking in India. The vast business hitherto monopolised by the Shroffs and Soucars will, I think, ere long fall into the hands of large banking establishments, and there is a rich and inexhaustible mine to be worked. Do not let us leave this to other and more energetic banks, but let us increase our capital to the requisite extent, and keep pace with the commercial requirements of the time." Do you not think that that was rather a "go-a-head" speech at the time?—I do not for a moment say, that in speaking at a meeting one does not very often round a period in a little more sanguine way than one would write it; but at the same time I am prepared to defend in the main all that I have said there.

2809. What did you find practically the case when you came into the direction on the 12th of January 1865; did you look and see how that capital was employed?—I may say that I never heard of a single loan or discount in the Bank of Bombay, nor was I directly or indirectly a party to the granting of one during that short period.

2810. Then you can give us no information as to the practice during the six weeks when you were a director?—I can to a certain extent. When I joined I asked Mr. Scott, who had been a director, what the system of business was; I wished to understand exactly what I was going to undertake; and he told me that the secretary was only empowered upon his own responsibility to make loans on railways guaranteed by Government, and Government paper; that all other transactions were referred either to the board or to the weekly committee; and as no reference was made to the board during the time that I was on the direction, and I never had any reference made to me upon the weekly committee, I considered that no loans had been made, except these.

2811. Am I to understand that you were really under the impression as a director that no loans were granted except upon Government security, railway guaranteed shares, bullion, and mint certificates?—No, I was under the impression that there were other loans, but that they had been sanctioned by the directors.

2812. You were under that impression, although you never heard of one being brought before the board; you supposed that there was no business done?—I suppose that there was business done, but that it was done under the supervision of the weekly committee.

2813. Were you ever on the weekly committee?—I was nominated, but no reference was ever made to me on the weekly committee.

2814. In fact, according to the evidence of Mr. Blair, the practice was discontinued. You were nominated on the weekly committee, but you never did anything?—So I believe.

2815. Then you were not aware of cash credits and loans being granted in one name without security?—I was absolutely unaware of it; I was totally ignorant of it.

2816. You again became a director on the 10th of December 1866; there was no new business done after that; the Bank was quite in liquidation, and all that you were employed upon was to get in old debts?—Yes; there were only some small sums lent, such as 10,000 rupees, on undoubted security.

2817. There is another point which I must speak to you about, and that is with respect to Mr. A. D. Robertson's transactions; he mentioned you as being employed as his friend in transacting his business. Mr. Robertson was a director only to the 12th of May 1864, before the share mania commenced, and before any loss, except upon one lac of rupees, had occurred; and it is very material that it should be known exactly how that matter stands. Are you aware, when he was a director, of his ever having any other shares than certain shares which he mentioned; namely, 150 in the Asiatic Bank, and 30 in the Indian Peninsula Bank?—Certainly not. I believe that he positively had no other shares; I am sure that he never sold any shares except through me, and I am sure that during the time that he was a director he had no other allotments than those which he stated.

2818. Is it not an undoubted fact that Mr. Robertson did speculate largely at a subsequent period, after he ceased to be a director?—I am not aware of it, certainly not; I believe that he never touched a single share that I did not buy for him.

2819. Did he not buy and sell shares after that?—No, he did not; with the exception of those transactions which he stated the other day, he had none.

2820. Have you any other information to give us? you were largely connected with mercantile men at that time, and were holding a very prominent position in Bombay; can you give us any information as to the practice existing at that time in the Bank of Bombay with regard to granting loans?—No, not beyond that which was given me by Mr. Scott. I was away from Bombay from September 1864 till nearly the end of the year, and did not know what was going on at all; I had no communication with Bombay during those months.

2821. Were not you in Bombay at the end of 1864?—I arrived again on the 12th of December 1864, and I left on the 14th of March very ill indeed.

2822. Have you any other information to give us?—There are one or two points in the way of corrections which I should like to make; for instance, I see that in Mr. Premchund Roychund's evidence (I speak under correction) he introduced my name. You asked, "Did you not get three sums of five lacs from the Bank of Bombay on the 8th of December 1864?" and he answered, "I have got three names, Cowasjee Jehangeer, Ritchie Stewart and Company, and Mr. Cassels" (it is on the 17th day of the proceedings.) Q. "Was it all one transaction?—Yes; we received five lacs a-piece. Q. None of these five lacs were from Mr. Tracey?—No; Cowasjee Jehangeer, Ritchie Stewart and Company, Mr. Cassels, and myself." With regard to that, if it appears in the evidence, I have to say that I never even heard of such a thing, and was not in India at that time; I did not arrive until the 12th of December 1864.

2823. My impression is that we were tracing a sum of five lacs from Mr. Tracey, or from somebody, into his account, and I remember saying to him, "Did not you receive five lacs on that day?" and he said, "I will turn to my books and see;" and he said, "I received three different sums of five lacs on that day." It was just casually said; we wanted to trace a particular sum into his book, and he said, "It is not that."—There is another matter with regard to which you have asked a good many questions of Premchund and others, namely, the Mazagon Company, and the sale of the powder works. The Government sold the powder works by auction, and when the property was advertised my friend Mr. Scott asked me to join him and others in purchasing it; I did so, he having shown me statistics which promised a very large annual return upon the investment. It was arranged between us, when we bought it, that it was to be kept as an investment, that it was not to be made into a company, and that in fact it was to be a private property. I left India upon that understanding, having paid my share of the instalment. When I was returning, three months after, not having had any communication with Bombay in the meantime, I saw in a newspaper at Malta a report of the sale of that property.

2824. For 20 lacs more?—For 20 lacs more. When I arrived in Bombay this news was confirmed, and, moreover, I learnt that I had received 100 shares in the Company, but I knew nothing of any allotment of shares in the Company, and never heard anything whatever about Premchund's having a right to allot half the shares of the Company.

Dr. Diver is represented as saying in his evidence that I was one of the promoters of the Mazagon Company. I knew nothing of it, and never had anything to do with it.

There is only one other point which I will mention, namely, that in the evidence before you it appears that one gentleman, in a very unwarrantable manner, has called the Bombay Reclamation Company a bubble Company; and it is due to the memory of my friend Mr. Scott, one of the most upright and honourable men who ever lived, as well as to myself, to state the truth as to that Company.

2825. The Back Bay scheme is now in existence, no doubt; the Company is in liquidation, but the scheme is going on?—Certainly, and will go on. It has been called a "bubble Company," and I should like to state what the Company really was. I wish to show that the Reclamation Company was not a bubble Company. Government had agreed to provide land to carry the Bombay and Baroda Railway to Colaba, but while the matter was being considered, the value of land had risen so enormously that Government found itself in a serious dilemma. It had become necessary either to take the line round by Girgaum, at a cost of some 50 lacs, or to undertake an equally great expenditure and very heavy work for carrying it across Back Bay. In this emergency Mr. Scott came forward with an offer to reclaim a considerable part of Back Bay, and in return for the concession, he offered to give Government one-fifth of all the land reclaimed, free of cost, commencing with the land required by the railway company. The opinion of Government regarding this offer may be gathered from two very short paragraphs of a memorandum prepared for Government by their secretary, General Rivers. He says: "The Moody Bay Reclamation is a specimen of the Government prosecution of such works. It has been written about since 1853, when a contract was made for a portion at a rate of two rupees five annas per hundred cubic feet. The present rate is upwards of three rupees, the portion then reclaimed cost six rupees per square yard, including a gird wharf wall, and it is worth 25 rupees per yard now. As to the Reclamation Company's proposal, as the Company can now reclaim land at eight rupees per square yard, and sell it at these sites for from 15 to 20 rupees, their demands seems somewhat high, and a demand of one-fifth instead of one-fourth would have been reasonable." That is a memorandum, with the notes of the Government upon it, of the 7th of September 1863. The negotiation went on for 12 months. A part of the press, however, had attacked Mr. Scott, stigmatizing this concession as the "Back Bay job," and insinuating that Mr. Scott had got an immensely valuable concession by the exercise of private influence. Mr. Scott, with the straightforwardness which characterized him, immediately replaced the concession in the hands of the Government, and offered that it should again be put up to competition. The Government refused this, and in their letter they say, "There is nothing new in the general scheme of a Back Bay Reclamation. During the last twenty years various projects have been formed for the purpose." "Government has formally offered the right of reclamation on terms at least as favourable to those undertaking its execution as the terms which you have accepted, but no one has hitherto appeared ready actually to undertake the work in consequence of its magnitude, and the large capital required for its execution. The work, however, is one extremely simple in its general character. Government has long been anxious to see works of a remunerative character like this undertaken by capitalists."

2826. What is the date of that?—That is in a letter dated the 2nd of March 1864, from General Rivers; and much correspondence has passed between Government and various companies and individuals, who expressed a desire to invest capital in Indian improvements. General Rivers further says: "As Government advances no capital and incurs no risk, the main public object is that the works should be executed as speedily as possible. Government feels that it has in your character the best guarantee it can obtain for securing this object. The terms you have offered are in the opinion of Government a very sufficient return for the right conceded, and afford every assurance that the direct profits to the State will be in direct proportion to the success of your enterprise." That is in a letter from the Secretary of the Government.

2827. (Major Innes.) The other which you read was the Secretary's opinion?—Yes. But on the margin of that memorandum are the opinions of Government; and whenever Government did not agree with the memorandum they stated so. The Company not only agreed to give one-fifth of the land reclaimed, but they offered to the Government an interest of one-fifth in the whole undertaking, allowing the Government to nominate a certain proportion of the directors, and to appoint Government engineers to superintend the work. This offer was favourably entertained by the Bombay Government, and submitted for sanction to the Government of India, by whom, after a very considerable delay, a veto was put upon it. But so far from being a bubble Company, the Bombay Government actually entertained the idea of becoming a partner in the Bombay Reclamation Company, and one-fifth of its shares were for some months retained at the disposal of the Government. These shares were afterwards sold at a profit of a million and a quarter. I wish to make one other statement, as a guarantee for my good faith with regard to the Bank of Bombay, I desire to state that I invested 57,000*l.* in the Bank, and have held these shares since 1864 and 1865 to the present hour. I believe that I am the largest private shareholder in the Bank.

JOHN HAWKSWORTH RYLAND sworn, and examined.

Mr. J. H. Ryland.

2828. (President.) When did you enter the service of the Bank of Bombay?—In March 1860.

2829. What situation did you fill then?—Deputy secretary.

2830. You remained there till you obtained leave of absence in 1864?—Yes, in March 1864.

2831. What was the date of your leaving?—The 14th of March 1864.

2832. After that you resigned, by a letter which you dated from Brighton on the 26th of July 1864, did you not?—I did.

2833. And your resignation was accepted on the 8th of September 1864?—It was accepted; I do not recollect the date.

2834. Were not you afterwards in India in some other employment?—Yes, that of Manager of the Bank of Hindustan.

2835. When did you enter upon those duties?—In October 1864.

2836. When did you resign that post?—I resigned it very shortly aftewards; I returned to England by the first mail in March 1865.

2837. Do you remember the resolution of the 6th of August 1863?—No, I do not remember it. I may perhaps be allowed to explain that I never for a very long time acted as secretary, but that I merely did so during the absence of Mr. Blair the secretary; while he was in Bombay, I had not access to the minutes. It was only during his temporary absence from Bombay.

2838. Do you remember that resolution now (handing the minute book to the witness).—I cannot say positively that I remember it. Of course it is all right, being entered here.

2839. Is not that your handwriting? (handing the scroll minute of 14th September 1863, Exhibit A 132, to the witness.)—Yes.

2840. And those are your initials at the foot of it?—Yes.

2841. Do you not there propose to rescind the resolution of the 6th August 1863?—I "respectfully submit that an early settlement of the question is desirable."

2842. Read the whole minute; you will see that you propose something definite.—Yes, that is undoubtedly my handwriting.

2843–4. You propose "that the secretary may exercise his discretion in making advances to persons of undoubted respectability, on their signing a promissory note for the amount advanced payable on demand, and depositing with the Bank, shares in railway companies and other companies mentioned there." Was that your suggestion?—I cannot quite recollect. I am quite ready to say that I believed that it would be quite safe to do so at that time.

2845–6. Was it your own suggestion, or was it the suggestion of any director, or of Mr. Blair?—I used to discuss these matters with Mr. Blair.

2847. He must have been out of Bombay, or you would not have been acting. I think that he was at the Poonah races at that time?—I really cannot say, but he must have been absent from Bombay then undoubtedly.

2848. Was it suggested to you by any director?—I do not recollect that it was.

2849. After all the directors had made minutes upon it, it was eventually brought before the board on the 17th of September?—A minute was circulated on the 15th instant, inviting their consideration of the subject; and on the 17th the following resolution was passed: "Resolved, That the secretary be authorized to make advances on stock or shares in Indian railway companies, guaranteed by Government, without such stock or shares being transferred into the name of the Bank, on the borrower signing a form of agreement to be prepared by the Bank's solicitors."

2850. Therefore it is quite clear that the majority of the board refused to lend on shares, for they simply resolved to lend on shares guaranteed by Government, which they could do before.—To the best of my belief that was in the old charter.

2851. Do you remember the discussion upon that?—I cannot speak with any certainty.

2852. You do not seem to have a very good memory.—I am quite ready to say that at the time when I made that minute I recommended it.

2853. Who supported it? Mr. McIlwraith has told us that he did, and Mr. Gavin Steel was doubtful what part he should take. What part did Mr. Birch take? was he there?—No, he was not there.

2854. Do you know what the majority was; how many rejected the proposition?—It seems to me that Mr. Cowasjee Jehangeer and Mr. Limjee Manockjee were the only two who were positively opposed to it.

2855. When it came to the board meeting, what was done?—There were then present Mr. Gavin Steel, Mr. Cowasjee Jehangeer, Mr. Limjee Manockjee, Mr. George Invararity, and Mr. McIlwraith.

2856. You do not recollect anything about the discussion?—I do not.

2857. The proposal to lend money on shares having been defeated, it seems that a new system of cash credits was introduced.—I do not think that the system of cash credits was new.

2858. Was not that a perfectly new system, lending upon a promissory note on one name without any other security?—There used to be a cash credit book kept.

2859. Was not a new system introduced directly after the new Act passed?—May I be allowed to ask when the new Act passed?

2860. On the 1st of August 1863?—I do not recollect the introduction of what might be termed "a new system."

2861.—Did the Bank ever under the old Act grant a cash credit on a promissory note on a single name, or on the name of a single firm, without security?—I think that cash credits were granted; I am not positive, but I think that they were granted. There was a book called the report book kept, which was revised by the board every six months, and if a certain person or firm was down in that book as being good for a certain amount during the last six months, I think that a cash credit was granted.

2862. That is against all the evidence which we have received.—I do not feel positive.

2863. It is the universal testimony that under the old Act cash credits were granted upon Government paper, bullion, and railway shares guaranteed by Government.—I do not recollect any new system being introduced; I was not in the board room; these books never came to me as deputy secretary; my duties as deputy secretary were totally distinct.

2864. Are you quite sure that no book showing cash credits granted on personal security ever came under your observation?—If I was acting as secretary.

2865. But as deputy secretary?—The secretary might have been absent for half a day, and then I should have initialed it.

2866. But suppose that he was absent for more than half a day; suppose that he was absent for months together?—I do not think that he was ever away for months together during my time.

2867. Do you not know, as a matter of fact, that from the 11th of August 1863 cash credits were granted upon a promissory note in a single name, without any other security?—If the books show it.

2868. I want to know, first of all, what your recollection is; do you doubt it for a moment?—I do not recollect positively any special case.

2869. As deputy secretary of the Bank can you possibly have any doubt about such an important change in the practice of the Bank?—I do not recollect any such change taking place at that time.

2870. Are not those initials all the way down that page yours? (showing the book kept by De Ga, Exhibit A 33, to the witness.)—Yes.

2871. You recollect that book;—Yes, those are my initials certainly.

2872. You recollect that book?—Yes, as far as my initials go, I certainly recollect it.

2873. Was not it kept by Mr. De Ga, the person who had charge of the cash credit ledger?—Yes.

2874. Did he not keep it for his own protection as a record of these cash credits on personal security?—I suppose that he did.

2875. The practice began on the 11th of August 1863, a few days after the new Act passed, and Premchund's father, Roychund Deepchund, heads the list. Were not you aware of this practice?—I think that it must have been done in accordance with the report book.

2876. What report book?—A book containing the opinions of the directors as to the extent to which each man or firm might be trusted.

2877. That is the opinion book; the opinion book would not authorize anything.—It was understood that the secretary might advance to those persons to that extent, without consulting the directors.

2878. The question is as to the security upon which the advance was to be made. I ask you again, refreshing your recollection by this book (A 33), were not you aware that cash credits were granted during the last half of the year 1863 upon personal security merely?—Yes, from my initials it must have been so.

2879. Did not you also see these interest books showing the amount of interest due? (handing Exhibits A 28, 29, and 30 to the witness.)—No, I do not think that these would come up stairs, I think that they would be kept down stairs.

2880. I do not see your signature, but when you wanted to know how much interest was payable upon a cash credit what did you do?—That was all done by the clerks down stairs.

2881. That was not done by you, you would not send for that interest book?—No.

2882. I suppose that these cash credits ought all to have been entered in the application book?—I think so.

2883. How is it that they were not?—It would be Mr. De Ga's duty to do that, and to send up the book to the board; to initial it himself first, and then to get the secretary to initial it, and then to send it to the board.

2884. Mr. De Ga has sworn that he was told by Mr. Blair not to include these applications upon personal security in that book?—I never told him so, and nobody ever told me so.

2885. Were you aware that any cash credits were excluded from the application book?—I was not; it was never done by my orders, or designedly by me in any way.

2886. Ought they not to have been entered in the application book?—I should think so, and that it was Mr. De Ga's duty to enter them.

2887. Instead of entering them in the application book he appears to have entered them in this book (A 33) for his own security.—Yes, he should have entered them in both.

2888. He was expressly told by Mr. Blair not to do so.—I assure you that I was not aware of it.

2889. The entries in the book are headed "cash credits granted on personal security."—Yes.

2890. What could have been his object in entering them in this book if they were entered in the application book?—I cannot think. I should think that the proper way would have been to have entered it in both books.

2891. But why in this book at all, if it was entered in the application book?—I cannot say, unless it was a sort of guide to himself.

2892. Can it be possible that you could have put your initials to this book, and that there should have been a new book introduced into the Bank without your inquiring the object of it? would you not instantly have said to Mr. De Ga, "What have you this book for? why do you not enter these cash credits in the application book"?—I should have thought that I should have said so certainly, but I cannot recollect at this time what took place about this book; it does not seem a formal book at all.

2893. Your initials are there, and is it not the natural inference for this Commission to draw, that you must have known, when you allowed that book to be used, that those items were withdrawn from the application book?—I am on oath, and I can say solemnly that it was not done under my orders, and that I did not know that it was done.

Mr. J. H. Ryland.

20 Nov. 1868.

2894. You did not know that they were withdrawn from the application book?—I did not.

2895. Then for what object was that book (A 33) made?—I cannot say.

2896. Can you account for allowing a man to make a new book in that way, and troubling yourself to put your initials against the entries in it, without asking the object of it?—I think that if he had asked for it for his own satisfaction, I should have done so.

2897. If he had asked for it for his own satisfaction, you would have said at once, "The application book is enough for you. What do you want with any satisfaction beyond that?"—I cannot account for it. I am sure that I gave no instructions as to keeping any applications out of the application book. I should never have taken upon myself to do so.

2898. It never struck you as a strange thing to have that new book with that heading?—If any order was given to me by the secretary I should have done so, but I can say that I never gave any instruction upon the subject.

2899. Did Mr. Blair give you any instruction upon the subject?—Not to the best of my recollection.

2900. Did not Mr. De Ga tell you why the book was made?—No, I cannot recollect that he did.

2901. One would have supposed that upon a new book coming before you in that way you would have immediately suspected that something was wrong. Mr. Blair at first, when we examined him the other day, pretended to be totally ignorant of these cash credits, but he was forced to acknowledge afterwards that they were undoubted, and that the fact must be so. Have you had any consultation with Mr. Blair upon this subject?—I have not seen him for years.

2902. Do you not remember the fact of some of these cash credits being granted? The first two were to Roychund Deepchund and Premchund Roychund.—I really cannot. I have been in the service of two banks since that, and it is five years since. I have had a great deal to contend with.

2903. On the 8th of September 1863 Premabhoy Hemchund and Kursondass Madhowdass had four lacs as a cash credit.—I assure you that I cannot recollect the items; I wish that I could.

2904. There was no lending on shares during your time, and none of those large loans commenced till after you left; but this was a point which I really did expect that you would be able to explain.—I wish that I could. My object is to tell you everything which I do know, but I assure you that I do not recollect those items.

2905. Did you superintend the branches?—No.

2906. Who did?—Mr. Donald Robertson. He was appointed as accountant first, and he was shortly afterwards appointed inspector of branches.

2907. You generally knew the system as to the branches, did you not?—Yes.

2908. We find some of your letters upon that subject?—Yes.

2909. Were not there certain printed rules?—There were.

2910. Was the clause ever filled up showing to what extent the agents might go in granting discounts? You will see (handing Exhibit A 69 to the witness) that there is one clause with regard to discounts which is left blank, and we have it in evidence that it never was filled up. Were those rules issued to all the agents?—Yes. I do not think that the blank was filled up in my time.

2911. I believe that there was at first, at the beginning of your time, a system for Premchund Roychund to revise the discount lists for the branches, Cowasjee Jehangeer did it in his time, and it seems that Premchund Roychund did it, and I find that on several occasions he revised the discount lists for the branches?—Cowasjee Jehangeer was very reliable; and sometimes Cowasjee Jehangeer would write back and say, "Ask Premchund; he knows more of these people than I do."

2912. We find that he revised the discount list of 15th October 1863 for Surat; that was during your time?—Yes.

2913. Did you not write this letter (Exhibit A 75) of the 22nd September 1863?—Yes.

2914. Whom did you consult before you wrote that letter?—That letter was written by the direction of the secretary, Mr. Blair.

2915. You write as follows: "To the Agent of the Bank of Bombay, Hyderabad, Deccan," and you say: "In returning revised the list of names of bankers and others at Hyderabad and elsewhere, I am to point out that the information we have been able to obtain here is, to a certain extent uncertain, and that the directors consider that the agents have better opportunities of ascertaining the means of persons in their neighbourhood. Persons who have been stated to be worth 'any amount' have been fixed at a maximum of three lakhs, that being, in the opinion of the directors, sufficient credit at one time for any person, except in special cases, in which the agents are at liberty to exercise their discretion." Was it the object or intention of that letter to discourage the agents applying for a revision of the discount lists?—No, certainly not. I should say that that letter was in answer to one written by the agents asking for instructions.

2916. No, it is on the revision. You say: "In returning revised the list of names of bankers and others at Hyderabad and elsewhere," and you go on to say, "the directors consider that the agents have better opportunities of ascertaining the means of persons in their neighbourhood."—I think that that would be right. The agent, if he got in with the natives, was likely to get the best information.

2917. Do not you think that the effect of that letter was very much to cause the agents to discontinue sending discount lists afterwards?—I should not consider so. I should not consider that that letter would lead the agents to be rash.

2918. What is the meaning of the next sentence, "persons who have been stated to be worth 'any amount' have been fixed at a maximum of three lakhs, that being, in the opinion of the directors, sufficient credit at one time for any person"? If you had stopped there it is quite clear that you would have limited them to three lacs; but you go on to say, "except in special cases, in which the agents are at liberty to exercise their discretion." Of course they would exercise their discretion in all cases.—If I had been the agent receiving that letter, if I had ever granted a credit of three lacs, I should have reported it, and have stated the circumstances which had induced me to do so.

2919. The letter seems to say, you may go to three lacs, and more at your discretion. I do not think that it was a very wise letter.—That letter was written by the direction of the secretary. It was the duty of the deputy secretary to compose the letters and to sign them.

2920. You signed that letter as "officiating secretary," and therefore Mr. Blair could not be there?—I think that that must have been a mistake of the clerk, because I never was appointed officiating secretary, even during Mr. Blair's absence up country in March 1863, which I think was the longest time. I was not appointed then to act as officiating secretary: there was no minute upon the subject.

2921. How came you to be allowed to overdraw your account with the Bank of Bombay?—I resigned the service of the Bank shortly after I came home in July 1864, and at that time I did not owe the Bank a penny, and never did owe the Bank a penny, and never held a share of any description. When I came out again I received the balance of my salary, and after that I asked the secretary to allow me a cash credit of 30,000 rupees. I returned to Bombay in the middle of October 1864, and in November or December 1864, when I was totally unconnected with the Bank, I wrote to the secretary and asked him to grant me an advance of 20,000 or 30,000 rupees.

2922. To whom did you write?—Mr. Blair.

2923. For permission to overdraw?—Yes; he wrote back, and agreed to it.

2924. What position did you hold then?—I was then manager of the Bank of Hindostan.

2925. Did he know that you were going home?—Yes; my intention was generally known then, I think.

2926. Did he ask for any security?—No, he did not.

2927. None whatever?—No.

2928. Were you a person of any property at that time?—Yes, I was worth from a lac to a lac and a half, in various securities.

2929. Had you not been speculating largely in shares?—No; my speculations were very small compared with what one has heard of speculation.

2930. The information which we have is that you speculated largely, and that you have involved yourself almost in ruin.—I have been brought to ruin. My largest investment was in Bank of Bombay shares, which shows my opinion of the Bank while I was there.

2931. When do you say this cash credit was granted to you?—I think in November 1864, quite towards the end of 1864; it might have been the beginning of December.

2932. What was the cash credit which was granted to you?—It was either 20,000 or 30,000 rupees.

2933. There has been a loss of 21,802 rupees on that transaction.—Yes. May I be allowed to explain that when things went bad in Bombay, after I had gone to England, my power of attorney was held by the late Mr. Hurst, who was a partner in the firm of Peel, Cassels, and Co., and he was to sell all my assets, and remit me the proceeds; but there was a large deficiency, to say nothing of the Bank of Bombay shares, upon which there was a great loss. If they had been sold then, it would not have been so. He deposited my Bank of Bombay shares with the Bank, in order to prevent as much as possible the Bank suffering from me. I would submit that that showed every disposition on my part to save the Bank from loss. Mr. Hurst could have signed a tranfer as my attorney, and the Bank could have sold the shares and have paid themselves off with the proceeds.

2934. At what date did you deposit those shares with the Bank?—I think that it was in May or June 1865.

2935. Was it not in September 1865?—They were handed in I think before that, because Mr. Hurst died in August 1865.

2936. They were lodged on the 18th of September.—I think that that is a mistake in that account.

2937. No, we have taken it very carefully; we will refer to the register of shares deposited.—My impression was that the date of Mr. Hurst's death was August in that year, and he wrote me that he had handed the shares to the Bank.

2938. Mr. Blair was the person responsible for this overdraft, he was the person who granted it to you?—Yes.

2939. My impression is that these shares were never deposited till September, and this advance was made in November or December of the previous year without any security.—Yes, it was without any security.

2940. Did Mr. Blair ask you what you wanted the advance for?—No.

2941. He granted it to you as a friend I suppose, and from your former connection with the Bank?—I did not ask for it on that ground, but I think that he granted it because he thought that I was good for that amount and more at the time.

2942. How much do you say that this overdraft was?—Either 20,000 or 30,000 rupees.

2943. You ran it up sometimes very much higher than that—up to 40,000 rupees?—I do not think that it ever went beyond 30,000 rupees.

2944. It was upwards of 40,000 rupees in March.—Then there is a large payment on the next day; the cheque perhaps might not have been collected the day before, and it might not have gone to credit; that would account for it.

2945. Just look at the register of shares deposited.—I observe the entry: "September 18th, 1865, by three certificates 23 shares."

2946. Ought not that account to have been headed with the amount for which you were at liberty to overdraw?—Certainly; namely, a fixed limit.

May I be allowed to refer to Mr. Lidderdale's evidence about me? I shall be very brief. He is reported to have said that I left the Bank under circumstances discreditable to my character. That I deny; and I wrote a letter to Mr. Lidderdale when I saw the report, drawing his attention to the actual circumstances, which the records of the Bank will verify. I have already stated to you the dates to show the date on which I resigned. I went home for six months on sick certificate; I caught cold going home, and wrote asking for an extension of time. I got no reply, and during the interval I was offered the situation of manager of the Bank of Hindustan, and I resigned my other appointment. When I went out I was received in a very friendly manner, and my salary was paid, and I do not think that there were any circumstances warranting that construction.

2947. Were there any circumstances warranting any construction?—Never. I was not indebted to the Bank a shilling at that time; but Mr. Lidderdale's evidence, as reported in the papers, would lead to the supposition that I was.

2948. That was not my impression, but that you had done something which the Bank disapproved of.—They never told me so in any way whatever.

2949. (Major Innes.) In reply to a question by Sir Charles Jackson, who asked you whether you had communicated with Mr. Blair, you said that you had not seen him for years. You have not communicated with him in any way directly or indirectly?—No, except when I asked him for a testimonial.

2950. You have not communicated with him, directly or indirectly, lately?—No.

Adjourned to Monday, the 23rd November, at 11 o'clock.

Monday, 23rd November 1868.

PRESENT:

President.

SIR CHARLES JACKSON.

Member.

MAJOR MCLEOD INNES.

Secretary.

F. D. CHAUNTRELL, ESQ.

23 Nov. 1868.

(President.) We have summoned Mr. Hannay, who was for some time the President of the Bank of Bombay, and we have received some medical certificates from him, which will now be read.

(Secretary.) I have received the following letter from Mr. Hannay, dated "Queenshill, Ringford, Kirkudbrightshire, N.B., 20th November 1868," in which he says, "Sir, I have your letter of yesterday requesting my attendance in London on Monday the 30th instant. My desire is to be present, but I regret to say I am in such a bad state of health that I am quite unable for such a journey; and my nervous system is so deranged that I am not allowed by my medical advisers to enter upon the consideration of Bank of Bombay business. Certificates will be forwarded to you to that effect, should the same be required. I have the honour to be Sir, your very obedient servant, R. Hannay."

I have received another letter from Mr. Hannay, dated from the same place on the 21st of November, in which he says, "Sir, referring to my letter of yesterday, I have now the honour to enclose two medical certificates. I also beg to mention that I had recently occasion to consult Dr. Begbie, of Edinburgh, as to the state of my health; he is considered one of the most eminent physicians in Scotland, and his opinion was exactly the same as that of my usual medical attendants. I have the honour to be, Sir, your very obedient servant, R. Hannay."

The certificates are as follows:

"I hereby certify that Robert Hannay, of Queenshill, is in a bad state of health, accompanied with such derangement of the nervous system, that I consider him unable to appear before the Bombay Bank Commissioners for examination. W. Arbuckle, M.D., Inspector General of Hospitals, Queenshill, Nov. 21st, 1868."

The other certificate is of the same date, and is as follows:

"I hereby certify that Robert Hannay, Esq., Queenshill, is suffering from derangement of the liver and disordered action of the heart, accompanied with such derangement of the nervous system, that I consider him unable to appear before the Bombay Bank Commissioners for examination. Patrick Anderson, L.R.C.S. Edinburgh, Castledouglas."

Mr. J. Fleming.

JOHN FLEMING, C.S.I., sworn and examined.

2951. (President.) I believe that you are a partner in the firm of Nicol and Company, of Bombay?—I am.

2952. You were in India at the beginning of the year 1865?—Yes, in the early part of 1865.

2953. One of your partners then, I think, was the Hon. Alexander Brown, of the Legislative Council?—He was.

2954. In consequence of some information which I have received, I wish to ask you some questions as to two loans of five lacs each granted by the Bank of Bombay in January 1865 to Messrs. Nicol and Company. The first advance was in the beginning of January, and the other a little later in the same month. Do you recollect that transaction?—I do. A cash credit was granted of 10 lacs of rupees on the security of my firm's signature.

2955. With whom did you negotiate that loan?—With Mr. Blair.

2956. Will you state to us the circumstances attending that negotiation, and what passed?—I should state that the Elphinstone Company, of which my firm were the secretaries and treasurers at that time, owed my firm 12 lacs of rupees, and they were not likely to be in a position to repay the advance for rather more than a month, I required a part of the money, and I went over to the Bank of Bombay to see Mr. Blair, and to ascertain whether I could obtain an advance from the Bank of Bombay. I was prepared to make explanations as to why I needed the money, and, if need be, to offer security. Mr. Blair granted me the loan at once, immediately on my asking for it.

2957. Did he say anything?—He refused to hear any explanations at all, but turned to Mr. Robertson, who, if my memory serves me right, was in the same room, and said, "Let Mr. Fleming have 10 or 20 lacs, or whatever he requires."

2958. Is that all that passed?—Yes. I urged very much making some explanation, for it was an anomalous thing my borrowing such a sum of money at the time, but he would not listen to anything which I had to say.

2959. Have you any further information to give us as to the way in which the business of the Bank of Bombay was conducted?—No; I had no communication with the Bank excepting on that occasion.

Mr. D. Robertson.

DONALD ROBERTSON sworn and examined.

2960. (President.) When were you first employed in the Bank of Bombay?—I joined the Bank on the 26th of February 1862.

2961. In what capacity?—As an assistant.

2962. To what department were you attached?—I was not attached to any department at first. I believe that the intention was that I should go up country with one of the agents to a branch.

2963. When were you appointed deputy secretary of the Bank?—I was appointed officiating deputy secretary in, I think, March 1864; I am not certain of the month.

2964. When were you appointed deputy secretary?—At the end of that year.

2965. Was it not on the 6th of September 1864?—I forget.

2966. When were you appointed officiating secretary?—I took charge on the 16th of January 1865; I was gazetted then.

2967. And Mr. Blair came back in March 1865 and acted as secretary?—Yes, for about six weeks.

2968. When did you resign?—I left the Bank on the 31st of March last. I was with the liquidator from the time when the Bank was in liquidation to that date.

2969. I believe that you acted as secretary in Mr. Blair's absence when he was opening branches and so on?—Not always, but I did from the 16th of January to March 1865.

2970. You also acted as secretary in August and September 1864, when Mr. Blair went up to the races at Poonah?—He was away in September 1864; he was only away about a week altogether at that time.

2971. He told us that he was away for a part of August and September.—That was in 1863. I think that in 1864 he was only away about a week or a fortnight.

2972. You will be subjected to a very long examination, but we do not think it necessary to examine you as to Act 10 of 1863, because we have had that from so many witnesses, and you were then in a subordinate position in the Bank; nor as to the increase of capital, for we intend to examine other witnesses still with respect to that. I am very sorry that we are not able to have Mr. Hannay. We will first ask you as to the practice. From the situation which you held you must have been well acquainted with the practice of the Bank under the new Act, the mode of conducting business?—Yes.

2973. As to granting discounts, cash credits, and loans?—Yes.

2974. First of all, we will take the discounts. When was it that the practice of having discount lists was given up?—I do not remember exactly, but I do not think that there was any list since 1863.

2975. Do you know by whose authority that discount list was discontinued?—I do not know upon whose authority it was discontinued. All that I know is that several of those lists were sent round to the directors, and that they came back without any information.

2796. What was substituted in the place of discount lists?—The usual practice was sending round a circular to three directors, the committee for the week.

2977. When was that practice virtually given up?—It was not given up; in fact, I continued it occasionally in my time.

2978. It was revived a great deal in your time, but in 1864 there were very few discount lists sent round?—It must have been in the beginning of 1864.

2979. When did you begin to discount promissory notes in one name, or bills in the names of two persons not independent of each other?—I think that that had been done for a long time.

2980. It could not have been done under the old Act?—Not in one name; but it could have been done in the names of two persons not independent of each other.

2981. That was expressly prohibited by the Act. The old Act required that the two names or firms should be independent of each other.—There could not be two partners in one firm, but there might be two persons connected together in business in one transaction.

2982. That is another thing. You refer to a firm and its broker. When the house has sold goods, the broker holds them; that is a bonâ fide trading transaction, and it would not be an accommodation bill.—It might be, or not.

2983. If you had acted up to the instructions previously to the Act 10 of 1863, the two names ought to have been independent of each other?—Yes.

2984. When did you adopt the system under the new Act of granting loans upon promissory notes in one name, or in the name of the borrower or borrowers only?—It must have been at the end of 1863, I think. I did not grant any at that time, but I believe that there were loans granted at that time, or rather one name taken.

2985. Did they begin in that year with discounts?—I could not say that from recollection; the books will state that.

2986. When did you begin to discount bills which were to run for a longer period than three months?—I do not think that we ever discounted such a bill, excepting one in 1865 to Dossabhoy Merwanjee and Company.

2987. Did you not grant a bill to Kursondass Madhowdass' firm?—We did not call them bills discounted; they were generally on promissory notes.

2988. The new Act imposed, I believe, no limit as to the amount?—No limit.

2989. When did you begin to grant cash credits on the security of promissory notes merely?—In 1863.

2990. Then your memory is better than Mr. Blair's, who, until we actually put the thing before him, would not believe it. Here is a list in Mr. Foggo's evidence of the loans granted in 1863.—Yes; the first is the 11th August 1863, Roychund Deepchund, one lac. The next is 7th September 1863, Calliandass Mohundass and Nusserwanjee Ruttonjee, two lacs. The next is 8th September 1863, Premabhoy Hemchund and Kursondass Madhowdass, four lacs. The next is 11th September 1863, Roychund Deepchund, one lac. The next is on the 11th of September 1863, Premchund Roychund, one lac. The next is the 12th of September 1863, Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, two lacs.

2991. Do you remember anybody giving the order for that change in the practice?—No.

2992. Do you remember upon whose suggestion it was that the change was adopted?—I do not remember, but I should think that the new Act was taken advantage of.

2993. Do you not recollect that the suggestion was made by Premchund himself to Mr. Blair?—No, I do not recollect that; it might have been.

2994. Used you to sit in the same room with Mr. Blair?—No; I sat in my own room. At that time I had the care of the correspondence.

2995. Were not the chairman or directors at all consulted as to granting cash credits in one name?—I could not say.

2996. You were not secretary at that time, certainly.—I might have been spoken to, but I do not think that there was anything in the minutes.

2997. Here are the sums entered in this book (A 33).—Yes; I know what this book is.

2998. You will see your initials.—Yes; that was when I was deputy secretary.

2999. Ought not all these cash credits on personal security to have been entered in the application book?—Yes.

3000. Why were they omitted?—I cannot say; I did not know that they were omitted till the beginning of 1867.

3001. Who called your attention to it then?—Mr. Stuart.

3002. I am surprised to hear you say that, because you will see that at the same time that that omission was made from the application book, this new book was started.—I will tell you what that book is for.

3003. We know what it was started for, because Mr. De Ga has told us.—The deputy secretary had charge of all bills and vouchers representing debt; and each department, as they sent up the documents having passed through their books, sent in a book like this for the deputy secretary, and he initialed it for them, showing that the bills had been sent up. I think that that was started because some of them had been misled at the time.

3004. At the time when these new cash credits on personal security were granted, this book was made with this heading, "Cash Credits granted on Personal Security"?—Yes; you will find a book for bills discounted at the same time that this book was commenced. They were all started at the same time, because I believe that a bill had been mislaid.

3005. You must have been aware at the time that these cash credits were granted on personal security?—Certainly I was; they commenced in Mr. Ryland's time; but when I took charge you will see by my initials that there are not a great number of them.

3006. You knew that these cash credits were granted on personal security?—Certainly.

Mr. D. Robertson.

23 Nov. 1868.

3007. Did it not strike you that the application book would be quite sufficient without that book?—No, the application book would have nothing to do with it. The application book was merely for the directors and the secretary to look at. This was merely a book for the deputy secretary.

3008. Why was not there a book of this sort before, when the cash credits were granted under the old system upon Government security?—Because they were not represented by the same kind of documents, and the deputy secretary had not them to keep: they were kept by the registrar of securities.

3009. Would not these promissory notes be kept by the deputy secretary?—Yes; anything in the shape of a promissory note was kept by the deputy secretary, but the others were kept by the registrar of securities.

3010. You say that it was necessary to have such a book as this?—It was necessary for the clerks in the department.

3011. Were you aware of any order given that these cash credits were not to be entered in the application book?—No.

3012. You never heard that Mr. Blair gave a positive order to Mr. De Ga to that effect?—I never heard of it except from Mr. De Ga himself, when I asked him in 1867 who gave him the order, and he then told me that it was Mr. Blair, and I told him that I certainly did not believe it.

3013. Do you remember the resolution of the 2nd of June 1864 being passed by the board (the minute book being handed to the witness)?—Yes.

3014. Just read it to refresh your memory.—Yes, I remember it.

3015. What had you to do with the preparation of it?—I believe that I drafted the scroll minute.

3016. Why, and for what object?—I do not know whether the suggestion came from myself. I do not remember, but I think that it did. I thought that it would be a very good plan to introduce a system of cash credits such as they have in Scotland.

3017. Was not that calculated to lead every director to suppose that you had had no such practice before?—This was written a year previous to its being passed.

3018. It was brought forward on the 2nd of June 1864.—Yes.

3019. Was not that calculated to lead every director, except those who knew the contrary, to suppose that cash credits were not granted except on the security of two names?—I admit that it might be open to that if they did not know.

3020. We have it distinctly on oath from several of them that they did not know, and that they thought that that resolution was the first authority for such a practice, whereas, the fact is, that the practice had been in existence for 11 months. If that minute was drafted a year before why was it not laid before the directors?—It had been laid before the directors.

3021. When?—Shortly after it was drafted, I should think.

3022. Does it appear in any proceeding that it was laid before the directors; we have not found it in any minute?—I cannot say, but if you had asked Mr. Blair he would have told you that it had been written for a year, and I believe that the directors then thought that that was not the time to introduce the practice.

3023. And yet it was continually done by the officers of the bank?—I think so. I am only speaking from recollection.

3024. You are personally responsible for it?—I cannot of course tell anything except from recollection.

3025. From your recollection the directors thought that that was not the time to introduce the practice, and yet from the books it appears that it was a practice constantly adopted?—Mr. Blair would have been able to tell you better than I can.

3026. Mr. Blair was unable to tell us anything. As you originally drafted the minute, was it drawn up in the terms in which it was eventually passed?—I could not say.

3027. Did you say in the original draft that the Scotch system of cash credits was to grant them upon one name only, with or without security?—I rather think not.

3028. Did you not in the original draft say that the Scotch system required the security of two names?—I do not know that I said two, but I said possibly one or more good names.

3029. The original statement in the scroll minute was perfectly correct in describing the Scotch system.—I do not think that I altered it afterwards.

3030. But Mr. Blair's handwriting alters it into one name. Is it a correct statement of the Scotch system to say that cash credits are granted in one name?—I know of one instance where a cash credit has been granted in one name.

3031. But we are talking of a system.—That is not the Scotch system.

3032. Were you aware of that alteration in the minute at the time?—No, I do not think that I was.

3033. Did you never as deputy secretary look at the minutes after they were passed?—Not often; I had quite enough to do with my own work at the time.

3034. Is that your handwriting? (handing the scroll minute A 48 to the witness)—No; this is Mr. Hannay's handwriting, I think. No; it has been written by a clerk; it has been copied from my draft.

3035. You see what you dictated originally?—Yes; I see that the words were "On a bond for a certain amount being signed by the party requiring the accommodation, together with two good names as security."

3036. And it was altered from "with two good "names as security" to "with or without good names "as security according to the credit of the party"?—Yes.

3037. I want to call your attention to another passage in it: "At present no person in however good credit can have a credit account with the Bank unless he can lodge Government paper as security, besides signing a bond, which has to be renewed ever three months. Whereas, if the above system was adopted the accounts might run on from year to year," and so on. Was that a correct statement to lay before the directors on the 2nd of June 1864?—I can only say what I have said already, that the minute had been written before this; it certainly ought to have been altered.

3038. Am I to understand that you were no party to it being laid before the directors on the 2nd of June 1864?—I might have been. I will not say that Mr. Blair did not speak about it, but I do not remember.

3039. It was in fact calculated to mislead a director, and to lead him to suppose that up to that period no cash credits had been granted in a single name, and that it was necessary to pass this minute in order to allow it?—Yes.

3040. You admit that?—I cannot help admitting it.

3041. You were not present at that board meeting?—No.

3042. Were you ever present at a board meeting when the secretary was present?—I might have been called in, but not often, not half a dozen times in my service.

3043. Do you know why that scroll minute was altered so as to assert an untruth?—I do not.

3044. You say that you did not know that those omissions occurred in the application book. Have you ascertained (it must have been your duty to do so) how that omission took place?—I asked Mr. De Ga, who had charge of the book, why it was, and he said that Mr. Blair had told him to do so.

3045. But I think you have said that you did not believe Mr. De Ga?—Certainly. I think that Mr. Blair would have told me if he had given such an order.

3046. Somebody must have given the order?—Certainly.

3047. Then who did give it?—I cannot say; nobody had any right to give the order except Mr. Blair.

3048. Then why should you disbelieve Mr. De Ga's statement?—Because I believe that it is absurd.

3049. Is not Mr De Ga's statement confirmed by the book itself?—The entries are certainly not there, but I do not believe that that confirms his statement.

3050. I should say that the evidence of a man, supported by the book is quite satisfactory. If you think the contrary let us know the reason?—He must have said so in order to justify himself.

3051. Do you think that Mr. De Ga would have left out all those cases of cash credit upon his own responsibility?—No.

3052. Then who do you think gave him the order?—He must have misunderstood some order which Mr. Blair gave him; that is the only explanation which I can give.

3053. Was not the effect of that altogether to conceal from the directors the advances upon personal security?—I do not think so; there were other books from which they could have seen it, and that book was never looked at.

3054. What other books could they have looked at?—Those advances appeared in all the ledgers of the Bank, and they appeared in a book which we had in the directors' room, which was prepared at the end of 1864 or the beginning of 1865.

3055. What book was that?—A sort of regular ledger for outstandings.

3056. By whose order was that book prepared?—Mr. Blair's, I think.

3057. After he came back from Ajmere?—I do not remember when it was, but it was, I think, before that.

3058. You swear that there was a book of outstandings?—I will swear that there was a ledger of outstandings.

3059. When was it commenced?—I cannot tell you; the book itself will show.

3060. Was there such a book in the Bank when you left it?—Yes. I had not seen it for some time, but I suppose that it was there.

3061. Did Mr. Stuart know of that book?—Yes; because when we asked what was outstanding against any man, he went to this book to look at it, which gave him the whole, from the different branches, as well as from the head office.

3062. When was this book made up?—At the beginning of 1865.

3063. And when after that time?—It was written up every day; it was of very little use after that.

3064. Is it not very extraordinary that, although we asked for such a book, we never got that book, and nobody knew that it was in existence?—It was written up in the directors' room; the clerk who wrote the book left the directors' room every day; the book was there on the table when they came.

3065. What sort of a book was it?—A very large book; it was necessarily a very large ledger.

3066. I believe that you have had several conversations with Mr. Blair about the Bank business since this commission has been appointed?—Yes, several.

3067. And you have consulted together as to the evidence which you will give?—Certainly not.

3068. You have spoken together about the evidence taken in Bombay?—Yes.

3069. And you have consulted about it?—I do not think that I consulted much with Mr. Blair, because he was not in a state of health to be consulted about it.

3070. I must say that after all the pains which we have taken to get the book of outstandings, we shall be very incredulous, unless you give us some evidence in support of your assertion as to the existence of that book, because it is impossible that Mr. Stuart could have been ignorant of its existence.—It is of no use my saying that that book existed, unless it did exist.

3071. We asked every director whether there was such a book. Can you explain why they never heard of such a book, and why one of them, Mr. Brown, took credit for having introduced such a book into the Bank at the end of 1865, for the first time?—It was introduced at the beginning of 1865; of that I am certain.

3072. When did you begin to grant fixed loans on promissory notes or bonds, simply?—I think that some were granted in 1863. I do not remember, but I think so; there were some in 1864 certainly.

3073. They were granted on promissory notes, or bonds in one name, were not they, without any other security?—Yes.

3074. Were not they granted also for long periods?—Yes.

3075. Longer periods than three months?—Yes; they were granted repayable on demand, but certainly on the understanding that they were not to be called up for a much longer period than three months.

3076. Sometimes ten or eleven months?—I suppose nearly as long as that; not quite so long.

3077. And some of them were not entered in the application book?—Some of them, I believe, were not.

3078. Are you quite sure that you showed Mr. Stuart the book of outstandings to which you have alluded?—I am not certain.

3079. You were acting under him after he became liquidator of the Bank?—Yes.

3080. Will you swear that that was one of the books given over to the liquidator?—No. I had nothing to do with giving the books to the liquidator. Mr. Stuart had been secretary twelve months before.

3081. Did you ever see that book after Mr. Stuart took possession?—I think that I did.

3082. If there was any such book Mr. Stuart must have seen it, because he would have availed himself of it in order to have made out a list of outstandings, would he not?—I think so. The list of outstandings was not made out by Mr. Stuart; it was made out by a clerk.

3083. But it was made out under his direction?—But he would not look at the books.

3084. By whom were the loan bonds filled up?—By a clerk in the loan department.

3085. Who looked over them after he had filled them up?—The accountant should have done so.

3086. Did the secretary or the deputy secretary never look at the securities to see whether they were correct?—He never looked at them so far as I remember; he may have done so, but it was not his duty.

3087. Here are two of the forms of bonds which we have brought home, and they are all filled up much in the same way. I will read one of them (Exhibit A 51). "Be it remembered that on this 28th day of December 1864 I have deposited with the Bank of Bombay P.S." What does "P.S." mean?—Personal security.

3088. "To the amount of company's rupees 6,25,000 only, as security for the repayment, on the 1st of July 1865, of the sum of company's rupees 6,25,000 only." Did not you say just now that these bonds were made repayable on demand upon the mere understanding that the loan would be for a longer time?—But there was a promissory note without the bond. We could have acted upon the promissory note.

3089. It would have been a clear defence to an action on the note to have put in that bond. Do you think that it was good banking to lend 6,25,000 rupees for eight months?—In ordinary circumstances it would not be.

3090. What were the extraordinary circumstances which made it good banking?—An increase of the capital had then taken place, and there was a large amount of money coming in, and I believe that the wish was to get out as much money as possible to what were then considered good men.

3091. For a long time like this?—Yes. Of course

Mr. D. Robertson.

23 Nov. 1868.

it was supposed at that time that the longer they took it the better for the Bank.

3092. Do you mean to say that the increase of capital rendered it desirable to resort to bad banking?—No.

3093. But that seems to have been the result?—Looking at the result it seems to have been so.

3094. The bond goes on as follows, "this day advanced by them to me with interest thereon at the rate of company's rupees 15 per cent. per annum, and I agree that, in case default should be made at the expiration of the said period, interest shall then be chargeable at and after the rate of company's rupees 12 per cent." Do you understand what the meaning of that is, namely, that interest should be payable at 15 per cent., but that, if the man was a defaulter, it should be payable at 12 per cent.?—That is the form of the bond relating to Government notes, and there was no anticipation that there would be default.

3095. Here is another bond (Exhibit A 151). I believe it to have been the practice to draw them up in this informal manner: "Be it remembered that on this 25th day of February 1865 we have deposited with the Bank of Bombay personal securities to the amount of company's rupees 2,50,000 as security for the repayment, 14 days after date, of the sum of company's rupees 2,50,000 rs. this day advanced by them to us, with interest thereon at the rate of rupees 14 per cent.," and then again with 12 per cent. in case of default.—That would be in the same way.

3096. That I think you must admit shows a very careless administration?—I never saw the use of the bond; I considered the promissory note just as good.

3097. I now want to call your attention to the advances made by the Bank on shares of public companies. I believe that you recollect the resolution of the board of the 6th of August 1863?—Yes. I cannot say that I knew of the existence of it until long after I took charge myself, and inquiries were being made.

3098. You did not know of it at the time?—No.

3099. Then you cannot tell us who was the author of it?—No.

3100. Or what discussion took place at that time?—It is very curious how it was put in at the end of the minute in this way.

3101. Do you remember an attempt being made to alter that prudent resolution on the 14th of September following?—No.

3102. Here is Mr. Ryland's scroll minute in his handwriting (Exhibit A 132); you will see what was proposed.—Yes; it is the first time that I have seen the scroll minute. I was away then. I was then inspector of branches, and I think that I was at Hyderabad.

3103. You never heard of these discussions as to whether the Bank should advance on shares or not?—No, I never heard of them.

3104. You never heard that Cowasjee Jehangeer stoutly resisted it?—No.

3105. When did you first hear of any discussions about advancing on shares?—I do not remember hearing of any discussion about it until the meeting in April 1865.

3106. You were present at that meeting on the 12th of April 1865?—I think so.

3107. Did Mr. Blair, or you, call the attention of the directors on the 12th of April 1865 to the fact of these previous discussions?—I do not think that I was present at the meeting.

3108. You were then expecting to become secretary, and I should have expected that you were present.—I may have been. I was away for some time then, that is in April 1865. I was in the Bank on that day I know, but I was away afterwards.

3109. Are you not aware that, notwithstanding these resolutions of the directors, advances were made in fact on shares in 1864, although they limited it nearly to shares in railways?—I know that several large loans were granted on shares which were taken, but the loans, I believe, were not granted on the security of the shares alone.

3110. Was not it the agreement that the money was to be advanced on a promissory note, and that the shares were to be deposited for safe custody?—Yes; I believe so.

3111. That was the system. What did you mean by "safe custody"?—The meaning, as far as I understand was, that if the loans were not paid off, the shares could be used.

3112. Was not that lending money on shares?—It might be indirectly; the intention was not that.

3113. I do not see how it was lending on shares indirectly; it appears to me to have been doing so directly.—The loan was granted to these people, but as it was a large amount, the shares were taken and kept in safe custody in case of accident.

3114. If I lent you a sum of money upon a house and the furniture of the house, I apprehend that I should lend money both upon the house and the furniture?—Certainly.

3115. And if I lent money upon a promissory note and shares, I apprehend that I should lend money on both?—If you lent money to me, and if you did not get my house transferred to you, you would not say that you lent the money upon my house. Would you not consider me good for the amount without the house?

3116. If I took the security from you of a promissory note and the deposit of title deeds, I should lend you the money upon the promissory note and the security of your house?—I do not look upon it in that way.

3117. It is certainly the common-sense view. There can be no doubt whatever that that was the practice, was it not, long before the 12th of April 1865, namely, to have the share certificates deposited for safe custody?—In three or four instances I think that it was the case. If you will give me the names, I can show you.

3118. Is that your letter?—(handing Exhibit A 122 to the witness)—I do not remember the letter, but I have no doubt that I wrote it. (After looking at it.) This is my handwriting; it must have been in answer to a letter.

3119. The letter is as follows: "Private—Bank of Bombay, Bombay, 6th of March 1865;" that was more than a month before that order was passed. "My dear Cowasjee, We do not, as a rule, advance upon any shares, but in some instances we have granted loans on personal security, and have received Back Bay and Elphinstone shares from the parties for deposit in the Bank for safe custody. Of course the parties consider that these shares are lodged as collateral security." I shall have to refer very often to this expression "collateral security." What do you mean by those words?—I mean security deposited when the loan was granted, which could be used if necessary.

3120. I want exactly your meaning of the word "collateral"?—That is exactly what I mean, that security was deposited.

3121. "Collateral security" means a security running side by side with another, does it not?—That may be the literal meaning.

3122. Is there any other meaning?—No; certainly not.

3123. Then if it is running side by side with another security, the security is on both?—Yes.

3124. Will you refer to the resolution of the 12th of April 1865?—Yes; I see it.

3125. Have you the slightest doubt that you were present when that resolution was passed?—I have not the slightest doubt that I was in the secretary's room, and it was drafted by me, if I remember rightly, but I cannot say that I was present at the meeting.

3126. Were the directors informed of the previous discussions, and were they shown the minutes on former occasions when this question was discussed?—The previous minutes are recorded here.

3127. But were the scroll minutes shown to the directors ?—I do not think that they were.

3128. Do you remember their having been looked out for them at that time ?—I do not remember ; I do not think that they were looked out.

3129. Were the directors told that, in point of fact, the Bank had already been in the habit of advancing upon shares ?—I cannot say.

3130. It is clear that there were advances on shares before that meeting.—Perfectly ; it is evident that shares were taken before that meeting.

3131. Was not that resolution, which you say you drafted, calculated to leave the impression on the mind of every director, that there was no such previous sanction, and that it was necessary to authorize it by that resolution ; was it not calculated to lead the directors to suppose that there had been no such practice before ?—Yes, and I do not believe that it was admitted that there was such a practice before.

3132. Had not your own letter stated that the shares of these companies were deposited in the Bank for safe custody, adding : "Of course the parties consider that these shares are lodged as collateral security "?—Yes ; that is to say, that they could not get them unless they paid the loan.

3133. Do you think that it was ingenuous to draft a resolution such as that for the directors to pass, without letting them know that that practice was actually in existence at the time ?—I cannot say whether they knew, or did not know.

3134. Then am I to understand you to say that the directors did know that there was such a practice before ?—I cannot say ; Mr. Blair might have told them.

3135. Do you think that it was a prudent measure to rescind the old resolution of 6th August 1863 ?—Looking at the result, it was not.

3136. Do you think that it was prudent at any time to advance on shares the calls upon which were not fully paid up ?—I cannot say what my opinion was then ; but I should certainly say now that it was not prudent.

3137. Do you think that it was prudent to advance largely upon the premia of shares ?—It was certainly not prudent to advance such a large amount I should think ; of course I am only talking of what I think now ; it is very different looking at these things now, compared with what it was in the Spring of 1865 in Bombay.

3138. Do you think that it was prudent to leave such advances to the secretary, "at his discretion," for those are the words ?—I should think so, if the directors had any confidence in the secretary.

3139. You think that it was prudent ?—I think so ; the secretary would not grant loans for any large amount without taking some advice.

3140. You remark that there is a saving clause that advances were only to be made to first-class applicants ?—Yes.

3141. Who was to be the judge of who were first-class applicants ?—I should think Mr. Blair.

3142. Do you think that Mr. Blair was competent to judge as to the credit of Natives, or whether they were first-class applicants, or not ?—If he did not know them himself, he should make inquiry, and I should think that that is what he would do. I do not think that he would have granted loans to any one who came and asked for them, without making inquiry.

3143. Why were the particular companies named in the resolution selected ? — I suppose that they selected the principal companies whose shares were in the market at the time.

3144. Why was the Asiatic Bank, a new Bank, selected ?—Their shares stood well, and they were supposed to be doing a good business.

3145. Was not Mr. Hannay a director of that Bank ?—No ; he was one of the original promoters of it.

3146. He was the president of the Bank of Bombay at that time ?—Yes.

3147. He was surely a director of the Asiatic Bank after that ?—No ; he never was a director.

3148. But he was on the Consulting Committee in Bombay, which is the same thing ?—I think so.

3149. Two of the directors of the Bank, namely, Mr. Tracey and Premchund, were largely interested in the Back Bay Company, were they not ?—Premchund must have been. I do not know that Mr. Tracey was then.

3150. Mr. Tracey, I think, became a director of the Back Bay Company shortly afterwards. — He was a director of it. I do not remember when he became one.

3151. Mr. Brown, I believe, was the secretary of the Elphinstone Land and Press Company, was he not ?—Yes.

3152. How came it that when these particular companies were selected, as the companies upon the shares of which advances were to be made, you did not adhere to that rule, but lent money upon all sorts of shares—the United Victoria and Colaba Company and others ?—There were special cases which came before the board, in which they did lend on shares ; for instance, the Bombay Joint Stock Corporation was one. Afterwards, I was very glad to get anything in the shape of security, not for new loans, but for old loans.

3153. You did not consider yourself bound by that resolution to those companies ?—Certainly, for new loans ; but as respected old loans, when I could not get the money, I was glad to get anything which I could get.

3154. What do you understand to have been the object of the directors in passing the resolution of the 12th of April 1865 ?—I do not know what the object might have been, but a crisis was evidently approaching, and it was supposed that this might do some good.

3155. Do you mean that on the 12th of April they thought that a crisis was approaching ?—It looked like it, but I cannot speak as to that ; the directors will be able to give you better information upon that.

3156. Can you give us any other reason ?—No.

3157. Premchund very candidly gave us his reason, which was that he would have consented to anything which would have made the money market easy.—Yes, I believe that he would.

3158. Can you tell us what was the ruling motive with the other directors ?—No.

3159. Mr. Brown has also given us a reason, namely, that it would assist certain parties who had over-invested in the securities of the place ?—It is very difficult to state.

3160. Have you any recollection of the policy which dictated that resolution ?—No.

3161. Will you tell us something about the renewals of loans ; was not that left to the secretary ?—Entirely.

3162. If the interest was paid regularly, you never made a difficulty about it in 1864 and the beginning of 1865 ?—Not before 1865.

3163. You renewed again and again if you got the interest paid regularly ?—Yes.

3164. Do you consider that good banking ?—It might be in a small business.

3165. Were not those loans which you renewed, and renewed again without any part payment, likely to become dead loans, and to end in failure ?—As long as the place was prosperous, I do not think that there was much objection.

3166. Have you not been a long time in business, and do you not know that prosperity does not continue, and especially such prosperity as that ?—Yes ; we have had that experience now pretty well.

3167. But surely you did not require to be taught that in 1864 or 1865, did you ?—I am afraid that we did.

3168. I will come now to the powers of the secretary. Was not it a fact that, at so late a period as March 1866, the directors did not know what the powers of the secretary were ?—I do not think that they did definitely.

3169. Did not the whole board write to their chairman, Mr. Hannay, who was about to resign, and ask him to define for them what the secretary's powers were ?—I believe that they did.

Mr. D. Robertson.

23 Nov. 1868.

3170. And did not he find himself equally ignorant, and write to you to ask you what your powers were ?—He did.

3171. I believe that that is your handwriting in answer (showing Exhibit A 35 to the witness) ?—That is my handwriting.

3172. (After the letter had been read by the secretary.) I understand from this letter that you are speaking of the practice of several years past, at the time when you were deputy secretary as well as secretary. You say, "I consider that according to the practice in the Bank for some years past" ?—Yes; it was with reference to the powers of the secretary.

3173. You say in the second head of that letter, "To discount bank bills and bills on good houses of a currency not exceeding 60 days. There is no limit." You have fallen into the habit, which I find quite usual, of calling a promissory note a bill ?—Yes.

3174. A promissory note in one name you would call a bill ?—Yes, I include that.

3175. You say "There is no limit, but I have hitherto seldom taken over three lacs of the paper of one house."—Yes.

3176. Are you quite sure of that ?—I think that you granted a much larger amount than that, not after you were officiating secretary, but before that time, did you not ?—Not that I remember; I may have done so.

3177. Thirdly, "To grant temporary advances to banks, houses, and other constituents of the bank;" you do not put any limit upon that ?—No.

3178. Fourthly, "To discount bills, and to grant loans and credits on personal security to well-known men." You put no limit upon that, but you say, "N.B. Since I have been acting" (that is, since the 1st of May 1865), "the times have been so exceptional that I granted very few advances without consulting at least one director" ?—I think that that is so.

3179. That one director I apprehend was either Mr. Tracey, or Mr. Hannay, or Premchund Roychund ?—Very seldom Mr. Tracey, I think, but chiefly Mr. Hannay, or Premchund Roychund. Mr. Hannay was next door to me, and I consulted him.

3180. As to native parties you consulted Premchund ?—Yes, or Mr. Hannay, but I believe that he referred me to Premchund.

3181. The fifth head is, "The renewal of bills, loans, and credits I consider is left to my own discretion, of course bearing in mind the order of the board not to renew for the full amount, if possible, but to get 25 per cent. in cash."—It was not an order, but it was referred as a minute to myself to get as much as possible.

3182. You add, "Some bills, &c. for special reasons have been renewed in full."—Yes.

3183. I suppose that your "special reasons" mean that you could not get the money ?—In some instances I referred to Mr. Hannay, and I was told that it was not convenient for the people to pay me 25 per cent., and I renewed the bills in full.

3184. The ninth head is, "Power given in July last to attend meetings of creditors of parties indebted to the Bank, to agree to propositions made at such meetings, to sign trust deeds, &c. at my discretion." We shall have to enter into that fully. I will not ask you about that now. "I may say that I consider the order of the President in every case sufficient authority for me to act under." What is your opinion of the duties of the President; you have had a great deal of experience. What were his duties ?—In my time from May 1865 Mr. Hannay took as much interest in the Bank's affairs as I did, and I consulted him upon almost everything. He was with me in the morning, and in the evening, before he went home, and during the day. In fact half of his time I am certain was taken up with the business of the Bank of Bombay.

3185. You were in the office in Mr. Birch's time before you were officiating secretary ?—Yes.

3186. And you acted for Mr. Blair on several occasions during short absences, and during his long absence at Ajmere. You can therefore tell us something about the manner in which Mr. Birch performed his duties as President ?—I think that he was very attentive too. During the time that I was there I think that he looked in upon me once a day.

3187. Did he take his seat at the board ?—There was no board meeting.

3188. I am talking of other days than board days; did he take his seat ?—He asked me how we were getting on, and whether I had anything to ask him.

3189. Did he take an interest in the management of the Bank ?—Yes, as far as he could know as a Government director.

3190. Was he often referred to, either by you or by Mr. Blair ?—Not by me with reference to loans.

3191. Was Mr. Blair in the habit of referring to him upon that point ?—I could not say, but I do not think that he was.

3192. Then what did Mr. Birch do as President ?—He only exercised a supervision over everything; he took the chair at meetings.

3193. He attended the meetings and he came in and asked you how things were going on; did he do anything else ?—Not that I know of. We did not suppose that he could tell us about loans, and we did not ask him; we did not ask any Government director.

3194. Then what did you suppose that he, or the Government directors, could do ?—The only thing which they could do was, that they could object to what was being done; they could not be expected to give the secretary any information as to the business of the Bank.

3195. You are aware that in consequence of that letter Mr. Hannay wrote to his brother directors and put some few restrictions by his letter of the 15th March 1866 (Exhibit A 34) upon the powers of the secretary ?—Yes.

3196. And those recommendations of Mr. Hannay were afterwards embodied in the byelaws which were passed, dated the 31st of March 1866 ?—Yes; his recommendations, if I remember, were very much modified.

3197. They were, but the greater portion of them were adopted, and they were embodied in the byelaws of the 31st of March 1866.—Yes.

3198. Till that time you had no byelaws ?—No; we had no byelaws under the new Act until the 31st of March 1866.

3199. Do you remember a discussion which took place at the board on the 4th of May 1865 as to the powers of the secretary? Do you remember this resolution being passed on the 4th of May 1865: "Resolved, that no new constituent of the Bank be allowed credit beyond three lacs, without the special sanction of three directors" ?—I do, but I forget what caused it.

3200. Do you not recollect that Mr. Francis Chapman, one of the Government directors, brought forward a discussion upon the powers of the secretary on that day ?—I do not remember it.

3201. Surely it is a sort of thing which you would not forget ?—I have been looking at this resolution since, and I cannot remember what brought it on.

3202. You were present at the meeting, were you not ?—Yes; I must have been present at the meeting.

3203. I will refresh your recollection by reading what Mr. Brown told us about it. After speaking of some previous discussion with Mr. Tracey upon the subject, he says: "At the next board meeting Mr. F. S. Chapman, a Government director, asked me if I was satisfied at the way in which business was being done. He particularly referred to the utter ignorance in which the directors were kept as to the business, and everything that was going on, and we agreed in opinion that the directors were ciphers, and the secretary apparently uncontrolled. Mr. F. S.

Chapman then told me that both he and Mr. Lushington, the two Government directors, had come prepared to move in the matter, and I willingly agreed to support him. Mr. Lushington then proposed, to the best of my recollection, that restrictions should be put upon the secretary's powers." Do you not recollect that?—It might have been a conversation, but my mind is a blank upon the subject altogether, unless something had been done which brought that on.

3204. Had not any of the directors previously expressed to you any dissatisfaction with the extent of your powers as secretary?—Not at that time; not in 1865.

3205. Do you not recollect a discussion upon that subject?—I have been trying over and over again in Bombay to recollect it. Mr. Brown talked to me about that resolution shortly before I left Bombay, and he told me what I told you.

3206. Was Premchund present at that meeting; his name is not on the minutes, but Mr. Brown says that he has a distinct recollection of his having been there?—He might have been; he might have come in late, and I might not have put down his name.

3207. Do not you recollect a discussion between Mr. Hannay and Premchund on one side, and Mr. Chapman and Mr. Lushington and Mr. Brown on the other?—I cannot recollect anything about it.

3208. We will refresh your recollection. The evidence is as follows: I reminded Mr. Brown that Mr. Hannay, Mr. Lushington, Mr. F. S. Chapman, Mr. Tracey, and you were present at that meeting on the 4th of May; he answered, "Yes, and I thought Premchund was also present. Mr. Lushington's proposal was strongly opposed by Mr. Hannay, and I think by Mr. Tracey. Mr. Hannay was the spokesman, and said that unless the secretary was left unfettered, it would be impossible to make him fee. his responsibility. I think Mr. Tracey joined him in that, and Mr. Hannay added that men of standing, had too much self-respect to submit to have their applications scrutinized by the whole board, and that if we insisted, the Bank would lose much valuable business. The resolution come to at that meeting on the 4th of May was a sort of compromise, and there was an understanding arrived at, that considering the perilous nature of the times, and particularly as Mr. Robertson was just entering upon office as officiating secretary, all new business was to be submitted to the board, or the weekly committee, and I think that that understanding was acted on."—I think that I remember Mr. Hannay making those remarks (but I do not know that it was at that meeting), that the secretary should be left to a certain extent uncontrolled.

3209. Did Mr. Chapman, Mr. Lushington, and Mr. Brown oppose that view?—I do not think that they actually opposed it. I cannot tell you much about it.

3210. I want to know, if Premchund was not there, how the three came to be overruled by the two?—I can only go by the minutes that Premchund was not there.

3211. Mr. Brown recollects his being there; that would make three and three, and then we can understand a compromise?—Yes, there would be a casting vote. Premchund might have been there without his name having been put down, but I do not think that it is at all likely.

3212. Let us turn to the resolution itself: "Resolved, that no new constituent of the Bank be allowed credit beyond three lacs without the special sanction of three directors." Did you not infer from that resolution that old constituents of the Bank might be allowed credit beyond three lacs without the sanction of three directors?—Yes.

3213. It was not likely, I suppose, very much to fetter your proceedings?—New business then, I should say, was almost stopped.

3214. On the 4th of May 1865?—Yes.

3215. Do you remember any authority being given to the secretary to consult one director only?—No, I do not remember any particular minute on that subject, or any special order.

3216. You do not recollect any authority given by the board to consult one director only?—No.

3217. Is that Mr. Blair's handwriting (showing Exhibit Z 1 to the witness)?—Yes.

3218. You do not recollect such an order being given either verbally or in writing?—I do not.

3219. You do not recollect any such order being given, and its being stated that it was not to be entered in the minute book?—No; I do not remember any order of that kind.

3220. And that a note would be taken of it in Mr. Birch's private memorandum book?—No; no order of that kind. I never heard it.

3221. Mr. Blair has written to Mr. Birch on the 5th of June 1868 as follows: "Robertson recollects that the power granted to the secretary to pass loans recommended by one director was not recorded; and he further recollects that I mentioned to him on the breaking up of one of the board meetings that you had put a note in your memorandum book to that effect, showing that I, as secretary, had more power than might be given to any other secretary."—Yes, I recollect Mr. Blair telling me that; that Mr. Birch paid him a compliment, and said that he had more power than might be given to another secretary.

3222. You have already told us that you do not recollect anything about this power being granted to pass loans recommended by one director, and that it was not to be recorded?—I do not recollect any order to that effect.

3223. You never made that statement to Mr. Blair?—I never made that statement to Mr. Blair. He certainly asked me if I remembered Mr. Birch saying that to him after a board meeting one day.

3224. The only part of that letter which you remember as correct is that Mr. Blair had more power given to him than might be given to another secretary?—Yes.

3225. What was Mr. Blair's practice in his time, when you were deputy secretary? There were only two losses before the 1st of June 1864; and if you carry all the payments to the credit of the first loan, then I doubt whether there is anything but a mere fractional loss upon one of them. As to the period from the first of June 1864 down to the time of Mr. Blair's departure, what was the practice of Mr. Blair as to granting advances; whom did he consult?—Cowasjee Jehangeer, until he resigned. After he resigned, Premchund was appointed a director, and he was consulted.

3226. Premchund was a director in July 1864, and remained a director until September 1864?—He was not a director until Cowasjee Jehangeer resigned, and he resigned in September 1864.

3227. And he was not on the direction again till December 1864?—No.

3228. From the time of Cowasjee Jehangeer's resignation Mr. Blair consulted Premchund as to loans?—Yes.

3229. Why did he discontinue the practice of referring those subjects to the weekly committee?—I believe that the answer which he generally got from them was, "refer it to the native director."

3230. Do you believe that that was the reason why the practice commenced of referring these subjects to the native director alone?—I do.

3231. Do you know that the directors were aware that Mr. Blair was in the habit of referring these things to the native director alone?—I think that they were. I do not know that they were, but I certainly think that they were.

3232. Did Mr. Birch know that?—I should think that he did.

3233. Can you tell us whether there was any limitation upon the secretary's powers other than that to which I have referred, and to which you have referred in your letter?—I do not think that there was anything else.

3234. You claimed almost unlimited power?—I did.

Mr. D. Robertson.

23 Nov. 1868.

3235. You acted as secretary during Mr. Blair's absence on several occasions?—Yes, after Mr. Ryland left.

3236. It seems that the time in which you acted, whilst Mr. Blair was at Ajmere, was a very busy time at the bank?—Yes.

3237. There are a greater number of outstandings arising, I am sorry to say, during those seven or eight weeks when you acted for him?—Yes, I dare say.

3238. There was also a very heavy outstanding incurred during the short time in which you acted for him, when he was at the races at Poonah in 1864?—Yes.

3239. Out of a very great number of outstandings, I am going to select 17 which I consider the most important, and through which I shall take you seriatim. The first case is that of Kursondass Madhowdass' large loan. The promissory notes run in this way: 31st August 1864.—Mayabhoy Premabhoy, 8 lacs. 31st August 1864.—Muggonbhoy Huttising, 8 lacs. 31st August 1864.—Kursondass Madhowdass, 4 lacs. 26th September 1864.—Kursondass Madhowdass, 5 lacs. So that altogether, in those three names, there was a loan of 25 lacs of rupees?—Yes; I do not think that I granted them all.

3240–1. Originally, Mr. Blair was written to before he left on the 23rd of August as follows: "My dear Mr. Blair,—Kursondass wants a loan from 4 to 5 lacs. I think he is safe for any amount. Yours sincerely, Premchund. 23rd August 1864." Mr. Blair left a few days afterwards for Poonah, and then it seems that the whole transaction was changed, and that the loan was to be taken by these three parties; do you know who they were?—Yes.

3242. Were not they all partners in one firm?—I believe so. I did not know it at the time.

3243. I think that you will have no hesitation in saying that you granted that loan, because there is the application to you (handing a letter, Exhibit A 134, to the witness).—It might have been granted in my time, but I have no hesitation in saying that I should not have granted it without authority.

3244. This letter is addressed to you by Premchund?—Yes.

3245. You see that the rate of interest is 13 per cent., and that the money was lent up to the 1st of July 1865?—Yes.

3246. So that this was actually a fixed loan for ten months?—Yes; but I still hold the opinion that, before I was appointed as officiating secretary, I do not think that I granted a loan for 5,000 rs. without authority.

3247. Mr. Blair was away for a long time on that occasion, was he not?—No, not that year; in the previous year he was.

3248. I find that you were still addressed upon this loan up to the 26th of September.—Very likely; I might have been corresponding about it. Premchund would address me then.

3249. Twenty-five lacs is an enormous sum. Here is a letter from Premchund to you of the 26th of September about the remaining amount (Exhibit marked A 135).—Very likely, but I was not in charge then.

3250. You were the person who managed this large transaction?—Yes.

3251. Did you consult anybody before you parted with this enormous sum of money—a quarter of a million?—I never granted it. If Mr. Blair was away, I must have been told of it by him before he left.

3252. He knows nothing about it, and we find that the correspondence was with you.—Yes, I admit that; you will find that in many cases.

3253. Even supposing that Mr. Blair had spoken to you about it (and all that he knew before he left was an application for four lacs), did not you consult anybody?—I must have consulted Premchund, I suppose. I do not see that I consulted any one at all.

3254. The date is the 31st of August 1864. Premchund was a director of the Bank at that time?—I think so. I have nothing to prove that I did not grant it; but I am nearly certain that I did not do so without control.

3255. Did not you ask Premchund Roychund what that large loan was wanted for?—I do not remember.

3256. Did it not strike you as something singular that the three partners in one firm were taking such a loan?—I did not know then that they were partners, but I did afterwards. I knew that one was Premabhoy Hemabhoy's son, and that the other was his nephew. Premabhoy Hemabhoy was supposed to be one of the wealthiest men in Bombay at that time.

3257. Did not you make inquiries at that time? If you had done so you would have known immediately from your shroff that they were partners.—I might have got the information from any one; but I do not know that I could, because the partners in native firms are not always known.

3258. They were carrying on business together then.—And they were carrying on business separately.

3259. Are you prepared to deny that you were the person who negotiated that loan?—I have nothing to prove it; but I am certain that I did not. The evidence is against me; but when I was officiating secretary I should not pass anything. I certainly would not do it.

3260. Did not you know that Premchund Roychund was interested in that transaction himself?—No, I did not.

3261. Did he not negotiate the whole business with you?—Yes, I believe that he did.

3262. You never saw the parties?—Kursondass would come himself, I should think.

3263. He says that he did not?—Possibly he is right. I know that Kursondass usually came about his business, but whether he came on that particular occasion, or not, I cannot say.

3264. What was the understanding upon which that loan was to be made?—So many shares were to be deposited, but I cannot say how many.

3265. Were not 80 Back Bay shares to be deposited?—Somewhere about that number.

3266. Did not you know that there was going to be a gigantic speculation in Back Bay shares with the money?—I did not.

3267. Did not you feel any curiosity as to what they wanted a quarter of a million of money for?—No. I knew that they were doing a large trade, in opium especially. Very likely I may have thought that they were going into a speculation; possibly I did, but I do not remember.

3268. Do you mean to swear that you did not ask Premchund Roychund what that transaction was?—I do not think that I did, I do not remember it.

3269. Had you no suspicion that he himself was a party in that transaction?—None whatever.

3270. Or Premabhoy Hemabhoy?—None whatever. I knew that one of them was the son of Premabhoy Hemabhoy, and that the other was his nephew.

3271. Did not you know that Premchund was then a large seller of Back Bay shares?—I did not; in fact, upon inquiring of brokers in the market, they would tell you that he was buying as many as he was selling. I could not tell you exactly what he was doing.

3272. I want to know how you were conducting this transaction. You first of all lent them this quarter of a million; what security had you for it, on the day when you passed it across the counter, beyond the promissory notes?—I do not know when the shares came in. I suppose that there would be only the promissory notes on that day.

3273. And it was not until the shares came in, some time afterwards, that in fact you had security at all?—We granted these loans on personal security.

3274. You entrusted this quarter of a million to these men without security?—There was a promissory note.

3275. That is not security. Did you bring this large transaction before the board?—I do not think that I did.

3276. Did you bring it before the President?—I do not think that I did.

3277. Did you bring it before any other director than Premchund?—I do not think that I did. I may have done so.

3278. Knowing that Premchund was a large dealer in shares and a speculator at that time, do you think that it was wise to act solely upon his advice in that transaction?—At the time I thought that it was perfectly right; but with the experience which I have since had, I should certainly not consider his advice good for it.

3279. This transaction on the 31st of August 1864 is the first transaction which I find in which shares were given to be deposited for safe custody.—You will find that I had not the first arrangement of these things.

3280. How came you to feel yourself authorized to abrogate the resolution of the 6th of August 1863, and in fact to advance on shares?—I do not think that I knew of the resolution at the time, because at that time I was only deputy secretary. I was not even officiating secretary.

3281. You were acting for the secretary in his absence?—Yes; but I was only deputy secretary.

3282. How came you to introduce this system of advancing on a promissory note, and having shares deposited for safe custody?—I can only say that I did not introduce it. The evidence is against me, upon these letters, that I granted these loans; but I can only say that I did not grant any loan of the sort unless I was told to do so. I could not say before seeing those letters that the transaction was carried out by me; but after seeing those letters, I admit that it was so.

3283. Supposing that Mr. Blair had given you some sort of verbal instruction to carry out such a transaction before he went to Poonah, do you think that it would have been wise to carry out such a gigantic transaction as this without consulting some other director than Premchund? — I thought that Premchund was acting honestly, and that his advice upon these loans was better than that of any other person. But I certainly admit now that it was not prudent.

3284. How came you to grant a loan for 10 months?—It must have been arranged before between Premchund and Mr. Blair; that is the only thing which I can tell you. I did not alter it. I must admit that I saw the transaction carried out.

3285. Mr. Blair says that he had nothing to do with it.—I should not have done such a thing as deputy secretary. If I had been officiating I might have considered myself empowered to do it.

3286. You know this opinion book (A 27)?—Yes.

3287. Was not this meant to be a guide to you as to the credit of parties?—At one time it was, but not for some years.

3288. At all events, it was a guide in 1864?—I cannot say that it was; it was not written up, I believe, in 1864, except in one or two instances.

3289. In a great many instances it was written up; it was done so seven days before these loans were granted. On March the 28th, 1864, Kursondass and another were considered good for one lac; on August the 24th, 1864, there is the following entry in Mr. Blair's handwriting, "Kursondass Madhowdass and Company, Premchund says good for four or five lacs."—Yes.

3290. Do you wish us to believe that notwithstanding that entry, made by Mr. Blair a few days before he went to Poonah, he instructed you to advance to Kursondass Madhowdass and Company 25 lacs?—Not to Kursondass Madhowdass and Company; Kursondass Madhowdass and Company did not get the loans.

3291. The borrowers were the three partners in Kursondass Madhowdass' firm?—It was not known at the time, at least not by me, and I believe not by Mr. Blair.

3292. Even supposing that you did not know that the other parties were partners of Kursondass Madhowdass, how came you in the face of this opinion to advance Kursondass Madhowdass nine lacs?—I did not look at the opinion, and I did not advance Kursondass Madhowdass nine lacs.

3293. Yes, you did; there were four lacs in the first transaction, and five more in September 1864?—When were the four lacs granted?

3294. Upon the 31st of August 1864, these letters show it.—I can only say that I did not grant any of them.

3295. Giving the full weight to your objection that you did not know that they were partners at the time, how came you to grant Kursondass Madhowdass nine lacs, when here is the instruction of your superior a day or two before he went to Poonah, saying that Kursondass was worth four or five lacs?—I never looked at that book.

3296. Was not it your duty to look at it?—No, I must have been instructed before.

3297. You must have had instruction, according to your statement, from Mr. Blair?—I must have had it from him.

3298. It is highly improbable in the face of these letters.—The evidence is against me, but I still adhere to what I have said, namely, that as deputy secretary I never granted such a loan, and I am certain that I did not pass any loan till I became officiating secretary.

3299. I believe that this loan was renewed on the 2nd of August 1865, was it not?—Yes, I remember that.

3300. And it was brought before the board?—I believe that it would be.

3301. You were all frightened at that time, and you began to bring everything before the board. This is the entry on the minutes: "Read two letters from Mr. Kursondass Madhowdass regarding the under-mentioned loans due the 1st of July, nine lacs in the name of Kursondass Madhowdass; eight lacs in the name of Muggonbhoy Huttising, and eight lacs in the name of Mayabhoy Premabhoy, total 25 lacs; requesting that they be renewed for a further period of six months. The security at present lodged is 80 Bombay Reclamation Company Shares. He further promises to deposit an acknowledgment of his claim against Cursetjee Furdoonjee for 25,80,000 rs., and, if necessary, Messrs. Premchund Roychund and Premabhoy Hemabhoy will guarantee the Bank against any loss. Resolved, that the loans be renewed for three months from 1st July on his depositing the acknowledgment of his claim against Cursetjee Furdoonjee, and a guarantee bond signed by Premchund Roychund and Mayabhoy Hemabhoy; and it is understood that they will be renewed in part, or in full, for a further period if required, the rate of interest to be 9 per cent. Interest to be paid at the end of each three months."—Yes.

3302. I believe that that claim against Cursetjee Furdoonjee was made over to the Bank?—Yes, and we got those parties, I think, to sign the notes: it was divided between the three.

3303. On the 8th of December 1865 there was a transfer made of the debt?—It was made, but I do not remember the date.

3304. And then I suppose you found out what was the real state of the case, did you not?—No, I did not find it out then; in fact, I have found out more from the evidence which you have taken in Bombay than I knew before.

3305. What did you understand about it on the 8th of December 1864? Premabhoy Hemabhoy took upon himself five lacs, Premchund nine lacs, and Kursondass Madhowdass eleven lacs. (Kursondass Madhowdass said in his evidence that he took two lacs more than he ought to have taken, in order to get rid of the liability on his firm). Just explain that transaction; what was disclosed to you?—I think that we put pressure on Premchund, as he had recommended the loans; we said that he must guarantee a part of them, and I think that it was his proposal, or that of Kursondass, that it should be divided in another loan, and we thought that it was much better to get Premchund to take so much of this large loan.

3306. I understand you to say that you preferred the security of Premchund, Premabhoy Hemabhoy, and Kursondass to that of the three partners of his firm?—Yes.

3307. Did not you then fully understand that Premchund Roychund was a party to the transaction?—I do not think that I did.

3308. Do you think that Premchund would voluntarily have come forward and taken those nine lacs upon himself?—He was a wealthy man, and I know that I pressed him to get his name.

3309. Were you ignorant that he was a party to the transaction? Did he take nine lacs upon himself simply to oblige you, or somebody else?—I have known him do more than that. I know that he gave up a claim which he had upon Byramjee Hormusjee Cama's estate of forty-three lacs.

3310. Must you not then have found out that Premchund was a party to the transaction?—I did not.

3311. Why did Premabhoy Hemabhoy give his name?—For his son.

3312. What security or inducement do you suppose that Mayabhoy Premabhoy and Muggonbhoy Huttising gave to these parties, to take upon them this transaction?—I have no idea.

3313. Did not you as secretary think it your duty to inquire into that?—No, the money had been lent, and I thought that I had to get as good security as possible.

3314. Was not it your duty as secretary to know what was going to be done with the money, whether it was to be laid out in a speculation or not?—I do not think that it was.

3315. The loss upon Kursondass Madhowdass' transaction is seven lacs and odd. There is a loss upon the whole of them?—Yes.

3316. I understand you to say that you had no notion that Premchund, or the others, were parties to the transaction?—Yes.

3317. Did not any of the directors suspect that the original loan had been taken by Premchund or Premabhoy?—If they suspected it they did not say so to me. Premchund in 1865 was considered very wealthy, and I thought that in getting his name I was perfectly secure.

3318. Did you experience any difficulty in getting the certificates of the 80 Back Bay shares, when you advanced this quarter of a million?—I do not remember; we got them, I remember; but I do not know when we got them.

3319. Do you not remember being exceedingly uneasy about it?—Possibly I was, but I had no doubt whatever that I should get them.

3320. Would you be surprised to hear that, although on the 31st of August 1864 this quarter of a million was lent, the certificates of the shares were never deposited till the 5th of November, and some even later than that?—No, I should not be surprised.

3321. Was that your way of doing business, to let a quarter of a million go across the counter, and take no security?—I was perfectly satisfied that the shares would be sent in.

3322. What was the security which the Bank had for these 25 lacs until the share certificates were sent in?—They had no security at all, except the promissory note upon which the money was granted.

3323. Was not it a part of the agreement, that not only a promissory note should be given, but that the shares should be deposited for safe custody?—Yes.

3324. Was not it your duty to see that fulfilled?—I suppose that I should tell some of my assistants to see that they did come in, but I had so much work to do that I could not attend to it myself.

3325. Do you recollect taking any step to get those share certificates delivered before the 5th of November 1864?—I do not remember; I had so much other work to do that I could not attend to it. I had more work to do than any clerk in the Bank.

3326. I understand you to say that you were not aware that this money was to be invested in a speculation in Back Bay shares?—Yes.

3327. Just attend to the letter which was written to you by Premchund: "I saw the two people sign in my presence. Back Bay shares will be delivered to you when he will receive it. I think it is all right; so please credit the money to Kursondass's account, as he wants to pay for the shares he purchased" (Exhibit A 134)?—Yes, I am aware of that.

3328. In the face of that letter, do you mean to say that you did not know how the money was to be invested?—From that letter it was to be invested in some shares, but I did not know in what shares.

3329. You did not know that it was to be invested in a share speculation?—I see that that letter says so; I must have known it.

3330. The next loan which we will take is that of Atmaram Madhowjee. You appear to have granted him two loans during the time that Mr. Blair was away. On the 19th January 1864 Atmaram Madhowjee, with Diver, and Treacher and Company, had 60,000 rupees?—You will find that that is earlier. I did not grant that. I know distinctly that I did not grant it. It was granted by Mr. Blair, and if you ask him he will tell you that. I remember distinctly about it.

3331. We had before us Mr. Diver himself. We asked him first of all as to these loans. He said: "Mr. Taylor, Atmaram Madhowjee, Treacher and Company, and I borrowed the rupees 60,000. We bought a piece of land at Poona from Treacher and Company. The advance was made by the Bank on the title deeds. The price was very nearly one lakh, and Treacher and Company wanted rupees 60,000 paid down. They therefore joined in the loan as sureties." The date is the 19th of January 1865, when Mr. Blair was away. This is a very important matter?—I am perfectly certain that I did not make the advance.

3332. The advance was made on the title deeds of this land?—So they say.

3333. Treacher and Company appear to have been sureties also?—Yes.

3334. Was not that an illegal transaction?—I do not think so; it was a promissory note signed by these people.

3335. But are you not aware that there is a clause in the Act which expressly forbids the advance of money upon land?—Yes; but the land was never transferred to the Bank. Treacher and Company were supposed to be perfectly good for much more than that amount.

3336. Did you take any legal opinion upon this advance on land?—I do not think so. I do not remember anything about that loan at all.

3337. One can understand that, supposing that you have an old debt outstanding, and a man comes and says, "I am ready to give you the additional security of my land," no advance of money being made at the time, there is no objection to the Bank taking the land as a security for an antecedent debt, but this was an actual advance of money at the time?—Yes; no doubt that is so; but I did not negociate that loan, I am certain. I do not think that I should take land; I should take it upon Treacher and Company's name. I considered them a great deal more undoubted than that. It might have been arranged long before I had taken charge.

3338. Were any of the directors consulted about this transaction?—I cannot say; I should think not. If I had granted that loan I should think that I should have granted it myself to Treacher and Company without the directors.

3339. On the 31st of March there was another loan to Atmaram Madhowjee?—I did not grant that.

I knew of the loan, but it was done when I was away. I remember looking over the loans.

3340. What do you know about that loan ?—I know that it was granted when I was away.

3341. Do you know the parties ?—Yes.

3342. Who was Davidass Luckmeedass ?—He was a broker.

3343. At the time when you made that loan to Atmaram Madhowjee, how much money was outstanding in Atmaram Madhowjee's name ?—I do not know.

3344. 20,70,000 Rs., was it not ?—That is including the loans to the Alliance Financial Association.

3345. Yes ; everything that his name was put to.—Yes.

3346. On the 21st of February 1865 there was a transaction of Atmaram Madhowjee with Brice and Company.—Yes ; Atmaram Madhowjee was broker to Brice and Company. I believe that I had over a lac of rupees of their bills, and I only took a small amount ; it was, I think, 30,000 rupees.

3347. I do not find that any security was taken for it.—No, there was no security at all ; it was a bill by Atmaram Madhowjee on Brice and Company.

3348. But this bill did not represent any trading transaction ?—I should imagine it did.

3349. Have you inquired ?—It was a broker drawing upon his principal, but I did not inquire further.

3350. At that date did you inquire as to what was outstanding against Atmaram Madhowjee ?—I think that I did, but I took Brice and Company.

3351. Had Brice and Company a very high credit at that time ?—I consulted some of the directors. I remember consulting Mr. Hannay, and I think that I consulted Premchund too. I think that I was referred to Premchund by Mr. Hannay.

3352. The next loan which I will ask you about, is to Burjorjee Sorabjee Lyewalla. There was a cash credit granted him on the 19th of February 1865 of 50,000 rupees, and the loss is 45,000 rupees. You had no security upon that ?—I know that he got a loan from us at that time.

3353. Who was he ?—He was a broker in Bombay, he had considerable property in Bombay.

3354. Did you inquire for what object he was borrowing that sum of money ?—I think not.

3355. Was he recommended to you by anybody ?—He must have been.

3356. I find that he was recommended. This is the discount slip (Exhibit A 136) : "Premchund says very good." Do you know in whose handwriting that is ?—That is Mr. Blair's writing, I think.

3357. This loan was renewed from time to time. How is it that there was this enormous loss of 45,000 rupees ?—I think that the man absconded altogether in 1865 ; if I remember rightly, his property was seized.

3358. We do not find that any proceedings were ever taken against him.—He was made an insolvent, and I think that he filed his petition, but he never appeared, and he was, I think, in jail for the most of the time that I was in Bombay. 5,000 rupees has been paid off. The ledger keeper, Mr. De Ga, would have been able to tell you every item, as the loan had been renewed.

3359. We will now come to Mr. F. Brown's loans. Do you remember the fixed loan of two and a half lacs ?—Yes.

3360. Were you consulted about that ?—Yes, I forget by whom, but I was consulted. I granted the loan.

3361. Was there any security taken for that loan ?—No, Mr. Best and Mr. Brown, I think, signed a promissory note.

3362. Did you know the object for which that loan was granted ?—No.

3363. Are you quite positive about that ?—I am certain.

3364. Mr. Best and Mr. Brown told us that you knew what the object was.—I distinctly swear that I did not.

3365. You did not know that that money was going to be invested in Port Canning shares ?—No, I did not.

3366. Did you ask them for what object it was borrowed ?—I thought that they were wealthy men, and they were so at the time.

3367. What did you suppose that they were going to do with 25,000*l.* ?—It must have been a speculation, I must have thought that.

3368. You did not think that it was a good investment which they were going to enter into ?—No, I did not.

3369. That was not one of the grounds upon which you advanced the money ?—No, I did not think of it in that way at all.

3370. Did you know who the parties were who were interested in that speculation ?—No.

3371. Are you perfectly sure that you did not know the speculation for which the money was required ?—I am perfectly certain.

3372. Whose handwriting is that (handing a letter to the witness) ?—Mr. Brown's (see this letter printed, ante page 51) ; I do not know to whom I referred.

3373. Who recommended these people to you ?—I do not remember ; I may have asked Mr. Hannay or I may have asked Premchund.

3374. Did not Premchund recommend them to you ?—I do not remember.

3375. Did not Mr. Tracey recommend them to you ?—I cannot remember, very likely if I asked him he would say that he did, but I do not remember.

3376. After reading that letter have you any doubt that Premchund told you what shares the money was wanted for ?—I do not think that I asked Premchund the question, I thought that Best and Brown were perfectly safe for the amount for 14 days.

3377. Did not the very fact of their wanting the money for 14 days excite your suspicion ?—I thought that they wanted it for something ; they might have got in other money in that time.

3378. Were not Mr. Tracey and Premchund both directors of the Bank at that time ?—I do not remember.

3379. Mr. Tracey came in in January 1865 ?—Yes.

3380. When you granted this loan to Messrs. Brown and Best, did you make any inquiry as to other loans outstanding in their names ?—I think that I did, I generally did so.

3381. What was the result of those inquiries ?—I found that Mr. Brown was on two bills, I think, with other people to a certain amount.

3382. His name was on a bill upon the 15th of July 1864 with J. Macfarlane ?—Yes, one for 30,000 rupees.

3383. On the 20th of December 1864 he put his name to another bill for 50,000 rupees with Heycock and Venayek Pandurung, and this loan followed ?—Yes.

3384. Was not this loan renewed at the end of the 14 days ?—It was allowed, I think, to lie over.

3385. It was renewed ?—I think that that was done by Mr. Blair.

3386. Was any security taken upon that renewal at the end of the 14 days ?—Not at the time, but it was taken afterwards.

3387. When was that security deposited ?—It was after Mr. Blair left, I forget when.

3388. It appears by the book that it was deposited in June 1865 ?—Yes.

3389. Then I am to understand that these 2½ lacs were lent upon the personal security of these two persons from the 25th of February to the 23rd of June 1865 ?—Yes, it must have been so.

3390. The loan was then renewed, and you got the security of 46 Port Canning Company's shares ?—Yes ; but I do not know that there was any further renewal ; they promised to pay it off as soon as they could.

Mr. D. Robertson.

23 Nov. 1868.

3391. It was proposed to be renewed in June, and then they gave security?—I do not remember the renewal, but very likely it was allowed to lie over for a week longer.

3392. There was a release granted to Mr. Brown, was there not?—Yes, a trust deed.

3393. Shortly before that the following resolution was passed at the Board on the 6th of July 1865: "The secretary is authorized to attend meetings of the creditors of parties indebted to the Bank, and at his discretion to agree to any resolutions proposed and agreed to by representatives of other banks, and he is further authorized to sign all agreements, deeds, or other necessary documents of creditors' estates, reporting it to the first meeting of the Board." Do you remember that resolution being carried?—Yes.

3394. Who was the author of that resolution?—I am not certain, but I think that it was proposed by the chairman, Mr. Hannay.

3395. What part did Mr. Lushington take in that discussion, I see that he was present?—There was no discussion on that day, it was agreed to without discussion as far as I remember.

3396. Did not Mr. Lidderdale object to it?—Not on that day, he did afterwards.

3397. On the 13th of July, at the next meeting of the directors, the failure of Messrs. Best and Brown was announced; the entry on the minutes is as follows: "The officiating secretary reported that Messrs. Best and Brown, brokers, had laid a statement of their affairs before their creditors." What took place when you made that announcement?—I do not remember that anything was said at that meeting.

3398. Was not a resolution moved by Mr. Lidderdale?—Not at that meeting. If you have the scroll minutes, you will see what took place.

3399. Mr. Lidderdale in his evidence said: "On 13th of July 1865 the secretary reported that Mr. Brown had laid a statement of his affairs before his creditors. There is no record in the minute book of what I did. My resolution is not entered, because it was not seconded. I moved the following resolution: 'to add to resolution passed on the 6th instant with reference to power to the secretary to attend meeting of creditors, with discretion to agree,' &c., the words 'in cases where there are no special circumstances which should be known to the directors.'" Do you recollect his doing that?—Yes.

3400. And it was not seconded?—No.

3401. What part did the three Government directors take upon that occasion?—At that meeting, when Mr. Lidderdale proposed that alteration in the former resolution, I think that Mr. Lushington said to Mr. Lidderdale that he did not think that the Bank should be public prosecutor, and throw away good money after bad.

3402. I think that you are confounding that with the next meeting.—There were two meetings at which Mr. Lidderdale brought it on.

3403. Nobody seconded his resolution?—No.

3404. And a discretion was left with you?—Yes; it was understood that I was to sign the trust deed.

3405. You attended the meeting of the creditors, did you not?—Yes.

3406. What took place there?—Mr. Brown produced a statement of his affairs, and after being looked at, it was proposed by Mr. Campbell, of the Mercantile Bank, and seconded by Mr. MacCulloch, manager of the City Bank, that his assets should be realized.

3407. Was not that the resolution come to? (handing Exhibit F 3 to the witness)—I think so.

3408. But you stated it very differently in your letter to the directors of the 23rd January 1866, when an explanation was called for? (showing a printed copy of the letter to the witness)—I must have stated it from recollection. I was giving the substance; I did not pledge myself that it was word for word.

3409. We have the resolution, and the other purports to be a copy of it, but they do not agree.—I did not copy the resolution. I told them as well as I could.

3410. Why did you put it in inverted commas if it was not a copy? I want to know why you put it out in hæc verba, as if it was a correct statement of the resolution, while the resolution is quite different? It seems to me extraordinary, everything appears inaccurate.—I gave it from recollection.

3411. You were chairman at the meeting, and you were appointed trustee under the deed?—Yes; but I never intended to be trustee.

3412. What salary or commission were you to have?—Nothing.

3413. Was that understood?—It was understood; at least it was understood that I was not to charge anything for it. I did not ask for anything.

3414. Did you in fact receive anything?—No.

3415. Did the directors know at this time that you were appointed trustee of the estate?—I think that I told them. At that time when I was appointed, I did not think that it would take the shape of a trust deed at all.

3416. The resolution is: "That all the securities held by Mr. Brown be handed over to Mr. Robertson, of the Bank of Bombay, and that on the several deficiencies of the various creditors being ascertained, the said securities be realized and divided rateably among the said creditors."—I had no intention of being a trustee, because the principal asset was a share of a coffee estate, which turned out a very miserable one.

3417. But in point of fact you did act as trustee under it?—Yes, Mr. Brown gave me no trouble, and I let him do all the work.

3418. Did the directors know that you were acting as trustee, and letting Mr. Brown do all the work of winding up his own estate?—I think so. I do not know whether they did or not.

3419. There is another minute on the subject on the 20th of July. There were present Mr. Hannay, Mr. Lushington, Colonel Ballard, Mr. Tracey, Mr. Brown, Mr. Lidderdale, Cowasjee Manockjee, and Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy. On the 20th of July Mr. Lidderdale proposed another resolution, did he not?—Yes, it is not on the minute, it was not seconded.

3420. Was this his resolution, "That in the case of Mr. F. L. Brown, the secretary do not sign a deed on behalf of the Bank"?—I think so. It was not seconded. Nobody supported it.

3421. Did you tell the directors upon that occasion that the deed had been actually signed already?—No; it was not signed until I got the consent of the directors.

3422. The date of the deed is the 15th July 1865.—That may be, but it was not signed till after that meeting; it was signed by me as trustee.

3423. Yours is the first signature to it?—I was the last, I think, to sign, except the Royal Bank of India. I told Mr. Brown that I would not sign it until the directors gave their assent.

3424. Yours is the first signature?—The first signature is as trustee; but that had nothing to do with the Bank.

3425. Did you sign it again?—Yes.

3426. The next signature is yours?—I did not sign it until last. I told Mr. Brown that I would not do it.

3427. For what reasons did the Bank directors, who were present, concur in granting a release to Mr. Brown of his enormous liabilities?—I believe that he failed for 43 lacs?—Yes, about that.

3428. And the estate realized at the utmost 25,000 rupees?—Not so much; about 14,000, I think.

3429. What were the grounds upon which the Bank consented to grant him a release within a fortnight after he had laid a statement of his affairs before his creditors?—I presume that they thought that nothing was to be got by doing anything else.

3430. Was not there some hesitation on the part of the directors in allowing Mr. Brown to go before the insolvent court?—There was no hesitation; all that I think was said was, "Why should the Bank of Bombay put him through the court."

3431. Was not there a discussion among the directors, and was not it said that it was not advisable to allow such a transaction to become a matter of public discussion?—I do not think so; I do not think that it was talked of in that way at all.

3432. Are you prepared to contradict the following statement of Mr. Lidderdale? "It was urged that it was impolitic to allow the public to know that such loans were made of the Bank's money. There was hesitation on the part of the directors about allowing Brown to go through the insolvent court. It was thought undesirable to allow the transaction to be made a matter of public discussion; my colleagues considered that the Bank was not called upon to put itself in the position of a public prosecutor or a censor of morals."—Yes; that is what I understood; the last part of it is what I understood to be what the directors thought upon the matter.

3433. You do not think that they were objecting to Mr. Brown's going through the insolvent court, for fear of the exposure?—No; it was perfectly well known in Bombay; every one knew what the Bank had lent at that time.

3434. What part did Mr. Chapman, Mr. Lushington, and Colonel Ballard take in these discussions; did they support Mr. Hannay?—I think so.

3435. I believe that you acted upon the same rule in all the other cases, did you not?—I do not think that I did.

3436. Not with respect to other estates?—I think not after that.

3437. But before that had you not so acted?—No; I brought all the cases before the directors before that.

3438. I believe that you were called upon to make a return of these transactions of Mr. Brown to the Government of India?—Yes.

3439. At page 114 of the blue book it is headed thus: "Statement showing the several loans granted by the Bank of Bombay to Mr. Brown, the nature of the securities by which they are covered, and the value of such securities at the present day."—Yes.

3440. Do you remember drawing up that return yourself?—No; I did not draw it up.

3441. Will you swear that you did not?—If you have evidence to the contrary, I cannot swear that I did not, but I do not remember doing it.

3442. Will you swear that you did not give it to Mr. Clarke, an assistant in the Bank of Bombay, to copy, the original being in your handwriting?—No, I do not remember it.

3443. Did you give it to Mr. Clarke to copy?—I do not remember to whom I gave it.

3444. After you had had it copied, did you lay that statement before Mr. Francis Chapman?—I think I did, if the statement was asked for.

3445. I will read to you the evidence of Mr. Clarke upon the subject: "I am referred to the statement at page 114 of the blue book. I remember seeing a form like this in writing in the Bank of Bombay. It was at the beginning of 1866. The form had been prepared for Mr. F. S. Chapman, not signed by him. The scroll of it was prepared by Mr. Robertson, the officiating secretary of the Bank. I received directions to make a fair copy of it. I made a fair copy, and handed both to Mr. Robertson."—I do not remember preparing this. I must have got the information from the accountant's department.

3446. You remark, first of all, that the statement is headed "loans granted."—Yes.

3447. I ask you whether the second loan, described as "on a bill signed by Mr. Brown, jointly with two other merchants who have since failed," was for 45,000 rupees, the amount which is stated in the return?—It must have been for what was outstanding then.

3448. What was the amount of the loan, was it not 50,000 rupees?—It might have been a lac, but that has nothing to do with it; it was for the amount which was outstanding then, namely, 45,000 rupees. It might have been going on for six years, and you might have said that there was originally a lac.

3449. What was the loan which is called the third loan in this statement originally granted for?—I cannot say.

3450. It was for 30,000 rupees. Do you mean to say that there was a renewal for 20,000 rupees?—I should think that there was.

3451. Why are no dates put into this tabular statement?—Because they were not asked for, only the amount was asked for.

3452. Was not it usual to put the dates in a matter of that kind?—It was only wanted to know the amounts. The Government, as far as I remember, were perfectly satisfied with the statement.

3453. When you find that the order of the loans in this form is reversed, is it not singular that the dates should be wanting?—I do not see much in that.

3454. It makes it appear, that you were extremely cautious as you went on, instead of reckless. The effect is to give the impression that you first lent the 2,50,000 rupees, and afterwards small sums?—There was no intention of that kind.

3455. Why were the dates concealed altogether in this statement?—I have no idea; there was no concealment; if the dates had been asked for, they would have been given.

3456. Under the head "nature of securities," it is stated, "originally granted on the personal security of Mr. Brown and his partner, Mr. Best; the latter has not been released. Forty-six Port Canning shares were subsequently given on the loan falling due, as collateral security." Was it not the object of the Government to know upon what security that advance was made, and not the security which was held by you at that time?—Forty-six Port Canning shares were subsequently given.

3457. But you did not state when; it was not until many months afterwards.—If it had been of any importance, I would have done so.

3458. You further state as follows: "Their value at that time was 1,000 rupees paid up and 8,000 rupees premium, or in all 9,000 rupees each. The total value of the whole at the then market price was 4,14,000 rupees." To what time does the word "then" refer?—I have no idea. I do not know when the shares were valued.

3459. They may have been worth 4,14,000 rupees at the time of the original loan?—Yes, and more than that.

3460. Do you mean to say that at the time when this return was made they were worth 4,14,000 rupees?—I am not sure but what they were worth it at that time.

3461. To what time does the word "then" apply?—Early in 1865.

3462. You say with respect to what is called the second loan of 45,000 rupees, "On a bill signed by Mr. Brown jointly with two other merchants who have since failed"?—Yes.

3463. Who were those merchants, why did not you mention their names?—They only wanted Mr. Brown's loans, and I did not feel justified in giving their names.

3464. That could not apply to Mr. Heycock. Was not he a son of Mr. Heycock, of the Commercial Bank, and had he not absconded?—He absconded in that year.

3465. What difficulty had you in giving his name?—I had no difficulty, excepting as to Mr. Brown.

3466. What difficulty had you in giving Venayek Pandurung's name?—I had no difficulty in giving his name.

3467. You then go on to say with regard to the third loan of 20,000 rupees: "On a bill signed by Mr. Brown, jointly with a solicitor in Bombay. The assets of the party, who is joint security, are in the hands of trustees. From a statement of his affairs submitted to his creditors, the assets were shown to be in excess of the liabilities, but as the principal asset was a coffee estate, and as such property has fallen greatly in value owing to the number of estates belonging to bankrupts at present offering in the market, the trustees do not anticipate that the liabilities will be paid in full."—Yes.

Mr. D. Robertson.

23 Nov. 1868.

3468. Was not that rather "making things pleasant"?—Not at that time.

3469. What was realized by Mr. Macfarlane's estate?—Very little indeed, but the statement there is perfectly correct.

3470. The impression left upon my mind (we should like you to remove it) is that that is a very artistically prepared statement, to put the very best face upon it.—It was never intended so. I had no reason in doing it.

3471. Will you explain what is the meaning of this passage at the foot of the statement? "Nota bene This statement was prepared on 10th March 1866, signed F. G. Chapman, Chief Secretary to Government." Do you know anything about that?—No.

3472. I do not suppose that you are able to explain why the Government of India waited for more than a year for this return?—No, I had done with it in a very short time.

3473. You see that the order of these loans was exactly reversed?—I see so. I suppose that it was giving the large one first.

3474. Was not it in order to leave the impression of increasing caution instead of increasing recklessness?—It was certainly not to leave that impression.

3475. We will now turn to the case of Byramjee Hormusjee Cama. I do not know whether you have looked into that account lately?—No.

3476. We have a statement of the account. There are three cash credits and three fixed loans.—Yes, I think that that is right enough, if you have taken them from the books.

3477. There has been something recovered from the estate, but 17,71,000 rupees was owing to the Bank by Byramjee Hormusjee Cama?—Yes.

3478. On the 9th of February 1865 one of these loans was granted while you were acting for Mr. Blair, namely, 94,800 rupees.—It must have been a renewal.

3479. We do not find that it was a renewal.—There must have been part payment and a renewal.

3480. We consider that that is an original transaction, and we have gone through the books with great care. If it was a renewal, when it was brought to you to renew, did you look at the sum outstanding against that man's name at that time?—I do not think that I did. My recollection of it is that I got him to pay a certain amount.

3481. Did you inquire as to the amount of outstandings?—I should think that I did. I should certainly have done so if it was a renewal.

3482. I admit that Byramjee Hormusjee Cama was a very respectable man, and was probably carrying on a large business in Bombay at that time; but still I want to know, under what circumstances you came to renew, or to grant an advance of 94,800 rupees to a person who had three cash credits to a large amount then open, and a fixed loan?—My impression is that he reduced it, and that he would not have got 94,800 rupees if he wanted a loan; he would have got a lac of rupees if he had asked for it.

3483. On the 1st of May 1865 you lent him another fixed loan of 1,25,000 rupees?—That must have been a renewal. I certainly did not grant it.

3484. We have gone through these cases very carefully, and this is taken from a heading in your own books.—It may be.

3485. It was all looked into.—I cannot remember.

3486. How came you to renew 1,25,000 rupees when he had this enormous sum outstanding?—He must have paid so much on account.

3487. We cannot find that.—I am almost certain that he did.

3488. A few days before he failed he got this 1,25,000 rupees, and there were then due 17 lacs at least?—He did not get a new loan from me.

3489. If it was a renewal, did you renew without consultation with the directors?—I cannot say.

3490. Whom did you consult?—I cannot say.

3491. Do you think that it was wise to trust one man with nearly 17 lacs, without any security?—There was nearly four lacs of Government paper which we sold ourselves; you will find that the amount is 12 lacs.

3492. The only sums which have been paid are 3,33,000 rupees, and 1,84,000 rupees, making four lacs and odd; that reduced the debt to 12 lacs odd; after that there were small sums, but nothing like four lacs; the difference is only two lacs. 10,20,000 rupees is the total loss after the receipts of other small sums.—That has been very nearly realized. I was a trustee of the estate, and I know what we paid in dividends; we paid 27½ per cent. altogether.

3493. The debt was reduced to 10,20,000 rupees. There was no realization by Government paper in that. My recollection is, that there was another loan to Byramjee Hormusjee Cama, which forms no part of this transaction, and which was secured by Government paper and was paid off.—There was very nearly eight annas a rupee.

3494. Was that prudent banking?—He was supposed to be a wealthy man; that is all that I can say upon it.

3495. Did you know that he was dealing largely in cotton with Premchund Roychund?—I did not at the time. I did not know that he was dealing with Premchund Roychund. I knew that he was dealing in cotton very largely.

3496. Did not Premchund Roychund negotiate all these transactions with you?—Generally. There was very little done after I took charge.

3497. He says that he did, and Byramjee Hormusjee Cama says that he never came to the Bank, but that he left it to Premchund?—It was through Byramjee Hormusjee Cama's managing man possibly, accompanied by a letter from Premchund.

3498. We will go to the next case, that of Byramjee Nanaboy Framjee. There was first a loan to him of 50,000 rupees, and he had on the 25th of January 1865 a second loan of 50,000 rupees; there was a loss of 90,000 rupees upon the two loans; who was this man?—He was a merchant in Bombay; he was a relative of Limjee Manockjee.

3499. You granted the loans in his single name; who recommended him to you?—I do not recollect; it might have been Premchund or Cowasjee Manockjee.

3500. When you granted the second loan were you aware of the former sum outstanding?—I have no doubt that I was. I recollect that that man had loans to the amount of a lac of rupees, but I cannot tell you much more.

3501. You are not able to tell us anything about him?—No.

3502. I will take you to another case, which perhaps you recollect more about. On the 10th of February 1865 you discounted a bill for Mr. John Campbell and Mr. Sidney Smith for 50,000 rupees, and the loss has been 40,000 rupees; who were these gentlemen?—One was a medical man, namely Dr. Sidney Smith, and Mr. Campbell was an architect.

3503. Was Mr. Sidney Smith a medical man in the Government service?—No, he was one of the Peninsular and Oriental Company's doctors shortly before that; he had commenced practice in Bombay.

3504. Was Mr. Campbell a man in large business?—He was a partner in the firm of Scott, McClelland, and Company, not then, but afterwards.

3505. How came you to lend these two gentlemen 50,000 rupees without any security?—They applied for it, and I think that I lent it upon the recommendation of Mr. Hannay. He said that one of them, I forget whether Mr. Campbell or Mr. Smith, had money, and that they would be perfectly safe.

3506. Did you inquire for what purpose these two gentlemen wanted 50,000 rupees ?—I did not.

3507. Did it not excite your attention ?—I did not inquire.

3508. You thought them perfectly good? — I thought so. I was told, I think, by Mr. Hannay; I am not certain.

3509. The following is your letter: "My dear Hannay, what do you think of the enclosed ? I question if we will be much the better of the medico's name. I suppose Campbell has some money. Your's sincerely, D. Robertson." "Doctor Smith has a little money. Give them rupees 50,000 for a short period, R. H." (Exhibit marked A 137).—Yes.

3510. Did you on the recommendation of Mr. Hannay give these two gentlemen 50,000 rupees without security ?—Yes.

3511. That is to say, 5,000*l.*?—Yes ; 5,000*l.* was not of much account in those days in Bombay.

3512. Did not you know that those two gentlemen were going to employ that money in a speculation ?—I did not know it.

3513. Have you the slightest doubt of it ?—On thinking over it now, I should not have the slightest doubt.

3514. Was not giving these loans to these people pandering to the speculating mania which was going on ?—We see now that they used the money for the purposes of speculation, but at that time, if the Bank of Bombay had not lent, other banks would have done it ; they were doing it freely.

3515. On the 26th of January 1865 you advanced to Cursetjee Merwanjee, S. W. Reid, and W. F. Wesché 50,000 rupees, upon which there has been a considerable loss. With whom was the original loan negotiated ?—I think that it was with me. Mr. Wesché came to me, and I think that I referred it to Mr. Hannay before giving my answer ; it was renewed afterwards, half being paid off, according to my recollection.

3516. You say that you renewed or advanced that loan upon the recommendation of Mr. Hannay. Who was Mr. Reid ?—An accountant in the Alliance Bank.

3517. Who was Mr. Wesché ?—The manager of the Alliance Bank.

3518. Who was Cursetjee Merwanjee ?—A shroff in the Alliance Bank.

3519. Then you knew that those Bank officials were going to invest the money in speculation ?—I did not know it, but I thought that they were. I think that Mr. Hannay said that the money was to be given to them, but that there was to be no renewal. I granted it because of Mr. Hannay's recommendation. The letter shown to me is Mr. Hannay's (Exhibit marked A 138).

3520. He says : "I think you are right to give them the money," and then he gives you two very good reasons why you should not. He says that Wesché is a decided speculator, and that it is to be on the understanding that there shall be no renewal ; and then he tells you that "old Reid is a great donkey," and adds, "why make use of the poor old man's name!" If that means anything, it means that the name is perfectly useless. Cursetjee Merwanjee was merely a bookkeeper at the Alliance Bank, was he not ?—He was a shroff.

3521. Was not that one of those loans which pandered to share speculations in their very worst form, namely, share speculations by bank managers, and officials ?—It looks that now.

3522. The next case is that of Cursondass Mathuradass, who is joined with Sorabjee Byramjee Colah. At first you discounted a bill on the 6th of January 1865 for 50,000 rupees ?—That was not in my time.

3523. On the 1st of March 1865 Rs. 50,000 were granted by you. There was a loss of 87,866 rupees upon those two loans ?—Yes, I think that he was recommended very strongly both by Cowasjee Jehangeer, and by Premchund.

3524. Do you know who Cursondass Mathuradass was ?—No.

3525. His name was given as a surety ?—Yes.

3526. The loan was really to Sorabjee Byramjee Colah ?—Yes.

3527. You did not take anybody as a surety, did you ? Who was Cursondass Mathuradass ?—I do not know. I do not believe that he was worth anything.

3528. Was not he a bookkeeper of Sorabjee Byramjee Colah ?—I believe that he had something to do with him.

3529. He was a broker of Cowasjee Jehangeer's. On the 5th of January 1864 Premchund's opinion appears in the opinion book, A 27 : "Quite good for a lac." I suppose that that is the authority upon which you proceeded ?—That was as to the first loan, but I should think that I had some authority for the second loan too.

3530. Am I to understand that if you were satisfied with the principal, you did not care whether the surety was good or bad ?—No.

3531. Then I ask again why did you take a surety ? —It was worth something possibly ; they offered the surety, I think.

3532. The next case is that of the Eastern Financial Association. Were you consulted at all upon the grant of that advance of 10 lacs upon a promissory note to the Eastern Financial Association in October 1864 ?—No, I knew that it had been granted.

3533. Those 10 lacs became due on the 18th of January 1865, when Mr. Blair was absent. Did not you agree to renew that loan ?—I do not remember.

3534. We have the distinct evidence of Mr. Watson, the manager of the Eastern Financial Association, and he says, "I asked Mr. Robertson, of the Bank of Bombay, to renew the loan."—Yes, very likely.

3535. Did you make any difficulty about it ?—I do not remember.

3536. Did you ask for any security ?—I did at one time.

3537. Did you then ?—I cannot tell you ; I do not remember ; very likely I did not.

3538. Do you remember Premchund Roychund asking you to renew that transaction ?—I forget. I do not remember who spoke to me about it. Kessowjee Naik, who was a director of the Financial Association, and Mr. Brown came to me to explain the position, I do not know whether it was then or afterwards.

3539. You made no difficulty, and you renewed that bill at that time ?—I suppose that there would be no difficulty.

3540. On the 27th of January 1865 you granted a further loan to the Association, for two lacs for one month at 13 per cent., did you not ?—I think that it was not so long as a month.

3541. It was for a month, and it was paid off by the Bank of Hindustan ?—I do not remember that circumstance at all.

3542. On the 16th of March 1865 you granted the Eastern Financial Association a cash credit of 2 lacs, did you not ?—I think that they did get a cash credit.

3543. How long was that for ?—A week or ten days.

3544. Fifteen days, was it not ?—I do not remember.

3545. Why did you grant it for fifteen days ?—Mr. Watson came and explained to me why he wanted it, and the prospects which he had of getting money.

3546. It was not for a speculation ?—No ; it was for the purposes of the Association.

3547. Did you press for payment at the end of the fifteen days ?—Yes ; and I think that I made good terms with them with reference to the ten lacs as well.

3548. At the end of the fifteen days did you press them for payment ?—I forget. I think that at that time I went away.

3549. Mr. Watson says that payment was not pressed for?—I know that I went away at the end of March, before the 31st, and possibly they did not press for it in my absence.

3550. On the 27th of March 1865, and the 3rd of April 1865, two lacs were discounted at the Surat branch of the Bank of Bombay to the same Association?—Yes.

3551. Do not you recollect that a telegram was sent from Surat to ask the Bank of Bombay whether the agent at Surat should accept those bills?—I know that there was a telegram, because I have seen it since.

3552. And did not you sanction that discount?—I do not remember.

3553. Mr. Blair says that he did not?—He was at Bombay on the 16th of March, and I went away about that time for a fortnight.

3554. Do you recollect anything about it?—I do not recollect anything about it, except that I think that he wrote to the agents afterwards, at my instance.

3555. That is, as to the Kurrachee Branch. I am talking of the Surat Branch. Had that branch the sanction of the head office to discount two lacs, when that Association had twelve lacs outstanding at the head office?—I do not remember anything about it, except that I know it was done.

3556. As to the Kurrachee Branch, you know nothing about it, I suppose?—No; except in the same way.

3557. It was done at the Kurrachee Branch without the consent of the head office. Do you think that it was prudent, first of all, to grant ten lacs upon a promissory note signed only by the secretary, and not by the directors, and then to grant a cash credit on a promissory note signed by the secretary, and not by the directors?—I do not know that the secretary had the power in the first instance, but afterwards he had the power by a power of attorney to do it.

3558. Do you think that it was safe banking to lend fourteen lacs upon mere promissory notes?—It has not been safe, certainly.

3559. I believe that the bill for ten lacs became due again upon the 24th of April 1865?—I do not remember.

3560. What did the Bank of Bombay do then?—I think that we pressed for payment then.

3561. What reply did you get from the Eastern Financial Association?—I think that they asked us to give them time, as they had large sums to get in.

3562. What arrangement did you make?—I do not remember. I think that we did not give them time.

3563. You pressed them for payment of the ten lacs?—Yes, I think so; and I think that it was then that Mr. Brown came with Kessowjee Naik, to show me that the Association was perfectly good for more than ten lacs.

3564. That letter is in the handwriting of Mr. Watson, the manager of the Eastern Financial Association? (showing Exhibit E 5 to the witness)—Yes.

3565. I find that he wrote this letter to you: "My dear Robertson,—I send to the credit of our account Rs. 1,25,000, and trust that you will allow the bill to lie over for a day or two, when we will renew for eight lacs. I hope you will excuse me for asking this, but we have several loans out at present which we cannot get up, although quite good. Things are looking black enough, but I trust it will clear up yet. Yours sincerely, William Watson." How was it, when you received this sum of 1,25,000 rupees; why was not it taken in reduction of their debt?—I do not know. I did not remember anything about it till I saw Mr. Watson's evidence, and I sent out to Bombay to know how he could account for it, and he could not state anything but what he had there said.

3566. He said in his evidence, "I must have sent some money to the Bank of Bombay on the 24th of April 1865." He was then asked, "How was it that rupees 1,25,000 was refused by the Bank of Bombay?" "We paid 1,40,000 to the credit of our current account with the Bank of Bombay; not on account of the 10 lacs bill, as appears from our pass book. I did not remember the latter when I spoke. I cannot explain the matter." We had the pass book, and put it into his hands. He goes on to say, "I think we hoped to reduce the bill also." Then I said, "You were in funds on the current deposit account. Why did the money go to the credit of that account instead of on account of the bill for ten lacs. You had three lacs to the credit of the current deposit account when the rupees 1,40,000 were paid in. By whose instrumentality was that arranged?" Then he says, "I should like to look at the pass book." We showed that when this 1,40,000 rupees was paid in, the current account was very largely to the credit of the Eastern Financial Association, and he said, "We were not in funds if the past due cash credit is taken into consideration." But still my recollection of the pass book was that it was about three lacs, and the past due cash credit was only two lacs. He says, "I believe the 1,40,000 rupees was paid to reduce the cash credit. The bill for ten lacs remained past due, with these securities held for it. There were some letters about it." What is your impression of that transaction? The moment that you are pressing for payment of the ten lacs, the man sends you money, and he says, "I will renew for eight lacs;" and we find that instead of being carried to the loan account, it is carried to the cash credit account which was in funds at the time.—I cannot explain it. I expect that he placed it to his current account and then drew it out again. He said to me that he did not send it for that, but I am afraid that that must have been the way of it.

3567. It seems to be extraordinary that it was not taken in reduction of that loan.—It ought to have been so.

3568. Not only that amount, but 15,000 rupees were paid in to the current account on that day; 1,40,000 rupees altogether.—I asked Mr. Watson about it, and he could not tell me.

3569. We had hoped that you would be able to explain that transaction.—Even if the whole was not paid we should have been better than we were.

3570. It is another instance of the extremely loose way in which everything was done.

We will go to the next loan, namely, to Ghellabhoy Puddumsey. On the 30th of March 1865 you discounted a lac for him without any security, and there has been a loss. There was security lodged in July, and in the following year. I suppose that you know who Ghellabhoy Puddumsey was?—Yes.

3571. He was a great speculator, was he not?—Yes; he was a director of the Alliance Financial Company.

3572. Was not he a director of the Deccan Cotton Company, and of two or three other companies?—Yes.

3573. Did you inquire how much was outstanding against that man's name when you granted him that advance?—It was my regular practice to do so, and I must have done so.

3574. You found out that there were 6,06,000 rupees against him on Alliance Finance bills?—Yes.

3575. And also another amount outstanding against him, with Mr. Cooper and the Deccan Cotton directors.

3576. Did you think that a prudent investment without security?—I thought that it was pretty safe; the man was in business and connected with an old firm.

3577. Was not he a well-known speculator?—Yes, but was a large cotton dealer also.

3578. Under whose advice did you act in granting that loan?—I should think that it would be Premchund Roychund, but I am not certain. The letter now shown to me (A 139) is Ghellabhoy Puddumsey and Company's application. The endorsement upon it, "He is quite safe for two lacs more if you can do it. P. R.," is in Premchund's handwriting.

3579. Then in taking this loan you acted under the advice of Premchund?—Yes; but we did not give him so much; he wanted two lacs and we only gave him one. I think that there was another application at the same time.

3580. The next case is that of Dhunjeebhoy Framjee. He had a fixed loan on the 20th March 1865 for 2½ lacs ?—Yes.

3581. Who was he ?—He was the son of Framjee Nussurwanjee.

3582. You took no security from him ?—I took no security from him.

3583. He says that you never asked for security ?—Yes.

3584. The loss upon that loan has been 18,000 rupees ?—Yes.

3585. How came you to grant it ?—I think that he came himself to me about it, and that he was introduced to me by our head shroff, who knew him very well. He was a respectable man.

3586. Why did you not ask him to get the security of his father for that loan ?—I was told that he was perfectly good himself, and he was.

3587. It is a very large sum ?—Yes. I believe that if our directors had pressed him very hard, we might have got more out of him.

3588. I want to know why you did not get him to give the name of his father to that bill ?—I thought that we did not require it.

3589. When did he fail ?—It must have been in 1865, I think.

3590. He said in his evidence : "I applied to Mr. Robertson, and he told me that he would give me two and a half lacs on my promissory note. He did not ask me for any security. The loan was not renewed. At the due date I paid Rs. 40,000, with the understanding that in a few days I would pay the remainder ; but there was a serious panic in the Bombay market. I paid three sums on account, and afterwards compromised for the balance. The Bank of Bombay pressed me for payment ; they did not sue me. I negotiated the loan with Mr. Robertson, the deputy secretary, because Mr. Blair was not in the bank" ?—Yes, that is quite right.

3591. Why did not you sue that man ?—We were not suing any one at that time. It was thought better not to do it at the time.

3592. By whose advice was it that you did not sue him ?—It was the general wish of the directors that no action was to be raised at that time against any debtor of the Bank.

3593. What directors were of that opinion ?—It was the general opinion, there was no special order.

3594. Was that to apply to all debtors ?—I thought so at the time, but we had not many debtors ; bills were not falling due until June and July, I think.

3596. Did not his father eventually come forward and pay something for him ?—Yes. I got 40,000 rupees from him first, and then his father came forward and offered four annas, and then six, and then eight, and said that he would not go further. Possibly if we had put Dhunjeebhoy into court we might have got more.

3597. What you recovered was not obtained for a long time, was it ?—So much was paid down, and so much was paid in a month or six weeks afterwards, I think.

3598. The next transaction about which I will ask you is that of E. J. Howard, who had a discount at the head office on the 6th February 1865 of 50,000 rupees. There has been a considerable loss upon that, nearly half, and there has been great difficulty in getting what has been recovered. Mr. Howard was a barrister, was he not, and head of the Educational Department ?—Yes ; he was Director of Public Instruction. I do not think that he was so then, he had then given up that appointment.

3599. Had not he gone headlong into speculation at that time ; and was not it well known that he had done so ?—I do not think that it was well known then.

3600. He was in the Bank of Guzerat with Premchund, was he not ?—Not then ; that was afterwards.

3601. Was not it well known that Mr. Howard had gone into speculation ?—We did know of it very soon afterwards, I think.

3602. You knew that he was not a trader ?—Yes.

3603. You knew that he was engaged in a profession in Bombay ?—Yes.

3604. How came you to lend him 50,000 rupees with no security whatever ?—He was thought to be perfectly good for the amount and a great deal more. He was said to have realized a large fortune ; there was something which his brother had left him.

3605. Was not he introduced to you by another speculator, namely, Mr. George Taylor, another barrister ?—I think that he did introduce him.

3606. Here is Mr. Taylor's letter (Exhibit A 140) : "My dear Mr. Robertson, will you allow me to introduce to you Mr. Edward Howard, Director of Public Instruction ? He wishes for a loan of a lac ; if he can be accommodated, I have no hesitation in giving you a recommendation. Yours truly, George Taylor." What do you think of the recommender ?—I did not act upon his advice.

3607. Whose advice did you take ?—I think that it was Premchund's or Mr. Hannay's ; I am not certain. I should think very likely both. The letter now shown to me is my letter to Mr. Hannay about the application (Exhibit A 141). Mr. Hannay has written across it, "say Rs. 50,000."

3608. Was not it manifest both to you and to Mr. Hannay that that money was going to be invested simply in speculation ?—I suppose that it was.

3609. It is a serious reflection upon the administration of the bank that its officials, its chairman, and its secretary should be lending money knowing that it was going to be spent in this way.—We did not know, in fact we did not ask.

3610. We will take next the case of Jejeebhoy Dhunjeebhoy ; he obtained a discount at the head office of 50,000 rupees on the 30th of January 1865, and there has been a total loss of that amount. On the 17th of May 1865 he obtained a discount of 35,000 rupees with another party ?—That is not the same Jejeebhoy Dhunjeebhoy ; the first is Sir Jamsetjee's son-in-law, and the other is a different man altogether.

3611. Mr. Bullock did not give us that explanation, and we examined him about it. Take the loan at the head office. How came you to give that man 50,000 rupees without a scrap of security except his promissory note ?—I cannot say, except that I referred it in the usual way.

3612. You referred it to Premchund ?—Very likely.

3613. You did so, and it was recommended by Premchund by a minute of the 26th of January ; in fact, at this time you were in the habit, as Mr. Blair had been before you, of referring all these to Premchund ?—Yes, this is Premchund's reply (Exhibit A 142), "Give him half a lac, either for one or two months, not longer. P. R."

3614. You acted solely upon the advice of Premchund as to that loan ?—Yes.

3615. The next case is that of Jummadass Khooshaldass. On the 16th of March 1865 (that is the day that Mr. Blair came back) he had one lac ?—Yes, I remember something about it.

3616. Who was he ?—I forget what he was, but the man came to me once or twice when the bill was being renewed, and I think with Graham and Company's broker ; and he told me that I was quite safe in renewing it.

3617. Did you consult any director as to that ?—I do not remember, but it must have been then that this man came to me about it, and we got several payments, I forget how many.

Mr. D. Robertson.
23 Nov. 1868.

3618. The next case is that of Khetsey Sewjee and Company. On the 20th of February 1865 they had 50,000 rupees, and the loss has been 49,420 Rs. You discounted that bill, upon no security whatever, in a single name?—Yes, to the firm. There must have been a letter. I do not know to whom I referred, very likely to Premchund, or possibly to Nicol and Company. The borrowers absconded, and we have never been able to find them. They were cotton dealers, but very likely they speculated.

3619. The next case is that of Shapoorjee Ardaseer. On the 16th January, the day that Mr. Blair left, he had 50,000 rupees. There was a loss on that.—That was compromised.

3620. I see that you were recommended to make that advance by a discount minute of Premchund Roychund. Who was Shapoorjee Ardaseer?—I do not recollect.

3621. These cases are only seventeen which I have selected, out of, I should think, fifty cases of loss, which occurred during those eight weeks for which you acted for Mr. Blair?—It is very likely.

Adjourned to the 24th November at 11 o'clock a.m.

F. D. Chauntrell, Esq.

Donald Robertson further examined.

Mr. D. Robertson.
24 Nov. 1868.

3622. (President.) When I was examining you yesterday with regard to Mr. Brown's loan, I understood you to say that the tabular statement was quite inadvertently framed in that incorrect way in which it appears in the Blue Book, and that there was no design in it?—Certainly; none whatever.

3623. Did you write this letter to the Government? (Handing to the witness a letter of the 5th of March.)—Yes. (Exhibit marked C 4.)

3624. You find that in this letter also the dates of these loans are not stated?—No, they are not.

3625. The order in which they were granted is reversed?—Yes.

3626. And you find that the amounts of the renewals, and not of the original grants, are given?—Yes. That was the amount outstanding.

3627. All the statements in the tabular statement, as to the securities and the probable realization of those securities, are also found in this letter?—I think that it is so.

3628. Do you remember Mr. Tracey getting a cash credit of five lacs from the bank, on the 8th of December 1864?—I remember that he had a cash credit, but I do not remember the time. I observe, on referring to the cash ledger, that it was granted on the 8th of December 1864.

3629. Do you remember for what purpose that was granted?—No.

3630. It was a cash credit to himself, and not to his firm?—It is to himself.

3631. He was a director of the bank at that time, was he not?—No.

3632. He became a director a month afterwards?—Yes.

3633. You do not know anything about that?—No. If I remember rightly, it was for a short time. It was paid off on the 13th of February 1865.

3634. Did not you superintend the branches during Mr. Blair's time?—Yes, for a time.

3635. Was that your duty as Under Secretary?—No.

3636. What were the instructions given to the agents at the different branches?—There was a printed book, which they all got, of general instructions, and there were special instructions sent to them.

3637. Was Rule 4 ever filled up when the printed instructions were sent to the agents?—No.

3638. What were the powers of the agents at the different branches?—They were authorized to do general banking business, and to purchase hoondies payable chiefly in Bombay, and some in Calcutta. They at first sent the names themselves, and the idea, which they had formed at the place, of the amount which should be advanced to each party, or the extent to which they might take their hoondies; and these were revised by one of the native directors of the bank, if possible, and returned with the amounts fixed. After a time that was given up. I think that Mr. Cowasjee Jehangeer said that he thought that after the agents had been there for a certain time they ought to be better judges than anybody in Bombay as to the amounts which should be granted.

3639. Down to 1863 and the beginning of 1864 the discount lists at the branches were revised, first of all by Cowasjee Jehangeer and afterwards by Premchund Roychund, were they not?—Yes; and sometimes by Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy. He was a director.

3640. I find none of his, but I find that they were revised for Surat and Bhownuggur by Premchund Roychund?—Yes.

3641. Eventually the practice of having discount lists was discontinued?—Yes.

3642. Was it in consequence of that letter, or a similar letter sent to the branches? (Handing Exhibit A 75. to the witness.)—Yes; I think that the last paragraph was from a letter written by Cowasjee Jehangeer.

3643. It says: "Persons who have been stated to be worth 'any amount' have been fixed at a maximum of three lacs, that being in the opinion of the directors sufficient credit at one time for any person except in special cases, in which the agents are at liberty to exercise their discretion; that is to say, giving them an unlimited discretion?—Yes, certainly.

3644. Then I am to understand that there was no limit upon the discretion of the agents?—That agent, namely, the Hyderabad agent, sent us a hoondie for four lacs of rupees, and he was told not to grant more than one lac at a time.

3645. That was a very extraordinary order to give him, when all the other banks were granting two lacs with perfect freedom, and the Kalbadevi branch was granting five lacs?—I recollect that on one occasion he sent us a hoondie of four lacs for one man.

3646. Was that after May 1865?—No; it was before May 1865; and he never sent us a hoondie for such a large amount again.

3647. After that, did not another system creep in at the branches, namely, of referring the matter to the agent, and telling him to consult some other person at the branch? A circular was sent round on the 6th January 1865. We have found two of them, and there may be others. This is one of them: "We are informed that if at any time you should require information regarding the standing of parties who may wish to discount or have advances from you, Mr. Abbaichund Cullianchund will be happy to render you every assistance. He is agent for Premchund Roychund, and his information should consequently be trustworthy, and I would recommend you to apply to him whenever you may be in doubt." (Exhibit A 77.) This is for Surat. Then to the sub-agent at Broach the following letter was written: "Dear Sir, We are informed that if at any time you should require information regarding the standing of parties who may wish to discount, or have advances from you, Mr. Anoopchund Maloockchund will be happy to render you any assistance. As this reference has been made by Mr. Premchund Roychund, any information Anoopchund may give should consequently be trustworthy. (Exhibit A 78.)"—Yes; I think that one was sent to Ahmedabad at the same time.

3648. Recommending Premchund's agents to give them information?—Yes.

3649. Did not you also get some weekly returns regularly?—Yes; statements of the transactions, showing the business done in the week.

3650. But they did not show on what securities the money had been granted?—No.

3651. Whose business was it to read those returns when they came?—They were sent first to the accountant's department, to check them off in the head office ledger, and to balance the outstandings; and then they went to the department of the Inspector of Branches. They first went to the secretary; he opened all the different letters and returns from the branches.

3652. They did not come back to the secretary after they had left him?—No; not unless he asked for them.

3653. He was not in the habit of asking for them, was he?—Sometimes.

3654. Were they ever laid before the board of directors?—I do not think so.

3655. Were they ever laid before the president?—I do not remember; they may have been.

3656. The monthly returns were a little more particular, were they not?—Yes; they gave us a list of all discounts.

3657. Did they give any other particulars besides?—They gave a list of deposit accounts, and at the end they gave the general balances, and these monthly lists should agree with the statements.

3658. Did the monthly returns show on what securities the loans were made?—I think that latterly they did, but not at first.

3659. What instructions did the inspector of branches receive?—I had been an inspector in Scotland for some time, and I followed the course pursued there. I went to the branch, and examined the cash, and I went over the bills, but at that time very few bills were payable at the branches; it was chiefly hoondie business. I used to see that everything was correct.

3660. Used you to visit all the branches?—No; there were not very many branches opened when I was inspector.

3661. Was not the Kurrachee branch opened?—Yes.

3662. You never visited it?—No. At the beginning of the next year I was made officiating deputy secretary; the Kurrachee branch was opened in March 1863, and I was away for three months at Hyderabad.

3663. The Hyderabad branch was never visited at all, except at the opening?—No; it had been opened for a short time; but I went there principally to arrange the system of accounts which had to be kept on account of the currency.

3664. What branches did you visit during your time?—Ahmedabad, Surat, and Poonah. I think that that was all.

3665. What was your system in visiting these branches? Did you come down suddenly upon the agent?—Yes.

3666. Did you give any notice of your coming?—No; but it was very difficult to go to any branch in India, the same as we do in this country, without its being known that we were coming.

3667. You did not come upon them at once, and ask for the books and the money, in the same way as they do in Scotland?—No. It is impossible to do that in India.

3668. You did not take possession of the branch at once?—I took possession immediately I got there. Of course the agents knew well enough that I was on my way to the place.

3669. What used you to do when you got there?—The first thing was to count the cash, and the next was to take the bills if they had any, and in fact to balance their accounts.

3670. Did not you see whether their bills were authorized?—No.

3671. They did not require any authorization?—I do not think that they had any bills at the time.

3672. The evidence which we had from a most satisfactory witness, Mr. Fraser (I think one of the best witnesses whom we had), was that these branches were very seldom visited unless there was something wrong.—Very seldom. We could not spare Mr. Fraser from the head office, as we had so much to do: although he was a good part of each year away. He was on duty in Dharwar at one time over four months.

3673. On the 21st of April 1865, I think you sent a circular round to all the branches, inculcating the utmost caution (that was just at the time when a panic was coming on), and, in particular, warned the agent at Kalbadevi to avoid transactions with parties doing business at the head office?—Yes.

3674. You afterwards required them to send up their available cash balances to the head office?—Yes.

3675. The branches were virtually closed about May 1865?—To the best of my recollection very little business was done after that.

3676. I wish to ask you a few questions as to the Kalbadevi branch. For what object was that branch opened?—I think that it was opened for general business, chiefly for deposits, and the convenience of the native constituents of the bank who lived in that neighbourhood.

3677. Was it a very great convenience to save their walking a mile?—They said so at the time. I believe that it was Mr. Cowasjee Jehangeer who was very anxious to have it opened.

3678. Was it opened as a branch, or was it opened as another office in Bombay?—It was certainly opened as a branch.

3679. Did you consider whether that was a violation of the express terms of the Bank Act?—I did not.

3680. It authorized you to open branches out Bombay?—Yes.

3681. You took no legal opinion about it?—I do not remember any opinion having been taken about it. It may have been, but I do not remember.

3682. The Government officials did not raise any objection upon that point?—Not that I remember.

3683. By whom were the agents at those branches appointed?—They were appointed by the directors. I suppose that the secretary would recommend them to the directors. I think that that was the practice.

3684. Who appointed Mr. Bullock?—There was another officer of the bank appointed first, before Mr. Bullock, namely, Mr. Smith, and he refused the appointment. He became manager of the Financial Association of India and China. He had made up his mind to leave. Mr. Bullock was supposed to be the next person eligible for the appointment. He was an assistant in the bank. He had joined it in the beginning of 1862.

Mr. D. Robertson.

24 Nov. 1868.

3685. Was he considered a person of experience?—Not in banking; he had never been in a bank in Bombay.

3686. Had he not been in a shop in Bombay?—No; he was in a press company, I think, at Colaba. He was got into the bank through the interest of Mr. Cowasjee Jehangeer.

3687. How did he get his appointment at Kalbadevi?—I do not know what took place at the board; but probably Mr. Cowasjee Jehangeer would speak for him.

3688. It appears to me to have been a most disastrous appointment.—There were great losses.

3689. Was that agent supposed to have independent authority, or was he considered to be under Mr. Blair, and afterwards under you?—Certainly not; he was acting on his own authority, the same as any of the other agents. I think that Mr. Cowasjee Jehangeer made a stipulation that Premchund was to visit that branch every day. I think that he wrote to Mr. Blair to that effect.

3690. We never heard of that before.—I think that Mr. Blair will tell you so.

3691. Mr. Bullock never told us that either.—I think so. I have an impression that Cowasjee Jehangeer did write to him to that effect.

3692. Was not it the fact that he was told by Mr. Blair and by yourself, if not by others, to consult Premchund Roychund in his business?—I think that he was.

3693. Can you mention anybody else who told him to consult Premchund Roychund besides yourself and Mr. Blair?—No.

3694. Do you remember any of the directors giving him the same instructions?—No.

3695. Was not he in the habit of very constantly coming over to the bank and consulting with Mr. Blair, and afterwards with you?—He was in the bank every day, I believe, but not consulting with us. He came for a long time with his spare cash in the evening.

3696. But he did not come to consult you?—No.

3697. Was not he in the habit of coming and asking whether parties had loans oustanding at the head office?—Possibly he might have come; but he would have gone to the accountant as to that.

3698. To Mr. Maclean?—He would get the information at once in the accountant's department. He might not go to Mr. Maclean, because he might go to the clerk who had charge of the discount ledger.

3699. I will refer you to two or three loans at the Kalbadevi branch. First, Burjorjee Rustomjee; he had borrowed money at the head office?—I think that he had had a small amount at the head office.

3700. He obtained at the branch, with Davidass Luckmidass, five lacs on the 1st of February 1865; that was when you were acting as secretary?—Yes.

3701. Did you know anything of it?—No. I did not know of it until afterwards.

3702. Did you not know at the end of the week that five lacs had gone out on that day?—I think that I knew of it when I saw the statement. I think that I remember seeing it on its being pointed out to me.

3703. There was no security whatever for that loan, was there?—I do not know. I think that there was.

3704. There were two shares of the Elphinstone Land and Press Company ultimately deposited?—I think that there was security; at least there was security latterly.

3705. Who was Davidass Luckmidass?—A broker.

3706. A man of no property whatever?—He had some.

3707. He stated to us that he had none.—There was property, and it was given over to trustees, under Act 28 of 1865.

3708. The shares in the Elphinstone Land Company were lodged, and you paid calls upon them of 33,022 rupees. There has been a considerable loss upon that transaction?—Yes.

3709. Would Mr. Bullock negotiate that advance without consulting you?—He did it without consulting me.

3710. On the 16th of December 1864 he granted Burjorjee Rustomjee, with Atmaram Madhowjee, 2,50,000 rupees; do you remember that?—No, I do not remember that particular transaction. I remember the five lacs. I have inquired about Burjorjee, and I was told that he was a man worth about fifteen lacs of rupees.

3711. You knew who he was, namely, the son of the old cabinet maker?—Yes; I found that out afterwards, but I found out that he had money.

3712. Fifteen lacs?—Yes. It was very likely exaggerated.

3713. On the 3rd of September 1865 another sum of 30,000 rupees was lent at the Kalbadevi branch to Burjorjee Rustomjee and Atmaram Madhowjee; did you hear of that?—No. Was not that for the payment of calls?

3714. It may have been raised for that purpose?—We got in and could not get out.

3715. On the 2nd of September 1865 there was a promissory note in Burjorjee Rustomjee's own name at the Kalbadevi branch for Rs. 15,000; did you hear that that was an advance on land?—No. In fact I have never heard of it yet.

3716. I will read to you what Mr. Bullock says about it:—"In the first loan on the list calls were due by Burjorjee upon those shares held by the bank in respect of the first loan. The title deeds of his property appear on the list to be held in respect of this particular bill, but that is not necessarily the case. The title deeds were deposited on the date of the loan, the 2nd of September 1865. But this was not an advance upon landed property; it was simply taken over by me to secure the bank against loss. It was not taken for this particular debt, but in order to secure an outstanding debt." So that he was quite aware of that distinction, but he did not see that, when he lent money at the time he took the security, he was lending money on land. Were you aware of that fact, that Mr. Bullock was advancing money on land?—No. I was not aware of it until this moment.

3717. These are enormous sums, five lacs, two and a half lacs, 30,000 rupees, and 15,000 rupees, lent in fact to Burjorjee Rustomjee, these other men being security. Davidass Luckmidass was a broker?—Yes; and at that time Burjorjee's credit, I suppose, was shaken.

3718. The real reason why the name of Davidass Luckmidass was taken was that the two and a half lacs were granted originally to him alone, and then, when it was found that the market for shares was falling, Mr. Bullock insisted upon his disclosing his principal, and he named Burjorjee Rustomjee. You never heard that it was borrowed by Burjorjee Rustomjee, and Atmaram Madhowjee, for a speculation in Commercial Bank shares?—No. I suppose that the shares were afterwards deposited with the bank.

3719. They were deposited, but not directly, I believe. Can you defend a system like this, to allow a branch to discount money to this enormous amount without communication with the head office?—No; I cannot defend it.

3720. Was not it your duty to have seen that these large sums were reported to the head office?—Yes; but at that time I very often did not see the statements, and they were not brought to my notice.

3721. Ought not you to have seen the statements?—It was utterly impossible; the work was enormous at that time.

3722. I believe that Mr. Dixon, of the Bank of Bengal, knows everything which is going on at every branch of his bank?—It is utterly impossible that he could do more than the secretary of the Bank of Bombay did. I used to work as hard as I could all day.

3723. I will take another case at Kalbadevi, namely, that of Gopalrow Bulwunt, and Pranjivundass Hurjivundass. On the 21st of January 1865 there was a discount at the head office of 50,000 rupees; that was granted by you?—Yes.

3724. On the 1st of February 1865 Gopalrow obtained 60,000 rupees more, and there is almost a total loss upon that transaction. Were you aware of that loan?—No.

3725. You afterwards became acquainted with the fact?—Yes; when I got in the returns after June 1865 I knew everything.

3726. Did you inquire of Mr. Bullock how he came to grant 60,000 rupees, when 50,000 rupees had been granted at the head office?—I think that we inquired in most cases; but I do not think that we inquired about that particular one.

3727. Did not you give instructions to Mr. Bullock never to advance to parties in Bombay without inquiring at the head office as to what loans were outstanding against them there?—I think that there were instructions to that effect.

3728. When were they given?—I do not remember.

3729. It was on the 10th of January 1865 you wrote as follows: "Before discounting bills of considerable amount, we wish you to refer to head office, as we are averse to the granting of discounts at head office and also at local branches." (Exhibit marked A 85.) You meant to prevent Mr. Bullock's discounting any bills of a considerable amount without inquiring?—Yes. The letter shown to me relates to Gopalrow's first bill. (Exhibit marked A 93.) I obtained Premchund's advice. He says, "Safe for half a lac."

3730. Mr. Bullock says, in his evidence, that he got Premchund's advice also?—He may have done so.

3731. Did Premchund know that you had granted half a lac at the head office?—He must have known it after that letter. It was only a few days afterwards, I think you said.

3732. He told you only to advance half a lac, and the man got 60,000 rupees more at the Kalbadevi branch a few days afterwards?—He must have done so.

3733. Do you not recollect that being brought to your notice?—No.

3734. That ought to have opened your eyes to Premchund's proceedings.—It would have done so, I think, if Mr. Bullock had told me that at the time, because there were several other cases in the same way; there were one or two instances. We got them paid off, fortunately.

3735. I understood you to say that Mr. Bullock was told to consult Premchund on all occasions?—To the best of my recollection he was told; I have no doubt that he was told.

3736. Did you not afterwards institute an inquiry as to how that branch had been conducted?—Yes; Mr. Fraser visited it, and reported.

3737. And you yourself made inquiries, did you not?—I think so. I did not go to the branch.

3738. What was the result of your inquiries? We have Mr. Fraser's report. He speaks of the influence of Premchund at the Kalbadevi branch. What was your opinion as to the management of that branch?—I understood all along that Mr. Bullock had acted under the advice of Premchund.

3739. Were you aware that Mr. Bullock was under pecuniary obligations to Roychund Deepchund?—No.

3740. I believe that it was your desire, was it not, to stimulate these branches to make exertions to invest your capital?—Of course it would be so at one time, when we had a large capital.

3741. I think that you wrote this circular letter at the time to the branches, did you not? (Handing to the witness a copy of Exhibit A 76.)—Yes; the latter part of it was written on account of some misunderstanding between the agents, with reference to funds in each other's hands.

3742. The letter says, "I beg to call your attention to the large balance of cash which has been for a considerable period lying at your branch. You are aware that it is of much importance to have the funds of the bank circulating throughout the country at remunerative rates, and to this end I have to request that you will cultivate a good understanding with the other agents, so that there may be no hindrance to the bank in receiving the full advantage of its money. You will please keep the agents, especially those having a business in connexion with your city, well informed of your rates." Was not the object of that rather to stimulate the agent?—The letter was written with reference to the hoondie business, and not at all with reference to local discounts.

3744. But the letter is signed by you?—It was done by Mr. Blair and myself in December 1864.

3745. Do you consider that a wise regulation? Your words are "which will render any advice of such transactions to head office unnecessary."—It should have been "any entries through the head office account."

3746. Was that wise? Do you not think that it would have been very much better if they had cross accounts between the branches, to settle them at the head office?—No; it would have saved a great deal of trouble.

3747. But the question is whether that would not have been the proper way?—We could see by their returns what balance they had with each other.

3748. Would it not have been the safer and the better plan to have had all accounts between the branches settled at the head office?—I do not think so. That order was very soon afterwards cancelled. It led to a great deal of confusion. They might be able to remit, say, a lac of rupees, from one branch to the other, at a profitable rate, and never to draw it again. We could not settle the rates at the head office; they must do that for themselves. We should then have had to conduct the whole of the business of the branches.

3749. I should think that it would be the business of the inspector of branches to do that?—He could not do it. He could not settle the rates, because they were changing from day to day.

3750. On the 19th of December 1864 you wrote to the Kalbadevi branch as follows:—"I observe that your fixed loans have increased this week to rupees 2,50,000. Will you be kind enough to say on what information those advances have been granted? The same remark also applies to your bills discounted, which have also increased fully one lac. Please mention your rates of fixed loans and bills discounted in your statement.—D. Robertson." (Exhibit marked A 83.) You wrote again on the 23rd of December 1864:—"Dear sir,—We observe that for some time back your drawings on head office have been very heavy. Please, before making any large drafts, to give notice of your intention to do so, and state for what purpose they are required. We hope these large demands on us are not paid out in the way of advances by private bills; and such bills as you do take we trust you are satisfied from your information that they are perfectly safe. Before taking any large discounts that may be proposed to you, you ought to refer to head office. From your proximity to head office this can be easily done." (Exhibit marked A 84.) Was that order obeyed? Did Mr. Bullock come and communicate with the head office?—I believe not; I do not think that he did.

Mr. D. Robertson.

3751. He admits himself that he did not ; but I want to know what the system was, if you gave orders to a man of this kind, and never enforced them ?—I expect that it was some time afterwards before I found out that they had not been obeyed.

3752. On the 10th of January 1865, in the letter to which I have already referred, you say :—"Dear sir,—We observe you yesterday granted a draft on the head office in favour of Nowrojee Ardaseer Davur for rupees 96,900. As this appears to be a discount of a bill for one lac at the ruling rate for three months, we will feel obliged, if our assumption is correct, by your informing us on what security you have granted this advance. Before discounting bills of considerable amount we wish you to refer to head office, as we are averse to the granting of discounts at head office and also at local branches." (Exhibit A 85.) Do you remember that letter ?—Yes ; and we insisted upon payment.

3753. It is extraordinary that you did not take any notice of these two large loans to Burjorjee Rustomjee ; the first five lacs, was it at that time ?—Yes.

3754. There was no loss upon the bill of Nowrojee Ardaseer Davur ?—No.

3755. On the 9th of February 1865 you wrote another reprimand to Mr. Bullock about his having discounted other bills without referring to the head office. (Exhibit marked A 86.) Does not it appear from these letters that Mr. Bullock was a most insubordinate agent ?—Yes ; but he settled us by saying that he referred to Premchund.

3756. He settled you by telling you that he was doing exactly what you did, namely, referring these cases to Premchund Roychund ?—Yes.

3757. What was your opinion of Mr. Bullock, as to his business abilities ?—He was very quiet, and I had an opinion at one time that he was cautious, but certainly latterly I did not think so.

3759. Being so general, one would think that it must be partly the result of the system ?—No doubt at Kalbadevi it was the result of the system.

3760. Who was responsible for the system ?—It is difficult to say who was responsible for it.

3761. Would you not say that the agent, and the persons over him, the secretary and the directors, were distinctly responsible for any faults of system ?—I cannot form an opinion upon that point. It is very difficult to say.

3762. If I had asked you the question, whether it originated in the misconduct of any particular party there, perhaps you would have hesitated to answer ; but I ask you whether it must not have been the fault of the system; and you say yes, that it must have been partly the fault of the system. If it is partly the fault of the system, whose fault is it ; to whom ought that fault to be attributed ?—You can hardly call it a fault. A branch was opened, and a certain system was adopted as to granting loans and discounts, and that was followed—

3763. Was not that system a very loose system, imposing no sufficient check upon the agent as to the limits to which he should discount, and giving him no proper instructions ; was there any proper system of instructions ?—The only instructions were the general instructions, and the letters which we sent.

3764. Most of these were when the mischief was pretty well done ?—Yes.

3765. I did hope that you would be able to make some defence in that respect. Were you aware that at Kalbadevi the agent was actually openly advancing upon shares in 1864 ?—No, not in 1864 ; but in the beginning of 1865 I found it out.

3766. Mr. Bullock seemed to be quite amazed when I told him that neither Mr. Blair, nor you, had power from the directors to make any such advance, and that you were restricted by the resolution of the 6th of August 1863. He said that it was openly done by him, and that you, and Mr. Blair, knew perfectly well that he was advancing on shares all the time. Were you aware of it in 1864 ?—I do not think that I was. It was only when we commenced writing those letters that we saw that this balance of bills outstanding had got up very largely.

3767. Here is a copy of Mr. Bullock's letter in reply to your letter of the 19th December 1864, when you were secretary. He says : "In one or two cases in which we accepted collateral securities, shares in the Bombay Reclamation Company, deposit receipts of the Asiatic Bank, &c., with private bills, we included these transactions with our fixed loans, but as they fall due we do not renew them ; and collateral securities will in future be taken with private bills for safe custody in the manner in which this is done at head office." (Exhibit marked A 88.)—Yes.

3768. So that in December 1864 you must have known of it ?—Yes ; I must have seen it.

3769. You must have known that he was doing it in December 1864 ?—I do not remember it ; but from that letter I must have known of it. I was sure to see the letter ; at least I think so.

3770. In May 1865, about the beginning of the end of all this delusion, a panic came on, did it not ?—Yes.

3771. There was a run upon the Bank of Bombay, was not there ?—I think that that was in June. I consider that the panic began on the failure of Byramjee Hormusjee Cama, on the 17th of May 1865.

3772. Were the Government directors called upon by the Government to report upon the state of the Bank of Bombay ?—I believe that they were ; I do not remember whether it was then, or shortly after that.

3773. I suppose that you must have seen the letters in answer to the telegram which was sent ?—I did not see the letters of the Government directors.

3774. Do you mean to say that you never saw that letter of the Government directors, dated 30th June 1865, and that you did not furnish the materials for it ?—Very likely I furnished the materials. I will read the letter. I do not think that I saw the letter. I did not see the letter afterwards ; it was a private letter from Mr. Lushington and Mr. Chapman.

3775. Who told Mr. Chapman and Mr. Lushington of the resolution of the 6th of August 1863 ?—Very likely I did ; I do not remember being asked.

3776. Do you not recollect that you were consulted about that letter ?—I was very likely asked to give a copy of the resolution of the 12th of April 1865, which I see is recorded in this letter, but I do not remember being consulted about the letter in any way.

3777. Did you never see that letter in draft ?—I do not think so ; I do not remember it, and I think that I should remember it if I had done so ; I should not expect to see that letter ; it was from Mr. Lushington and Mr. Chapman, who were Government directors.

3778. When the Government directors were called upon to report on the state of affairs, did they institute any inquiry at the bank ?—I do not recollect that they did. I should very likely be asked to furnish them with any particulars which they wanted, such as a copy of this resolution.

3779. Were not you called upon to furnish them with an account of the loans outstanding ?—I do not recollect ever being called upon to do so.

3780. Where did they get the idea from, that shares were taken "as collateral security" ?—I have no idea ; it must have been their own opinion.

3781. It is very much like yours in several other documents ?—It is very likely—they possibly held the same opinion as I did.

3782. Where did they get the information that "all advances of this description (meaning advances on shares) have for some time past been discontinued"?—It must have been in the bank.

3783. Did not they get that information from you?—Very likely; it is most likely that they did.

3784. Was it true?—Yes, to the best of my recollection.

3785. Had there not been direct advances on shares, not shares taken to secure an antecedent advance, but direct advances on shares in that month and the month before?—I do not recollect them; but if you turn to them I may be able to explain.

3786. We have made a division between those advances on shares which end in loss, and those which do not end in loss. There are four not ending in loss in the months of May and June 1865, and there are others ending in loss.—It must all have been done at the board.

3787. Where did Mr. Lushington and Mr. Chapman get the information that "all advances of this description have for some time past been discontinued," when you were actually doing it at the time?—I could not have given them that information.

3788. Do you think that those gentlemen invented a thing of that kind?—Certainly not; I suppose that they meant that it was generally discontinued, but of course there were exceptions.

3789. You wish us to believe that you did not see this letter in draft, and that you did not furnish this information, that "the above shares were taken as collateral security," and that "all advances of this description have for some time past been discontinued"?—I do not remember ever saying anything of the kind, and to the best of my recollection I did not see the letter in draft. I could not have said that, when the things were done a few days before, and the directors knew it as well as I did; because I think that you will find it all in the minutes.

3790. There was, I believe, a very large amount lying idle in the bank at the time of the resolution of the 12th of April 1865?—Yes; we had large bank balances.

3791. Were you consulted with respect to the other report of the Government directors of the 31st of March 1866?—There was a report sent in by Colonel Marriott, and I read, I think, the most of it.

3792. You did not see the report which was sent in by Messrs. Chapman and Norman on the 31st of March 1866?—I am certain that I did not.

3793. Did you give them the information that in the December crisis of 1865 the bank was at that time in no difficulty as regarded its own affairs?—I should think that I did. I think that both Mr. Hannay and myself looked into the bank's affairs at that time to see our position.

3794. In December 1865?—Yes.

3795. Upon what grounds are you prepared to justify that opinion?—We were in no danger as to our position. I believe that we could have paid all our depositors.

3796. I ask you whether you could have recovered one-fourth of your capital on any day in December 1865?—Certainly not; not one-fourth.

3797. And the loans then outstanding, representing nearly all your capital, have never been recovered since?—I believe that they have not been recovered; but in December 1865 we were sanguine; we had got over the worst; at that time there was a great recovery.

3798. Did you ever see the draft of that letter of the 31st of March 1866 before it was sent?—No.

3799. Whom did the Government directors consult about that letter? It is not likely that they would, unaided, have been able to give a detailed statement about the affairs of the bank.—I was very likely asked to furnish figures, because I see that there are statements at the end of the letter which I suppose were prepared in our office. They possibly consulted the chairman of the bank, Mr. Hannay. I think that he was chairman then.

3800. Before they made that report of the 31st of March 1866, did they enter into any minute examination themselves of the affairs of the bank?—There had been repeated examinations, but they did not do it themselves. On the 31st of December 1865, or in January 1866, there was a very careful examination and the Government directors were present.

3801. They never instituted any inquiry, such as we are now instituting, as to all the outstandings, and so on?—No.

3802. They did not enter into a minute inquiry?—There was a very minute inquiry in the beginning of 1866; early in January.

3803. They say, "Previous to April 1865 loans were granted with an amount of recklessness that appears now to be almost incredible. Not only were credits given to individuals and firms of recognized mercantile position to an extent far in excess of the limit that prudence demanded should be placed on such transactions, but persons, who were not even engaged in any ostensible commercial pursuits, were accommodated with large sums of money, which could only have been required for purposes of share speculation." Nothing can be more correct than that statement; but does not it show that they must have gone very minutely into the affairs of the bank? Where did they get that information from?—It would be from going over the list in January before they prepared that letter.

3804. What list of the outstandings had they before them?—A list which I had prepared every half year showing every loan which was outstanding.

3805. It was not that book which you talked of yesterday?—No.

3806. If they had looked at the book; it would not have shown them the securities?—No; it only showed total amounts. It was a large book. The outstandings were shown in it as in a ledger, with a separate page for every name; it showed that the loan or bill, or whatever it was, was due on a certain date; it showed what had been paid off, and there was a column for the balance.

3807. Did it include the Kalbadevi branch, and all the branches?—I think so. That was the intention.

3808. When was that book begun?—I said yesterday, in the beginning of 1865; but it must have been later.

3809. When was it begun?—I cannot tell you the date.

3810. Was it begun before the latter part of 1865?—Yes; because I distinctly remember Mr. Hannay looking over it.

3811. Did the directors begin to be alarmed in June 1865?—No; I think that Mr. Hannay looked at that book when he came to the bank.

3812. When?—Early in 1865.

3813. By whom was it made?—I cannot tell you.

3814. How long would it take to write up a book of that sort?—A good long time.

3815. You could not have prepared a book of that kind in less than a month?—I think not, because it was a very large book.

3816. And if Mr. Blair gave the order after he returned from Ajmere, the book never could have been prepared before he left?—It might be so, because I know that Mr. Hannay made complaints to Mr. Blair about some loans in it. He complained about something which had been done.

3817. Do you say that this book was constantly lying before the directors?—It was lying upon a table in the directors' room. The clerk went out when the directors came in.

3818. My colleague, Major Innes, who has more specially taken the account department under his care, has put into my hand a list furnished to him by the Bank of Bombay of every book which was put upon the table at the directors' meetings, under the authority of Mr. Stuart. Where is this book in that list? (Handing it to the witness.) It would have saved my friend here the labour of making tabular statements if he could have seen any such book, and he inquired carefully and repeatedly for it?—Latterly the whole thing went into the past due ledger; but this list certainly does not show it.

3819. That was a list prepared in the office, and sent up to us for our guidance.—If you could examine Mr. Hannay, he, I think, would tell you that he had seen that book.

3820. I suppose that the Government directors also saw it?—It was written up, but whether it was completed I cannot say.

3821. If Mr. Blair swore that it was after he came back from Ajmere that he gave the orders for the making of that book, could it possibly have been prepared before he left?—It might have been prepared.

3822. You would have had to collect the information from all the different ledgers as to the cash credits, and the fixed loans, and the discounts, and then you would have had to get the same particulars from the branches. Do you think that that book could possibly have been prepared in that time?—I could not say that it was prepared in that time. I think that I did not pay very much attention to it myself. When I sent out inquiries as to the amount outstanding against any one man, I got it very quickly. I always understood that it came from that book.

3823. I suppose that you furnished the Government directors with the figures in this report as to how the bank had gathered up their resources?—I should think so.

3824. The Governor-General had found fault with them for not gathering up their resources.—That information must have been got from me, although it went through the directors.

3825. I believe that you were one of the parties responsible for the policy of forbearance which was inculcated at that time?—I cannot see how I was responsible.

3826. You consented to it, did you not?—It was my opinion that the policy of forbearance was the best at that time.

3827. Do you remember that in the months of September and October 1865 there was a rise in value of all shares?—Yes. It continued up to the end of the year, I think.

3828. Do you remember Cowasjee Manockjee particularly asking you to realize some of the securities of the bank?—I do. He wrote me a letter.

3829. Is not that his letter?—(Handing Exhibit A 120 to the witness.)—Yes, that is the letter, and this (Exhibit A 121) is my answer. He was very urgent, and it was brought on at the following meeting, I think. You will find that there was a resolution recorded.

3830. On the 31st of August the following resolution was passed: "Resolved, That when the securities depostied by parties who have become insolvent reach a price which will cover their debt to the bank, they be sold off."—Yes.

3831. Then I understand you to say that you brought this letter before the board?—Yes. Cowasjee Manockjee was present, and I asked him to bring it before the board.

3832. And the board refused to realize the securities at that time unless they would be sufficient to clear the bank?—Yes; that was the resolution come to. I remember very well that the opinion was that we had got over the worst, that there was a steady improvement, and that we had such a large number of shares that it was impossible to dispose of them.

3833. Might you not have begun by doing it gradually?—The people outside knew as well as we did what shares we held.

3834. Might not another reason be, that a great many of the directors, and yourself, had a great number of shares of their own?—That was not the feeling which I had. Only three directors were present at that meeting, namely, Mr. Lushington, Colonel Ballard, and Cowasjee Manockjee, and I do not think that any of them had any shares except Cowasjee Manockjee himself.

3835. There were no commercial directors present on that day?—No; they would be present on the next day, when these minutes were read.

3836. I suppose that the directors, in their letter of the 31st March 1866, got the figures from you?—They must have done so.

3837. It states that 321 lacs were out at the beginning of the previous half year, that 79 lacs had been realized, and that 116 lacs remained over due?—Yes.

3838. What represented the other 126 lacs?—They were current loans.

3839. They had been renewed?—Yes.

3840. Did it appear that so many were over due, and that the others had been renewed?—I do not know how it appeared. Of course the difference must have been current loans.

3841. You furnished them with those figures, did you?—I have no doubt that I did. I was then secretary, or officiating secretary. They must have gone through me. They were prepared in the office.

3842. I now come to another point which I think must have come from you. The 17th paragraph of the Directors' Report of 31st March 1866 says: "With regard to the examination the Government of India direct should be made into the affairs of the Bank, we beg to annex a statement showing the fortnightly position of the Bank with respect to assets and liabilities during the year 1865. We beg further to report that the total amount of loans and discounts outstanding on the 30th December at both the head office and branches was rupees 381 lakhs, that out of this rupees 163 lakhs are over due, and that 30 lakhs have, after a careful and impartial scrutiny, been set down as the amount of the probable eventual losses. From the balance sheet, a copy of which is annexed, it will be observed the Bank will, after allowing for all losses, and after having paid a half year's dividend at the rate of eight per cent. per annum, be possessed of about three lakhs in excess of its capital."—Yes.

3843. I suppose that they got these figures from you?—They would get the figures from me.

3844. How does it appear in the account annexed to their report that thirty lacs represented the probable loss?—This does not show it at all; this only shows the general statement and the profit and loss account. They gave that from the examination which they had made.

3845. The thirty lacs had been declared to be lost on the 7th of August previous, had they not?—Yes; the directors estimated that the loss would not exceed thirty lacs.

3846. What was done with respect to those thirty lacs as a matter of account?—Do you mean in June 1865?

3847. Yes?—It was kept over. Twenty lacs were kept over to the profit and loss account.

3848. Twenty-two lacs?—Yes. That was the balance of profit and loss.

3849. The probable loss was carried to a suspense account?—Yes; afterwards; we did not declare it as a loss then.

3850. But on the 7th of August 1865 you said, "taking rather an unfavourable view of the liabilities current on the 30th of June last, the directors estimate that the losses will not exceed thirty lacs; it is quite possible that the ultimate loss will be much less, so that there is every hope of the shareholders receiving a fair dividend at the end of the current half year." You put that off as a suspense account, did you?—I think that it was left to profit and loss, and that the other was done in the next half year.

3851. The profit of the year was thirty lacs odd?—Yes.

3852. And the reserve fund ten lacs odd, making the sum total forty-one lacs odd?—Yes.

3853. The losses acknowledged were thirty lacs?—Yes.

3854. And the dividend for the half year was 8,36,000 rupees, making 38,36,000 rupees; that would leave 2,88,950 rupees which was all the reserve which you had left. On the very day when you de-cared this dividend, on the 23rd January 1866, there is the following entry in the minutes: "The balance sheet of the 31st of December, and statement of profit and loss account, were again laid upon the table. Resolved, that a dividend for the past half year be declared on the capital of the bank at the rate of eight per cent. per annum, payable on and after Friday the 26th instant, and that the transfer books be closed from this date until Monday the 29th instant; dividend to be paid to the proprietors on the register at the close of business on this date. Resolved that Messrs. Hannay, Lidderdale, and Stuart be appointed a committee to decide what debts are considered irrecoverable, and they are authorized to debit such to profit and loss account."—Yes.

3855. Was not the result of that that on the 28th of January 1866 they struck off 4,89,000 rupees as irrecoverable?—Yes; as utterly bad; they did not hold any of that as doubtful.

3856. Was not the other sum, which was held in suspense, found to be more than thirty lacs in August 1866?—Yes. A further sum was then written off, thirty lacs and upwards.

3857. Do you not think that it would have been prudent for the directors to have waited for the report of this committee before they declared that dividend?—That committee was only to pick out a few cases which were utterly bad; the statements were again laid on the table; they had been in the meantime going over them for about a week.

3858. Were the 4,89,000 rupees a part of what the directors had assumed the loss to be, namely, thirty lacs?—Yes; it was what these three gentlemen considered irrecoverable, and utterly bad.

3859. Then, when in the August or September following they wrote off thirty lacs, it was in addition to the 4,89,000 rupees already written off?—Yes.

3860. Do you think that it was prudent, even with that explanation, although it might not be taking money out of capital, for them, knowing that such a vast sum of money was outstanding upon debts secured as it was, to have assumed that so much of that capital was safe?—They did not do it until after a long investigation, and they were particularly anxious to pay a dividend on account of the shareholders.

3861. It is most unfortunate to be paying dividends when it is not prudent to do so, because it raises false hopes among the shareholders.—I believe that every director had the interest of the shareholders at heart. Mr. Stuart and Mr. Ryrie were new directors.

3862. Why did Mr. Ryrie retire?—He came out to take charge of his firm in Bombay, and after he got a partner he returned to London.

3863. He was only a director, I think, for two months?—I think that it was six months.

3864. Was he frightened at the state of the bank, and did he retire on that ground?—I am not certain of his reason.

3865. But he never stated that to be the reason?—Certainly not. I do not think that he meant to remain in Bombay.

3866. Looking at the matter as a man of business, do you think that it was wise or prudent, or the conduct of sensible men, to declare a dividend at that time, looking at the way in which all your money was invested?—I think that it was. The shareholders were the first consideration; but, as you say, it might have raised false hopes.

3867. Perhaps in one sense it might have been an advantage to the shareholders, because if the money had not been paid to them it would probably have been thrown away like the rest; but that is the only way in which I can look at it as a prudent measure.

There was another letter of yours to which I will call your attention, namely, a letter of the 9th of November 1865. Which of the directors were present at the board meeting of that day?—(Reading from the board Minutes) Mr. Hannay, Mr. Lushington, Colonel Ballard, Mr. Tracey, Mr. Rustomjee, and Mr. Cowasjee Manockjee.

3868. I will read this letter: "The Secretary to Government, Financial Department. Sir,—I have the honour to acknowledge your endorsement No. 922, of 26th October, enclosing copy of a communication from Sir Charles Wood. I am requested by the directors to say, in reply, that it appears to them the Secretary of State has either been much misinformed relative to the transactions of the Bank of Bombay, or else that he has quite misunderstood the information supplied. The Bank of Bombay has never advanced money directly on shares, but during the trying crisis that occurred in the early part of this year the times were so exceptional that the directors considered it prudent, seeing so much money was lent on personal security only, to obtain as much collateral security as possible when granting loans. This was done, and it enabled the bank to assist many of their constituents who possessed shares in sound undertakings and of undoubted value, but required money.

"Upon calmly looking at the circumstances of the past, the directors are of opinion that, had any other course been adopted, the result would have been most disastrous; and had the Government directors not given their consent to the course commented on they would have been responsible for ruin, probably more general and widespread than was ever before seen in any city or commercial community. With reference to the alteration of the charter, this is a matter over which the directors have no control, but seeing that the clause referred to has never been taken advantage of, the directors do not see that any change is either necessary or desirable." Do you recollect that letter?—Yes.

Mr. D. Robertson.

24 Nov. 1868.

3869. Did you draft it?—No; I think that Mr. Hannay drafted it.

3870. The letter asserts that the Bank of Bombay had never advanced money directly on shares. If you lend money on a promissory note and shares, do not you lend money as directly on the shares as on the promissory note?—You take the shares.

3871. You enter into an agreement to lend money on a promissory note and shares; and what difference does it make by calling it a collateral security; "collateral" only means side by side. You use the words "collateral security" as if it meant a secondary thing to be resorted to in the event of an emergency.—That is the only explanation which I can give of it.

3872. Will you tell us how you would have granted the money directly on shares if you did not do so?—If any one came with a Back Bay share, and said, "I want 25,000 rupees on this share," it would be doing it directly.

3873. I think not more directly than on a promissory note and shares. As I have said before, if you advance money on my furniture and my house, do not you advance money directly on both?—Yes; but if any man came and said, "I want 25,000 rupees on Back Bay shares," if we did not know who he was, then I should say that we were lending directly upon the shares. We looked upon the man; that is the way in which I looked at it.

3874. It seems to me utterly insensible.—That was my opinion at the time.

3875. Some of your transactions, I admit, would bear that construction. If you had lent money on a promissory note, and afterwards became anxious about it, and took the security of shares, then I admit that you did not lend the money directly on shares; but the great majority of these transactions are direct advances on a promissory note and shares.—I can only say what I have said, namely, that the position of the applicant was always considered.

3876. That is a very difficult observation to meet. It is what we have been troubled with all through this inquiry. If we have found fault with people for advancing on shares, they have always said, "There is the applicant." If the borrower has been a man who was not worth a shilling except the clothes in which he stood, it has been said, "There are the shares."—I only state my own opinion.

3877. I want to know how you could possibly have written such a letter as this in the face of the resolution of the 12th April 1865—"Resolved, that the secretary be authorized, at his discretion, to advance on the shares of the under-noted companies"?—Yes; but you must take it with the last clause.

Mr. D. Robertson.

3878. "In granting such advances the secretary will in all cases intimate and insert in the bond, that should the shares deposited be depreciated in value during the currency of the loans, the security must be increased, or a partial payment made to reduce the debt, one per cent. above regular rate to be charged on such advances, and it is to be distinctly understood that such advances are only to be granted to first-class applicants."—Yes.

3879. Was not this resolution expressly passed to enable the bank to advance on shares?—Yes; but I look at the latter clause.

3880. That is as to the power of the secretary; but I ask you what you meant by writing a letter to the Government saying that the bank never advanced directly on shares, when you had an express resolution passed to enable you to do it, and acted on that resolution?—Yes; but not except to good men.

3881. That is another point. I want to know whether you did not take express authority to advance on shares?—There certainly is a resolution to that effect; but I took that resolution looking at the last clause, and that the applicants ought to be taken into consideration.

3882. So they were, I dare say; but however good the applicants were, it was still an advance on shares. —That was so.

3883. I want to get some intelligible explanation of such a letter as this.—That is the only explanation which I can give.

3884. Again, how could you possibly say, "but seeing that the clause referred to has never been taken advantage of, the directors do not see that any change is either necessary or desirable"?—In drafting that, Mr. Hannay held the same opinion as I have stated.

3885. Under the old Act how did you advance on Government securities?—By having the Government securities endorsed to the bank.

3886. Had you a promissory note?—No; a bond.

3887. And you had the Government securities deposited?—Yes.

3888. Did you not advance on Government securities then?—Yes; we would advance to anybody on Government securities.

3889. Just the same as you did on shares?—We should not advance to anybody on shares, but we should do so upon Government securities.

3890. The question to which I want you to confine your mind is, whether you advanced directly upon shares or not?—In my opinion we did not.

3891. I now come to the tabular statement which is contained in the Blue Book at page 96. It was sent in on the 23rd November 1866?—Yes; it was, if I remember rightly, asked for by the Government of India.

3892. Mr. Francis Chapman had left the direction when that statement was sent in, had he not?—Yes; he left on the 24th of April 1866.

3893. Mr. Lushington was in the direction at that time?—Yes; Mr. Lushington, Mr. Norman, and Mr. C. Chapman.

3894. When did you get the orders to prepare that statement?—I do not remember when it was.

3895. Do you remember whether it was in a clean form, with that heading, laid before you? Do you remember the form in which the application came to you at the bank to prepare that statement?—I believe that they sent me a draft form, something like this.

3896. Is that the heading which was put before you? (Handing Exhibit marked C 5 to the witness.)—It was something like this, but to the best of my recollection it was larger than this.

3897. Can you tell me in whose handwriting that is?—No; it is not the handwriting of any of our people in the bank.

3898. Are you quite sure that it is not Mr. Claude Erskine's handwriting? Do you know it?—I do not know it; I do not think that I ever saw it.

3899. You got the headings from some person outside the bank, did you?—Yes; we got them from the Government secretariat.

3900. When did you get them?—I do not remember.

3901. The 24th of October 1866 is the date of the letter (see Exhibit C 4.), accompanying the form?—I cannot remember.

3902. Are you quite sure that you did not get an order before that?—I do not remember. I cannot say when we got it. I should think that it would come at the date of the letter.

3903. I want particularly to know whether you got any order before that?—I cannot say, but I should think not.

3904. How came the Government, sending you an order on the 24th of October 1866, to ask you to make a "statement of sums overdue above the amount of three lacs of rupees for which, on the 30th of June 1866, the Bank of Bombay was in advance, by way of discount, loan, or otherwise, exclusive of loans on deposit (to the full value) of Government paper, or guaranteed railway scrip, or imperishable goods"?—The only explanation which I can give of that is, that they would take the 30th of June as being our half-yearly balance.

3905. Would it not have been more important for the Government of India that they should know the state of things at the time when they wrote the letter, instead of four or five months before?—They could have got it just as easily.

3906. With whose assistance was this tabular statement prepared?—It was prepared in the accountant's department.

3907. Mr. Donald Maclean?—He was the accountant. He would possibly not prepare it himself, but he would appoint some one else to do it.

3908. He signed it?—Yes.

3909. You also, as far as we can collect from the evidence in India, had a hand in the preparation of this tabular statement?—Yes; I saw a draft, and I filled in, I think, a statement of probable dividends in the case of insolvent estates; in fact, I am sure of it.

3910. Are you prepared to say that this is a correct or an ingenuous statement of the affairs of the bank at that time?—I ordered a correct statement of it, and I have no reason to doubt that it is so.

3911. Do you first of all remark the fourth item, the "Eastern Financial Corporation, ten lacs, bill discounted," and, "2,05,442 rupees, cash credit"?—Yes.

3912. If you turn to item No. 16, you will find "Financial Association;" a different name being given to it?—Yes; four lacs and more.

3913. Was not that alteration calculated to give the impression that those advances were made to two different Companies?—I think not; it certainly should have been the same. I forget whether it was "Corporation" or "Association."

3914. Was not that prepared with a view of concealing the fact that 16,20,000 rupees had been advanced to one Corporation?—Certainly not. I distinctly say that. In fact I had not observed that it had been put in that way.

3915. Was not it the natural consequence, whether it was by error or by design, that any one looking at it could not see that 16,20,000 rupees were advanced to one Corporation?—No; they might take it as the same, I think. From this statement people are not any the wiser.

3916. If the name had been the same, it might possibly have been so. It would have been more ingenuous, I think, to have put it under the heading of the "Financial Association," and to have shown that altogether sixteen lacs and more had been advanced to that Corporation.—I am sorry that it was not so done, but there was no design in it.

3917. The other statements, which we have traced to you, contain similar sorts of little arrangements.—

I think that that will be explained to you. I did not prepare this tabular statement.

3918. You were one of the parties responsible. It came from the Bank of Bombay, and you say that you saw it, and added a portion to it?—Yes, but that was a thing which I think I might overlook.

3919. Why was it that the loan to the Asiatic Bank Corporation, which had then resulted in a loss of 19,70,000 rupees to the Bank of Bombay, was omitted?—Not at that time. On the 30th of June 1866 there was no loss upon the Asiatic Bank.

3920. I am coming to that. You did not put in the Asiatic Bank Corporation in that statement, because the Government had limited their inquiry to the 30th of June 1866?—Certainly; I only gave them what they wanted.

3921. You followed the instructions of the heading?—Our clerk did so.

3922. And although at the very moment when you sent in the return the sum of 19,70,000 rupees was due from the Asiatic Bank, you did not think it necessary to put any note or addition to that tabular statement?—I have no doubt that, if that had been done, there would have been a great many others.

3923. But you confined yourself to the terms of the heading, and did not think it necessary to inform the Governor-General of India that the sum of 19,70,000 rupees was due from the Asiatic Bank?—No. I would have given the whole thing if they had asked for it. It was just as easy for the bank officials to have prepared an account up to the time when it was asked for as up to the 30th of June 1866.

3924. It would have been just as easy, but it would not have been quite as favourable an account.—I did not care whether it was as favourable or not. I would have given them a statement from the books.

3925. Why was not Mr. Brown's debt entered in this account?—It was not three lacs.

3926. It was just above three lacs?—Yes.

3927. Why was not it entered in this account?—It had been renewed, I suppose. What was wanted was a statement of sums overdue.

3928. Do you mean to say that that is the reason why you excluded Mr. Brown?—I did not exclude any. I told the clerk to prepare a statement according to that heading.

3929. Was not Mr. Brown actually released at that time, namely, in November 1866, when you sent that return?—Yes, his trust deed was certainly signed before that.

3930. But the debt was not wiped out, and Mr. Best and the other parties still remained?—Certainly.

3931. Then I want to know why it was that those loans did not appear in this tabular statement?—I can only tell you that the statement was prepared according to the heading which we got, and that if they had given us any other heading it would have been prepared in that way.

3932. But this would have come under the heading "Statement of sums overdue above the amount of 3,00,000 rupees for which on 30th June 1866 the Bank of Bombay was in advance by way of discount, loan, or otherwise." It was overdue, and there was no renewal of any part of it?—The only order which I gave was to prepare the statement as required. I did not say to the clerk, "Keep out this and put in that." I did not tell him to put in one and keep out another.

3933. What did you mean by saying in item nine, "Mercantile Firm"? (That firm was Limjee Manockjee, and Company, and the debt was one of Rs. 7,15,000 without security.) "The shares now held," and, under the head of "Collateral securities taken," there are "248 Bank of Bombay" shares?—He sent in the certificates to us. We stopped the transfer.

3934. Do you mean to say that you ever lent money upon Bank of Bombay shares?—No.

3935. Why did not you insert it properly, saying that you had stopped the Bank of Bombay shares which you were entitled to do? Had you lent the money on those shares?—Certainly not; the shares had only been stopped.

3936. The next item is, "No. 10 Merchant" (that is Premchund). "Fixed loan 9,00,000 Rs., 3,12,000 Rs. over draft." "Over draft will be paid in full." Upon what authority did you make that statement?—I thought that the over draft would be paid by Ritchie, Stewart, and Company.

3937. Do you mean to say that on the 23rd November 1866 you thought that the bank held the guarantee of Ritchie, Stewart, and Company for that over draft?—I thought so; it certainly turned out not to be so.

3938. Shortly after Premchund Roychund's loan in April, was not the question of Ritchie, Stewart, and Company's guarantee raised?—Yes.

3939. Was not it then ascertained that Mr. Tracey's so-called guarantee was nothing but a bit of paper, and no legal security?—It was ascertained what security we had.

3940. Was not it ascertained, by legal opinion, that that guarantee was worth nothing?—Not until long after that.

3941. Was not it within your knowledge and that of the whole board, long before November 1866, that that guarantee was worth nothing?—No; that was in 1867.

3942. Do you mean that Mr. C. E. Chapman and the others thought all through 1866 that that was a good guarantee of Ritchie, Stewart, and Company?—I think so.

3943. Were not those notes produced within three weeks after Premchund Roychund's loan?—I do not think so.

3944. And was not it ascertained at once that they were not worth the paper upon which they were written?—Not then. I am certain that that was in 1867.

3945. Do you mean to say that on the 23rd of November 1866 you thought that Premchund Roychund would be able to pay that over draft?—No; not Premchund Roychund.

3946. Or that Ritchie, Stewart, and Company would be bound to do it?—I certainly thought so until after Mr. Tracey had left.

3947. Did you not talk to Mr. Tracey, when you were going to Mr. Lidderdale's house, about deducting the amount of that over draft from the 25 lacs lent to Premchund?—When we were going to the house I did. My explanation is on the minutes, and it would assist me very much if I had it.

3948. I am to understand that you distinctly swear that on the 23rd of November 1866 you had no knowledge that the guarantee was worth nothing, and that you thought that Ritchie, Stewart, and Company were still bound to pay that debt?—I did; it was only after Mr. Tracey left that I found out, from Mr. Scott, that they did not know anything about it.

3949. Do you mean to say that you waited all that time to ascertain whether the firm was liable on that guarantee or not? Had not Mr. Chapman challenged you at the board to say whether Ritchie, Stewart, and Company were bound or not?—Yes.

3950. And did not you say then that they were?—Yes.

3951. Was not it shortly after that that Mr. C. E. Chapman obliged you to produce the guarantee?—No; I do not recollect his asking for the guarantee at all; in fact I do not think that he did.

3952. In this tabular statement you surely ought to have put all loans outstanding at the branches, ought you not?—I think that we did so; everything above three lacs. I think that you will find it at the end there.

3953. How was it that Burjorjee Rustomjee's loan of nearly eight lacs was not put in?—I presume that it would not be due; it was very likely renewed again.

3954. You proceeded upon that word "overdue"?—Certainly.

Mr. D. Robertson.

24 Nov. 1868.

3955. And a bill which had been renewed, and renewed for a couple of years, you would not consider overdue?—No; if it had been renewed year after year it must have been considered good; it would not have been renewed if it was considered bad.

3956. Was not a bill always renewed when you could not get payment?—No; if we thought that the man would never pay we certainly never renewed it.

3957. You never renewed a bill unless it was good; do you really mean to say that?—So far as I recollect that was the rule.

3958. You never renewed the bill if the man could not pay 25 per cent.?—Yes, we did, in special exceptions.

3959. Who was it prepared this heading so ingeniously to shelter the bank?—I do not know. We got it from Government, but I do not think that it was meant to save the bank at all.

3960. It allowed you to treat as good, bills which could not be paid, and which had been renewed for a couple of years?—I must say that the Government before this had the report of an independent committee which they had appointed themselves, and that report, I think, was in September 1866. That committee consisted of Mr. Harrison, the Honourable A. J. Hunter, and Mr. Dinshaw Manockjee, neither of whom had anything to do with the bank.

3961. Was that report sent to the Governor-General of India?—It was sent to the Government of Bombay.

3962. This was a report prepared for the Governor-General of India?—I should think that the other went too.

3963. When do you say that Mr. Harrison's report was made?—I think in September 1866.

3964. Davidass Luckmidass and Jumidass had large sums out. Do you mean to say that their bills had been renewed?—I cannot say.

3965. They had certainly more than three lacs?—The clerk was told to go over all the accounts, and to give everything above three lacs.

3966. Why was it necessary for him to go over all the accounts if the book of outstandings, which you talk of, existed?—I do not know where he took it from. I told him to make it up.

3967. How did you manage with Atmaram Madhowjee, a man with about twenty-seven lacs out?—I told the clerk to make it up; it was Mr. Slight, who is now in the new Bank of Bombay, and he was a very good assistant. I told him distinctly, or Mr. Maclean, (very likely it was Mr. Maclean,) to get it made out according to the headings, as the Government wanted it.

3968. Where do Atmaram Madhowjee's debts appear in that account?—Some of them do appear. There is one, I know; "No. 15, private individuals;" they were Taylor, Diver, Atmaram Madhowjee.

3969. That is one of his bills. Why did not you put in all the others?—They would have been put in if they had been overdue, I have no doubt.

3970. Do you mean to say that you had been renewing all his bills in 1866, they having been granted in 1864?—I should think so. Some bills were reduced; for instance, the Eastern Financial Association.

3971. I think that there is one case in which you cannot say that you got anything, namely, the Honourable Premabhoy Hemabhoy, who owed 10,45,000 rupees. Why was not he in?—It would not have been due.

3972. It has been renewed, I suppose, like all the others, and you go upon the word "overdue"?—I go upon what is the truth.

3973. I ask you whether that tabular statement, which was sent in on the 23rd November 1866, with all the omissions which I have pointed out, was calculated to give the slightest information?—It gave the information to the 30th of June 1866.

3974. Was it calculated to give the slightest information as to the position of the bank?—Certainly not, in November 1866.

3975. Or on the 30th of June 1866?—Yes; I think that it was correct on the 30th of June 1866.

3976. You think that on the 23rd of November 1866 you ought not to have referred at all to the state of affairs then?—I would have given it if it had been asked for, or any other date fixed upon, just as well as the 30th of June.

3977. But it would not have been so pleasant?—It would have been equally pleasant for me.

3978. It would not have made the affairs of the bank look so well?—I do not think that concealing them made it better; there was certainly no intention of making the affairs of the bank look better than they were.

3979. Why do you put in Sorabjee Jejeebhoy's bills, and not his brother Rustomjee Jejeebhoy's? Sorabjee's amount is eight lacs?—It must have been overdue; that is the only thing which I can say.

3980. But they were not more overdue than Rustomjee's, because Rustomjee became liable for all his brother's as well as his own?—But Rustomjee's, I suppose, were not overdue; Rustomjee's were being renewed.

3981. They must have been in exactly the same category, because Rustomjee became answerable for the whole of them.—Yes, but they were not renewed; we got Rustomjee's renewed.

3982. The last renewal which I have a note of is on the 17th of January 1865, the loan having been granted in July 1864. First of all he had a bill discounted on the 12th of July 1864, and it was renewed upon the 17th of January 1865, for 2,21,000 rupees?—Yes.

3983. Then he had a cash credit on the 15th of December 1865 for 2,10,000 rupees?—Yes; I remember that.

3984. Then on the 11th of April 1866 he had a cash credit for 2,12,000 rupees?—It must have been a renewal; no more money was advanced to him.

3985. It was a renewal; but there was no renewal after January 1865, except a cash credit?—I recollect distinctly the 2,10,000 rupees being granted, and it was for a fortnight, until he could sell his bills.

3986. Were those two bills renewed?—I should think so; one of them was. They must have been renewed after that. Rustomjee was in perfectly good credit then.

3987. I ask you, as a man of business, whether this tabular statement, sent up to the Governor-General of India, was calculated to give him any information as to the position of the bank, and the probabilities of the recovery of the sums above three lacs of rupees, on the 23rd of November 1866?—Not on the 23rd of November, but it would certainly give them our opinion on the 30th of June 1866.

3988. It would give your opinion of what was overdue on the 30th of June 1866?—Yes.

3989-99. But it would not give an idea of the bills which had been renewed, and renewed, and renewed again, and which had become dead loans?—No; they ought to have required a full statement of all the outstandings of the bank for that.

4000. We must now turn to another subject. Have you prepared any list of the allotments of shares which you received?—I think that I have a list.

4001. Will you state what they were?—I do not know the order in which I received them, but I got two Back Bay shares allotted.

4002. Did not you get ten more Back Bay shares allotted?—Yes. These ten shares did not belong to me; they belonged to Mr. Gavin Steel. He came to see me one day, and said that he had got ten more shares than he was entitled to as a promoter, and he asked if I would be good enough to take them in my name, and for friends at home. He said that he wanted to sell them, and did not want to appear as having more shares than he was entitled to have, or as selling shares for himself; and he gave me a letter guaranteeing me against any loss in doing so; and, as he was a personal friend of mine, I did not see that I did anything wrong. I put the shares in my own name, and gave him blank transfers there and then ; and I believe that they were sold.

4003. Are you quite sure about that?—Certain ; and I have no doubt that Mr. Gavin Steel will corroborate what I have said.

4004. Had not Mr. Hannay an interest in those shares?—Not that I am aware of.

4005. Do you not know that those ten shares were kept for a particular person ; neither Mr. Steel nor Mr. Hannay?—I do not know.

4006. Have not you heard, and do not you believe, that those ten shares were kept for somebody else than Mr. Gavin Steel?—Certainly ; he told me that they were on behalf of friends in England.

4007. Are you quite sure that he said "friends in England"?—I am almost sure of it. I can get his letter. I have not his letter with me, but I will write for it. I got a letter from him when he saw that it was referred to in Bombay.

4008. Were not those ten shares kept for an official in Bombay?—Not that I know.

4009. Do you not know that they were kept for a person who held an office in Bombay which would not allow him to take those shares?—I do not know. I never heard of it until this moment.

4010. I do not believe that the person ever received them ; but that is another question.—I do not know anything more than what I have told you. I believe that what Mr. Steel told me is the truth.

4011. Do you mean to say that Mr. Hannay was not interested in these shares?—I cannot say.

4012. When did you sell these shares?—I never sold them.

4013. Then what Back Bay shares did you sell afterwards?—I did not sell ten Back Bay shares afterwards.

4014. You certainly sold five, to my knowledge?—I gave them over to the Asiatic Bank.

4015. Did not you sell half of these ten shares yourself?—Certainly not. I did not get a single share more than the two allotted to me, except what I purchased.

4016. Do you not know that those ten shares were reserved for General Rivers?—I do not. I never heard of it until this morning.

4017. I do not mean to say that General Rivers ever had them?—I never heard of it before.

4018. Did not the person or persons for whom those shares were reserved refuse to have them?—I do not know. Mr. Steel signed the transfer deeds, and I sent them ; and he said that he would hold me harmless from all responsibility with reference to those shares.

4019. When were those transfers used?—I could not say ; the registrar of the company could state that.

4020. Are you quite sure that Mr. Hannay had nothing to do with this ; did not he speak to you upon the subject?—Never ; only Mr. Steel. I had nothing to do with Mr. Hannay upon the subject.

4021. You will swear that the shares were not divided, and half of them sold for your own benefit and half for Mr. Hannay's?—I do not know about Mr. Hannay ; but I will swear that I never received a penny benefit on them.

4022. Those were ten shares of the supplemental issue, were they not?—I cannot say what they were.

4023. What was your next allotment?—One Mazagon Reclamation Company's share. I do not know that that is the order in which they came. I sold that share.

4024. At a profit of 8,750 rupees?—Yes ; there was also one Frere Company's share which I sold for ten rupees ; on which I had paid up more than 4,000 rupees.

4025. When did you sell it?—When I came home. I got 25 shares of the Alliance Financial Association. I sold them at a premium, I forgot what ; I think about 40 rupees, but I have had to pay a call upon them since. I had 35 shares in the Financial Association of India and China. I think that I sold them at about 40 rupees premium. I got 25 first, and 10 afterwards, from Mr. Cowasjee Jehangeer. I got 30 shares of the Mercantile Credit Financial Company, which were sold at about five or six rupees premium, and I had to pay a call of 150 rupees upon them. I had two shares in the Victoria Land Company, and I think that I sold them at 800 rupees a share premium. I had two Port Canning shares, which I hold still. I had one Asiatic Trading Company's share, with 5,000 rupees paid up, upon which I had to pay a call afterwards. I had 20 Bank of Surat shares, upon which I paid 100 rupees. They were sold for 75 rupees per share. I had three Iron Ship Company's shares ; they were sold before I came home. I purchased four more. I had 40 Asiatic Bank new shares and 20 old shares. I got the 40 new shares allotted to me through Mr. Hannay, when the new shares came out. I took 10 shares in the Veterinary and Livery Stable Company, which was started for the benefit of Europeans in Bombay. 100 rupees a share was paid up, which was all lost, and I had to pay a call of 30 rupees more. I bought four shares in Treacher and Co., which I still hold ; and in the same way five shares in the Omnibus Company ; I still hold those. I had 50 shares in the London Asiatic and American Company, through Mr. Hannay, which I still hold. He had charge of the allotment of the shares in India.

4026. To whom did you apply for your two Back Bay shares?—I think that I wrote a letter to Ritchie, Stewart, & Co. ; I am not certain.

4027. To whom did you apply for your share in the Mazagon Reclamation Company?—I think that it was to the secretaries and treasurers, whoever they were.

4028. Are you quite sure that you did not apply to Premchund for it?—Very likely I did, but I do not remember. I do not deny, and I do not wish to deny it.

4029. Did not Premchund ask for it for Mr. Robertson, as a friend of his?—I am not certain.

4030. On the 23rd of December 1864, did you not write a letter thanking Premchund for it?—It is very likely.

4031. Were not you an original shareholder in the Asiatic Banking Company, formerly the Bombay Joint Stock Bank?—I do not remember.

4032. Mr. Baker, the assistant manager, tells us so.—Then I must have been so, but I do not remember it.

4033. In your letter (Exhibit A 97) you say to Premchund "I am much obliged to you for the Frere share which you have so kindly sent one." He says that he allotted to you the Mazagon share.—He might have done so, but he was not a director then.

4034. How do you justify your taking shares in a rival bank?—I cannot justify it at all. I did not think that I was doing anything wrong in taking them.

4035. You were assistant secretary, and afterwards secretary, to the Bank of Bombay, and were holding shares in a rival bank, and you also gave them your deposit account?—I thought that it was a good investment.

4036. Were not you aware of the clause in the Bank Act that none of the officers of the bank were to enter into any other commercial or trading business?—Whatever the Act was, I did not think that I was infringing it in any way.

4037. Could there have been any sort of business more objectionable than that of a rival bank?—If I had a sum of money, I was entitled to invest it.

4038. You might have invested it elsewhere?—Yes ; where I could have got 4 per cent.

4039. Why should you invest it in a rival bank?—I simply invested it because I thought that it was a good thing to do. The Asiatic Bank was not a rival bank ; it was an exchange bank.

4040. But that does not prevent its being a rival bank?—They should not do other business, or otherwise the Bank of Bombay would stand very unfairly.

Mr. D. Robertson.

24 Nov. 1868.

4041. Clause 29 in the Act is, "No person, being or acting as secretary and treasurer, deputy secretary, head accountant, or head shroff of the Bank of Bombay, or as inspector, agent, manager, accountant, shroff, or any other office, at any branch or agency, shall engage in any other banking or commercial business, either on his own account or as agent for any other person or persons, or act as broker for the sale or purchase of Government securities." Do you still think that what you did was a right or proper thing?—I did not think that I was infringing that clause.

4042. Supposing that there was no Act of the legislature at all, do you think that as a matter of common propriety it was right in you to take shares in a rival institution in Bombay?—With all the experience which I have had, I might not do it now.

4043. To whom did you apply for the Port Canning shares?—I did not apply for them; I got them.

4044. They were sent to you as a bank manager?—Yes, I suppose so.

4045. It was the practice, whenever new companies were started, to send round shares to all the bank managers in Bombay?—No, I do not think so. I do not think that all the bank managers got them. I think that some of them were rather disappointed that they did not get them.

4046. Premchund Roychund says that they ought to have got them, and that that was an arrangement. You were fortunate enough to get them?—I do not know that I was fortunate, but I got them.

4047. If you had sold, you would have been very fortunate at the time.—I got two Port Canning shares, and I have them still. The next are 25 shares in the Alliance Financial Association. I think that those were sent to me; they were, I think, at 40 rupees premium, but I have had to pay up the calls. I got 35 shares in the Financial Association of India and China; 25 of these, I think, I got through the Company, and 10 from Mr. Cowasjee Jehangeer; these I think I sold also at about 40 per cent. premium. I got 30 shares in the Mercantile Credit Financial Company through Mr. Mayhew, a barrister in Bombay, and Mr. Ramsden. I was asked to take 200, and I would not take more than 30.

4048. From whom did you get the Iron Ship Company's shares?—I do not know. I think that it was through some of the native directors.

4049. What native director?—I think that it was Venayek Pandoorung. The next two were United Victoria and Colaba shares; they were sold at 800 rupees a share premium. I got these, I think, through either Mr. Limjee Manockjee or Mr. Cowasjee Manockjee. I got one Asiatic Trading Company's share sent to me from Ritchie, Stewart, and Co.

4050. Was it not allotted to you by Premchund?—Mr. Scott was the promoter of the company, or the principal shareholder. There were a great many people connected with it. Possibly Premchund sent it to me. I got 20 Bank of Surat shares from Premchund. I took his opinion as to whether I should take them up or not. As to the three Iron Ship Company's shares, I applied to the Company for them. I applied to the managers of the Company, Messrs. Fulcher, Cooper, and Co.; they were the secretaries and treasurers; it was early in 1863. I think that those were the chief Companies. The Asiatic Bank shares I got through Mr. Hannay. The Veterinary and Livery Stable Company's shares I hold, and the Omnibus Company's shares, and the 50 London Asiatic and American Company's shares.

4051. Did you ever borrow money from Premchund Roychund?—No; but I find, from the evidence taken in Bombay, that there is an account in Premchund's books, which I should like to see.

4052. Did you ever borrow any money from Premchund?—No.

4053. This is a translation of your account in Roychund Deepchund's books (handing Exhibit Z 2 to the witness).—I can tell you when it was closed, so far as I had anything to do with it.

4054. It shows that in October 1864 the balance against you was 12,529 rupees. In October 1865 it was 75,240 rupees.—I do not know anything about these balances.

4055. If you look at the items, you will see how they arose.—I do not remember the account, because I find that I am stated to have paid in 34,000 rupees, and I never made any payment to Roychund in my life.

4056. What is your explanation of it?—In 1864 I had several of these shares allotted to me; Back Bay shares, in one particular instance; and I thought I should like to have some shares in the Bank of Bombay. I spoke to Premchund on the matter, and told him this. I said that I should like to sell the Back Bay shares, and to buy ten Bank of Bombay shares, so that I might get the increase of capital, and so get the shares to hold as an investment. He said, "Do not sell your Back Bay shares. I have plenty of shares, and I will give them to you at the present price, if you like, and you can take them upon any day you like." I forgot all about it until June 1865. The shares were then very much lower, and I gave him a list of all the shares, and said, "I want you to sell all my shares. I want to get rid of all shares;" which would even then have given me a very good return. I said, with reference to the Bank of Bombay shares, "They are very much down now, and I want to get out of them." They were then at a par, I believe. He said, "The best thing for you to do is to take so many more to make an average." I consented, telling him that immediately the shares got up up to a certain price I would tell him to hand them over. There was no writing, and no acknowledgment in any way. I never got a share in my possession; and in September or October 1865, when the shares were at about 70 rupees a share, I made a calculation, and found that with some money which he, or rather his nephew, who was conducting business for him, and for whom he was responsible, owed me for shares, I should be clear; and I said to him, "These shares must be handed over at such a price, which clears me the amount." He said, "Do not you want to make any money out of them?" I said "No, I want to get rid of them." He said, "Very well, they shall be handed over;" and the account was made up in that way. I got some shares in the Bombay Reclamation Company. It was in September 1865, when the shares were at 7 or 8 per cent. premium, and I considered them at an end.

4057. The point which we are now considering is your account with Roychund Deepchund.—I do not know anything about that account.

4058. Did he sell any shares for you?—Yes; but whether he put them through that account or not I do not know. I never had anything to do with Bank of Bombay shares, except what I tell you. The whole thing was done through Premchund.

4059. Is not that in fact an account of your dealings with Premchund in the books of his father, Roychund Deepchund?—No; I do not know anything about this payment of 34,000 rupees. I never paid him 34,000 rupees.

4060. You have told us that those shares were to be sold by Premchund?—They were to be handed over, and I had nothing whatever to do with them.

4061. Have you any doubt whatever that that document is a statement of the account between you and Premchund in Roychund Deepchund's books?—I am perfectly certain that I never sold ten Bank of Bombay shares. I was rather considering myself as buying them.

4062. It is very extraordinary that a person who can have no object in attacking you should have in his books (which were got with great trouble from a foreign country) these entries, and that they should be all untrue.—I do not say that it is all untrue. I believe that the debit side, which is against me, is pretty correct.

4063. Then the effect of that would be to make you more largely in debt to Roychund Deepchund than he himself states?—Yes.

4064. Then do you believe that Roychund Deepchund, or any other native with brains in his head, would draw up an account, and give you credit for sums which he had never received?—I should think not.

4065. Then if you admit the debits, I think that as men of sense we shall have very little hesitation in admitting the credits?—I have not admitted all the debits. I have told you my version of it.

4066. Just look over the account; you will see that in the Indian year 1921 you only paid Roychund Deepchund 800 rupees, and there is a balance against you of 75,000 rupees.—Yes, I see that.

4067. Are you prepared in the slightest degree to dispute the accuracy of that account?—I am not prepared to admit it at all.

4068. Are you prepared to dispute it?—I should think so. I never paid that amount.

4069. But you have admitted that the debts are right?—I do not recollect exactly.

4070. But you have admitted that?—There is a debit against me of 34,000 rupees, paid to the Asiatic Bank.

4071. Is that the same sum debited and credited?—No; one is on the 22nd of February 1865; it is not the same at all. I have told you what my version of the account is; but I am afraid that I cannot give it to you distinctly. I never looked at it as a debt, or anything of the kind.

4072. How did this account with Roychund Deepchund end?—The shares were given over.

4073. Do you mean to say that this account of Roychund Deepchund refers to that transaction?—Yes.

4074. I want to know the exact date of this transaction?—I cannot say; I never kept a note of it.

4075. Was not it in 1864?—Yes; it was before the capital was increased the second time.

4076. That would be at the end of 1864?—Yes.

4077. Had you any other transactions of this sort with Premchund Roychund?—No, not that I remember.

4078. You had no speculation with him or anybody else?—Yes; I had a speculation once with Mr. Morrison of the Asiatic Bank, in Victoria shares and Elphinstone shares.

4079. What was the date of that speculation?—In 1865; and it resulted in a loss of about 15,000 rupees.

4080. Had you no dealings with Roychund Deepchund?—Nothing, except that.

4081. In the ledger there is an entry, "15 shares of the Asiatic Bank, 8,550 Rs."—I do not remember anything about that.

4082. Here is the cash book: "Debited to the account of Mr. Robertson, Bank of Bombay, 15 shares of the Asiatic Bank." They are debited to your account, and credited to the Asiatic Bank shares account.—I do not remember it.

4083. Did not you enter into any speculation in Asiatic Bank shares?—No; excepting the Asiatic Bank shares which I hold still.

4084. Did not Premchund pay the calls upon your Asiatic Bank shares?—No, I paid them myself; the forty and the twenty.

4085. Can you account for this man having an account of this kind?—Certainly not; it is debited with comparatively large sums, and there is a very large credit which I never got, and there is one which is not there which I should have got.

4086. What do you say to this item: "Ten shares of the Bank of Bombay, 34,795 Rs." ?—I suppose that those are the ten shares which I refer to. I suppose that he bought them. I did not understand that he bought them at all.

4087. In the cash book there are debited, "10 shares of the Bank of Bombay, 34,975 Rs." The ledger says, on 4th October 1864, "Paid for first call for ten new shares in the Bank of Bombay, 3,000 rupees."—I have no doubt that that would be right.

4088. In the cash book there is entered at page 113, "for stamp fee, four rupees one anna."—I do not know what that is.

4089. That would be the stamp upon the transfer?—They were never transferred to my name; there was never a share in the Bank of Bombay in my name, so that there could be no transfer.

4090. "Balance brought forward from old book, 12,529 Rs.;" and in the cash book, on the 11th of October, there is, "Received on your account from the Asiatic Bank, on the deposit of your 10 shares of the Bank of Bombay, 32,000 Rs." He bought these 10 shares of the Bank of Bombay, and deposited them with the Asiatic Bank?—I never understood that they were deposited in any way.

4091. He deposited your 10 shares with the Asiatic Bank, and raised that money?—I never heard of it until now.

4092. Do you not think that it is a very likely transaction?—It is very likely.

4093. Do you remember this item: "Cash book, 15th October, 2,000 rupees"?—No.

4094. Then follows, "Cash book, page 4, 17th November 1864, paid for second call on 10 shares of the Bank of Bombay, 3,000 rupees."—Yes; the calls would be paid as they fell due.

4095. Roychund Deepchund paid those calls for you?—I suppose that that is right enough.

4096. Cash book, page 10, 4th January 1865, "Paid for third call on 10 shares in Bank of Bombay, 4,026 rupees."—Yes.

4097. "Cash book, page 14, 22nd February 1865, paid to the Asiatic Bank 34,000 rupees."—I never had any occasion to pay to the Asiatic Bank, except on my own account. It is the first that I have heard of it.

4098. "Cash book, page 24, 2nd July 1865, paid for the purchase of eight shares of the Bank of Bombay 10,400 rupees." Did not you buy eight more?—I bought 15 more, but it was much earlier than July 1865.

4099. They were bought on the 2nd July 1865?—I cannot dispute that.

4100. "Cash book, 25th July 1865, paid for the purchase of five shares of the Bank of Bombay, 6,500 rupees."—That makes thirteen.

4101. You cannot dispute that?—No; I do not know what the latter is.

4102. "Cash book, page 26, for call on seven new shares of the Asiatic Bank, 175 rupees."—I do not know about that. I paid my own calls.

4103. Had you no new shares in the Asiatic Bank?—Yes, I had 40, and I paid the calls myself. I had 40 new shares and 20 old.

4104. He had bought 15 shares on the 8th of September 1864, which you will see if you refer to his account.—So he says. I would not have had forty more if I had had those.

4105. "Cash book, page 39, for interest, 5,409 r. 10 a. 6 p." That is what he has been out of pocket by you. Those are the items in those two accounts, some of which you appear to admit?—Certainly, I admit some of them.

4106. And considering all the circumstances of the case, I must say that I do not feel very much doubt about the others, although they may have escaped your recollection.—If I knew of them I should not deny them. I have admitted every thing which I know.

4107. Do you recollect Roychund Deepchund having a cash credit account with the Bank of Bombay?—Yes; he had several.

4108. But he had one in existence on the 12th of July 1865?—I think that he had.

4109. Had not Roychund Deepchund deposited Government securities to secure that cash credit?—I do not know which one you refer to; there was a personal one; there was one upon Government paper, and one personal. I remember that very well; it was not so much as a lac, I think.

4110. On the day of which I speak the cash credit was 51,000 rupees; one cash credit was for a lac, and the other was 95,000 rupees. I ask you whether he, or Premchund, did not come to you on the 12th July 1865, and ask you to give up the Government securities deposited to secure that loan?—I believe that one of them did.

Mr. D. Robertson.

24 Nov. 1868.

4111. Cannot you recollect which it was?—No; I should think that it would be Roychund himself. He could not speak English very well, and he would come with one of the clerks.

4112. What was the state of his account at that time, on the 12th of July 1865? Did not he then owe the bank 51,953 rupees?—I do not remember the sum, but that is likely to be right.

4113. What did you do upon that application being made to you to give up his securities?—I believe that I granted it.

4114. Whom did you send with a message to Mr. De Ga to give up his Government securities?—I do not remember.

4115. Did not you send Cashinath?—It is very likely; he would most probably come with Roychund.

4116. We have examined both Mr. De Ga and Cashinath. Did Mr. De Ga as soon as he had that order send you up that memorandum? (Handing Exhibit A 32 to the witness.)—Yes.

4117. "Roychund has not paid off his cash credit account. Debtor balance 51,953 rs. 5 a. 9 p. Cashinath wants me to give up his Government notes as stands for security. J. M. De Ga, accountant?"—Yes.

4118. This is in your handwriting, "Roychund is to pay off the loan; give up the notes. D. R."?—Yes.

4119. How can you explain giving up the securities of the bank without payment of that loan?—So far as I remember, what was said to me was that he had sold the paper, and was to get the money in a day or two, and that he would then pay the loan. He was then in perfectly good credit, and I and other people supposed him to be wealthy. The notes were given up according to my order, which I admit. The loan was not paid off, but I did not know of it until a long time afterwards.

4120. Was not it your duty to obtain the money?—It was certainly my duty to have seen to it, but I certainly should have expected that Mr. De Ga would have told me that it was not paid off.

4121. But he did tell you. He told you so at that time, and in the face of that you parted with the securities?—Certainly, that was my order.

4122. How can you defend such an act?—Because I believe that if we had applied for the money shortly afterwards we should have got it.

4123. Were you in a proper position to protect the bank against the operations of Roychund Deepchund and Premchund Roychund?—Certainly, I did not consider that I was in the least indebted to them.

4124. After speculating with them?—If you call it speculation, I admit it.

4125. If they had reported either of those two speculations to the directors, would you not have lost your place?—I did not think so.

4126. This is just an instance of the consequence of officials putting themselves into this position. Roychund makes a most unheard-of application, that his securities shall be given up, when he has 51,000 rupees outstanding, and it is immediately granted. I have no hesitation in saying that you are personally answerable for that sum.—All that I did was in perfect good faith.

4127. You told Premchund Roychuud in September and October 1865 to realize your Bank of Bombay shares in this transaction on the shares rising?—Yes.

4128. Why did not you exercise the same judgment about the shares held by the bank?—I wanted to get rid of this, and to have nothing whatever to do with Premchund. I kept my own shares.

4129. Do you recollect an application from Jaivirilall Umiashunker about that time, begging you to sell his shares?—No; I remember the man coming, and shedding tears because I spoke of realizing his securities.

4130. Jaivirilall Umiashunker says: "After September 1865 a reaction in the value of shares took place. Asiatic Bank shares went up to 60 per cent. premium, and I urged the secretary to sell and pay off the debt. It would have realized the bank debt, and left me a surplus. Mr. Robertson expected a further rise, and he did not realize the securities."—I do not think that you can believe that.

4131. He added, "I made subsequent payments, and reduced the loan of 2,10,000 rupees to 1,45,290 rupees. I protested against the usurious rate of interest, and begged for a reduction to a moderate rate." That was his evidence.—Yes; but do you think that I should have objected to his selling his shares?

4132. I do not know. If persons will put themselves into such a position as you did, they must expect to have their motives canvassed and doubted?—If you take that ground, I need not say anything more.

4133. You expose yourself to these remarks by dealing in this way. How did your account stand between you and Roychund Deepchund when you left India; had you any explanation with him?—No; it was closed in 1865.

4134. We sent for that account, and we were told that it had been ended in 1865, and therefore we did not get the books for 1866.—I think that Premchund will admit that himself. Unfortunately for me, I did not put anything in writing, or ask him to do it either, or it could have been produced to show that I did what was fair.

4135. I wish to ask you some questions upon another subject. Who was responsible for refusing the offer made by Venayek Pandoorung for a compromise?—The directors; it came before the directors.

4136. Who advised the refusal of Venayek Pandoorung's offer?—Some of the mercantile directors, who thought that he could pay a great deal more than he offered.

4137. Then there is the case of the Alliance Financial Association; can you tell us who refused their offers?—The directors generally; they thought that they could get a great deal more. They made several offers. At one time they offered us three lacs in cash; they paid us two lacs in cash; the arrangement fell through.

4138. They did pay two lacs?—Yes; they promised to pay three lacs, and there was some other arrangement with reference to further security, and then they were to be released; they did not carry out the arrangement further than paying the two lacs, and then it came to an end.

4139. This is what Mr. Brown says was the transaction. He was asked, "Did you at any time make any inquiry as to the large loans by the bank to the Alliance Financial Association?" He replied, "We were very anxious about it at an early date, and we sued, and got judgment against the directors and the company. The result was, that we seized every scrap of property belonging to the company; its shares which appear as security for the debt, and its books, and also a Hindoo temple belonging to a native director. I remember their offer of compromise, when the native directors of the association were in hiding, after the property was attached. They wrote a letter to us. It is on the minutes of the 3rd of April 1866. (President reads the letter.) The three native directors, Ghellabhoy Pudumsey, Hurbum Nursey, and Sewjee Welljee, were men of position in the Wania caste. The caste considered that a great indignity, by warrants being out against their head men, and by the proceedings against the temple, and the directors of the bank thought better terms would be offered. On the 12th June 1866 further terms were offered. I thought them very good." Is that your recollection of Mr. Brown's part in the transaction?—No; I do not remember his saying that, but Mr. Brown had better means of knowing the men than any other person there, and also his broker, Kessowjee Naik, who was of their caste.

Mr. D. Robertson.

4140. Mr. Brown continued, "The board did not accede to them. Kessowjee Naik and another member of the caste came very frequently to my office to discuss the terms. I went with them to Mr. Robertson on several occasions, and took some trouble about it. Kessowjee came forward with an ultimatum, and my head clerk wrote it out, and I corrected it, and it was that letter which went before the board. I therefore at the board stated that I should not vote on the proposal. Mr. A. Stewart and Mr. Lidderdale thought the board would get better terms, and the Government directors followed suit." Is that correct?—I think so.

4141. The evidence continues thus: "Mr. A. Stewart thought that the whole debt would be recovered. Hurbum Nursey was hiding in a bungalow of Tricum Velljee, and an official of the Bank of Bombay lived near that house, and saw him, and tried to arrest him, and Hurbum Nursey eluded him, and got away to Damaun, and the other native directors got away also, and all hope of getting better terms was lost."—I think that that is correct.

4142. Are you quite sure that you got the two lacs which they offered you?—I am certain of it; they offered three lacs; two to be paid down, and the other to be paid in a certain time, and it is upon the minute; but we only got two lacs in cash, and the arrangement fell through.

MAJOR MCLEOD INNES.

Secretary.

F. D. CHAUNTRELL, ESQ.

Mr. D. Robertson.

26 Nov. 1868.

DONALD ROBERTSON further examined.

4143. (President.) I have been again looking over your account with Roychund Deepchund, and I wish to ask you a few more questions about it. You have admitted almost all the items, but there are several items which you did not admit, and I think that there is a very intelligible explanation of it. You told Premchund to buy ten shares of the Bank of Bombay?—Yes.

4144. You did not pay for them?—No.

4145. The following item appears on the credit side: "11th October 1864. Received on your account from the Asiatic Bank, on the deposit of your ten shares of the Bank of Bombay, 32,000 rupees."—Yes.

4146. You may have known nothing at all about that?—No, I did not.

4147. But is it not probable, and have you any doubt, that Roychund Deepchund did not like to be out of pocket, and that he raised money upon those ten Bank of Bombay shares?—He might have done so, but I did not know that the shares were bought.

4148. That does not discredit the account in any way?—No.

4149. He borrowed that money for three months; then at the end of the three months, on the 22nd of February, this item appears, "paid to the Asiatic Bank 34,000 rupees."—That is perfectly possible.

4150. If it had not been so, you would, in the Indian year 1920, have been debited with the cost of those ten Bank of Bombay shares, which you were not?—I never thought that there was any credit or debit in the matter.

4151. I have no doubt whatever that that is the explanation of the transaction, namely, that you told them to buy the shares, and that they did not wish to be out of the purchase money.—I did not wish them to buy them; I thought that they had plenty of shares themselves.

4152. I wish to ask you a few questions upon your account with the Bank of Bombay. You first overdrew your account with the Bank of Bombay on the 4th of July 1864, for two days only?—How much was it?

4153. It was only a small sum?—It is very likely; but I distinctly avoided that.

4154. Look at this copy of your account from the bank ledger (Exhibit marked Z 3). On the 29th of July 1864 you received rupees 24,500?—Yes.

4155. Have you any explanation to give of that item?—Yes, I know what that is, at least I am almost certain. Our agent at Ahmedabad had had a Back Bay share allotted to him. I think that that must have been the case, and it was at 19,000 rupees premium that I sold it; it is debited to my account afterwards; I think that I sold it at 19,000 rupees premium.

4156. On August the 5th, 1864, you paid the Bombay Joint Stock Corporation 32,000 rupees?—I think that that is Mr. Wilson's deposit; he was agent of the bank at Ahmedabad. I sold the share which he sent to me as a personal friend. There would be a debit to my account of the whole amount, and you will see from the books that it would be credited in the Ahmedabad books on that day.

4157. (Major Innes.) Both of them are transfer accounts with Ahmedabad?—The 32,000 rupees.

4158. And the former item?—I think so; I am almost certain of it.

4159. (President.) On the 16th of August 1864 you sold 50 shares in the China Bank?—Yes. I do not know whose those were, I think that they were Mr. Wilson's too. I never had a share in the China Bank.

4160. On October 17th you received 32,224 rupees and 7 annas?—I suppose that that was when I sold one of my Back Bay shares, which I had had allotted to me; it must have been that. No, it cannot be that either, because I paid that amount into the Asiatic Bank. These must be all Mr. Wilson's transactions.

4161. Have you any account with Mr. Wilson?—No; you will find that there is a debit of 29,000 rupees on the 21st transferred to the Ahmedabad Branch. All these transactions must have been Mr. Wilson's; I had nobody else's.

4162. On the 11th November 1864 you again overdrew your account and took a loan of 400 rupees to cover the overdrawing, is not that so?—It seems so.

4163. On 19th November there are Rs. 3,000 paid and received, what was that transaction?—I do not remember.

4164. The next item credited is: "25th November 1864. By cheque of Roychund, Rupees

Mr. D. Robertson.
20 Nov. 1868.

11,750?"—That must have been for the share in the Mazagon Company.

4165. Which you sold to Premchund himself at 8,750 rupees premium?—Yes.

4166. On the 27th of December you paid a call on two Frere Reclamation shares of 8,000 rupees?—Yes.

4167. And on that occasion you overdrew the account to the extent of 3,107 R. 9 A. 9 P.?—It is very likely, but I do not remember these overdrawings at all. I told the ledger keeper never to allow me to overdraw my account.

4168. My impression upon looking at the account is that he not only allowed you to overdraw, but that he "fudged" it (as it is called), and did not show that it was overdrawn.—He never said so to me; I distinctly told him never to allow me to overdraw a rupee.

4169. Then on the 28th of December 1864 you put the account straight again by a transfer of rupees 4,000 from the Asiatic Bank?—Yes, I suppose so.

4170. On February the 6th, 1865, your account was again slightly overdrawn; and on the 9th it was overdrawn to the extent of 3,352 rupees, is not that so?—I do not remember; I had no occasion to overdraw at that time.

4171. On the same day you put the account in funds again by transferring to your credit from J. Blair's account 7,000 rupees?—Yes, the ledger keeper debited a cheque of Mr. Blair's to my account instead of to Mr. Blair's. I operated upon Mr. Blair's account. There were two cheques of Mr. Blair's debited to my account; that was by mistake. I remember this instance very well. I found that he had debited those cheques of Mr. Blair's to my account instead of to Mr. Blair's.

4172. On the 21st of March 1865 you drew out 2,500 rupees and the account became again overdrawn?—The ledger keeper never told me that it was overdrawn.

4173. Did it not continue overdrawn from the 21st of March till 8th April 1865?—No, I am certain that it did not.

4174. On April the 8th 4,600 rupees were paid in, but you overdrew the account on the same day, Rs. 4,400 being taken out, and on the 13th of April there was an overdraft of more than 4,000 rupees?—I made it a special rule never to overdraw my account, I told the ledger keeper so distinctly.

4175. On the 13th of April you paid in two sums of Rs. 6,800?—I know what these two sums were, they were the proceeds of the two Victoria shares which I sold; there was 6,000 rupees paid up, and they were sold at 800 rupees premium.

4176. Again, on the 18th of May your account was overdrawn and continued overdrawn till the 1st of June?—I do not remember it.

4177. On the 1st of June it was put straight again. On the 16th of June it was again overdrawn till the 30th of June?—It should not have been, that is all that I can say, because I had no occasion to overdraw it.

4178. Then comes an item "July 4th, 1865, By cheque of J. Blair, 971 r. 2 a. 8 p.", what is that for?—That was a settlement of the House Account, we were both living at the Bank together; that account had been running on for some years, three years I think. It was my own fault, it was not his, that we had not had a settlement.

4179. On March 27th 1866 this item appears, "Received rupees 15,000;" do you remember that item?—I think that that was commission which I got as trustee of Byramjee Hormusjee Cama's estate; the directors gave it to me. I offered it to the Board.

4180. Did they authorize you to become a trustee of that estate?—Yes.

4181. Did they know that you would receive commission upon it?—Yes, I offered them the commission, but as the work was chiefly done in the morning at five o'clock they asked me to accept it.

4182. Then I find on October 6th, "By Burjorjee Rustomjee 1,610 rupees, October 9th, ditto 130 rupees," and December 24th, 4,520 rupees from Burjorjee Rustomjee?—That must have been for some shares I suppose which I had sold; he was a broker. That is not the same man as the Burjorjee Rustomjee who has been before alluded to.

4183. Look at this copy of your Asiatic Bank account (Exhibit Z 4.); was not that account begun on the 15th December 1864 with a cash payment to your credit of 33,750 rupees?—Yes; that was from the sale of Back Bay shares.

4184. That account became overdrawn on the 25th of February 1865, did it not?—It was overdrawn. I forget the date.

4185. The name of Burjorjee Rustomjee continually appears through that account?—Yes.

4186. That is not the cabinet maker?—No; it is a broker.

4187. It is quite clear that you must have been buying and selling shares through this broker to a considerable amount?—Yes. I told you the other day that I had an interest in some shares with Mr. Morrison, and I employed Burjorjee Rustomjee.

4188. And he was your broker in buying and selling shares?—Yes.

4189. You owed to the Asiatic Bank when it stopped 23,157 rupees?—Something like that, I think; that is the balance brought down here; it has been settled since.

4190. The other day, when I was examining you upon the tabular statement at page 96 of the Blue Book, you said that you had no doubt on the 23d of November 1866 that the overdraft of three lakhs in item No. 10 would be paid in full. I find that you were right in one respect, namely, than an opinion was taken as to the validity of Mr. Tracey's so-called guarantee after the 23d of November 1866. I ask you again, were you satisfied on the 23d of November 1866 that that overdraft would be paid in full?—I think so; I had no hesitation upon it.

4191. Had you not been called to account before that by the Board?—Yes, at a previous time; I think in May.

4192. That is the guarantee, is it not? (handing Exhibit A 98. to the witness.)—Yes.

4193. I ask you, whether you, as a man of business, could imagine that this unstamped letter written by Mr. Tracey, not on behalf of his firm, but signed simply "R. L. Tracey," was a guarantee binding Ritchie, Stewart, and Company. It is as follows:—"My dear Robertson, With reference to Premchund's overdraft for three lakhs, I guarantee the repayment of the amount before the end of the month. Yours sincerely, R. L. Tracey." As a man of business, could you for one moment suppose that that was a guarantee binding Ritchie, Stewart, and Company?—I can only refer you to what I wrote to the directors. I believe that Mr. Tracey has left an affidavit which exonerates me in that respect.

4194. Mr. Tracey's affidavit cannot be received.—I hope that you will receive it, as far as I am concerned.

4195. Anything which you have to state on oath we shall receive, but we cannot receive Mr. Tracey's affidavit.—I can only adhere to my statement.

4196. Is this the explanation which you wrote to the directors?—Yes; that was when I was asked to write it (Exhibit marked A 145). I had given the explanation verbally before that to the directors.

4197. Did not you write this letter to Mr. Tracey on the 22d May 1866? (Exhibit R 14.)—Yes; this is my handwriting.

4198. It runs thus:—"My dear Tracey, The Board had under consideration to-day the different advances made to Premchund, and with reference to the over-draft of three lakhs which is guaranteed by you, I have been instructed to inform you that it is the wish of the Board that it should be paid up, or covered by satisfactory convertible security, and as Premchund has done neither, I am requested to ask you for payment, or good collateral security. As Premchund has not furnished the security he promised, when it was arranged that a loan of 25 lakhs would be given him, I regret that the three lakhs cannot be included in that loan."—Yes.

4199. Do you mean to say that on the 22d of May 1866 you thought that Ritchie, Stewart, and Company were bound by a guarantee to the bank or to the directors of it?—I certainly thought so.

4200. Then why did you apply to Mr. Tracey for payment?—He was the only partner in the firm then in Bombay.

4201. Was not the credit of Ritchie, Stewart, and Company at that time perfectly unimpeached?—Yes.

4202. Then why on the 22d of May 1866 should you write to Mr. Tracey that you wanted collateral security, and press him for payment?—Because he gave me the letter.

4203. But if you thought that that letter bound Ritchie, Stewart, and Company, why were you so anxious to get further security?—I was told by the directors to do so.

4204. Why were the directors anxious to get further security?—I do not know; they did not want to press Ritchie, Stewart, and Company.

4205. Were not they anxious because they thought it a bad security?—I do not think so.

4206. You say, "The Board had under consideration to-day the different advances made to Premchund, and with reference to the overdraft of three lakhs which is guaranteed by you," why did not you say guaranteed by your firm?—He understood it perfectly well.

4207. Why did not you put it "by your firm"?—I ought to have put it so.

4208. You say, "I have been instructed to inform you that it is the wish of the Board that it should be paid up, or covered by satisfactory convertible security, and as Premchund has done neither, I am requested to ask you for payment" not "Ritchie, Stewart, and Company"?—It certainly reads in that way, but Mr. Tracey was perfectly conversant with the facts of the whole case; and I am very sorry that you cannot examine him, because I am sure that he would admit it; and he did deposit security, or rather Premchund did, which I intimated to the Board the next week, and they were satisfied with it. It was a very large amount; it turned out very unfortunate.

4209. Was any list of outstandings ever laid before the directors previously to July 1865?—No; at the end of the half year the half-yearly accounts were laid before them. A dividend of 16 per cent. was declared, for instance, at the beginning of 1865, and before that dividend was declared there was a balance sheet, and a list of loans and credits and of all outstandings.

4210. Are you prepared to contradict Mr. Brown, who says that he never saw any list of the outstandings till July 1865?—I should think that he did not because he did not come in till March or April.

4211. I will now turn to another subject. Do you remember the letter to the Government dated 9th November 1865, about which I examined you, and in which the bank said that they had "never advanced money directly on shares"?—Yes; I remember the letter.

4212. Did not you say that that letter was written by Mr. Hannay?—I think that it was drafted by Mr. Hannay, and then was submitted to the whole board.

4213. In whose handwriting is that (handing to the witness Exhibit marked A 146.)?—That is mine.

4214. Is not that the draft letter?—Yes; but supposing that I wrote it, Mr. Hannay would be with me. Very likely I copied Mr. Hannay's draft; I do not know.

4215. Are not those Mr. Hannay's letters (handing to the witness Exhibits A 147, A 148, and A 149)?—Yes.

4216. One of them is a letter written on the 13th of August 1865, some time before the letter of November 1865, and another is written on the 22nd of April 1865. We will take first the one of 22nd April; it is as follows: "My dear Robertson. The policy of the bank at present is to support its constituents. I mean individuals. I would lend to no one on shares." I will read the letter of his of the 13th of August 1865. "My dear Robertson. If money continues to increase upon us we should do something with it, else we won't be able to pay anything like a dividend at the end of the year. Now, were men like Candass Narrondass or Sir Jamsetjee in former times wanting a loan of five lacs, we would have given it them on personal security, and been right. Should these men want such a loan this month, and agree to deposit with you say Back Bay shares for the equivalent at about par, I would grant the loan for three months at once. My opinion is that we should keep as much of our money employed as we can, and taking our present cash and liabilities as a standard, I think we have no need for more than 120 lacs in cash." Is it not clear from those two letters that your then chairman knew that you were advancing on shares; he does not attempt to disguise it?—I see that he says so.

4217. When you drafted that letter with him, did you draw his attention to the fact that he had written such letters?—No; I do not say that it was his doing. I only speak to the best of my recollection, because he generally assisted me in these letters to the government. I do not remember drafting that letter.

4218. Will you look at another letter of Mr. Hannay's on the 4th of September 1865. Is that in his handwriting (handing to the witness Exhibit A 149)?—Yes, that is Mr. Hannay's writing.

4219. I believe that you received a communication from Sir Charles Wood, proposing an alteration in the Charter as to advancing on shares?—Yes; we should receive it from the Government of Bombay.

4220. Is that endorsement in Mr. Hannay's handwriting? (handing Exhibit A 150 to the witness.)—Yes.

4221. He wrote upon the Secretary of State's proposal—"We must consider this most tyrannical communication on Thursday next. R. H." Then follow the initials "F. L. L." written by Mr. Lushington?—Yes; he was one of the directors, and "C. M." stands for Cowasjee Manockjee.

4222. We will now turn to Premchund's loan of 25 lacs.—Before you begin upon that, I should like to say that that case is going on, and that two Commissioners are now sitting in London taking evidence, and the case is to be heard in Bombay.

4223. I do not know how the truth can do anybody any injury.—I have been attending the Commissioners, and attending the bank's solicitors here.

4224. Have they examined you again?—No, they have not examined me, but I have been assisting them; I may be examined.

4225. You have been examined de bene esse in Bombay on that subject?—Yes, but I may be examined again.

4226. I believe that on the 26th of April 1865 Mr. MacCulloch called upon you?—Yes.

4227. What passed at that interview?—He told me that Premchund Roychund was in immediate want of a large sum of money, and he said that unless he got it he would have to stop payment.

4228. What Mr. MacCulloch was that?—Mr. H. B. MacCulloch, of the firm of MacCulloch, John, and Company.

4229. Is he in England now?—Yes.

4230. What did you do upon the receipt of that information?—I either went to Mr. Lidderdale, who was chairman then, or he came to the bank, and asked me to see the directors, and to call a special meeting on that afternoon.

4231. Did you go to Premchund?—No.

4232. You relied entirely upon the statement of Mr. MacCulloch?—Yes; he showed me the figures, what money he wanted on that day.

4233. Have you kept that paper?—I think that it is in the High Court of Bombay; it was put in as part of our case, I think.

Mr. D. Robertson.

26 Nov. 1868.

4234. Did you ascertain what the statement of his account with the Bank of Bombay at that moment was?—I forget; it is very likely that I should in order to see what he owed us.

4235. What was the result of your inquiry?—I forget; there were so many lacs of hoondies up country, and that over-draft.

4236. There was first of all an over-draft commencing in April 1865, that was of three lacs?—Yes.

4237. Did you ascertain what the state of his overdrawn account was at that moment?—I should think so, but I do not remember exactly.

4238. On that very day, the 25th of April, the over-draft amounted to five lacs; we have that from the books.—It should not have stood at more than three lacs.

4239. Did you remember that he owed you a fixed loan of five lacs?—Yes.

4240. Did you know that he was jointly liable with Mayhabhoy Premabhoy for four and a half lacs?—Yes.

4241. He had paid one lac shortly before in March, and that debt was therefore reduced to three and a half lacs?—Yes.

4242. Did you know that he had taken the responsibility upon himself of two lacs borrowed in the name of Khuttow Khemjee?—I did not know that.

4243. In point of fact he was then indebted to the bank 19,50,000 rupees, of which 17,50,000 rupees were known to you?—Yes, and to the directors as well.

4244. Had you not also been purchasing bills of his up country?—Yes, hoondies; our agents had been doing so.

4245. To a considerable amount more?—Yes, a very considerable amount more; they were at eight days.

4246. Had you any security for any of these advances at that time except that guarantee of Mr. Tracey for the overdrawn account?—Yes, we had some Back Bay shares against Mayhabhoy Premabhoy's debt; I am almost certain that we had 23 Back Bay shares.

4247. That arose out of the debt of the Imperial Banking and Trading Company?—Yes.

4248. There were two lacs taken by a nephew, and another taken by the Muccadum of the chairman of the Company?—Yes.

4249. They were transferred to Premchund?—Yes.

4250. There were securities deposited for the debt of the Muccadum, but they were withdrawn of course when they were discharged?—No; we kept the shares.

4251. You could not keep the shares of those men?—I am certain that we did.

4252. The securities were deposited on the 19th of December 1865 by the original borrowers?—I know that they were not given up, because we had them until the last moment.

4253. You appear to be confident about that?—I am certain of it.

4254. At all events there were 19,50,000 rupees due by Premchund, and there were some Back Bay shares as a security for 3,50,000 rupees of that amount?—Yes.

4255. No security was given for the rest?—There were Back Bay shares.

4256. How many?—There were 80 altogether, and they were divided. I do not remember whether the claim on Cursetjee Furdoonjee came in or not, it must have been just about that time.

4257. What was the amount of the hoondies purchased up country?—I do not remember now.

4258. Was it eight lacs?—I do not think that they were as much as that, possibly about six lacs.

4259. You sent up eight lacs?—That was afterwards.

4260. Then add the six lacs to the 19,50,000 rupees, and we understand the exact position at that meeting. Who were present at that meeting of the 26th of April 1866?—There were several of our directors. I see that there were present Mr. Lidderdale, Mr. C. E. Chapman, Mr. Norman, Mr. Brown, Mr. Alexander Stewart, and Mr. Tracey; there were also present by invitation Mr. Moir of the Oriental Bank, Mr. Campbell of the Mercantile Bank, Mr. Morrison of the Asiatic Bank, and Mr. Thomson of the Hindustan Bank.

4261. Why were those managers summoned?—The directors thought that it would be as well, as Premchund was doing such a large business, that they should be consulted, and take part in any arrangement which might be come to.

4262. Was Mr. Kelly, the bank's solicitor, present?—No.

4263. Nor Premchund?—Nor Premchund.

4264. What passed at that meeting?—Reads from the minute "After consultation for some time it was resolved to adjourn the meeting until next morning, and they were invited by Mr. Lidderdale to meet at his bungalow at 7 o'clock a.m."

4265. That tells us nothing; what passed at the meeting?—I forget exactly what passed, I think that they talked about the great necessity of supporting Premchund on account of Bombay.

4266. What was the necessity?—They thought that he was largely connected with almost the whole of the mercantile business of the place, and that there might be a greater crisis if he were allowed to fail than we had ever seen in Bombay.

4267. For what purpose was the meeting adjourned?—To get particulars, I think, of his pressing liabilities, and of the securities which he could give.

4268. Did you tell the directors at that meeting how much was outstanding against Premchund?—I should think that I did, but I forget.

4269. It is a very important question; we have the evidence of the directors that you never did tell them?—I do not remember that I did, but I should think that they would ask me.

4270. Did any of them ask you?—I do not remember, but I should think so, because they knew perfectly well that only about two months before they had been going over the list, and they knew what was outstanding, they knew all about these loans.

4271. Was there any discussion?—I think so.

4272. Was there any difference of opinion?—I think not. I think that they all thought it was desirable to support Premchund if necessary.

4273. Then was not there some other reason why you adjourned, besides that?—I think that they wanted to invite some of the other bank managers.

4274. Was there no question as to security?—I should think so, there would certainly be that.

4275. They also wished to see what security could be given?—Yes.

4276. Why was the meeting adjourned to Mr. Lidderdale's bungalow?—Because they wanted it to be kept as private as possible that Premchund wanted assistance.

4277. Did not you go to the meeting of the 27th April in the same carriage as Mr. Tracey?—No; I lived in the Fort, Mr. Tracey was living within fifty yards of Mr. Lidderdale's house.

4278. How was it that you had a conversation in the carriage with him?—It was not in the carriage; we drove and met Mr. Tracey at his own gate, several of us together.

4279. And then you had a conversation with Mr. Tracey?—Yes.

4280. What was that conversation about?—About the overdraft.

4281. What passed between you?—I asked, to the best of my recollection, whether, if a loan was granted, he wished the amount of the overdraft to be taken out of it, and I think that he said he did not; that there was a large remittance of money coming from Dhollera on behalf of Premchund to his firm, which would be received in a few days, and that it would be paid out of that.

4282. Are you quite sure that he said that he did not wish it?—To the best of my recollection he did not wish it to be deducted.

4283. That is hardly consistent with your letter of the 22d of May 1866, in which you say, "as Premchund has not furnished the security he promised when it was arranged that a loan of 25 lacs would be given him, I regret that the three lacs cannot be included in that loan."—It must have been some after conversation that that referred to.

4284. Then you say that he did not wish it?—No; to the best of my recollection he did not; that is what he said.

4285. Who were present at this second meeting on the 27th of April 1866?—Mr. Lidderdale, Mr. C. E. Chapman, Mr. Norman, Mr. Brown, Mr. Alexander Stewart, and Mr. Tracey; and by invitation, Mr. Moir of the Oriental Bank, Mr. Morrison of the Asiatic Bank, Mr. A. Thomson of the Hindustan Bank, Mr. J. Beattie of the Commercial Bank, Mr. Campbell of the Mercantile Bank, and Mr. Otto Muller of the Comptoir d'Escompte, and Mr. Kelly.

4286. Where did Mr. Kelly sit?—He sat, I think, next to Mr. Lidderdale.

4287. Had he pens and ink before him?—Yes; the table was covered.

4288. Where did you sit?—I did not sit at all.

4289. Where was Premchund?—Outside in the porch.

4290. Tell us what passed at that meeting?—Mr. Lidderdale repeated what he had said on the previous evening, and what had been done, and then there was a general conversation. Mr. Lidderdale had then a list of the securities; a list was eventually got, and they went into the whole matter.

4291. Did not they talk first about the difficulties, whether they were temporary or not?—I think that they did, and that they were supposed to be temporary.

4292. Who informed the board of that fact as to whether the difficulties were temporary or not?—I do not remember.

4293. Did not Mr. Tracey go backwards and forwards to Premchund?—Yes, occasionally; it was very likely to be Mr. Tracey.

4294. And did not you also go backwards and forwards?—Yes.

4295. You, together with Mr. Tracey, were the medium of communication between Premchund and the directors?—Yes.

4296. What did Premchund say to you about his difficulties?—He said to me that he was certain that he would be all right within three months.

4297. What did Mr. Tracey tell the directors?—I do not remember.

4298. Did not he tell them that Premchund had a large sum to receive on the settling day very shortly, which would relieve him from all difficulties?—I suppose that he referred to the Guzerat money.

4299. Did he say so or not?—I do not remember.

4300. Was there any discussion upon the point as to whether the difficulties were merely temporary, or not?—I think that there was; and that it was the general opinion that they were temporary.

4301. Did the Board of Directors satisfy themselves as to the state of Premchund's affairs?—A statement was put before them, and I think that they were satisfied.

4302. There was a little sheet of note paper scribbled over with a pencil?—No, it was in ink. I saw it. There was something in pencil, but it was not properly his statement.

4303. Did they satisfy themselves as to the state of his affairs?—They seemed to be satisfied with it.

4304. How did they verify that memorandum?—There was no verification of it.

4305. Was Premchund interrogated as to the statements in it?—Very likely. I asked him whether it was a statement of all his liabilities, he said that this was a correct statement of what was due, and the securities given to the different banks.

4306. There was no verification whatever of this statement of Premchund's?—No.

4307. Did the board satisfy themselves in any way that if they advanced this 25 lacs it would save him? They seemed to be satisfied that it would save him.

4308. On what grounds where they satisfied?—They accepted his statement as correct as to his pressing liabilities.

4309. Did they call him in and question him about it?—No; they took the statement which he sent in.

4310. I suppose that they must have relied upon the security?—I suppose so. At that meeting I think that it was the general belief that he would be able to redeem the securities, and that there would be no occasion at all for the securities.

4311. What security did he offer?—He offered certain real property.

4312. And jewels?—And jewels. This minute does not give the details of the property.

4313. We will take the land first. What did Premchund state his landed property to be worth?—I think from 18 to 20 lacs. He put in the pencil memorandum to which you refer, showing what he had paid for it, and what he had been offered.

4314. Did not he offer twelve properties as security?—Yes, and on that pencil memorandum he stated what he had been offered for several of the properties.

4315. Did you ask him how he became possessed of that land, whether he bought it at auction, or by private contract?—No; I did not ask him how he had got it.

4316. What did he say that the value of the landed property was?—I cannot state exactly, but I think from 18 to 20 lacs.

4317. Did he not say 23 lacs?—I do not know.

4318. Looking at his books the landed property seems to have cost him, taking over a great deal of it in settlement of accounts, 18,40,185 rupees. How did you verify his statement?—The directors looked at the names of the different properties, and they seemed to be conversant with them, and to know them very well, and Mr. Norman, the collector of Bombay, was present, who also knew them.

4319. What did he estimate them at?—I forget, but they cut down Premchund's valuation.

4320. Did not he estimate the land at 14 lacs?—I forget.

4321. He has sworn so. He says, "I think Premchund's valuation was as far as I remember 23 lacs. That is what he said it was worth, but I did not think it was worth more than about 14 lacs, and I did not at the time make any calculations upon paper."—Very likely.

4322. He has since corrected that valuation, and says that he thinks that even then he ought to have valued it at 12,71,000 rupees.—He may have said so in his evidence. I never heard him say so.

4323. Are you aware that the land has been sold for 5,22,000 rupees?—It was not all sold before I left, but very nearly all.

4324. It has been all sold except a small portion of property; are you aware why that was not sold?—No.

4325. Are you not aware that the title deeds were lost in the Bank of Bombay?—No, all the title deeds went to Mr. Kelly's office immediately they were received, and they would not be at the bank. In fact I know that several were lost there, and were not found for some months, and the mortgage which was made out did not contain all the properties.

4326. Was Mr. Kelly, the solicitor, asked at all about the legality of taking land as a security for this advance of 25 lacs of rupees?—Yes, some of the bank managers, I think, said that there might be an objection on that score.

4327. What did Mr. Kelly say?—He said that he thought that it might be got over.

Mr. D. Robertson.

26 Nov. 1868.

4328. Did he say how?—No; he was the solicitor and it was referred to him.

4329. And they were satisfied with that statement of Mr. Kelly?—Yes; they were apparently satisfied.

4330. Did anybody refer to the words of the Bank Act expressly prohibiting an advance on land?—I do not remember whether anybody did or not, but I think that it was Mr. Lidderdale who made reference to it, or some of the Government directors.

4331. Can you tell me which of them?—No; but I think that a reference was made to that special clause.

4332. And they were satisfied upon that point at once, by Mr. Kelly's statement?—Yes.

4333. What did Premchund value the jewels at?—He said that he thought that they were worth about 20 lacs.

4334. Were the directors satisfied with that valuation?—Yes; I think that Mr. Tracy said something about them, that he knew of them; and I think that some of the others had a knowledge of them also, and they thought them very valuable; but nobody was astonished at it, from Premchund's supposed wealth.

4335. Did you verify his statement?—No.

4336. You took nothing but the statement of Mr. Tracey?—The statements of Mr. Tracey and Premchund.

4337. Did you not know that Mr. Tracy and Premchund were mixed up together at that time?—No. I knew that Premchund was broker, or commission agent, to Mr. Tracey's firm.

4338. Was not Mr. Tracey going backwards and forwards, and making himself very active about this loan?—Yes. I believe that they looked to Mr. Tracey, as he knew more about Premchund's affairs than anybody else.

4339. Premchund said in his evidence that Mr. Tracey was working for him?—Yes.

4340. Did he come back, and give a message from Premchund during that negociation?—Not that I remember.

4341. Do you not recollect his coming back, and saying, that if the directors bothered Premchund in that way, or troubled him so much, (or some such expression,) he would rather stop?—I remember hearing that; it must have been Mr. Tracey, I think, who said it.

4342. Premchund did not say so to you?—No.

4343. Did you hear Mr. Tracey say it?—I heard it, and it must have been said by Mr. Tracey. Nobody thought anything of that, it was mere talk on Premchund's part.

4344. I ask you whether Premchund did not say that his jewels were worth from 15 to 20 lacs?—I have said that I thought that he said they were worth about 20 lacs.

4345. He himself says so; and we have other evidence showing that he put the value at from 15 to 20 lacs.—I thought that he said about 20; of course it was what was put down.

4346. Were the Board quite satisfied with this security?—Yes.

4347. Taking the value of the land at 14 lacs, and value of the jewels at 15 lacs, that would make the security 29 lacs?—Yes.

4348. You had 29 lacs worth of new security and the Back Bay shares to secure to your certain knowledge 17,50,000 rupees, and also two lacs more, which I believe you did not know of until some time afterwards?—I did not.

4349. Taking only the 17,50,000 rupees and 25 lacs, that made 42,50,000 rupees?—Yes. From the 25 lacs the hoondies were to be taken out.

4850. That was the exact nature of the transaction?—Yes.

4251. In point of fact, what did these jewels realize?—I do not know; they have been sold since I came home.

4352. They were sold for 2,40,000 rupees.—They would have sold for a great deal more than that in Bombay.

4353. I ask you again, whether at this meeting you told the directors how Premchund Roychund's account stood with the bank?—I do not think that I should do so at that meeting.

4354. Did you tell them privately?—I should think so; they knew it perfectly well.

4355. Did any director ask you how the account stood?—I cannot remember that he did.

4356. Mr. C. E. Chapman, in his testimony, has complained that you did not tell him; he said that he had only been a director for two days, and that he was astounded when he found that there was such a large sum due.—The others knew it perfectly well.

4357–8. I have no doubt that Mr. Tracey knew it. What was the agreement come to eventually after this discussion?—That the money was to be advanced by the Bank of Bombay, and that the other banks were to pay the Bank of Bombay, when called upon, the amounts which they had agreed to subscribe.

4359. That was the substance of the agreement?—Yes.

4360. Was anything further said?—A promissory note was to be given by Kursondass Madhowdass, Candass Narrondass, Premchund Roychund, and Roychund Deepchund.

4361. Was that agreement reduced to writing?—Not at that time.

4362. Why not?—I thought that Mr. Kelly and Mr. Lidderdale were doing it, and when I asked Mr. Lidderdale afterwards for it, he told me that he had only short notes, and he told me what to write, and I stayed with him till I had finished it.

4363. You were then secretary?—Yes.

4364. Did you take no minute of the meeting?—No; I was going out and in half the time.

4365. What did the solicitor do?—I understood that he and Mr. Lidderdale were keeping a minute, and I asked them to read it over.

4366. Did they in point of fact take any minute?—No.

4367. Did Mr. Kelly draw up any agreement there and then?—No.

4368. Then these bank managers who had agreed to advance each two lacs and upwards towards this object left the room perfectly unbound by any writing?—They did.

4369. Let me just go over these facts with you again: There was no statement verified as to Premchund Roychund's affairs?—No.

4370. There was no verification as to his statement that his difficulties were merely temporary?—No verification, but merely his word.

4371. There was no verification of the value of the jewels?—No.

4372. There was no verification of the value of the land, except Mr. Norman's rough valuation as collector?—Yes; and the valuation of some of the other directors who knew it.

4373. I understand you that there was no agreement signed so as to bind the other banks?—No.

4374. Do you think that you, or the directors, protected the bank properly at that meeting?—I did as much as I could.

4375. What was that?—I did what I was told at the meeting; and after the meeting was over I asked for the proceedings, and Mr. Lidderdale told me that none had been written out, but that he would tell me what to write.

4376. You think that you did your duty on that occasion?—I could not do any more, because I was kept more as a messenger than a secretary at that meeting.

4377. When you found that an agreement was come to, you surely would have suggested, as a man of business, that some memorandum or agreement should be taken down and signed at once?—I ought to have suggested that.

4378. Was that the way in which business was really done to the amount of a quarter of a million?—It was certainly unfortunate.

4379. What was Mr. Kelly doing at this meeting?—He was advising the chairman, I think.

4380. I believe that he was ill, was he not?—He was very ill indeed.

4381. Look at the Board minute of that day, namely, the 27th of April; how did you draw up those minutes of the agreement?—I drew them up from notes from Mr. Lidderdale, he had the figures on paper. I drew it up in this form.

4382. You drew up it from Mr. Lidderdale's instructions?—Yes.

4383. When did you add that part about the promissory note?—It was added in pencil shortly after that; I forgot to put it at first in the minute, except in pencil, and a clerk wrote it in in ink, namely, Mr. Fraser.

4384. When was that put in?—I forget.

4385. A considerable time afterwards?—I think so.

4386. When was that minute signed by Mr. Lidderdale?—I think that it was not signed for some time afterwards. I think that he omitted to sign it.

4387. Why did he omit to sign it?—I think that when I read it first this part was not it, and then he said, "Get it put in and send me the book."

4388. How was it that you left the minute of a proceeding like that unsigned by the chairman till August 1866?—It had been overlooked. The minute was read, and I think that at the next meeting Mr. Lidderdale called special attention to it. When I read it he did not sign it.

4389. Is it not the practice at each meeting that the chairman should sign the minutes of the previous meeting?—Yes; but I have seen it omitted. Very likely he talked and forgot all about signing it, and shut the book, and went to the next business of the meeting. I remember distinctly that it was read over very carefully, and he called the special attention of the directors to it, to see whether they agreed to what had been written down, and they did.

4390. When were the title deeds deposited?—I think that day.

4391. When were the jewels deposited?—About a week afterwards, I think, the first of them.

4392. Some of the jewels were deposited on the 29th, that is to say, the greater portion of them?—Yes; that would be the Monday.

4393. How much did you advance on the 27th?—I forget. I think that the first check was for two lacs, and that there were eight lacs telegraphed to our up-country agent on that day. I forget whether there was any more or not.

4394. I think that on the 28th of April (which must have been Tuesday) you wrote this letter (Exhibit Q) to Mr. Douglas, one of the managers of the bank, did you not?—Yes.

4395. You said, "I have got title deeds of landed and house property for which he paid about 18 lacs, and as the most of it was purchased in 1863 and the beginning of 1864 I dare say it might to-day be worth as much. I am to get 20 lacs of jewels to-morrow." That agrees with the testimony of Mr. Fraser, that you got a portion of them on the 29th?—I suppose so.

4396. Did you rest contented with Mr. Norman's valuation of the land?—Yes, for a long time; is was valued afterwards.

4397. You did not, I suppose, rest contented with Premchund Roychund's valuation of the jewels?—No.

4398. Whom did you first call in to value the jewels?—I forget what his name was.

4399. Was not his name Courvoisier?—Yes, a member of the firm of Rosselet and Company; but he said that he did not know much about them.

4400. You were not present when he began to value them?—No; they were valued in a private room at the bank.

4401. With Mr. Fraser?—Yes.

4402. Do you remember that on that day Mr. Fraser came down and told you something?—Very possibly he did, but I do not remember.

4403. He said in his evidence, "The jewels were given to me on the 30th April 1866 for the purpose of being valued. All the jewels that ever came into the bank, I believe, were given to me. A gentleman from Mr. Rosselet's came to examine them. He was a foreigner; he said he had not great experience in such matters. He was a jeweller; that is why he was selected. He left Bombay immediately afterwards. He came to the bank to value the jewels on Tuesday, 1st of May. I returned to Bombay on the 29th April. On the 30th the jewels were given to me, and they were valued on the 1st of May. No one else was present when he examined them. He expressed a not very favourable opinion of their value. I knew that they were reported to be worth not far short of 20 lacs. His opinion was that they were not worth more than 25 or 30 per cent. of the value which I understood them to have. He had only gone over one or two of the jewels, and finding them to be valued at so much less than I expected, I closed the jewel case and went downstairs with a view of telling the directors what this man's opinion was." Did not Mr. Fraser come into the secretary's room?—I do not remember; it is very likely that he did.

4404. Were not you in that room with Mr. Tracey, Premchund Roychund's friend?—It is very likely; I do not remember.

4405. Do you not remember Mr. Fraser coming down and telling you that the jewels were of very much less value than had been stated?—I remember his telling me that Mr. Courvoisier was valuing them very low, but that he said he knew very little about them.

4406. What did Mr. Tracey say?—I think that Mr. Tracey made the remark that the valuation which Courvoisier was putting on them was absurd, that they had cost a very large sum of money.

4407. The board of directors were sitting inside, in another room?—Then I should be with them.

4408. No, Mr. Fraser says that you were outside?—I forget. What day was it?

4409. The 1st of May?—(After looking at the minutes) Yes, the Board was sitting on the 1st of May.

4410. Did you or Mr. Tracey go in and tell them that the valuation was an erroneous one?—I did not tell them, at least I do not remember telling them, anything about it.

4411. Did you suggest to them the propriety of a little caution in lending out the money?—I do not remember that I did.

4412. You did intend to be very cautious I suppose?—Yes.

4413. I find that in your letter to Mr. Douglas you say, "I am to get 20 lacs of jewels to-morrow. I have only advanced him three lacs cash as yet, but have instructed our Guzerat agents to take hoondies on him to the extent of eight lacs if they have funds. I shan't advance more until I get the jewels and have them valued."—Yes.

4414. On the 1st of May you got a valuation that the jewels were worth very much less than had been stated?—Yes; I was not satisfied at all with that valuation.

4415. You then called in Mr. Crawford to value them, did you not?—Yes.

4416. What did he put the valuation of the jewels at?—I forget.

4417. Three and a half lacs?—Yes, three lacs and something after they all came in.

4418. What money did you advance, notwithstanding this caution from Mr. Fraser, up to the 9th of May?—I forget how much.

4419. You went on advancing up to 16½ lacs.—Yes. Anything which I advanced at that time was known to the directors; the president was at the bank every day at this time.

Mr. D. Robertson.

26 Nov. 1868.

4420. Did you tell Mr. Lidderdale that these jewels were not worth anything like the sum named by Premchund?—I must have told him what Mr. Courvoisier valued them at.

4421. How came Mr. Lidderdale, in a letter to the Governor, on the 11th of May (Exhibit marked L 1), to say that they were worth three or four lacs?—They were not valued on the 10th.

4422. You had had this warning from Mr. Fraser by that time?—Yes, from Mr. Courvoisier; at least his opinion. I think that all the directors were of opinion that his valuation was no valuation, and that he did not know anything about them.

4423. Notwithstanding what you said, namely, that you would exercise great caution, and would have the jewels valued, you advanced the money without having them valued?—Yes, I advanced the money.

4424. You wrote to Mr. Douglas to say: "I shan't advance more until I get the jewels, and have them valued?"—That must have been my intention at the time.

4425. Why did you depart from that intention and continue advancing money?—I must have got instructions at the time.

4426. Who gave you those instructions?—The president was there every day, and very nearly the whole day, and the directors were there.

4427. Did the president know that the jewels were valued by Mr. Courvoisier at that rate?—He must have known. There is no valuation in writing.

4428. Did you not tell Mr. Fraser, when he came down, to go back and continue the valuation?—Yes, to finish them, and to see what he could make of them.

4429. What did Mr. Courvoisier value them at?—A very small amount, I forget what; in fact he did not value them at as much as one article was considered to be worth.

4430. Courvoisier said in his evidence: "I made a valuation of the whole of the jewels. I was engaged about half an hour in valuing the jewels. The valuation was only a cursory one. I do not remember the exact value of the jewels, but I think the value was about two or three lacs. I did not take any note of it. The gentleman wrote down the prices. It was between two and three lacs."—He could scarcely look at them all in half an hour.

4431. Was it no caution to you to hear that this gentleman was only valuing them at between two and three lacs?—I did not think that his valuation was worth anything, because he himself admitted to Mr. Fraser that he did not know much about it.

4432. You had made up your mind not to advance any more until you had had a valuation, and you had a valuation which put the jewels at between two and three lacs, and yet you did advance more?—Yes, it is a fact.

4433. That was very inconsistent conduct on your part.—I must have had other instructions from the directors. I did not advance anything upon that loan without the directors knowing it.

4434. What director told you to advance that money?—I cannot tell you what special director did so, but Mr. Lidderdale was present the greater part of every day at that time.

4435. And he knew of these valuations?—He must have known of them; he had a very high opinion of the jewels himself.

4436. I believe that you were yourself examined in Bombay with regard to these valuations?—Yes.

4437. What did you say that the jewels had been valued at?—I put in Mr. Crawford's valuations; they were there on the table.

4438. You distinctly stated that they had been valued at 15 or 16 lacs of rupees?—No; I said that I had an idea of their value.

4439. I will read what you said in your deposition; you said, "I think we received a box of jewels from Premchund on the 28th. They were brought by his clerk. Other jewels were afterwards received. I took steps to have the jewels valued. I employed Mr. Crawford, the auctioneer. I forget when he came to value them; he was about a fortnight over them. I also got Hurryvullubdass Calliandass, a well-known jewel merchant in Bombay, to look at them, and give me an idea of the value."—Yes.

4440. "He valued them at between 15 and 16 lacs of rupees; he seemed to know the jewels very well. I don't remember when Hurryvullubdass saw the jewels. I think it was in the month of May 1866."—Yes.

4441. Did Hurryvullubdass value those jewels at all?—Yes, he did; he gave me an idea of them as I say there.

4442. You asked him to give you an idea of them, but you state "he valued them at between 15 and 16 lacs of rupees."—He gave me an idea of their value.

4443. You say "he seemed to know the jewels very well."—Certainly he did.

4444. Why did he know those jewels very well?—Because he had, I suppose, very often seen them; he was a very large jeweller. I understood that I might get him to purchase some of them.

4445. Were not you present when Hurryvullubdass was in the room?—Yes.

4446. Did he look at all the jewels?—He did not look at all the small ones as he had seen them.

4447. Did he do more than take up one particular necklace which he had sold to Premchund?—Yes, he took up all the large ones. I handed them to him myself.

4448. Then are you prepared to contradict his testimony on that point. He is a most respectable man; he said in his evidence before us, "I am a jeweller in Bombay, and doing a large business. I was not employed to value the jewels deposited by Premchund with the Bank of Bombay; but on one occasion Premchund took me to the bank. He told me that he wanted me to declare the fact of my having sold him a necklace for Rs. 65,000, and that I had offered to buy it from him again for one lac. I went to the bank with Premchund, I saw there two European gentlemen whom I did not know, and whose names I do not know now." I suppose that you were one of them?—I was one of them.

4449. He added "Two tin boxes were produced, and one of them was opened, and the first thing that was taken out of that box, and shown to me, was the diamond necklace. Premchund asked me, 'Is this the diamond necklace you sold to me for Rs. 65,000, and did you not afterwards offer to buy it of me again for one lac? and did I not decline to sell it to you at that price?' and I said 'Yes.' At that time I had a rich customer, the Guicowar. I was in the habit of getting large prices from the Guicowar, and, therefore, I wanted to buy the necklace back from Premchund. I did not offer to buy it there and then; I had only been anxious to buy it at a previous time. I did not make any valuation of the jewels there. I only valued four wristlets; they were diamond wristlets. I was asked as to the quality of the diamonds, and I said that they were second-class diamonds; and I was asked as to the rough weight of each of them, and I said that each of them would weigh about a carat. I did not make a valuation of the whole of the jewels. I am not able to tell you what they are all worth." Then in answer to me he stated, "If Mr. Robertson, the Secretary of the Bank of Bombay, has said in the deposition given by him in the suit pending between the Bank of Bombay and the Oriental Bank that I valued them at between 15 and 16 lacs, it is untrue." We read him the passage, and he said, "I did not give any such value. I could only identify the necklace which I had sold." Do you continue to say that Hurryvullubdass valued those jewels at between 15 and 16 lacs?—That was the idea which he gave me of the value. I remember that I never asked him about the quality of the jewels, but he says that he was asked, and whether the wristlets were second class, and the weight of them. I never asked him that at all. I just took them, and said "What do you think that is worth?" I took the necklaces, and asked him "What do you think that is worth?" There were a great many large ornaments, and to the best of my recollection, he said between 15 and 16 lacs.

4450. But unfortunately you are contradicted by that gentleman himself?—He would do that I suppose.

4451. He could have no particular object in it?—He told me distinctly there and then that he would come and point them out, and I said that I should be very glad to take some of them up to our agent at Baroda. He came there, as I understood, with the intention of being or getting a purchaser.

4452. If Hurryvullubdass did really tell you that those jewels were worth from 15 to 16 lacs, what steps did you take with respect to Mr. Crawford's valuation?—I did not take any steps at all.

4453. When you found such a great difference you ought to have brought it before the directors in order to have it put on record?—I am almost certain that I told the directors. I thought that this man knew a great deal more than Mr. Crawford could know; it was his trade.

4454. You had a written valuation by Mr. Crawford?—Yes.

4455. If Hurryvullubdass had valued those jewels at from 15 to 16 lacs, would it not have been material to you and the directors to show that they could be valued at that price?—I ought perhaps to have put it in writing; he would not have put it in writing, but would have gone over them more carefully, and I was carried away by him with the idea that they were worth a great deal more than Mr. Crawford's valuation.

4456. Would it not have been material to have had that valuation on record?—I was in hopes that he would be able to sell them for us at the rates which he gave. I believe now that Hurryvullubdass came to me possibly to represent that they were worth a great deal more than they were; it is perfectly possible that he was brought for that purpose, because he never came near me again to ask me to send any of them to the Guicowar.

4457. Did you tell any of the directors the result of the examination of the 4th of May by Mr. Crawford and Mr. Courvoisier?—Yes, I had this report of Mr. Crawford. I must have told them what Mr. Courvoisier said; he did not give any report; it was only verbal.

4458. Did you tell the directors that Hurryvullubdass had valued the jewels at between 15 and 16 lacs?—Yes.

4459. Then how came Mr. Lidderdale to write to the Governor on the 10th or 11th of May, stating that the jewels were worth three or four lacs, and that Premchund said they were worth 10 lacs?—That must have been his own valuation. I imagined that Mr. Lidderdale knew a great deal about it; he was there, and took a great interest in the valuation.

4460. Then he was not likely to make a mistake about it?—No; but they were not valued on the 10th of May; he must have given his own opinion then and nobody else's.

4461. We will now turn to the loan to Dossabhoy Merwanjee and Company. Had they been long in good credit?—I believe so. I did not know anything about them till the application for a loan was made in 1865.

4462. This is a very old entry in the Opinion Book about them:—"May 28th, 1841.—He had better "remain off the private list." In August 1862 there is the following entry: "Cowasjee Jehangeer says, "owing to some cotton purchases, has become very "weak." Then on March the 26th, I suppose in a later year: "Hormusjee thinks him good for one lac or so."—Hormusjee was the head shroff of the bank.

4463. There is another entry as follows: "November "the 3rd, Premchund considers him good for 40,000 "rupees."—Yes; that I suppose is in 1864.

4464. It must have been in 1864, and it is in Mr. Blair's handwriting (Exhibit A. 151).—Yes.

4465. When you had an application for an advance was not it your duty to look to that Opinion Book?—No; that Opinion Book had been given up, in fact I never consulted it at all; I thought it far better to get direct information.

4466. You had no discount list to go to?—No; I asked the directors to give me one, and they said that they could not.

4467. On the 24th of February 1865, which was during the time that you acted for Mr. Blair, you discounted a bill of Dossabhoy Merwanjee's for one lac?—Yes, there were two transactions; that was on the minutes, I think.

4468. Do you remember by whom that was recommended?—I do not; I am almost certain that the second one was on the minutes.

4469. Is this the discount slip? (Handing Exhibit A. 152. to the witness.)—Yes.

4470. Who recommended that to you?—I see that it was recommended by Premchund.

4471. Dossabhoy Merwanjee and Company applied on the 23d of May 1865 for two lacs, did they not?—I thought that it was three lacs.

4472. There was another bill discounted on the 9th of June for a lac. The directors granted three lacs on the 17th of May 1865; you will find by the minutes that on that day the Board sanctioned three lacs.—Yes.

4473. They granted that upon certain terms?—Yes; (reads from minute)—"In consideration of the bank's solicitor being satisfied with the security offered, and on the loan at present current being paid, the loan of three lacs may be granted for three months, renewable at the end of that term if urgently required."

4474. The three lacs, I suppose, were represented by those two loans. You were advised to grant three lacs if the solicitor was satisfied. There were two bills, one for two lacs and the other for one lac; no doubt that was the transaction?—Yes.

4475. Who were the directors present at that meeting?—Mr. Hannay, the President, Mr. Lushington, Mr. F. S. Chapman, Mr. Tracey, Mr. Alexander Brown, and Premchund Roychund.

4476. What was the security which they referred to the solicitor on that occasion?—The security was landed property.

4477. That security was given in May 1865, was it not?—Yes.

4478. Did you take any opinion of the solicitor or anybody else?—Yes.

4479. And did he approve of your advancing money directly on land?—He approved of this loan. I remember very well that the directors on talking about it thought that they were very respectable people, and that on account of having administered to their father's estate they were in difficulties, and that there would be some delay.

4480. This is not only an illegal transaction apparently, but the security was quite insufficient.—It turned out to be so, but it was supposed to be worth a great deal more. I believe that, if we had sold it sooner, we should have got more.

4481. The loss upon these two transactions was 2,10,685 rupees. Was any valuation made of this land?—No, the directors knew it, and they were satisfied that it was worth five or six lacs. It was sold, I believe, for a little over a lac.

4482. Have you not any notion of what the opinion of the solicitor was, have you no recollection of it; was it in writing?—The deeds would be sent to him with a letter, and the letter would be in the letter book, and he would be told why they had been sent; but the very fact of his preparing a mortgage is in favour of the bank.

4483. Besides preparing a mortgage, did he give an opinion?—I think so. At that time I used to keep his opinions in a book, and wrote them in myself.

Mr. D. Robertson.

26 Nov. 1868.

4484. Do you recollect what his views really were?—I think that his views were that we should advance to Dossabhoy Merwanjee and Company in this way, taking their promissory note, and that he would prepare the deed in such a way as in his opinion to avoid infringing the Act.

4485. You cannot prepare a deed in any way to get rid of facts, can you?—I cannot offer an opinion upon that.

4486. I find that for the third loan on the 9th of June 1865 there was no further security, and, therefore, I suppose that those two loans of the 23d of May and the 9th of June 1865 were treated as one transaction?—I see that there was a meeting on the 8th of June, and that there was nothing done on that day.

4487. I should have thought that if you had had an opinion from the solicitor on such an important point as this, namely, advancing on land, you would have entered it upon the minutes?—I generally entered things in a book kept for the purpose; but it would certainly have been better if it had been upon the minutes. Mr. Kelly was often consulted verbally on matters of business.

4488. Was not it understood after the date of the Government Director's letter of the 30th of June 1865 to the Government, that there were to be no more advances on shares?—I do not think so. I do not remember the particulars.

4489. In a letter dated 23d July 1866 from Sir Bartle Frere and the Government of Bombay (vide Blue Book, page 48), they at all events seemed to understand it so. They say, "A bill to amend the present Bombay Bank Charter Act, drafted under the direction of the Government of India, has been submitted for the consideration of the Legislative Council of the Presidency, and will receive their earliest attention. Its enactment will remove the objection taken to the Bank Charter as it now stands" (that is, the power to lend on shares) "though its practical effect will be insignificant, for the restriction it places on the business of the bank has been anticipated in the self-imposed rules under which the direction have acted since April 1865."—Yes.

4490. So that the Government were under the impression, at all events, that the bank had never advanced on shares since April 1865?—I do not remember the cases, but if advances were made after that date it must have been for special reasons.

4491. Then I find that in a letter to the Government of India, signed by Mr. F. S. Chapman (it is mentioned in Sir Charles Wood's letter) he says, "The Government Directors had for some months previously been strictly enjoined, to prohibit the making advances of the kind; so that practically the object to be attained by legislation had already been secured before the receipt of this letter."—Yes.

4492. Sir Charles Wood was evidently under the impression that such advances had been put a stop to, and that there were to be no more advances on shares.—I think that the bank gave money to several companies and people after that, and found it necessary.

4493. I will take two cases as specimens. Mr. Bendir on the 11th of December 1865, had 10,000 rupees. There has been a loss upon that. Shares were deposited at the time, or afterwards.—I can explain how that loss happened. Mr. Bendir was perfectly good for the amount.

4494. Did you not know in the bank that the lending on shares was to be discontinued after that?—Yes; but that loan to Mr. Bendir was considered to be perfectly good without the shares; and the shares were taken at the time merely as an additional security.

4495. That is the old fallacy; but if you lend upon two securities you lend upon both?—I know that; but it was supposed that he was good without the shares.

4496. In that transaction you were lending just as much on shares as you were before?—I admit that instance.

4497. The next case which I will take is that of Cowasjee Rustomjee Pochajee. On the 15th of August 1865 you lent him 22,000 rupees on shares, and on the 22d of August 1865, 30,000 rupees, and they were afterwards amalgamated into one bill on the 30th November 1865 for 52,000 rupees.—Yes.

4498. That was an advance on shares; shares were taken for that loan?—Yes, I think that the shares were taken because they had other loans, and the directors, I think, wished to give them the money, and thought that they had better take the shares.

4499. If I can read the English language, an understanding was given to Government that this lending on shares should not be continued?—I do not think that there was any absolute resolution to that effect.

4500. No; but there were the letters of the Government directors which certainly conveyed the understanding.—I presume that the directors would not do so except in special cases.

4501. I will take the Government directors' last report; they say, when talking of this subject, "With regard to the future, the only practical difference between the charter granted to this bank and that granted to the Bank of Bengal is that contained in section 32 of Bombay Act 10 of 1863, authorizing advances being made on shares;" (that is a very great mistake) "and we have reason to believe that the directors would have no objection to its being expunged, as for the last ten months this power has never been made use of." They wrote that letter on the 31st March 1866, after those two advances had been made.—I do not think that they could say that the power had "never been made use of."
